Taxation of Railroads.

The question of the taxation of railway corporations, under the law of last winter, is exciting considerable attention in official, legal and railroad circles, in view of the hostile attitude of some of the companies. The ground of objection to the payment of the taxes is the provision in the charter of several of our roads that they shall pay to the state some portion of their profits above a fixed amount, and shall be exempt from all other taxes. For instance, in the Androscoggin and Kennebec charter, which will be practically the charter for the whole Maine Central system, when consolidation, shall have been fully consummated, is an express stipulation that when the net earnings of the road shall exceed 10 per centum of the cost the road shall pay to the state one-half, or such other portion as the Legislature may order, of such excess; and that "no other tax than herein is provided shall ever be levied or assessed on said corporation, or any of their privileges or franchises." This, of course, is conclusive if the legislature had a right to make any such guarantee and concession. It is held, however, by eminent counsel that any such attempt to circumscribe the power of future legislatures in the matter of levying taxes is unconstitutional and void; and that no legislature is competent to cede away or limit the sovereignty and eminent domain of the state. The illustration is made that if the doctrine of the railroads be correct a legislature might repeal all laws affecting the sale of intoxicating liquors and then grant franchises to sell such liquors for some specified consideration, with a provision that no further restriction or taxation should ever be imposed, which would foreclose any future legislature from passing any regulative or prohibitory law which should impair these granted rights.

The decision of the United States Supreme Court seem very strongly in favor of the railroad view of the situation. In the case of Humphrey vs. Pegnes, 16 Wallace, 249—a South Carolina railroad tax case, involving substantially the same points as are presented in this state,—Mr. Justice Hunt closes an elaborate opinion against the legality of the tax as follows:

Another question is raised to wit:—That a legislature does not possess the power to grant to a corporation a perpetual immunity from taxation. It is said that the power of taxation is among the highest powers of a sovereign state; that its exercise is a political necessity, without which the state must cease to exist, and that it is not competent for one legislature, by binding its successors, to compass the death of the state. It is too late to raise this question in this court. It has been held that the legislature has the power to bind the state in relinquishing its powers to tax a corporation. (Jefferson Bank vs. Shelly, 1 Black, 436). It has been held that such a provision in the charter of an incorporation constitutes a contract which the state may not subsequently impair. (Providence Bank vs Billings, 4 Peters, 514. Dartmouth College vs. Woodward. 4 Wheaton, 518. Binghampton Bridge, 3 Wallace, 51.) These doctrines have been reiterated and re-affirmed so recently as the year 1871, in an opinion delivered by Mr. Justice Davis, in the case of the Wilmington Railroad vs. Reid (13 Wallace, 264). They must be considered settled in this court.

A recent decision, not yet published, is said to distinctly re-affirm and approve this position.

Whether the railroads will carry their apparent disposition to avoid the tax to its logical conclusion will be seen shortly. It is certainly worth their while to consider if graceful submission be not the wiser course; for if the state be defeated in this effort the roadbeds may be exposed to municipal taxation by a simple repeal of the general statute exempting them. This would throw open more than $20,000,000 worth of property to the imposition of local taxes, and would be much more burdensome to the roads than the tax of last winter.

IT will be of interest to our citizens to know that the railroad commissioners of Massachusetts recommend the doing away of the steam whistle on railway trains in the majority of cases. They say that its use as a precautionary warning against a possible danger is wholly unnecessary; that its second use to notify employes of the approach of trains at stations or crossings is equally unnecessary, the bell or the electric signal answering the purpose quite as well; that the introduction of the train-brake has obviated the necessity of it on passenger trains, except as a danger signal, though on freight trains its use is still necessary in a limited degree; that as a danger signal, when properly used, the whistle is and always will remain a most important adjunct in the operation of railroads, though its value is greatly impaired by its promiscuous use, which, in its effect on invalids and horses, may occasion a greater loss of human life than would ensue from its total suppression. Coming from such a source these recommendations are entitled to careful consideration.

DISRAELI formally announces that England is about to return to her proper position among European nations,—in the interests of peace. If by her proper position he means her former position, an inference fairly drawn from the contest, the world may be pardoned for doubting if such a resumption is in the interests of peace. From 1789 to 1815 she took advantage of her position to keep the continent continually embroiled in war. Once before during the Hanoverian regime she occupied a commanding position in European affairs,—and she was at war. On three previous occasions, under the Prince of Orange, under Cromwell and under Elizabeth she held a vantage ground in Europe, and the result was always war. In light of these facts the student of history is not a little skeptical in regard to her peace tendencies.

ALL the leading New York papers received Mr. Beecher's statement with favor. The Herald thinks that the explanation of his letters will be accepted when the exuberant nature of the great preacher is considered. The Times is somewhat at a loss to explain the exaggerated style of these letters, and though generally favoring the truthfulness of Mr. Beecher's version, thinks he should hasten to make a full and detailed statement. The Tribune styles it "an explicit and manly defence," but says "it would be a serious mistake for the committee to act upon the theory which Mr. Beecher seems to have adopted, that the full explanation need not reach the public at the earliest possible moment."

MR. S. W. HEALEY, American, at present residing in Florence, must be the unhappiest man in all Italy. Miss Hosmer has taken up the defense of those sculptors assailed by Mr. Healey in his letter to the World. It will be remembered that he in effect accused these artists of being imposters, who palm off the work of others as their own. Miss Hosmer writes very vigorously indeed, and quite demolishes Healey's absurd statement. Not satisfied with hanging his scalp at her belt, she executes a savage and exultant triumphal dance round her writhing victim.

BUFFALO is agitating itself about the question whether a man who chews tobacco in a street car is a nuisance. It doesn't really seem as though there were two sides to the question; but there is no accounting for opinions, and people have been found even who contend that the woman who chews gum is not a nuisance.

Current Notes.

The Charleston News wants to have northern and southern boys get into the habit of rowing races with each other. It thinks the result would be improved feeling between the sections. Yes—if they didn't "foul."—Springfield Republican.

For a reform of the currency even, the people must look to that party which has preserved the national credit, and which is preparing the way for a return to specie payment, with something of hesitation and blunder, we admit, on the part of a few of its prominent men, but which is, nevertheless, preparing it by the aid of its constituted head, and at the behest of its own dominant sentiment.—Rochester Democrat.

It was twenty years ago, so a newspaper with memory of that length says, that the report was first started that Mexico wanted to cede to the United States all her territory lying north of a degree of latitude drawn from the mouth of the Rio Grande to the Pacific ocean. The San Francisco Times and Transcript first sent it out in 1853, and it has appeared every five or ten years since. It is of the same sort as the story that Brigham Young and his Mormons are going to emigrate from Salt Lake City, which first showed itself in 1858, and now puts in an occasional appearance, and neither has any foundation in fact.

Mr. Augustus Maverick, managing editor of the Brooklyn Argus' publishes a card in which he states that he published Theodore Tilton's statement without the latter's knowledge or consent.

Just now the Republican journals of Illinois are thrusting a very unpleasant comparison into the faces of the Democrats of that state. It appears that in the forty-eight Democratic counties the average tax is 109 while in the Republican counties it is 88½. Beauties of Democratic rule, you know.

Our New York Letter.

The Absorbing Topic—A cunningly contrived Conspiracy.

NEW YORK, July 23, 1874.

I have not seen the public heart so stirred since the assassination of Lincoln, as it has been by Tilton's desperate attack on Beecher. It is the universal theme of conversation, alike in social and in business circles. The committee having charge of the inquiry, are pursued by eager seekers after new light on the subject and so are all persons who are closely identified with Plymouth Church and its pastor. The current of popular sympathy runs strongly in one direction. The disposition to accept nothing as true, which reflects upon the moral character of the great clergyman unless it is substantiated by the most irrefragible testimony, prevails so universally, as to demonstrate now deep has been the faith of the people in his honor and purity.

The shock produced by the "statement" was very great. Those nearest to the accused were unprepared for allegations so specific and speciously supported. It seemed incredible, that any man should have deliberately set about to fix an indelible stain upon the character of his own wife under any circumstances. The incredulity was heightened by the fact that her impeccability had been vouched for in the strongest terms by the same authority on which she is now arraigned.

Mrs. Tilton appears upon the scene to-day with reveiations which are likely to invalidate completely any averments which have emanated, or may hereafter emanate from her husband. They furnish a perfect crew to the animus and origin of the attack on Beecher.

The controversy so far from being near its end bids fair to last for days, perhaps weeks. The whole history of the scandal to its minutest detail is to be unfolded. Mr. Beecher's friends, never wavering in the loyalty to and faith in him, maintain that he is the object of a conspiracy, the success of which he has unconsciously promoted by trusting in false friends and by imprudent use of expressions in letters written in sacred confidence, which malignity could pervert to his harm, and which have been used to destroy his reputation. The baseness which could prompt such a betrayal of friendship has had no parallel since the ignominy of Judas.

There is a very general feeling of hopefulness to-day that the great preacher will extricate himself from the net work of detraction, which it has been artfully sought to weave around him, and that his baffled persecutors will be utterly overwhelmed in their efforts to tarnish his honor. YARMOUTH.

Civil Service Reform and the Senatorship.

To the Editor of the Press.

Will you allow me a little space? As one of the people, having no personal preferences or antipathies, without political aspirations or official affiliations of any kind, but prompted solely by regard for the interests of the nation, I wish in behalf of many to say a word touching the election of Senator, and indirectly of Representatives to Congress.

Outside the circle of dependants for place upon the patronage of Congressmen, whose prerogative it has been, and still is, to dole out favors for partisan services duly rendered, there is a large number of the people patriotically and intelligently and conscientiously bent on the reform of our civil service. They wish to know, and are determined to know, the opinions and intentions of aspirants for congressional honors on this vital point. It is well known that politicians give it cold support. It was refused an appropriation by the last Congress. It is entirely ignored by the address of Republican Congressmen. It is the design to give it a convenient go-by, and then to suppress it. And yet we were promised, and the Republican party pledged its honor in the late Presidential canvass, to make this reform of the civil service one of the leading objects of its administration. Why then is it that this reform is so cavalierly dealt with? Is it because it stands in the way of the interests of place hunters? It is pronounced impracticable and impolitic. Why? Because it would take away from Senators and Representatives the patronage that enables them to obtain and retain their places. How is it, then, I ask, with those seeking the honors of Senator? Are they by instinct, by policy, by habit, by life-long devotion, wedded to the partisan as opposed to the patriotic method of appointments to office? Will they subordinate their high position and influence to the petty and paltry distribution of the loaves and fishes to pertinacious applicants, or will they sacrifice their selfish scheming to the claims and ideals of practical statesmanship?

In fine, let us know what stuff our servants are made of. The Republican party, to save itself from corruptions, and the nation from disgrace, must purge itself of evil, must study the character of claimants for its suffrages, and render Congressional investigations no longer needful. SAGADAHOC.

The Newburyport Herald says that such was the force of the wind during the recent glae in that vicinity that clouds of sand from Plum Island were carried a mile and a half seaward in such volume as to cover the inside of boats passing by, to the depth of two inches.

The Great Scandal.

TILTON'S EXAMINATION.

Tilton was first questioned regarding his relations with Mrs. Woodhull. He manifested the greatest indignation at the implication that he had been guilty of the same offenses with Woodhull that he charges against Beecher and Mrs. Tilton. He was also questioned with regard to his relations with several other women, and at each question gave an indignant denial, threatening that if this kind of warfare was to be kept up on himself, he would have some names to mention) and would expose other parties. Tracy then put the direct question to Tilton, as to whether he had ever been unfaithful to his wife, Tilton declined to be questioned in that way. It is also stated that during Tilton's examination he stated facts which proved incontestably that he was himself the sole inspiration of the Woodhull scandal, and that he gave Mrs. Woodhull all the alleged facts on which the exposure was founded. He had also endeavored to persuade Beecher to preside over the Woodhull woman's meeting, using as an inducement the necessity of Beecher's conciliating Mrs. Woodhull, who, he said, was in possession of damaging rumors against him. In answer to a question by Tracy, as to whether he had any evidence of Beecher's alleged wrong-doing except what his wife told him, Tilton replied: "I have none, whatever." It also appears that one of Beecher's letters from which Tilton in his statement extracts a few lines of doubtful meaning, is over a column long. Tilton has twice promised to produce it, but failed to do so.

BEECHER'S LOVE LETTERS

"As to Mr. Beecher's love letters," says a gentleman, whose official business has led him to receive and open much of Mr. Beecher's correspondence, "you would be surprised to know how foolishly some women write to him. Every once in a while a woman gets a little crazy and writes to Mr. Beecher to tell how much she adores him. The letters used to go to the Independent office, and Tilton, under orders from Mr. Beecher, opened them. Many of them he made copies of, and, to-day, has manuscripts and names and copies of letters, all connected with respectable ladies who have foolishly written to Mr. Beecher all about their love for him. Some time ago, a very respectable lady of Brooklyn wrote a warm, loving letter to Mr. Beecher; Mr. John Howard, in the Christian Union office, under general instructions, opened it, and seeing what it was, locked it up to give Mr. Beecher when he should call for it. In a day or two, another letter from the same woman arrived, which referred to a letter which the writer said Mr. Beecher had written to her in reply. Every sentence was full of love, and the lady said that nothing delighted her more than to receive a letter from a man she loved so well. She wrote a number of love-sick epistles, which Mr. Howard locked up one after another. Every letter except the first referred to a reply that had just been received from Beecher; whereas the fact is, that Mr. Beecher did not know of the letters having been received until long after the lady had ceased writing, and then the bundle was delivered to him. He receives love-letters by the bean and cord, and the joke of it is, that as his wife takes care of all letters that come to him, she reads the love letters before he sees them. Mrs. Tilton's letters to Mr. Beecher were very affectionate and enthusiastic, and expressed a deep, pervading love for him. Mrs. Beecher read them all before he saw them, and they are all in her possession now. When the scandal was first noised about Mrs. Beecher looked up the letters, and at Mrs. Tilton's request, has preserved them for her. You can't convince Mrs. Beecher that her husband is guilty of anything that Tilton charges. She says that if all the women in creation were to swear that Mr. Beecher had been unfaithful, she would not believe them."

Washington News and Gossip.

THE PUBLICATION OF THE WAR RECORDS.

Secretary Belknap is taking much interest in the duty imposed upon him by the last Congress of beginning the publication of all the official records of the late war, both of the Union and the Confederate armies. The amount appropriated was $15,000, and this will be used in copying the records, and probably be so divided between the Union and Confederate archives as to give all important documents from each side bearing upon each event. Enough material pertaining to the first days of the war is already copied to make two large volumes. This work was done under a resolution passed soon after the war closed and subsequently rescinded. These two volumes will soon be sent to the printer, unless a matured plan which the Secretary and Adjutant General Townsend are now considering makes it necessary to work this matter in with the other now in course of preparation. The Secretary will place the matter in the hands of those clerks in the department most familiar with the records, and none will be employed upon the work except those known to have especial fitness for it. The publication contemplated, so far as it relates to the Confederate records, confers no power to purchase any additional papers. The Secretary has received a number of offers from different parts of the South to furnish official papers of great importance to a full and correct history of the war, but he has declined them for the reason given. The Confederate records now in possession of the department were all arranged by Dr. Francis Lieber and are now thoroughly indexed, and it is understood that the intention of the Secretary is to push matters as rapidly as the care necessary for such a work will permit. The publication will include all official reports, letters, despatches and orders not heretofore officially published in permanent form.

THE NATIONAL BANKS.

The total number of applications from the twenty one western and southern states to date, on the organization of the national banks approved by the comptroller of the currency, is forty-seven, with an aggregate circulation of $4,183,000. Twenty one informal applications are pending, calling for circulation amounting to $1,475,000. The total number of United States bonds withdrawn under the act of June 20, 1874, is $4,867,900, and the amount of legal tenders deposited for the purpose of redeeming the circulation surrendered is $3,380,000. These bonds have been withdrawn by twenty-eight national banking associations.

GRAND TEMPERANCE GATHERING.—A mass gathering of the various temperance organizations on the line of the Knox and Lincoln Railroad, was held at Nobleboro, Thursday. The meeting was presided over by the Rev. Joseph King of Bath, and speeches were made by W. F. Morrill of Portland, Judge O. G. Hall of Rockland, Judge Tallman of Bath, Rev. Mr. Porter of Bath, H. W. Bryant of Lewiston, ex-Governor Perham, Hon. Joshua Nye and others.

A committee on permanent organization reported that the association be called the Knox and Lincoln Temperance Association. Judge Tallman was chosen President; G. O. Payson, Vice-President; C. E. Littlefield, Secretary; E. W. Stetson, Treasurer. The following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That we unqualifiedly condemn the unfounded statements of Dr. Dio Lewis in regard to the prohibitory law and its results in this state; knowing that such statements are unsupported by the facts; and that we earnestly protest against any further misrepresentations of this kind; placing as it does, not only the temperance men, but the people of this state, in a false position before the country, and tending to the manifest injury of the cause of temperance.

A Standard Article Everywhere.

It is a long way from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and from Maine to the Gulf of Mexico, but in all the vast area lying within these boundaries there is not a city, a town, village, settlement or camp where Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is not well known and in great demand. It is the great household medicine of the American people, and is taken everywhere as a safeguard against epidemics and endemics, as a remedy for dyspepsia, biliousness and irregularities of the bowels, as a cure for chills and fever and rheumatic ailments, as a sedative in nervous cases, as a wholesome exhilarant in hypochondria, and as a general invigorant and restorave. To the weak and drooping it imparts strength and vitality, bracing the relaxed nerves and rusing all the latent energies of the system. For twenty years it has been the standard tonic and corrective of the western world.

DR. SCHENCK'S

Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mankrake Pills.

These medicines have undoubtedly performed more cures of Consumption than any other remedy known to the American public. They are compounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain nothing which can be injurious to the human constitution.

Other remedies advertised as cures for Consumption, probably contain opium, which is a somewhat dangerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients, it must do great injury; for its tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which of course, must make a cure impossible.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is warranted not to contain a particle of opium; it is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expel all the diseased matter from the body. These are the only means by which Consumption can be cured, and as Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills are the only medicines which operate in this way, it is obvious they are the only genuine cure for Pulmonary Consumption. Each bottle of this invaluable medicine is accompanied by full directions.

Dr. Schenck is professedly at his principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, and at the Quincy House, Boston, on the following Wednesdays June 10th and 24th, July 8th and 22d, and August 5th and 19th.

I had "Dyspepsia" twenty years, sometimes able to eat only the plainest food, and very little of that. I tried physicians and remedies without relief until I learned of "White's Specialty for Dyspepsia," which has entirely cured me. (Signed)

Opening of the Greely Hospital.

A MODEL INSTITUTION.

Last evening occurred the formal opening of the Greely Hospital. This building was erected about twenty-five years ago, and since that time has been laying comparatively idle. It was built to prepare a place for those stricken with the "ship-fever," a disease which raged to an alarming extent at that time. From that time until two years ago it was vacant. At the time of the small-pox scare it was fitted up for a pest house, and used for that purpose until the new one was finished. The Board of Overseers of the Poor began a few months since to put it in shape for a city hospital. The result of their labors was seen last evening.

The Board invited quite a number of citizens, including several physicians, to visit the institution before the invalids were removed to it. The building, as many are aware, is a large three-story building. The basement is used for a kitchen, wash room, etc. In the kitchen is a large brick oven, a dumb-waiter, which goes to the third story, and other conveniences. The first story proper is used as a dining room, steward's room and the men's ward. This latter is a large square room with windows on three sides. Every patient has a good bed, a chair and table. The ventilation of this room is most excellent.

The second story is used exclusively for women. There is a large ward provided similar to the one on the floor beneath; also several separate rooms for different cases. The third story is fitted for patients sick with contagious diseases. The hospital will, as now arranged, accommodate fifteen women, and about the same number of men.

The city physician has his office at the entrance on the first floor.

On the second floor is a room provided for the care of small children, and it is a model of cheerfulness. Cribs and other necessities are provided for the comfort of the little ones.

There is Sebago in every part of the house, and on each floor is an apparatus for subduing fire.

Mr. John Stevens and his wife will have charge of the hospital, assisted by two nurses.

The Board took their friends through the present hospital and then from there into the new building. The contrast was very striking. The old hospital was the east wing of the almshouse proper, and is now to be fitted up for the reception of the more respectable class of paupers. The remainder of the house will be entirely separate.

After the company had looked over the building they were invited to a collation which was spread in the hall.

The patients will be moved into the building to-day.

AN INSULT.—Any one who is around the depots in this city to any extent has probably noticed how the passengers are insulted by the impudent hackmen who hang around them to induce them to take a carriage. This thing was tried at the Eastern depot yesterday afternoon but didn't work. A lady came in from the East and wished to go to the St. John boat which is but a few steps from the depot. The hackmen gathered around her and one fairly took her satchel away from her, and was about to put it into his hack when officer Sterling happened along and rescued the baggage and showed the lady down to the boat. But for the officer the lady would have paid fifty cents for riding a few rods when she preferred to walk.

EXCURSIONS.—This morning the Mercantile excursion to Alton Bay, over the Portland & Rochester, comes off.

This evening another balcony concert comes off at Peaks' Island.

Tuesday next the First Parish and Park street societies unite in an excursion to Sebago Lake.

Next Tuesday the grand excursion of the Army and Navy Union to Sebago Lake and Pleasant Mountain comes off. In many respects it will be the most delightful excursion of the season. It should be remembered that only as many tickets will be sold as the boat can conveniently accommodate.

MYSTERIOUS.—Last evening, about 8 o'clock, a lady rushed into Hinds' drug store, under the Preble, and sank into a chair, trembling violently. Mr. Hinds hastened to her assistance and found her unable to speak. After the administration of proper remedies she rallied a little and said that as she was coming down Congress street a man threw a handkerchief across her face, saturated with something which made her feel faintish. Her statement (everything is a "stat-ment" now-a days.) was obscure and disconnected. After a time she professed to feel better and started for her home on Free street.

CAVALRY REUNION.—At a meeting of the 1st Maine Cavalry, last evening, the following committee of arrangements was chosen: Chairman, C. W. Ford; W. B Smith, A. M. Benson, C. C. Chase, A. C. Dam, H. T. Cook, F. W. True, B. C. Morrill, C N. Lang.

The reunion will be holden in this city on Wednesday, Sept. 9th. The programme, as far as arranged, embraces a sail to the islands, a clam bake and business meeting there. On the return to the city in the evening a collation and a social reunion will be had at Grand Army Hall. The affair is in competent hands, and a very pleasant time may be expected.

BOATING NOTES.—The following crews have been made up for the boat race at Lake Sebago next Wednesday at the excursion of the Irish Americans. There will be a double scull race between Henry and Kennedy, who will have a new scull, and Davis and Stewart. Davis, Henry, Stewart, McShane and Kennedy will pull in single sculls.

Monday Stewart and O'Donnell pull their three mile race for $100 a side. There will probably be a close race.

There is talk of a three mile race soon between Henry and Davis for $150 a side.

P. O. S. OF A.—The following members have been elected as officers of Washington Camp No. 3 for the semi-annual term, and were duly installed by the D. P.:—L. W. Hanson, P.; J. E. Robbins, M. of F. and C.; O. G. Skillings, C.; P. J. Henderson, O. G.; F. Hutchinson, Assistant Secretary; S. H. Whitaker, L. S.; Albion Harmon, V. P.; J. A. Warwick, T.; Geo. Clark, I. G.; W. B. CATHOLIC UNION.—The Catholic Union have arranged for a formal opening of Congress Hall August 4th. On this occasion they will present an entertainment open to the public. A committee have been appointed who are making arrangements for the first annual excursion which will come off at Long Island the 12th of August.

NEWSPAPER CHANGE.—The Christian Mirror has been purchased by the Rev. B. P. Snow of this city and Col. F. E. Shaw of Paris, and will be hereafter issued from the press of B. Thurston & Co. as an eight page paper.

Card.

The Scandinavian friends of the late Hans Johnson, who was killed Thursday on the Boston & Maine Railroad near Saco, wish to return their deepest thanks to Rev. W. J Alger, rector of the Episcopal church at Saco, and Rev. Mr. Lewis of this city, who conducted the funeral exercises at the former place yesterday afternoon, and spoke in feeling terms to the friends of the deceased; also to B. M. Adams, sexton of the church, and James Adams, for their kindness to the deceased, while suffering intensely from his injuries previous to his death. They would also thank the superintendent and officers of the Boston & Maine Railroad, who granted free passes to all the friends from Portland to Saco and return, and to the foreman and fellow workmen of the deceased, who had always shown great kindness to him and attended his funeral. Let all the friends of the deceased who feel disposed to aid his family respond liberally to the call of the committee who will shortly visit them.

Fire in Winchester.

BOSTON, July 24.—Fire broke out last night at Winchester in a large shed used for storing light and fancy lumber in the extensive lumber yard of A. Cutting. This building was soon destroyed, together with a large coal shed immediately adjoining and the property of J. McDonald of Woburn. Mr. Cutting estimates his loss at $20,000, on which there is an insurance of $9,000. Mr. McDonald's loss is about $5500; fully insured.

Conviction of a Brute.

Wm. A. Bates was tried and convicted of brutally treating and starving his three children, all girls, the oldest twins aged 10 and the youngest 6 years of age. Justice Wakefield said the case he never saw equalled in barbarity, and he believed that had the legislature which enacted the law supposed a case of the kind would ever happen, they would have made the penalty six years instead of six months. He sentenced Bates to six months in the house of correction on each charge. Bates appealed. The sentence gave entire satisfaction to the citizens.

The Boy Pomeroy.

At an adjourned inquest this afternoon into the murder of Katie Curran by the boy Pomeroy, the surgeon who made the autopsy stated that the body of the girl was mutilated in a most shocking and revolting manner by some sharp instrument. The laborer who found the remains testified they were only partly covered with ashes and that the head was completely severed from the body. The testimony of the officers who examined the cellar soon after the girl was missed, was to the effect that they thoroughly examined the ash heap but failed to discover anything. Pending a verdict of the coroner's inquest Mrs. Pomeroy and her other son are held in custody.

Beacon Park Races.

The Beacon Park races were concluded this afternoon with one regular race on the card and one handicap sweepstakes. Purse race was for horses in the 2.29 class, and the starters were b g Honest Billy, ch m Flora Belle, ch m Fanny and w g Baby Boy. Before the start Billy was the favorite at the pool box, selling at about even against Fanny as second choice and the field.

The first heat was contested warmly by Baby Boy and Belle, both doing some breaking, the gelding beating the mare a head in 2 34.

In the second heat they were all together at the half, but Belle soon after went away and won from the Boy by an open length in 2.31.

The third heat was won by Fanny, who did most of the trotting, all the others acting badly at times.

The fourth heat was very similar to the third, Fanny never being headed after the word was given. Time 2.34 3-4.

The fifth heat was won by Billy, he beating Fanny by a head, after a warm race from the three-quarters pole home. Tsme 2 36¾.

The sixth was won by Flora Belle in 2 36 and the seventh by Honest Billy, although both Flora Belle and Fanny both beat him out a trifle, but they were set back for running. It then became too late to trot and the contest was postponed. The second contest trotted between heats was a sweep-takes for $300 between the s. g. Horace Greeley, the g. m. Max Baucheur to harness and b. g, Jester to wagon. The latter won the first two heats, but the exertion was sufficient to send him back. Greely winning the last three and the race.

BEACON PARK, July 24.—Sweepstakes of $300, mile heats, 3 in 5:

NEW YORK.

Convicted of Bigamy.

NEW YORK, July 24.—Coughlan, the wealthy contractor of Hoboken, was to-day found guilty of bigamy by the jury, after a night's deliberation. Judge Biddle's charge was very sharp against him yesterday. The effect of the verdict will be to give his first wife her dower to his property.

Excitement Over Lake Shore.

The action of the Lake Shore directors in passing for second time a regular dividend continues to excite attention on Wall street. Vanderbilt's last report is quoted, in which after accounting for the passage of the first dividend he intimates that there will be no occasion to do it again, and says that "with economical management and a fair degree of prosperity in the business of the country, we think its owners may expect hereafter a regular and fair return upon their capital." In alluding to this report a morning paper says "the faith of the street has heretofore been pluned so firmly to the Vanderbilt stocks that so ominous an occurrence as the breaking of these pledges and the passing of the second time of a dividend on one of the best lines of railroad in the United States, has had too much unfavorable comment on various Vanderbilt enterprises."

Loss of the Steamship Guatemala.

By the arrival of the Havana steamer it has been ascertained that the City of Guatemala sunk on the northeast point of Watling's island on Thursday, the 16th, at midnight, being six days out from New York. Immediately after striking they commenced throwing overboard cargo and continued till 12 o'clock, when the engineer reported steam pipe broken, and the vessel bilged in about two hours after striking with nine feet of water in hold. They then despatched two boats, one to Fortune Island to intercept homeward bound vessels, and the other to Nassau.

On Sunday night, about midnight, the second officer, Lapham, with crew of six men arrived at Nassau during a terrific thunder storm, encountering heavy weather and frequent squalls during the passage. They were immediately taken care of by the U. S. Consul. Steps have been taken to get assistance to the steamer and steamer Anna left for the scene. It was reported just as the boat was leaving that there were twelve feet of water in the Guatemala's hold. The vessel will be a total wreck, but the remaining cargo will be saved. There were no passengers aboard. Five of the crew of the Guatamala took passage on the City of Havana for New York. No report of the boat that went to Fortune Island was received at Nassau up to departure of the City of Havana.

Woodhull Takes Part.

MOULTON PREPARING HIS STATEMENT.

BUTLER IN THE FIELD.

What Tilton Says.

NEW YORK, July 24.—At an interview with Theodore Tilton to day he declared the statement furnished the newspapers by Mr. Tracy, the legal adviser of Beecher relative to Tilton's cross-examination before the committee was incorrect and one sided. Tilton says that Tracy committed a blunder by making an enquiry into the standing of ladies of his acquaintance, as it gives him (Tilton) the right to institute a counter inquiry into the standing of ladies of Beecher's acquaintance. If this new aspect which Tracy has thrown into the case is to characterize the remainder of the controversy it would be better for Tracy's chief client that he had never been born. Tilton said that the report that he admitted at the examination that he was the author of the Woodhull scandal was false. The statement also, which is printed, that in answer to a question by Tracy whether he (Tilton) had any evidence of Beecher's adultry, except what was told him by his wife, that he replied "none whatever" is an absolute fabrication.

Mr. Tilton then makes the following striking statement:

"I told the committee distinctly that Mr. Beecher had confessed his adultery to me; that he had confessed to Mr. Moulton; that he had confessed to other persons whom I named; and furthermore, I gave the names of several persons who, for the last four years, have been perfectly well aware that Mr. Moulton's entire connection with this case, from beginning to end, has been based on the one and only cornerstone of Beecher's criminality. I asked that all these persons be produced before the committee and desire to cross-examine Beecher and the other witnesses."

He suggested to the committee that the case be dismissed by the committee and taken before a court, where he was willing to be sued for libel, so that all could be put under oath.

Gen. Butler's Connection with the Case.

A special to the Boston Journal says:

The name of Gen. B. F. Butler has been spoken in connection with Mr. Tilton's accusations. The story as told a reporter by one of the most interested gentlemen in the case against Mr. Beecher is this: Mr. Butler has been the counsel for Mr. Frank Moulton for some time. When the war on Mr. Beecher was re-opened Mr. Moulton went to Gen. Butler with all of the letters and documents in his possession and laid them before him. Butler's comment was, "Theodore Tilton has a case." On Monday Mr. Butler went to see Gen. Tracy, and told him that as counsel for Mr. Beecher he could not afford to have the committee meet on Monday night. He must arrange to have one or two of the members away so that there would not be a quorum. The committee insisted upon hearing Mr Tilton's charges, and he read them. Their belief up to Monday night was that Mr. Tilton was a slanderer. Then it is said they thought more gravely of the question, and on Tuesday afternoon talked with Mr. Tilton of a reconciliation. Mr. Tilton, on Tuesday evening, dined at Delmonico's with Gen. Butler and Frank Moulton. The former indicated shrewdly to Mr. Tilton the diplomacy of the investigating committee at the afternoon session of the committee. Mr. Tilton admitted that it seemed so, and Gen. Butler added if the counsel for Mr. Beecher had been true to his best interests they would not have allowed that statement to have been read to a committee investigating charges against him.

A Rumored Change of Front.

Henry W. Sage, senior member of the Beecher investigating committee, had a long interview with Tilton to-day. He declined to give any information thereto to a reporter, but it is reported that a complete change of front is to be made.

Moulton Preparing his Statement.

Frank Moulton was also closeted with Tilton some hours. His statement, it is said, is being made after the fashion of Tilton's, and it is claimed that the latter is being consulted at every point. Moulton's statement, however, will probably contain no letters, all that he received having been already published.

Tilton will not again appear before the committee unless his presence is required to substantiate or contradict new matter.

Gen Butler.

It is is again reported that Gen. Butler will appear as advisory counsel for Tilton, or actual counsel for Moulton.

Mrs. Woodhull on the Scene.

Mrs. Victoria Woodhull has arrived here. She declares that the statement attributed to her in regard to her relations with Theodore Tilton is absolutely without foundation. She will reserve what she has to say on the Beecher-Tilton matter till both parties have exhausted themselves She declared, to-day, that Moulton was one of nature's noblemen and said she was convinced that he can sustain all the allegations in Tilton's statement, or more too if he desires. She says she has other facts in connection with the scandal, but don't care to disclose them yet. They cannot, she says, crush Theodore Tilton. He is right, and if truth and justice prevail Theodore will be vindicated.

Examination of Mrs. Ovington.

The Beecher examining committee resumed their session this evening at the residence of Augustus Storrs, Brooklyn. Mrs Ovington was examined at some length with reference to the statement made by Mr. Tilton to her name and her husband. The committee refuse all information relative to their investigation.

Various Rumors.

Beechers friends threaten if he is examined before the investigating committee to bring action for slander and perjury against Tilton On the other hand Tilton's friends say that Tilton will take his grievances before a court of law, where the defendant will not be permitted to choose his own jury.

No member of the Beecher committee seemed to be aware of Mrs. Tilton's letter yesterday, but Beecher's lawyer had evidently seen and revised it before publication.

Mrs. Tilton will not sue for a divorce, but will formally separate from her husband.

Frank Mouston is reported by the Herald as saying yesterday that Tilton's statement is totally inadequate to the occasion.

WASHINGTON.

An Improbable Story.

WASHINGTON, July 24.—A Washington special says that the Spanish legation was recently instructed from Madrid to approach Secretary Fish with the inquiry whether the United States would be disposed to intervene with an armed force in Cuba, with a view of ascertaining whether the people of that island really desire or not to separate themselves from the mother country.

The proposition comes in connection with an intrigue which for sometime has been maturing in Europe, by virtue of which Germany and England are to intervene in Spain and by means of sufficient troops stop the civil war now going on there, and place Alfonso on the throne. The scheme has been managed especially by Prussian diplomacy, and as all the money which Serrano had for sometime past for paying troops and carrying on the government has been furnished from the Prussian treasury, it is clear that the proposition is not to be opposed by him.

A part of the project is that Prussia shall have some small island in the West Indies for a watering station and the consent of the United States to this is to be compensated by giving us Cuba.

Treasury Balances.

The following are the Treasury balances today:—Currency, $12,646,620; special deposit of legal tenders for redemption of certificates of deposit, $61,915,000; coin, $70,175,154, including coin certificates $32,432,200; outstanding legal tenders, $382,000,000.

The Five Per Cent. Loan.

NEW YORK, July 24.—News has been received in regard to the bids for a new loan Secretary Bristow is now at Long Branch in conference with the President in regard to the bids, and latter in the day they will be furnished the public and the awards announced. There is no doubt the Secre ary committed a grave mistake in refusing to open the bids in public, as similar bids are treated at the subtreasury, and as has been the practice of the treasury to treat them. The mistake probably arose from the inexperience of the Secretary in such matters. It is evident that if any one of the larger bids are accepted to which the condition is attached of a "call" on the remainder of the loan the Secretary will be obliged to exclude the bids for smaller amounts to which no conditions are attached, and this will cause dissatisfaction. On the other hand, if the large and conditional bids are thrown out, those making them can say that the treasury did not take the only method offered of placing the entire loan.

Another Washington special says it is understood that none of the bids which are conditional upon an option of the entire $179,000,000 for any definite period will be accepted, as the government seems unwilling to place the control of the market of United States securities in the hands of one firm. The papers state that about $100,000,000 of the loan was taken by the New York capitalists, of which August Belmont is said to have taken $25,000,000.

Discharge of Clerks.

Twenty-two of the assorters of money orders in the Sixth Auditor's office were discharged to-day on account of the failure of a congressional appropriation for their salaries.

Panic Stricken.

ST. PAUL, July 24.—A special from Winona says the telegraph operator at Marshall, Minn., to-day telegraphs that the settlers on Lake Sheteck were panic stricken by the appearance of a warlike band of Sioux heavily armed, and made hostile demonstrations. Many of the settlers left their homes, cattle and everything, and fled to Marshall. In the latter place also more than usual numbers of Indians were noticed in town, and their manner was very bold and defiant. One of them boasted he had taken six scalps within a few days. He probably lied. Lake Sheteck is in Murray county.

Personal.

Secretary Belknap leaves to-night for New London, Ct., to spend a week or ten days with his family now sojourning there.

Various Matters.

The court of commissioners of the Alabama claims met to-day at the Department of State, and after the consideration and adoption of rules adjourned to the 1st of October, when it will proceed to hear cases.

It is said at the Treasury Department that the highest bid yesterday for the 5 per cent. loan was 101¼ and the lowest 99¾.

It is understood that when the grand jury takes up the safe burglary case Aug. 25th, they will hear but five more witnesses, and will then be ready to present indictments against eight persons.

A Chapter of Murders.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 24.—The eastern Kentucky mails, last night, brought accounts of several terrible tragedies.

In Montgomery county, last Sunday, Mrs. Stevens met a woman of easy virtue, named Eveline Hubbard, in the fields, and attacked her with a hatchet, splitting her skull and killing her instantly. Mrs. Stevens suspected Eveline of too great intimacy with her husband.

In Breathitt county, Jerry Little attacked two brothers named Jett, killing one and severely wounding the other. The difficulty arose from a family feud.

In Morgan county, last Wednesday, Johnson Oakley shot and killed Wesley Richardson and severely wounded a man named George with a stray bullet. In the same row several others were badly beaten with clubs and stones.

Custar's Expedition.

CINCINNATI, July 24.—A special to the Gazette from Fort Abraham Lincoln, gives the following additional from Custar's expedition: Indian scouts left the expedition in Prospect Valley, near the head waters of the Little Missouri, 247 miles from Fort Abraham Lincoln, and about five days march from their destination. The expedition has been making rapid progress, and its march has been free from difficulties and interruptions of every character. The weather has been intensely hot, the thermometer ranging from 90 to 100 degrees constantly, without rain or high wind, but the whole command is reported in excellent health and discipline.

The morning the scouts left no one responded to the sick call. So far the expedition has suffered no losses either of life or of property and no accident of any serious nature. Occasional scouts have reported seeing small bands of Sioux lurking along the trail, but no hostile indications in any quarter.

Gen. Custar expects to take his observations and exploration in the Black Hills and return by the first of August.

Jay Cooke's Case.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24.—The members of the firm of Jay Cooke & Co., appeared before Register Mason this morning and filed papers containing an exhibit of receipts and expenditures of he firm from the organization until their suspension. Further proceedings were adjourded until the 25th of September. The dividend of five per cent. authorized by the committee of creditors is not yet paid, the register having doubts as to its binding effect upon him. He has, however, proceeded with the necessary calculations so that there will be no delay if the Court ordered him to proceed. Meantime funds in his hands have increased to such an amount as will warrant the payment of seven inst

POETRY.

Sir Marmaduke's Musings.

[The following verses written by Theodore Tilton and dated "Sleepy Hollow, Nov. 1, 1871," possess a singular interest now:]

I won a noble fame,
But, with a sudden frown,
The people snatched my crown,
And in the mire trod down
My lofty name.

I bore a bounteous purse,
And beggars by the way
Then blessed me day by day,
But I, grown poor as they,
Have now their curse.

I gained what men called friends,
But now their love is hate,
And I have learned too late
How mated minds unmate,
And friendship ends.

I clasped a woman's breast,
As if her heart I knew,
Or fancied, would be true.
Who proved—alas, she too!—
False like the rest.

I now am all bereft—
As when some tower doth fall,
With battlements and wall,
And gate and bridge and all—
And nothing left.

But I account it worth
All pangs of fair hopes crossed—
All loves and honors lost—
To gain the heavens at cost
Of losing earth.

So, lest I be inclined
To render ill for ill—
Henceforth in me instil,
O God, a sweet good-will
To all mankind.

[From Harper's Bazar.]

The Sparsley's Boarders.

The Misses Sparsley were ladies in reduced circumstances, who had opened a boarding-house in order to keep body and soul together, and had hardly managed, by dint of high charges and indifferent fare, to make both ends meet, with an incapacity for business characteristic of ladies in reduced circumstances. In their secret hearts they despised themselves for having yielded to necessity in a weak moment, and departed from the traditions of their forefathers—for having stained their hands with ignoble baking and brewing, sweeping and dusting. Genteel penury seemed much more respectable in their eyes. They had dreamed dreams, to be sure, of an invalid lady in search of a companion, who would sit in a crimson boudoir and read the Waverly Novels, and take airings in the fashionable square with carriage and span; but as the invalid lady failed to put in an appearance, while boarders did not, a choice in employment was hardly admissible. In the meantime they were not old enough to have renounced that earlier dream of marriage, and perhaps the idea that it was possible for them to be lifted out of the obscurity which they hated, at some future day, gave a relish to life that it might otherwise have lacked. It was at this very genteel boarding-house that Miss Drexel and her little sister took rooms one autumn. They were orphans, who had been obliged to surrender the luxuries of a city home after the settlement of their father's estate, and retire to the little sea-board town of Marathon, where schooling and living were supposed to be cheap. It had seemed to be a mere matter of accident that she should have decided upon this place, with the world before her where to choose. She had been looking over the map of New England one day with her lawyer, and the name took her fancy.

"Marathon!" said she, "I don't know but I should like to go there. It sounds heroic and historic."

"Yes, fine place," answered the lawyer—"public schools—twelve thousand population—a dozen churches—cotton mills—"

"Handy in case I should lose my pittance," added Miss Drexel.

"Savings banks," the lawyer continued, "and horse railroad. I've a friend there, too, second cousin of wife's—introduce you. Ben Jeffreys is a capital fellow, a lawyer too; it runs in the family. I'll write and ask him how he thinks it will do for you. He'll know about boarding-houses and all that."

And so it happened that Mr. Benedict Jeffreys wrote in answer that he thought it would do to a turn, and recommended the Misses Sparsley's boarding-house, where he lodged himself. He even offered to meet Miss Drexel at the station, which he did; and perhaps he experienced a twinge of disappointment when she lifted her veil, and showed a travel-worn and tear-stained face, with a pair of placid blue eyes and an unsymmetrical nose, relieved by a fine firm mouth and a rosy English complexion. The Sparsleys received her with beaming cordiality. They had feared to see a New York girl of fashion, full of follies and flirtation—a beauty, perhaps, whose very umbrella would have an air of elegance and bon ton, who would wear four-buttoned gloves, and French boots, and real Valenciennes; whereas she seemed, from their point of view, a plain, everyday sort of girl, with no pretensions, and not in the least dangerous to a man like Mr. Jeffreys. For, in truth, Miss Katherine Sparsley had a tender regard for said Benedict, which her elder sister fostered and furthered—a regard which nourished itself on very scanty nutriment, to be sure: on tickets to concerts and lectures, on an occasional seat behind his gray steed, on Christmas gifts and birthday tokens, and little kindnesses which it was as natural as breathing for him to offer toward whoever came in his way. In return, he possessed a small valise full of embroidered slippers, braided smoking-caps watch-cases, etc., of Katherine's handiwork; the walls of his room were hung with poor daubs in water-colors, reminders of birthdays and holidays; there were tidies on every arm chair, and his sofa cushion had been purloined in order to re-appear in a splendid toilette of calla lilies and ivy leaves. All these attentions might have given him a hint of Miss Katherine's "open secret", if Mr. Jeffreys had lent any thought to the language, and had not been too well used to ladylike attentions. In fact, it was due to this amiable weakness on the part of Miss Katherine that the house was filled only with elderly widows and antiquated spinsters and clergymen who had outlived their usefulness, and that they had been induced to take Miss Drexel merely because Mr. Jeffreys had urged it, and had proposed giving up his own room, and finding lodgings at the hotel, in order that they might accommodate her. Of two evils they naturally chose the lesser: it would be possible to rid themselves of Miss Drexel if she proved troublesome; but if Mr. Jeffreys departed, it might be for years, and it might be forever.

Miss Drexel, having put Ally at school, began to make acquaintance with her new home. Mr. Jeffreys brought his friends to call, others followered suit; the Misses Sparsley were surprised to find her quite the fashion in cliques from which they had long been omitted. There were new, rich people in Marathon who knew not Joseph, who made much of Miss Drexel, and little of the Misses Sparsley, because Mr. Jeffreys had introduced her, and because they had found out her talent, and wished to enrich their fetes with her musical skill. The Sparsleys were not prepared for any such awkward situation, though they could have borne it had it not come about through Mr. Jeffrey's influence. Why had he not lent himself to their establishment in society, as well as to that of this stranger? Had she already bewitched him? Perish the thought!

"Your parlor looks like an oasis among the sands of Sahara," Miss Katherine overheard him say to her, as he left it one day. "I believe you're appropriated every atom of sunshine there is in the house. I always thought my own room was charming, till you came and disenchanted it." And indeed Miss Drexel's parlor deserved his encomiums. It overlooked the country through four broad windows, whose embrasures were filled with flowering plants; here and there were little treasures saved from the wreck of a once luxurious home; a writing stand of English lacquer-work, an antique chair, a few family portraits of ladies in satin and jewels, and a grandfather by Copley; an ormolu clock, with a chime like a distant cathedral bell; a Dresden china vase; and a Pompeian lamp, which illuminated the ordinary boarding-house furnituring, and lent the room an air of quaint picturesqueness. The sun heaped great bars of gold on the dingy carpet, which made amends for its depressed expression, and touched and intensified every bit of color with its magic, till the place made one dream of painted windows and the flash of tropical wings, while the flowers in the Dresden vase palpitated like gems, and the odd figure of the lacquer-work seemed starting out from their dull background, and the geraniums and fuchsias burned like torches in the window-ledges. Miss Huldah suggested that she should shut out some of the glare after this, palpably hinting an injury to the carpet. "Too much sunshine is bad for eyes and carpets, Miss Drexel," she said. She din not care a farthing for Miss Drexel's eyes: she was merely afraid of the effect on Mr. Jeffrey's. The room was getting too pleasant to him. It was aggravating enough, no doubt, to hear Mr Jeffries and Miss Drexel chatting on the stairway going up and down, and in the hall; to know that the conversation sometimes dropped into such an undertone that it was impossible for the best regulated ear to catch the import; to find that when they went out in different directions they almost invariably returned together, as if under the influence of some magnetism hardly understood by their landladies. It was surely a little annoying that Mr. Jeffries should spend evening after evening in Miss Drexel's parlor at the whist-table, especially as he had excused himself from the game on previous winter evenings, on the score of ignorance.

"Oh, I thought you didn't play whist," essayed Miss Huldah, with feigned surprise.

"I've been learning," he answered, "with the help of Miss Drexel, Pole, and Cavendish. I'm a partner fit for a queen."

"Then come down and play with Katherine and me sometimes. And perhaps Miss Drexel will favor us too? I am about tired of dominoes."

They consented to be sure. But the scheme did not work. Miss Huldah became so entangled in the branches of the family tree that she trumped her partner's trick. Katherine was Mr. Jeffrey's partner, but he saw nobody but Miss Drexel. Miss Huldah began to doubt if he understood that grandpapa had kept his carriage and span, had entertained a commodore, and had built and lived in Pimlico Place, at the court end of Marathon, where she and Katherine had first seen the day. She forgot that all this was an old story to Mr. Jeffreys, of which he was already weary, and which affected him not nearly so much as if they had been born in a hovel and reared on mud pies. In spite of her plain face and common place style, Miss Drexel was working mischief for Katherine, Huldah feared; and she took her work up to that young reprobate's room one afternoon, and read her an indirect lecture on the impropriety of seeing gentlemen alone in a boarding-house, especially if you were a young woman with no family behind you, in a strange place, where folks were ready to talk. In fact, before the summer was half through Miss Huldah was at her wit's end. She declined to give up the cherished scheme of half a dozen summers for this upstart. Why should he not fancy Katherine as well as Miss Drexel. It is true, nothing had been withheld from Katherine which she had any right to expect. The gift of concert tickets continued; she still had an occasional—indeed, a more frequent—seat behind Mr. Jeffreys' nag; when he brought in a basket of early fruit, Katherine's hands received it. But fruit and flowers found their way almost every day into Miss Drexel's room; she had a seat in his carriage whenever he could leave business for pleasure, and Huldah did not know that Katherine's drives and pleasures had been increased at her rival's suggestion, nor would she have thanked her for her trouble. All this, however, was not at all to Huldah's mind. She saw that opportunity would make Mr. Jeffreys the lover of Miss Drexel, unless some thing should happen to interrupt their too easy intercourse. Mr. Jeffreys was indolent enough in his social nature; she had never known him to go out of his way to cultivate the young ladies, and she had argued that once in the house and under his eye a young girl could make easy prey of him; indeed, she had built her hopes for Katherine on this peculiarity of his, and she arrived at the conclusion that she had been a fool to admit Miss Drexel to this opportunity. She ought to have known that a plain woman was more dangerous than a pretty one, inasmuch as a man is not on guard against her, while the pretty woman is so well pleased with herself that she takes little or no pains to please another. Huldah straightway decided to get Miss Drexel out of the house as soon as possible. Of course this could not be accomplished in a direct way; she could not tell Miss Drexel up and down that her room was better than her company, and the only other alternative was to resort to little fling of temper and pin-pricks of discomfort, which, if Miss Drexel was anything of an epicurean, would render her boarding-place highly distasteful.

Now, Miss Drexel had counted upon making a home for herself and Ally out of these sunshiny rooms; and though she was no epicurean, and not much of a stoic, yet it was essential to her happiness to live on good terms with those about her. A quarrel was as disagreeable as a neighborhood of infection; as Miss Huldah undertook to quarrel with her, lectured her, advised about the management of Ally, interfered with her, and made the girl dread to go down stairs to her meals. In truth, Miss Huldah did not care a farthing how obnoxious she made herself, provided she could put opportunity beyond Miss Drexel's reach, and keep Mr. Jeffreys for Katherine. So, when Ally was convalescing after a juvenile illness, she refused to have the cook prepare her dinner at an earlier hour than that at which the household dined, and Miss Drexel was forced to go out to a restaurant and procure a light dinner already cooked for her little sister. Miss Drexel's means not being bountiful, and laundry-work high, she proposed to herself the care of her own and Ally's muslin, and requested to be allowed the use of an ironing-board in the back kitchen, where she would have been in no one's way; but this favor was declined. Miss Huldah couldn't have ladies pottering round in the kitchen, and spying out the poverty of the land; and the greatest concession that Miss Drexel could wring from her was the privilege of toiling up and down two long flights of stairs with a hot iron, to do the work in her own room. If Miss Drexel was invited to a picnic, Miss Huldah's cake was just out, and her bread in the oven, and the chickens unplucked. When Miss Drexel aired her rooms, Huldah complained that she was warming the square outside. Miss Drexel endured everything patiently for six months or more, thinking Miss Huldah was overworked, and made fretful and fault-finding by the friction of unhappy circumstances; but at last she fell into Miss Huldah's trap, and went out to hunt up a new boarding place one day, but without confiding in her landlady. Mr. Jeffreys had been away a month on business, and the house was less like home than a prison. She directed her steps to the Soberley's first, who kept boarders under protest, having had a baronet among their ancestors, who considerably interfered with the arrangement. Mrs. Soberly had a quartette of daughters to marry, however, and took only gentlemen boarders, she said. "Besides," she added, "it would be so unneighborly in me to take away the Sparsleys' boarders; we are good friends, and they are needy women. If you weren't the Sparsleys' boarders, now—but you see how it is! It would be taking the bread out of a neighbor's mouth, now wouldn't it?"

Disheartened, Miss Drexel pursued her quest to the Slicers' door; but Mrs. Slicer, having a brace of gay sons, entertained only "middle-aged, respectable women."

"Am I not respectable, and twenty-six?" cried Miss Drexel.

"If you are, I could never reconcile it to my conscience to steal away the Sparsleys' boarders," averred Mrs. Slicer, with holy horror. "I should feel like a thief and a robber!"

Mrs. Waxwork's house was full. "You are the Sparsleys' boarders, I believe?" she said; and though two of her best rooms would be vacant in a month, she shuddered at the prospect of harboring the Sparsleys' boarders as if she had been a burglar. "I had one of my highest-priced boarders wiled away from me once myself, and I said then I'd never take other folks' away—no, never so long as my name is Waxwork.

Mrs. Slipshod had room enough. "Oh yes; boarders are none too thick in Marathon, ma'am; but then it's kinder unhandsome to carry off the Sparseleys' boarders, when they've seen better days. I shouldn't never expect to prosper if I was that unneighborly, I shouldn't."

Miss Drexel went back to the Sparseleys', climbed up to her own room, and sat down alone in tears. Throughout all Marathon she was only the Sparseleys' boarder. The sunshine danced in, tangled on its way among the vines at the windows, pranking in the glories of the lacquered table, touching the old portraits till they seemed alive and about to address the Sparseley's boarder. Just then, while the tears were wet on her cheeks, somebody tapped lightly at the door, and pushed it open.

"A pretty way to welcome your friends!" said a cheery voice. One would think you had lost them all."

"I've lost my identity," said she, half laughing. "I'm nobody but the Sparsley's boarder!"

"Dry your tears. That's something which can be remedied, if you will."

"I'm not crying, Sir."

"Certainly not, if you say so;"

"Perhaps you'd cry if you had lost your identity. I'd be ashamed to laugh at a homeless and nameless girl, who is so disagreeable that no one will board her."

"How? Has Miss Huldah dismissed you for flirting with your humble servant?"

"I wish she would; but I never did such a thing."

"Then why these tears?"

"I told you they weren't tears."

"Excuse me—these diamond sparks. Miss Huldah doesn't approve of sparks."

"I thought perhaps you'd help me if I told you my troubles; but you're too rifling."

"I'll mend instanter. You've no idea how serious I can be."

"Well, I'm afraid I shall have to leave town."

"On a wedding tour?"

"Don't be frivolous. It's unendurable in this house. Miss Huldah hurries me night and day. I'm ruining my digestion from being kept in a constant state of misery. I've tried every boarding-house in town, and every one has refused admittance to the Sparsleys' boarder. I should think they were all in league together against me if there was any reason. I thought, perhaps, you'd know of a nice private family who would like to take Ally and me?"

"Certainly. I know of a private family that will take you and Ally, and bless the stars for the chance. And, what is odd, I came to propose that you should enter this very family; but then you may not fancy it, when you know—"

"Beggars shouldn't be choosers. Tell me about them. Where do they live?"

"Well, at present the family consists of but one member, and that one will live wherever you should choose."

"Too obliging to be human. What's her name?"

"His name, pardon me, is Benedict Jeffreys, at your service."

"Oh, Mr Jeffreys, what do you mean?"

"Haven't I made it plain enough? You've lost your identity, and I've lost heart. Let us console each other. In short, I beg to endow the Sparsleys' boarder with the ancient name of Jeffreys."

"There is the sun soaking all the color out of the carpet again. Miss Drexel!" sung out Miss Huldah, putting her head in at the door. "Goodness! you here, Mr. Jeffreys?"

And so the Sparsleys lost their boarder.

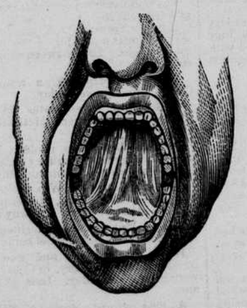
CATARRH!

CATARRH!!

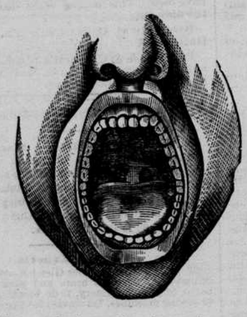
Behold It As It Is!



Let any one suffering from this nasty and foul disease look at the above picture of his nasal organs—behold the inflamed passage—view the throat filled to repletion with the mucous, which quickly passes to the lungs and stomach; how disgusting the thought, and yet thousands day by day neglect to use simple remedies, which will certainly cure them. A short trial of the remedy.

Ræder's GERMAN SNUFF,

Will soon convince you of its wonderful merits in curing this vile disorder; a disease which, when seated, produces Consumption, from which there is no escape; one little box of the German Snuff will cure your Catarrh, and then the foul matter will disapear from your throat, and you will again breathe without trouble; in fact you will be cured, and then and not till then, will you look like the following:



How great the change; how improved your nasal organs have become. There are thousands of people who have spent

Hundreds of Dollars

TO CURE CATARRH.

But they have obtained no relief, and why? Because in the first place the remedies given them were worth less, and in the second place

But Few Physicians

Understand Catarrh.

Years ago Professor Ræder, a renowned German Chemist, devoted his entire attention to the study of this singular complaint; after years of research he was at length rewarded, and presented to the world

Ræder's GERMAN SNUFF,

A Vegetable Compound, which alway has cured and never in a single instance has failed to fully satisfy those who have used it. Please bear in mind it is not a compound that will SNEEZE YOUR HEAD OFF but in a mild and gentle way penetrates the secretions of the Head, and removes the disgusting mucous which have clogged your nose, throat and even your lungs. Try one little box costing but 35 cents, and you will bless the day you used it. Remember that as a Preventative you must always have a Box of

Ræder's GERMAN SNUFF

Which will by its use PREVENT disease and save you hundreds of dollars.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
A BAD COLD.

Who is free from them in this, our changing climate. A few applications and you are freed from this common but severe complaint.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
Heaviness in the Head,

So common to people, who at times find it so very troublesome that they are unfit for all business purposes; in reality it is caused by an excess of mucous, which can be removed.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
DROPPING IN THE THROAT.

Is anything more disgusting; and yet thousands of people will allow this disease to continue until at last they have Consumption, which cannot be cured.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
Partial Deafness,

Caused only by the passages being filled with matter, which the Snuff penetrates as if by magic, and in a short time you feel like a new being.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
A BAD HEADACHE,

And because, in nine cases out of ten, all headaches have their origin in a diseased state of the nasal organs. Many people keep a supply of the Snuff on hand simply for troubles of this nature.

GERMAN SNUFF
Will Cure
SORE and WEAKEYES.

Hundreds of testimonials might be produced, showing the wonderful cure as performed upon the eyes by using the German Snuff, but one trial alone is needed to convince the most doubtful of its merits.

GERMAN SNUFF

NOISES IN THE HEAD,

A most acute and annoying trouble, which many are now afflicted with, but by the use of the German Snuff the noises are soon removed, and by its slight use are never again troubled with them.

Treatise on Nervous Diseases
— AND THE —
Cordial Balm of Syricum.

During the year 1865 Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop had a new and peculiar drug, from the interior of Africa, brought prominently under his notice by the very strange effect it produced on an animal who had accidentally swallowed a large quantity. Owing to this circumstance he was led to make many experiments on the lower animals, and he soon discovered that it had a very peculiar effect on the Nervous system. This induced him to experiment both on himself and some of his patients, and such was the wonderfully beneficial effects, and so rapid the cure of those afflicted with nervous diseases, that Dr. Lothrop came to the conclusion that he had discovered a new and valuable addition to the medicines of the pharmacopœa. He soon found that this medicine, in conjunction with some others, cured nervous diseases of all kinds with a certainty and rapidity of which he had no previous conception

A few words on that special disease generally known as Nervous Debility or Weakness. This is in most cases brought on by total ignorance of the fearful pernicious effects, but it is also brought on in many cases brought on through no fault of the person afflicted, but by disease, long confinement, and several other causes—but in all cases the effect on the constitution is the same. Heretofore, there has been no cure for this disease, but Dr. Lothrop, having put up this medicine in the form of CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS, combined with other medicines, offers them to all sufferers as a safe and speedy cure. Our Lunatic Asylums are full of patients, in many cases brought thither by the effects of Nervous Debility. Many thousands suffer in silence, hopeless of relief, having often been deceived by unprincipled quacks. Such is not the case with Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS. A very short trial will demonstrate their efficacy.

Any who suffer from the effects of over indulgence in tobacco, or alcoholic stimulants, Palpitation of the Heart, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Restlessness during Sleep, Loss of Memory, Irritability, Nervousness, Twitching of the Nerves, and all other Nervous Diseases, will find this medicine a real blessing.

Should any person into whose hands this notice comes, have a friend whom he knows or thinks is afflicted with any Nervous Disease, Nervous Debility, etc., he will confer a real kindness on his friend by sending it to him, so as to give him an opportunity of being cured by the use of Dr. Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS.

In short it is the SIMPLEST, SAFEST, most DURABLE and most ECONOMICAL Engine in the world. We fully guarantee them in all the above articulars. COLT'S ARMS CO. have spared no expense in getting up SPECIAL TOOLS AND MACHINES with which to build these engines, so that every part is made up to gauge, and are perfectly interchangeable, the importance of which will be understood by all who are at all familiar with machinery. Thus, every Engine of a given size is an exact duplicate of every other one of that size, and in case of breakage, the broken part can be immediately replaced by its perfect duplicate.

The inventor of this Engine had in view, in its construction, the great need that exists for a perfect Steam Engine—of small power—adapted to all kinds of light mechanical work, and that should also combine all that is good in Steam Engineering.

The first point was, to secure a perfectly philosophical Boiler and Furnace, in order to insure the most perfect combustion, and to take up the greatest possible amount of heat in generating steam.

The second point was, to make a perfect cut-off engine, working steam expansively, and keeping up the temperature of the cylinder to prevent loss by radiation or condensation.

The third point was, to combine and make the whole a mechanically and scientifically correct machine; all its parts being provided with means to take up lost motion, so that it may be used for any number of years, and always run smoothly. In all these particulars as much care has been taken as in the largest and most perfect engine ever constructed.

The result is—THE GREATEST AMOUNT OF POWER PROPORTIONED TO THE AMOUNT OF FUEL CONSUMED—thus proving the fact—well known to men of science—that water is the best medium to transmit the mechanical forces, generated in the combustion of fuel, to the production of motive power.
