Aroostook.....Presque Isle, Wednesday, Sept. 21.

EVERY regular attache of the PRESS is furnished with a Card certificate countersigned by Stanley T. Pullen, Editor. All railway, steamboat and hotel managers will confer a favor upon us by demanding credentials of every person claiming to represent our journal, as we have information that several "bummers" are seeking courtesies in the name of the PRESS, and we have no disposition to be, even passively, a party to such frauds.

We do not read anonymous letters and communications. The name and address of the writer are in all cases indispensable, not necessarily for publication but as a guaranty of good faith.

We cannot undertake to return or reserve communications that are not used.

Finale of the Conspiracy.

We have looked in vain through the twenty columns which Mr. Moulton has devoted to a statement of what he represents to be "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth"—a quotation which he seems never to tire of repeating—concerning the allegations of Theodore Tilton against Henry Ward Beecher, for any fact which could shed new light upon the subject. From the ominous givings out, with which the public has been surfeited ever since the scandal was set afloat, that Moulton "held the key of the position," a great many people have been led to believe that he had in his possession some direct and conclusive testimony touching the guilt or innocence of the accused. But nothing of the kind has been produced. A voluminous correspondence is embodied in the document, much of which bears upon the main question, but there is not a sentence or line etch, from the whole of it which lends any force to the original averment. It is plain that Mr. Tilton culled out of this mass of matter the most damaging passages contained therein, and grafted them upon the elaborate statement with which the investigation opened. The first attack was infinitely more deadly than any of the subsequent assaults have proved, and the final charge of the enemy is more remarkable for verbosity than for strength.

The story which Moulton tells is the same which Tilton repeated so often to Mrs. Woodhull and other intimate friends before he published it to the world. He corroborates his associate, in respect to all the details of the eventful days of December, 1870. He relates the incident of the interview in which he demanded the surrender of the paper containing Mrs. Tilton's recantation quite in the manner of one who feels as if he had done an heroic action, but judiciously omits any reference to the exhibition of a pistol, which gave so much dramatic effect to that extraordinary scene. There is a marked discrepancy between his account and that given by Mr. Beecher of the circumstances under which the apology was executed. He admits having written it, but declares that the language of it was dictated to him by Mr. Beecher. It will be recollected that Mr. Beecher represents that the "apology" was simply a gathering together of disjointed fragments of what he described as a soliloquy rather than a conversation. The presumptions are altogether in favor of the latter rendering. If Mr. Beecher had intended to make a confession of actual guilt, he would have hardly employed an amanuensis for such a purpose.

Quite a number of the letters which Mr. Beecher from time to time confided to Mr. Moulton are of so confidential a nature that we can only account for his making such a disposition of them on the theory that he thought there was no other depositary in whom they could be so absolutely safe. There are the letters of Mrs. and Mr. Hooker, Mrs. Morse and Thomas K. Beecher, which certainly never would have been handed over to any third party unless there had been the most implicit faith entertained in the honor and reliability of the custodian. The letters of Mr. Claflin and Mr. Perkins are of less importance, but they, like the others, belonged exclusively to the person to whom they were addressed, and when Mr. Beecher peremptorily demanded the return of them, saying, "they were never placed in your hands to be held for two parties, nor to be used in any way; they were to be held for me," the withholding of them by Moulton was an act of ineffable perfidy and baseness. Moulton exhibits a note from Beecher, dated 13th July, as evidencing the confidence the latter had in him up to that time. But it must be borne in mind that Moulton's refusal to give him back the letters he had entrusted to him, bears date Aug. 4th. It was on that day that Mr. Beecher discovered that his "dear Moulton" was false and treacherous. Until then he had believed in him and opened his heart to him, although warned repeatedly and earnestly by his wife and by numerous friends that he would deceive and betray him.

The conduct of Moulton in this whole affair has been so detestable that he has no claim to credibility where his word is contradicted. Any mere statement of his, therefore, unsupported by reliable testimony must be rejected, and, inasmuch as his allegations against Mr. Beecher are wholly unsustained by any portion of the documentary evidence, we dismiss them as entirely worthless.

The grave charge of black-mail which Mr. Beecher introduced into his defense, with so much directness and simplicity, so far from being disputed or palliated by Moulton, is admitted and defended. He makes up a profit and loss account of the five thousand dollar extortion, showing the dates and sums of the payments to Tilton, amounting to $4,550, leaving a remainder of $450 of the hush money yet to be dispensed to that individual as the price of his silence. There is, to be sure, a shallow pretense that Tilton did not know whence this money was derived, but when we come to consider the relations of intimacy what existed between these two men, the suggestion is too preposterous to be treated seriously. The truth appears to be that the features of black-mailing were observable in the case from the very beginning. Its first form was the using of Beecher to force a settlement with Bowen; its second, the procuring of small sums of money, aggregating $2000, as is set forth in Mr. Beecher's statement, and its third, the contract executed by Moulton, on the representation that Moulton could be bought off finally and forever for the round sum of $5000.

The conclusion to which we are irresistibly brought by a patient perusal of this ponderous compilation is, that it develops no new facts, that it fails completely to shake the strong foundations of Mr. Beecher's explanation, that the conspiracy to destroy a great reputation, artfully as it was contrived, and relentlessly as it has been pursued, has been baffled and overthrown, and that all the actors in it, whether principals or accessories, have involved themselves in hopeless and inextricable disgrace.

Current Notes.

The Concord, N. H., Monitor believes that the Republican party has yet a great future of usefulness and success before it. It says: "So long as the great principles of liberty and statesmanship which called the Republican organization into being and gave it power to inspire and guide its adherents exist, so long will harmony of action pervade its ranks and pure and lofty patriotism bear its banners to victory."

A great deal has been said about a third term for Gen. Grant. We have our notion about the matter, and it is that Grant's "third term" will be about thus: First term, Gen. Grant; second term, President Grant; third term, Mr. Grant.—Baltimore Gazette.

Those growling journals which attack the Republican platform, just constructed at Harrisburg, as indirect and non-committal, develop their ill-temper to an extraordinary degree. The resolutions of the committee as presented are probably the most square and flat-footed political creed which has been issued for some time.—Philadelphia Press.

THE GREAT SCANDAL.

Continuation of Moulton's Statement.

The Charge of Blackmail Considered and Denied.

Saturday morning when we went to press we had all of Mr. Moulton's statement that had been telegraphed east of Boston, comprising about a third of the whole matter including the letters. When we went to press a part of Mrs. Hooker's letter had been received in which she accepts the statement of her brother's guilt as given by Mrs. Woodhull. The letter was endorsed to her brother, Thomas K. Beecher. To this letter, Thomas K replied in the following curious letter:

ELMIRA, Nov. 5, 1872.

Dear Belle: To allow the Devil himself to be crushed for speaking the truth is unspeakably cowardly and contemptible, I respect, as at present advised, Mrs. Woodhull, while I abhor her philosophy. She only carries out Henry's philosophy, against which I recorded my protest twenty years ago, and parted (loving and achingly) from him, saying, "We cannot work together." He has drifted, and I have hardened like a crystal till I am sharp-cornered and exacting. I cannot help him except by prayer. I cannot help him through Edward. In my judgment Henry is following his slippery doctrines of expediency, and, in his cry of progress and nobleness of human nature, has sacrificed clear, exact, ideal integrity. Hands off, until he is down, and then my pulpit, my home, my church, and my purse and heart are at his service. Of the two, Woodhull is my hero, and Henry my coward, as at present advised. But I protest against the whole batch and all its belongings. I was not anti-slavery; I am not anti-family. But as I wrote years ago, whenever I assault slavery because of its abominations, I shall assail the church, the state, the family, and all other institutions of selfish usage.

I return the papers. You cannot help Henry. You must be true to Woodhull. I am out of the circle as yet, and am glad of it. When the storm-line includes me I shall suffer as a Christian, saying: "Cease ye from man."

Don't write to me. Follow the truth and when you need me cry out. Yours, lovingly, (Signed) TOM.

P. S. I am so overworked and hurried that I see upon review that my letter sounds hard—because of the schoolmaskiness. But believe me, dear Belle, that I see and suffer with you. You are in a tight place. But having chosen your principles I can only counsel you to be true and take the consequences. For years, you know, I have been apart from all of you except in love. I think you all in the wrong as to anthropology and social science. But I honor and love them who suffer for conviction's sake. My time to suffer will come in due time. In this world all Christians shall suffer tribulation. So eat, sleep, pray, take good aim and shoot, and when the ache comes say even hereunto were we called. But I repeat—You can't help Henry at present.

P. S. I unseal my letter to enclose print and add: You have no proof as yet of any offence on Henry's part. Your testimony would be allowed in no court. Tilton, wife, Moulton & Co. are witnesses. Even Mrs. Stanton can only declare hearsay. So if you move, remember that you are standing on uncertain information, and we shall not probably ever get the facts, and I'm glad of it. If Mr. and Mrs. Tilton are brought into court nothing will be revealed. Perjury for good reason is with advanced thinkers no sin.

The above letter, as well as those which follow, are, as Moulton says, introduced to show that even before the publication of the Woodhull revelations, the matter was talked about by the relatives and friends of Mr. Beecher. This letter is followed by one of Mr. Hooker's, absent in Europe, to his wife, in which he devotes some space to the stories in circulation. It is dated November, 1872.

Moulton says that after Beecher had seen these letters of his sister, Mrs. Hooker, "he came to me, in trouble and alarm, and handed me all the letters, together with one under the date of November 27." This letter of Nov. 27th is that in which she (Mrs. H.) proposes to Mr. Beecher that he write a paper confessing himself guilty of the alleged crime, and allow her to read it in his church. It also enclosed a slip from a Hartford paper, which says that Nast told Putnam that Mr. Beecher would make a fall which would shock the civilized world.

Mr. Moulton continues:

Beecher then informed me of his apprehension that his sister, in her anxiety that he should do his duty in presenting this truth as she understood it, and in protecting Mrs. Woodhull from the consequences of having published the truth, from which she was then suffering, would go into his pulpit and insist upon declaring that the Woodhull publication was substantially true; and he desired me to do what in me lay to prevent such a disaster. I suggested to him that he should see Mrs. Hooker, speak to her kindly, and exhort her not to take this course, and that Tilton should see her and so far shake her confidence in the truth of her story as to induce her to doubt whether she would be safe in making the statement public. In this course Beecher agreed, and such arguments and inducements were brought to bear upon Mrs. Hooker as were in the power of all three of us, to prevent her from doing that which would have certainly brought on an exposure of the whole business. All these letters I received from Beecher, and they are those to which he alludes in his communication of the 4th instant, as the letters of his sister and brother delivered to me, and which I did not believe that I could honorably give him up, because I thought—and I submit to the committee, I was right in thinking,—that they form a part of this controversy, and were not, as he therein alleged, simply given to my keeping as part of his other papers, which he could not keep safely on account of his own carelessness in preserving documents. Beecher was exceedingly anxious that Tilton should repudiate the statement published by Woodhull, and denounce her for its publication, and he drew up, upon my memorandum book, the form of a card to be published by Tilton, over his signature; and asked me to submit it to him for that purpose, which I here produce, marked "N 10":—

BEECHER'S PROPOSED CARD FOR TILTON.

In an unguarded enthusiasm I hoped well and much of one who has proved utterly unprincipled. I shall never again notice her stories, and now utterly repudiate her statements made concerning me and mine.

Beecher told me to say to Tilton, substantially: "Theodore may, for his own purpose, if he choose, say that all his misfortunes have come upon him on account of his dismissal from the Union and the Independent, and on account of the offence which I committed against him; he may take the position against me and Bowen that he does; yet the fact is that his advocacy of Mrs. Woodhull and her theories has done him the injury which prevents his rising. Now in order to get support from me and from Plymouth church, and in order to obtain the sympathy of the whole community, he must publish this card; and unless he does it he cannot rise." He also said the same thing to Tilton in my presence. To this Tilton answered in substance to Beecher: "You know why I sought Mrs. Woodhull's acquaintance. It was to save my family and yours from the consequences of your acts, the facts about which had become known to her. They have now been published, and I will not denounce that woman to save you from the consequences of what you yourself have done."

To resume: After I had carried to Mr. Tilton the paper of apology which had reference to Beecher's adultery, and had received assurances that all between Beecher and Tilton should be kept quiet, I immediately conveyed that information to Beecher. He was profuse in his professions of thankfulness and gratitude to me for what he said were my exertions in his behalf. Soon after that I was taken sick.

While confined to his room, Moulton received from Mr. Beecher one of his rather gushing letters, which has been published and which contains the sentence, "Does God look down from heaven on three unhappy creatures, who more need a friend than these"—(referring to himself, Tilton and wife.) Also the reference to the reconciliation that "Theodore will have the hardest task in the case" and further along wonders "if Elizabeth knows how generously (Tilton) had carried himself toward me." On the same day Moulton obtained permission for Mr. Beecher to write a letter to Mrs. Tilton. Following this permission is a letter from Mr. Beecher to Mrs. Tilton, dated Feb. 7th, 1871, and begins with the declaration, "When I saw you last I did not ever expect to see you again, or to be alive many days." The letter has been published in full heretofore. It is full of expressions of confidence in Moulton, who says further that this letter was written to pursuade Mrs. Tilton to trust him in order that he might bring about a reconciliation.

Following this is a letter from Mr. Perkins, a nephew of Mr. Beecher, to him, stating that he had heard in connection with the stories of Tilton's criminality, that Tilton stated that Beecher was equally guilty in the same direction. To this letter Mr. Beecher replied as follows:

February 23, 1871.

My Dear Fred:—Whatever Mr. Tilton formerly said against me—and I know the substance of it—he has withdrawn, and frankly confessed that he had been misled by the statements of one who then confronted backed down from his charges.

In some sense I am in part to blame for his indignation. For I lent a credulous ear to reports about him, which I have reason to believe were exaggerated or wholly false. After a full conference and explanation there remains between us no misunderstanding, but mutual good-will and reconciliation have taken the place of exasperation. Of course I shall not chase after rumors that will soon run themselves out of breath if left alone. If my friends will put their foot silently on any coal or hot embers, and crush them out, without talking, the miserable lies will be as dead in New York in a little time as they are in Brooklyn. But I do not any the less thank you for your affectionate solicitude, and for your loyalty to my good name. I should have replied earlier, but your letter came when I was out of town. I had to go out again immediately. If the papers do not meddle this slander will fall still-born—dead as Julius Cæsar. If a sensation shall be got up, of course there are enough bitter enemies to fan the matter and create annoyance, though no final damage.

I am your affectionate uncle, H. W. B.

Concerning this letter, which was shown Mr. Moulton, he says that Mr. Beecher agreed not to send it until he had seen him again, but did. On conferring with Tilton about it, he penned the following substitute for the letter which is found in pencil on Mr. Beecher's letter:

The following is a copy of Tilton's substitute for Beecher's letter:

An enemy of mine, as I now learn, poisoned the mind of Theodore Tilton by telling him stories concerning me. T. T. being angered against me because I had quoted similar stories against him, which I had heard from the same party, retaliated. Theodore and I, through mutual friends, were brought together, and found upon mutual explanations that both were the victims of the same slanderer.

Mr. Moulton continues: "Meeting while Mrs. Morse, the mother-in-law of Mrs. Tilton, who was from time to time an inmate of his family in Livingstone street, had, as I was informed both by Mr. and Mrs. Tilton, learned from her daughter the criminal relationship heretofore existing between Beecher and herself, and who could not understand why that matter had been settled, and who had not been told how it had been adjusted, and who had had a most bitter quarrel with Tilton, accusing him of not having so carried his affairs as to keep what fortune he had, and who had called upon Beecher about the relations between Tilton and Mrs. Tilton, and who had, as Beecher had informed me, filled the minds of Mrs. Beecher and himself with stories of Tilton's infidelity and improper conduct to his wife, wrote the following letter to Beecher, under date of Jan. 27, 1871, which he delivered to me the next day, as appears by my memorandum thereon, together with the draft of an answer which he said he proposed to send to Mrs. Morse.

The following is Mrs. Morse's letter:

Mr. Beecher:—As you have not seen fit to pay any attention to the request I left at your house now over two weeks since, I will take this method to inform you of the state of things in Livingston street. The remark you made to me at your own door was an enigma at the time, and every day adds to the mystery: "Mrs. Beecher has adopted the child." "What child?" I asked. You replied, "Elizabeth."

Now, I ask what earthly sense was there in that remark? Neither Mrs. B. yourself, nor I can have done anything to ameliorate her condition. She has been for the last three weeks with one very indifferent girl. T. has sent —— with the others away, leaving my sick and distracted child to care for all four children night and day, without fire in the furnace or anything like comfort or nourishment in the house. She has not seen any one. He says, "She is mourning for her sin." If this be so, one twenty-four hours under this shot, I think, is enough to atone for a lifelong sin, however heinous. I know that any change in his affairs would bring more trouble upon her and more suffering. I did not think for a moment when I asked Mrs. B. as to your call there, supposing she knew it, of course, as she said you would not go there without her.

I was innocent of making any misunderstanding, if there was any. You say keep quiet; I have all through her married life done so, and we now see our error. It has brought him to destruction, made me utterly miserable, turned me from a comfortable home, and brought his own family to beggary. I don't believe if his honest debts were paid he would have enough to buy their breakfast. This she could endure and thrive under, but the publicity he has given to this recent and most crushing of all troubles, is what has taken the life out of her. I know of twelve persons whom he has told, and they in turn have told others. I had thought we had as much as we could live under from his neglect and ungovernable temper. But this is the death blow to us both, and I doubt not Florence has hers. Do you know when I hear of your creating your jokes from Sunday to Sunday, and think of the misery you have brought upon us, I think with the Psalmist: "There is no God." Admitting all he says to be the invention of his half drunken brain, still the effect upon us is the same, for all he's told believe it. Now he's nothing to do, he makes a target of her night and day. I am driven to this extremity, to pray for her release from all suffering by God's taking her himself, for if there's a heaven I know she'll go there.

The last time she was in this house she said: "Here I feel I have no home, but on the other side I know I shall be more than welcome." Oh, my precious child! how my heart bleeds over you in thinking of your sufferings. Can you do anything in the matter?

Mr. Moulton continues: It will be observed that in the letter of Mrs. Morse she says Tilton has sent —— with the others away. I purposely omit the name of this young girl. There was a reason why it was desirable that she should be away from Brooklyn. That reason, as given me by Mr. and Mrs. Tilton, was this: She had overheard conversations by them concerning Mrs. Tilton's criminal intimacy with Beecher, and she had reported these conversations to several friends of the family. Being young, and not knowing the consequences of her prattling, it seemed proper for the safety of the two families that she should be sent to a distance to school, which was accordingly done. She was put at a boarding-school at the West, and the expenses of her stay there were privately paid through me by Beecher, to whom I had stated the difficulty of having the girl remain in Brooklyn; and he agreed with us that it was best that she should be removed, and offered to be at the cost of her schooling. The bills were sent to me from time to time as they became due, a part of them through Mrs. Tilton. Previous to her going away she wrote the following letters to Mrs. Tilton:

BROOKLYN, Jan. 10, 1871.

My Dear Mrs. Tilton—I want to tell you something. Your mother, Mrs. Morse, has repeatedly attempted to hire me by offering me dresses and presents, to go to certain persons and tell them stories injurious to the character of your husband. I have been persuaded that the kind attentions shown me by Mr. Tilton for years were dishonorable demonstrations. I never at the time thought that Mr. Tilton's caresses were for such a purpose. I do not want to be made use of by Mrs. Morse or any one else to bring trouble on my two best friends, you and your husband. Bye bye.

January 12.

My Dear Mrs. Tilton—The story that Mr. Tilton once lifted me from my bed and carried me screaming to his own and attempted to violate my person is a wicked lie. Yours truly.

These notes are in Mrs. Tilton's handwriting, says Mr. Moulton, who continues:

While this young lady was at school she did inform a friend of Mrs. Tilton, Mrs. P., of the stories of the family relations. These stories were written to Brooklyn, and came to the knowledge of my friends, creating an impression upon their minds unfavorable to Mr. Tilton, and might possibly lead to the reopening of the scandal. I therefore took pains to trace them back, and found that they came from Mrs. P., to whom the school-girl had told them. I therefore called upon Tilton and asked if these stories could not be stopped. Soon afterwards he produced to me a letter dated the eighth of November, 1872, written by Mrs. Tilton, with a note to me on the back thereof, to disabuse Mrs. P.'s mind as to the girl's disclosures.

BROOKLYN, November 8, 1872.

My dear Mrs. P—I come to you in this fearful extremity, burdened by my misfortunes, to claim your promised sympathy and love.... I have mistakenly felt obliged to deceive—these two years, and my husband had made false accusations against me, which he never has to her or any one.

In order that he may not appear on his defence, thus adding the terrible exposure of a law suit, will you implore silence on her part against any indignation which she may feel against him; for the one only ray of light and hope in this midnight gloom is his entire sympathy and co-operation in my behalf.

A word from you to Mr. D——will change any unfriendly spirit which dear mother may have given him against my husband.

You know I have no mother's heart, that will look charitably upon all, save you. Affectionately, your child, ELIZABETH.

Of course you will destroy this letter.

[Following the letters are accounts of the payment of the girl's school bills in part, by Mr. Moulton, as he says, for Mr. Beecher.]

From this time, February, 1871, Mr. Moulton says that everything was quiet. He had never heard that Mrs. Tilton charged her husband with any infidelities. Hearing by Mr. Beecher (Jan. 1, 1871,) that Mrs. Tilton had expressed to several persons a separation from Tilton because of his infidelity to his marriage vows, he called upon her as a mediator to learn if such was the case. Mrs. Tilton denied that she desired any such thing, or had expressed such a purpose, but that her mother (Mrs. Morse) on her own responsibility had made such representation to Mr. Beecher. In addition to her verbal denial, Moulton obtained from her a letter, which is given, stating in the most pronounced terms that the story is a deliberate falsehood. Moulton also publishes a letter from Mrs. T. to the woman with whom Bowen alleged that Tilton had improper relations, which indicates that these women are warm and gushing friends.

Mr. Moulton proceeds to state that Mrs. Tilton was the only party who attempted to violate the promise of non intercourse during the spring and summer of 1871, and gives two or three silly though harmless letters which Mrs. T had written to Mr. B., who gave them to Moulton.

About this time [January, 1872] Moulton learned that Mrs. Tilton was making statements sullying the reputation of her husband, and that her home was not happy. He thought it proper to caution her lest her indiscretion should break up the settlement which all were so desirous to maintain. In reply to this Mrs. T. wrote a letter stating that she had done Theodore wrong, but was now convinced otherwise, and would no longer be an enemy to reconstruction.

Mr. Tilton continues:

After the signing of the "tripartite covenant," April 2, 1872, Tilton [desired that I should return him the paper containing his wife's confession, in order, as he said, to remove her of her anxiety as to its possibly falling into wrong hands, and she was very desirous that this paper should be destroyed. As I held it solely for her protection, and under pledge to him, I gave it to him, and he told me afterwards that he gave into her hands, and that she destroyed it. She also confirmed that statement. Some time after that—it is impossible for me to fix the date precisely—I learned from Beecher that Mrs. Tilton had told him that when she made her confession to her husband of her infidelity to him (Beecher) her husband had made a like confession to her of his own infidelities with several other women. This being an entirely new statement of fact to me, and never having heard Mrs. Tilton, in all my conversations with her, although she had admitted freely her own sexual intercourse with Beecher, make any claims that her husband had confessed his infidelity, or that he had been unfaithful to her, I was considerably surprised at this intimation made at so late a period, and I brought it to the attention of Tilton, in the form of a very strong criticism of his course towards me, that he had kept back so important a fact, which might have made a great difference as to the course that ought to be taken. Tilton promptly and with much feeling denied that he had ever made any such confession, or that his wife ever claimed that he had, and desired me to see Mrs. Tilton and satisfy myself upon that point; and he went immediately with me to my house, that I might see Mrs. Tilton before he should have the opportunity to see her, after he had heard the alleged fact. We went to the house together and found her in the back parlor. On our way to the house, Tilton said to me "Frank, what is the use of my trying to keep the family together, when this sort of thing is being all the time said against me? You are all the time telling me that I must keep the peace, and forget and forgive, while these stories are being circulated to my prejudice."

On arriving at the house I asked Mrs. Tilton to step into the front parlor, where we two were alone. I then put the question to her: "Elizabeth, did you tell Mr. Beecher that when you made your confession to your husband of your infidelity with Beecher, your husband at the same time made a confession to you of his own infidelity with other women?" I said, "I want to know if this is true for my own satisfaction." She answered: "Yes." I then stepped with her into the back parlor, where her husband was waiting, and I said to him: "Your wife says that she did tell Beecher that you confessed your infidelity with other women, at the time she made her confession to you." Elizabeth immediately said: "Why, no, I didn't tell you so. I could not have understood your question, because it isn't true that Theodore ever made any such confession, and I didn't state it to Mr. Beecher, because it is not true." I was very much shocked and surprised at the denial, but of course could say nothing more, and did say nothing more upon that subject, and left and went home. The next morning I received the following letter from Mrs. Tilton, without date, so that I am unable to give the exact date of this transaction; but know it was after the tripartite covenant.

Dear Francis:—I did tell you two falsehoods at your last visit. At first I entirely misunderstood your question, thinking you had reference to the interview at your house, the day before. But when I intelligently replied to you, I replied falsely. I will now put myself on record truthfully.

I told Mr. B. that at the time of my confession T. had made similar confessions to me of himself, but no developments as to persons. When you then asked, for your own satisfaction,—"Was it so?" I told my second lie. After you had left, I said to T., "You know I was obliged to lie to Frank, and I now say, rather than make others suffer as I now do, I must lie: for it is a physical impossibility for me to tell the truth."

Yet I do think, Francis, had not T.'s angry, troubled face been before me, I would have told you the truth.

I am a perfect coward in his presence, not from any fault of his perhaps, but from long years of timidity.

I implore you, as this is a side issue, to be careful not to lead me into further temptation.

You may show this to T. or Mr. B., or any one. An effort made for truth.

Wretchedly, ELIZABETH.

This letter was wholly unsatisfactory to me, because nothing had occurred the day previous to which she could possibly have referred. After the publication, on the 2d day of November 1872, in Woodhull and Claflin's Weekly, of the story of Tilton and Beecher's conduct, in relation to Mrs. Tilton, and as my name was mentioned in the article as one possessing peculiar knowledge upon the whole subject, I was continually asked by my acquaintances, and even by strangers, upon their ascertaining who I was, whether the story was true; and I found great difficulty in making an answer. A refusal on my part to answer would have been taken to be a confession of the truth of the charges. Therefore, when people inquired who had no right to my confidence, I answered them in such phrases as, without making a direct statement, would lead them to infer that the charges could not be sustained. In some cases I doubt not that the inquirers supposed that I, in fact, denied their truth; but upon that point I was very studious not directly to commit myself. Finding that my very silence was working injury to the cause of the suppression of the scandal, I told Tilton that I intended to be authorized by his wife to deny it. I thought it certainly could not possibly be true to the extent, and in the circumstances with the breadth, in which it was stated in that newspaper. Soon after I received the following paper:

Mr. Moulton:—

My Dear Friend—For my husband's sake and my children's I hereby testify, with all my woman soul, that I am innocent of the crime of impure conduct alleged against me. I have been to my husband a true wife; in his love I wish to live and die. My early affection still burns with its maiden flame; all the more for what he has borne for my sake, both private and public wrongs. His plan to keep back scandals long ago threatened against me I never approved, and the results shows it unavailing; but few would have risked so much as he has sacrificed for others ever since the conspiracy began against him two years ago.

Having had power to strike others, he has foreborne to use it, and allowed himself to be injured instead. No wound is so great to me as the imputation that he is among my accusers. I bless him every day for his faith in me, which swerves not, and for standing my champion against all my accusers.

ELIZABETH R. TILTON.

Upon the strength of that I thereafterwards said that Mrs. Tilton denied the story. About the 16th of December, 1872, Mr. Carpenter and Dr. Storrs undertook to look up the reports, with the intention, as I understood, of advising some public statement, or as being concerned in some investigation of the matter, and Mrs. Tilton wrote for them the following paper:

MRS. TILTON'S STATEMENT.

December 16, 1872.

In July, 1870, prompted by my duty, I informed my husband that H. W. Beecher, my friend and pastor, had solicited me to be a wife to him, together with all that this implied. Six months afterwards my husband felt impelled by the circumstances of a conspiracy against him, in which Mrs. Beecher had taken part, to have an interview with Mr. Beecher.

In order that Mr. B. might know exactly what I had said to my husband, I wrote a brief statement (I have forgotten its exact form), which my husband showed to Mr. Beecher. Late the same evening Mr. B. came to me (lying very sick at the time), and filled me with distress, saying I had ruined him—and wanted to know if I meant to appear against him. This I certainly did not mean to do, and the thought was agonizing to me. I then signed a paper which he wrote, to clear him in case of a trial. In this instance, as in most others, when absorbed by one great interest or feeling, the harmony of my mind is entirely disturbed, and I found on reflection that this paper was so drawn as to place me most unjustly against my husband and on the side of Mr. Beecher. So in order to repair so cruel a blow to my long suffering husband, I wrote an explanation of the first paper, and my signature. Mr. Moulton procured from B. the statement which I gave to him in my agitation and excitement, and now holds it. This ends my connection with the case.

ELIZABETH R. TILTON.

P. S. This statement is made at the request of Mr. Carpenter, that it may be shown confidentially to Dr. Storrs and other friends, with whom my husband and I are now consulting.

This paper was delivered to me, and the theory of the confession then was that Mr. and Mrs. Tilton should admit no more than the solicitation; but that endeavor to make an explanation of the business fell through, and after it was shown to those interested, as I was told, the paper remained with me. I received no further communication from Mrs. Tilton until the 25th of June of this year (1874), and that communication came to me in this wise: When Tilton showed me his Dr. Bacon letter, I most strongly and earnestly advised against its publication, and said to him in substance, that, while I admitted the wrong and injustice of Dr. Bacon's charges, that he (Mr. T.) had lived by the magnanimity of Beecher and that he was a dog and a knave, when I believed he had acted a proper and manly part in endeavoring to shield his family, yet that its publication would so stir the public mind that an investigation would be forced upon him and Beecher in some manner which I could not then foresee, and that the truth would in all probability have to come out, or so much of it that Mrs. Tilton and Beecher would be dishonored and destroyed, and he himself be subjected to the severest criticism. Notwithstanding my advice, he was so wrought up with the continued assaults upon him by the friends of Beecher that he determined on the publication of the letter. He said to me, in substance, that as the course I had advised in the matter in regard to the church investigation had been so completely set aside by Beecher's friends, and they had so far ignored all propositions coming from me as to the best mode of disposing of the matter, they evidently did not any longer need my counsel or assistance. I insisted that should be changed into "an offence committed against me," which was done, and the letter was published in that form.

The reasons which actuated me to require this change by Tilton in his letter were in the hope that the reconciliation and peace might still be possible. As the letter as amended would state an offence only, and also that an apology sufficient in the mind of Tilton had been made for that offence, if Beecher in reply to the Bacon letter should come out and state that it was true he had committed an offence against Tilton, for which he had made the most ample apology, which had been accepted by Tilton as satisfactory, and as the matter was nobody's business but that of the parties interested, he would never become a party to any investigation of the subject, and that Tilton had acted not unjustly or unfairly towards him in what he had done; that in such case the affair might possibly have been quieted and peace maintained. But if the words "revolting crime" remained in the letter, all hope of reconciliation or escaping the fullest investigation would be impossible. After the publication of that letter I so advised Mr. Beecher, his friends and counsel, but that advice was unheeded; and I also gave Mr. Beecher the same advice at a consultation with him for which he asked in a letter, which will hereafter in its proper place be produced. Some days subsequent to this advice of mine to Tilton, I received the following letter of date June 25, 1874, from Mrs. Tilton, which is the last communication I have with or from her on the subject:

JUNE 25, 1874.

Mr. Moulton:—It is fitting I should make quick endeavor to undo my injustice towards you.

I learned from Theodore last night that you greatly opposed the publication of his statement to Dr. Bacon. I had coupled you with Mr. Carpenter in advising it.

Forgive me, and accept my gratitude.

ELIZA R. TILTON.

Having now placed before the committee my statement of the facts concerning Mrs. Tilton, and the documentary evidence that I have to support them, and as they are diametrically opposed to nearly all that Mrs. Tilton appears to declare in her published statement, I deem it my duty to myself, and my position in this terrible business, to say that during this affair Mrs. Tilton has more than once admitted to me and to another person to my knowledge,—whom I do not care to bring into this controversy—the fact of her sexual relations with Beecher, and she never has once denied them, other than in the written papers prepared for a purpose which I have already exhibited; but on the contrary, the fact of such criminal intercourse being well understood by Beecher, Tilton and Mrs. Tilton to have taken place, my whole action in the matter was based upon the existence of that fact, and was an endeavor, faithfully carried out by me in every way possible, to protect the families of both parties from the consequence of public disclosure of Mrs. Tilton's admitted infidelities to her husband.

Following the above is an explanation of the Woodhull affair and Mr. Beecher's letters in that connection. There is nothing new in this part of the statement except the assertion that Tilton used his influence constantly with Mrs. Woodhull to prevent her publication of the whole thing.

THE CHARGE OF BLACKMAIL.

Respecting the charge of blackmail, Mr. Moulton says: "I saw questions put in the cross-examination of Tilton, as published in the Brooklyn Eagle, and also published in the newspapers,—with how much of truth I know not,—that Mr. Samuel Wilkeson had charged that Tilton's case in controversy with Bowen was for the purpose of blackmailing him and Beecher, and that he (Wilkeson) knew that there had been no crime committed against Tilton or his household by Beecher. Beecher never intimated to me that he thought there was any desire on Tilton's part to blackmail him; and as I had the sole management of the money controversy between Tilton and Bowen, which I have already fully explained, I know there was no attempt on Tilton's part to blackmail or get anything more than what I believe to be just due from Bowen. So that I am certain that Mr. Wilkeson is wholly mistaken in that regard. The question whether Wilkeson knew or believed that any offence had been committed will depend upon the fact whether he knew of anything that had been done by Beecher or Tilton's wife which called for apology at the time he wrote the tripartite covenant. It will be remembered that the tripartite covenant was made solely in reference to the disclosures which Bowen had made to Tilton and Tilton had made to Bowen; and Tilton's letter sets forth that the only disclosure he made to Bowen of Beecher's acts towards himself were of improper advances made to his wife, and that he so limited his charge in order to save the honor of his wife. These questions will be answered by the production of the letter of April 2, 1872.

NEW YORK, April 2, 1872.

My Dear Moulton—Now for the closing act of justice and duty.

Let Theodore pass into your hand the written apology which he holds for the improper advances, and do you pass it into the flames of the friendly fire in your room of reconciliation. Then let Theodore talk to Oliver Johnson.

I hear he and Carpenter, the artist, have made this whole affair the subject of conversation in the clubs.

Sincerely yours,

SAMUEL WILKESON.

This letter, it will be observed, contains no protest against blackmailing, either on Tilton's part or my own, upon Beecher or Bowen, and is of the date of the tripartite covenant. Wilkeson, also, hearing of Tilton's troubles, kindly offered to procure him a very lucrative employment in a large enterprise with which he was connected, as appears from a letter dated January 11, 1871.

January 11, 1871.

Dear Tilton—You are in trouble. I come to you with a letter just mailed to Jay Cooke advising him to secure your services as a platform speaker to turn New England, or Old England, or the great West upside down about our Northern Pacific.

Pluck up heart! You shan't be trampled down. Keep quiet. Don't talk. DON'T PUBLISH. Abide your time, and it will be a very good time. Take my word for it.

SAMUEL WILKESON.

It will be observed that this letter was dated after the letter of apology, and after the letter of Tilton to Bowen, and Wilkeson could hardly have desired to employ in so grave an enterprise one whom he then knew or believed to be attempting to blackmail his associate. And besides, his kindly expressions and advice to Tilton seem to me wholly inconsistent with such an allegation.

I think it just, in this connection, to state a fact which bears, in my mind, upon this subject. On the 31 of May, 1873, I knew that Tilton was in want of money, and I took leave, without consulting him, to send him my check for a thousand dollars, and a due-bill for that amount to be signed by him, enclosed in a letter which I here produce.

The following is the document:

MOULTON TO TILTON.

NEW YORK, May 3, 1873.

Dear Theodore—I enclose to you a check for one thousand dollars, for which please sign the enclosed. Yours,

F. D. MOULTON.

[Indorsement on above by Tilton.]

Dear Frank—I can't borrow any money—for I see no way of returning it.

Hastily, T. T.

After the above paper was returned to me, on the same day I sent him the thousand dollars, leaving it to be a matter as between ourselves and not a money transaction. I know, to the contrary of this, so far as Beecher is concerned, that Tilton never made any demand on him for money or pecuniary aid in any way or form. He asked only that Beecher should interpose his influence and power to protect him from the slanders of those who claimed to be Beecher's friends; while Beecher himself, with generosity and kindness toward Tilton which had characterized his acts during the whole of this unhappy controversy, of his own motion insisted, through me, in aiding Tilton in establishing his enterprise of the Golden Age, for which purpose he gave me the sum of five thousand dollars, which I was to expend in such manner as I deemed judicious to keep the enterprise along, and if Tilton was at any time in need personally, to aid him. It was understood between myself and Beecher that this money should go to Tilton as if it came from my own voluntary contributions for his benefit, and that he should not know—and he does not know until he reads this statement, for I do not believe he has derived it from any other source—that this money came from Beecher or thinks that he is in any way indebted to him for it. I annex an account of the receipt and expenditures of that sum.

Brief Jottings.

The Cape Elizabeth High school at Turner's Island commenced to-day, under charge of D. W. Hawkes.

Rev. Mr. Juul, the Lutheran clergyman, preached two sermons in the Swedish tongue at Reception Hall, City Building, yesterday.

A certain wholesale house on Exchange street has been established forty years, and during that time has never had a bill presented the second time.

Mr. Colby closed his course of discussions at Arcana Hall yesterday afternoon.

Mr. E. A. Jordan has painted a new banner for Beacon Lodge, I. O. O. F. It is pronounced by good judges the finest in the state.

One hundred waiters are wanted to serve the clam bake to-morrow.

An Oxford street man set up a stove Saturday afternoon, and in so doing nearly set fire to his house. He put the funnel into a hole outside of the chimney, and when he built a fire the stove smoked so bad that he became frightened and started after a fire engine.

The railing which we spoke of some time since was put around the desk of the City Clerk Saturday.

Thursday forenoon a young man presented a check for $330 at the First National Bank in Bangor, drawn by C. S. Kimball of Portland on the Casco National Bank of this city. The check was cashed on the indorsement of H. W. Blood of Bangor, and the indorsement proves to be a forgery.

A carriage upset on the corner of Congress and Washington streets yesterday, injuring it seriously.

The Portland Band accompany the Claremont Commandery of Rockland, on their excursion to Skowhegan, on the 8th of next month.

Little Nell will appear at City Hall Friday and Saturday in the play of "The California Diamond," "Hidden Hand," and "Fidelia, the Fire Waif."

On account of the temperance meeting at the Congress street church the regular Monday evening temperance meeting at the Allen Mission will be omitted.

The Coming Event.

The committee of arrangements from the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the state have concluded their arrangements for the celebration to-morrow. Members of the Portland Encampments are requested to appear at their headquarters Tuesday morning at 6 o'clock prompt, in full uniform, to receive the Providence Encampments and escort them to the hotel.

Ancient Brothers Lodge, No. 4., will meet at the Common Council room, city building, at 8 o'clock, and headed by Edmands' Band of Boston, will escort the Encampments and Lodges arriving over the Grand Trunk, at 8.45 o'clock, to the headquarters at City Hall.

Ligonia Lodge, No. 5, will meet at Arcana Hall at 7½ o'clock, and with the Salem Band will escort those arriving at the same time over the Eastern, Maine Central and Portland & Ogdensburg roads.

Maine Lodge, No. 1, will meet at Library Room, Mechanics Hall, at 7½ o'clock and with the Germania Band will receive those arriving at 8.40 o'clock over the Boston & Maine.

Portland Encampment and Beacon Lodge will meet at Army and Navy Union Hall at 8 o'clock with the Portland Band, and will receive those arriving at 9 1 4 o'clock over the Portland & Rochester.

Provisions have been made for 3000 at the clam-bake, and the steamer Charles Houghton chartered in addition to the Forest City and Lewiston, to carry the excursionists. Previous to landing at the island the steamers will make an excursion down the bay, landing the passengers for the clam-bake at 1½ p. m. The bake will be served at 2½ p. m., and the steamers return to the city at 5½ p. m.

At 7 p. m., all the bands, some sixteen in number, will consolidate in Congress Square, and, under the lead of Cole of the Portland Band, will play several fine selections.

The oration will be delivered in Congress Square Church at 7½ p. m. The following will will be the order of exercises: Voluntary on the organ; opening ode; prayer by the Grand Chaplain; short addresses by P. G. M., B. Knigsbury, Jr., P. G. M, Joseph Kidder of New Hampshire, and Grand Secretary C. D. Cole of Massachusetts; singing; oration by Past Grand Sire J. B. Nicholson of Philadelphia: singing, America. Most Worshipful Grand Master, F. M. Laughton of Bangor will preside.

The promenade concert at City Hall will begin at 8 p. m., and last one hour, the music by the Portland Band, 23 pieces. The dance will commence at 9 p. m., and the music furnished by Cole's quadrille band.

The officers of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts have accepted the invitation of Ancient Brothers Lodge to be their guests while here.

Headquarters for the Portland Encampments will be in Donnell's new block, Middle street, between Pearl and Market.

Col. Wm. Beals of Boston, has arrived to decorate City and Odd Fellow Halls. The decorations will doubtless be very fine.

It is very desirable that members should report at their several places of meeting promptly, as they have no time to delay.

BUILDING NOTES.—A large brick block is going up on the corner of State and York streets. It will be used as a dwelling house.

Mr. J. B. Brown is to erect a brick block on Cross street, three storied, embracing four stores, each to be 75 feet depth by 25 front. Only one of these stores will be erected this autumn and that will be occupied by Hillman & Merrill, straw goods. The cost of the block will probably be about $24,000.

W. S. Mains is just laying the foundation for his wine factory on Plum street. It will cover almost an acre of ground, being the largest affair of the kind in the state. The building is to be 108x54 feet in size. The lower portion, 35 x54 feet, will be three stories in height and be devoted to a dwelling house for the family, a sample room, stock room and office. Adjoining this—and part of the same building—is the press-room and carriage house 73x54. The press room will contain a press that will produce ten barrels of juice at a time. The wine room, in which the bottled wines will be placed will occupy the basement and run the whole length and depth of the building 108x54 feet. The building will be of brick.

Personal.

Hon. Geo. E. Chadbourne of North Bridgton is engaged at Portland with two assistants, in revising the index of the Probate Court. This formidable undertaking it is expected will require a year or two of assiduous labor.

Dr. J. T. Gilman of this city, and Maj. H. A. Shorey of Bridgton, trustees of the Maine Insane Hospital, made the regular monthly inspection of that institution Friday. There are about 400 patients now in the hospital. The committee found the affairs entirely satisfactory.

General Freemont has arrived at Mt. Desert with his family. He owns the largest of the four Porcupine Islands in Frenchman's Bay.

SUDDEN DEATH.—The widow of the late Nathaniel Gordon died very suddenly at the residence of Mrs. Cahoon on Free street yesterday morning. Dr. Small was called and pronounced it a case of apoplexy. Coroner Gould was called but did not deem an inquest necessary. Mrs. Gordon has been an inmate of the Old Ladies Home for some time and at the time of her death was 78 years of age.

ODD FELLOWS' GRAND MARCH.—The well-known musician, Mr. Fred ter Linden has copied enough band parts of the Odd Fellows' grand march for five bands. On account of the short notice arrangements could not be perfected to have parts published in time for all the bands. The piano copy is already published and for sale at the music stores.

TEMPERANCE.—Dr. and Mrs. Lawrence addressed a large audience on the subject of temperance at Congress street Methodist church last evening and at an out-door meeting at Evergreen Cemetery. They will speak at Dr. Shailer's church this evening.

SUNDAY SERVICES.

FIRST PARISH CHURCH.

Rev. Dr. Hill returned to his pulpit yesterday, after his vacation, and preached from Luke ix, 23, on denying one's self and taking up the cross daily. Substantially the same language was found in five or six other places in the four gospels, and this was an indication of the importance which the exhortation assumed in the evangelists' mind. Yet it has been the fate of this most important saying of our Lord to be partially misunderstood by the Christian church to the present day. The preacher would pass over, with mere allusions, the question whether it was addressed to the twelve or to believers in general; because he thought the testimony of the evangelists explicit, that it was addressed to all; also he would merely allude to the question, what was meant by coming after Jesus, and following after him; he would assume that the phrases meant the same as being disciples of Christ, or being true Christians, or members of Christ's kingdom. He would confine his attention principally to the two phrases: Let him deny himself, and let him take up his cross daily.

It was commonly assumed, among English readers of our day, that denying ourselves meant refusing the petitions or desires of our natural inclinations; self denial had become thus, in our speech, almost synonymous with self restraint, or abstinence. But the preacher considered this a misinterpretation of the saying of our Lord, which narrowed very much its comprehensive meaning. The original word had in classical Greek all three of the meanings of the English word deny; to contradict an assertion; to refuse a request; and to reject a claimant. But in the New Testament, while the first and third meanings were unequivocally found, the second meaning was not, he thought, to be found, unless it were in the language of the text. He preferred, therefore, to give it the third meaning, which was an undoubted Scriptural meaning, and which gave to the text a vastly more comprehensive and searching import. If any man will be a follower of Christ let him acknowledge Christ as a Master and renounce allegiance to himself; let him acknowledge that the law of Christ is supreme and all comprehensive, and that his own wishes, his own judgment, his own interests, are not to be considered,—the first question always is, What doth the Lord require of me? A man was to do nothing more, and nothing less, than his duty; fidelity to God's law, and loyalty to Christ were to rule every hour of his life, every emotion of his heart. Thus true self-denial was altogether independent of the question of self-restraint, or abstinence, which might, or might not, be required by this acknowledgement of supreme loyalty to Christ.

In like manner the taking of the cross daily was, in the preacher's judgment, a much more comprehensive thing than the mere bearing of suffering and sorrow. To that, the Providence of God might seldom call some men. The taking up of the cross daily was the daily renewing of an unalterable resolution to obey Christ, to do what he requires, to make the law of God and our own convictions of duty supreme guides and not to suffer any passions, desires, tastes or inclinations, to make us disobey the direction of our heavenly visions. Christ did not require of us obedience to a law; we were not under the law, but under grace. Nevertheless Christ did require of us obedience to the Spirit; an acknowledgement of his right to command, and a daily renewed steadfast purpose and endeavor to obey.

Lot of land on Winter street from Lucy A. Huntington et als to Sarah W. Berry. Consideration $6500.

ALMOST A RIOT.—Yesterday afternoon a colored boy on Washington threw a stone at an Irish boy, cutting his head badly. The act caused great indignation among the Irish and loud threats were made against the assaulter, which caused quite a lively fight between the friends of each party. The fight at last waxed so warm that the colored people were driven into a house occupied by the Ball family. At this move the Irish crowd commenced throwing stones at the house, but as this did not bring their foe to light an attempt was made to enter the house. At this point officers Merrill and Burnham arrived, and by their most active efforts succeeded in prevented the house being broken into. It required some time to disperse the crowd and prevent serious results. No arrests were made.

MONEY FOUND.—Last night A. K. Leighton lost a wallet containing $27 and several valuable papers. Soon after loosing it John Collins was unfortunate enough to find it. As John picked it up a friend passed by, and seeing him with the money told him if he would divide with him he wouldn't tell, but John declined the offer and went home with his new found treasure. The "friend" then went and told on John. The deputy marshals searched John's house and recovered the money, and now he wishes that he had divided with his "friend."

A DEAR RIDE.—Saturday a young man well known about town, named Alpine, called at Libby's stable on Congress Street, and asked for Dr. Ladwig's team. The horse was harnessed and he drove off. Some time after the owner called, when he learned that the team had been gone about two hours. He notified Marshal Parker who arrested the youth, and found the horse, which had been badly driven. The young man will go before court.

CIRCUIT COURT.—Judge Clifford will this morning deliver the opinion of the Circuit Court in Wells vs. Maine Steamship Company. The case involves an important question affecting common carriers, and also the rights of shippers of liquors from places outside this state destined for another state, but seized in Maine in transitu under the provisions of the prohibitory law.

MARR ASSOCIATION.—At the meeting of the Marr Association, Saturday, J. C. Marr of Cornish was ellected president; John Hamlin of Glasgow, Mo., Josiah P. Wescott of Portland, R P. Marr of Kenosha, Wis., D. R. Marr of Dowagaic Mich., vice presidents; A. F. Bird of Portland, secretary; William Trickey of Saccarappa, treasurer. Steps were taken to secure evidence in regard to the Marr property.

ACCIDENT.—Saturday afternoon, as Mr. H. S. Smith, accompanied by another gentleman and two ladies, was driving down High street with a tandem team, the horses ran away, throwing out the occupants of the carriage but not injuring them severely. One of the horses broke his leg and was killed. It was a fortunate escape for the party.

TEMPERANCE LECTURE.—David Tatum and wife, of Cleveland, Ohio, a minister in the Orthodox Society of Friends, will deliver a lecture on the subject of temperance this evening at 7 1-2 o'clock at the Congress Street Methodist Church. Mr. Tatum is said by those who have heard him to be a powerful and interesting speaker.

Kindergarten Schools.

Mr. Editor:

Object teaching, which a few years ago was confined to Germany, is fast being recognized by American parents as the easiest and most thorough, practical and natural mode of youthful training. Those of us whose little ones have received its advantages are amazed at the accurate and detailed character of their knowledge of common things acquired in a few terms. The originality displayed by them in their remarks about the forms, colors and other general features of familiar objects indicates at once that there is no mere training of the memory, no parrot-like development, but an harmonious stimulating of all mental faculties. What is this but that soundness of mind so desirable. The soundness of body is equally secured.

So important is this matter that every parent should, by his sympathy and patronage, aid its advancement.

It may not be generally known that we have the beginning of a kindergarten in this city. Miss Alice L. Fernald has inaugurated the system at the residence of her mother, Mrs. Jas. E. Fernald, No. 9, High street. The success already achieved by her is a certain indication of great future usefulness. She thoroughly loves the work and is intelligent and well-trained.

Besides this she has the matronly advice and assistance of her mother always available. She has not provided herself with all the appliances used by those who pursues the common method in part. If she could have the assurance that her limited number would always be kept full of scholars of the right age, she would endeavor more fully still to carry out the new plan. We are confident that attention needs only to be called to the case to secure the highest success in this respect.

THE BROOKLYN AFFAIR.

Report of the Investigating Committee.

Tilton Declared a Perjurer.

Bessie Turner's Testimony

A Full Acquittal of Mr. Beecher.

NEW YORK, Aug 23.—The Sunday Mercury prints the following abstract of the forthcoming report of the Plymouth Church Committee:

The report of the Committee of Plymouth Church, appointed to investigate the charges made against the pastor, H. W. Beecher, by a former member of the church, Theodore Tilton, will be made on next Friday evening in the Plymouth church itself, and all members of the church are invited to be present on the occasion as it is to be made a monster vindication of the pastor.

The report will occupy in the reading about two hours, and will be a complete and searching review of all that has been brought against Mr. Beecher, as well as of what has been adduced in his favor.

The report begins by stating briefly the rumors that have prevailed for some years against the pastor of the church. The intangible manner in which the charges were made could not be traced to any trustworthy foundation, being denied mainly by all those most concerned. The Congregational Council and its action are then spoken of, and thereafter the letters of the Rev. Dr. Bacon which brought about the singular letter of Theodore Tilton to that gentleman, and which a letter was inserted purporting to come from the pastor of the church, and placing him in a questionable position before the world; then the appointment of the investigating committee by the examining committee of the church, and that meeting to investigate whatever charges should be made against the Rev. H. W. Beecher.

Then is stated the action of the committee in calling upon Theodore Tilton to state whatever he had to allege against his former pastor and friend, and the statement from that gentleman which the call of that committee elicited. The main points of the statement of Mr. Tilton are then given, comprising the charges of adultery alleged to have taken place between Mr. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton, and the letters adduced to prove it.

Having this sworn statement in hand, the committee state that it thereupon called upon Mr. Tilton to submit to a cross-examination upon the subject matter of his charges, as also upon all the events and circumstances which induced him to come to the conclusion of the adultery of his wife and her former pastor.

In this cross-examination, it is stated that Mr. Tilton prevaricated to some extent and failed in notable instances to show any proof of the charges made by him. Notably in one instance, where Mr. Tilton in his statement says that a scene took place before his eyes where Mr. Beecher is alleged to have placed his hands upon Mrs. Tilton's ankle, Mr. Tilton being unable to say within a period of a number of years when the scene took place, and even whether it took place within a term of time comprised before or after the war.

It seemed to the committee that so vital an accusation as this should have been narrowed down to a shorter or more certain period of time, but this is not all that struck the committee as singular in Mr. Tiltons cross-examination. He therein says that though cognizant of his wife's guilt for some years, he was personally a man of unblemished character, of strict morality, never having been unfaithful in his marital relations nor had he endeavored to be.

Only this positive statement on Mr. Tilton's part induced the committee to call as a witness a young woman named Bessie Turner, who had lived in Tiltou's family in the quality of a domestic. In her evidence this young person swears that Mr. Tilton, while his wife was away from home, endeavored to accomplish on her person a dastardly outrage, on two separate occasions at night, entering her room and endeavoring to violate her person, succeeding so far as to drag her from her bed to his own.

This statement was so much at variance with Mr. Tilton's sworn statement upon cross-examination that the committee, loth to believe that Mr. Tilton is guilty not only of such a crime as that described, but also of often and wilful perjury, endeavored to obtain further evidence on the subject which was found in the sworn statement of Mrs. Tilton herself, who corroborated to some extent the charges made by Bessie Turner against her husband, more than enough to impel the committee to the conclusion that Mr. Tilton was a perjurer, and that his evidence upon cross-examination was in detail and substance false.

This having been ascertained beyond question, then comes the querry whether Mr. Tilton's evidence being manifestly untrue in some particulars, might not be so in toto, in which case his base and unsupported accusations against the pastor must be untrue also, as it is a well known maxium in law that all the testimony of a witness found guilty of perjury in any particular, fell to the ground.

This disposed of, then came the question of the letters, put forth by Mr. Tilton to maintain his charges. The principal of these comprise a letter of contrition addressed by H. W. Beecher to Theodore Tilton, but not in that gent's handwriting, and bearing evidence of having been obtained in a somewhat singular manner; a supposed confession of guilt written by Mrs. Tilton, and thereafter contradicted by her, and thereafter again reaffirmed by her under pressure by her husband and while she was laboring under illness and great excitement of mind; also several letters written by Mrs. Tilton to her husband, and others written by Mr. Beecher to Mr. Moulton.

The committee felt upon reading these letters that while their sense was ambiguous, there was in none of them any distinct admission of the charge of adultery, that is to say, the letters while being extravgant in language and sentiment and written by Beecher under a strong feeling of some wrong done by him to Mr. Tilton and his family relations, do not go to prove any specific act of wrong doing, and by one dozen persons would be taken to mean a dozen different things. Had any suppositions of wrong been done, these letters might be supposed to refer to it as his one wrong, and so when the charge of adultery was made, any superficial view of these writings might be taken as referring to that.

Therefore after a minute examination the committee could not find that in any way the charge of adultery was substantiated by these letters. Therefore, neither Mr. Tilton's accusation, nor the letters he brought forward to substantiate it could be held to prove more than that the pastor had done a wrong, not specified, to Mr. Tilton in his family.

Having worked thus far in the discharge of their task, it became the duty of the committee to search further for some evidence in the matter, and a general call was made upon all who knew anything of the matter to come forward and give evidence before the committee.

To this call several persons answered, among them was Tilton and the girl Bessie Turner, and Mrs. Stanton. The evidence of Bessie Turner has been already dwelt upon, and her allegations reviewed. The testimony of Mrs. Stanton was only hearsay, while that of Mrs. Tilton added further to the burden of proof against Mr. Tilton, by an explicit denial of all his more important statements. A denial of itself is entitled to as much weight as the affirmation of Mr. Tilton himself, but the testimony of the wife went further to prove that Mr. Tilton was commonly guilty of not only acts of adultery, but of brutality and shame in his own household.

Thus far, then, the testimony was too one-sided to admit of any second conclusion, though the committee was informed that another outside witness remained to be examined, whose evidence, it was generally stated, would convict Mr. Beecher, without any doubt of the charges made against him.

The committee waited day after day for this witness to come forward, and at length, after delaying for almost a week, a specific time was set for the witness to come forward and make his statement. Upon the day mentioned the witness made his appearance and addressed to the committee some diffusive remarks, embodying no statement or accusation, but conveying some covert hints and threats and offering to show some letters in his possession. These letters were seen, and went no further to prove what had been alleged than any previously seen. Indeed, they were less to the point and more general than those already shown. While feeling disappointed that a fuller statement had not been made, the committee could not take further steps to obtain one, and therefore simply went to the trouble of examining the accused person himself.

The statement of Beecher has already been before the public, who know its import. It sets up a general denial and gives a full history from Mr. Beecher's point of view of all that took place between himself and the Tiltons. In this statement comes to the surface the wrong so much spoken of in the letters previously mentioned, and which briefly, Mr. Beecher says, consisted of some advice given to Mrs. Tilton to leave her husband in consequence of his treatment of her, and also some counsel given to Mr. Bowen of the Union and Independent to dismiss Mr. Tilton from his position on both of these papers. Mr. Beecher states that afterwards he found that this advice resulted disastrously to Mr. Tilton, and he felt great pain and remorse at the thought.

One important expression embodied in this statement struck the committee as worthy of remark, where Mr. Moulton, who was claimed to have such overwhelming testimony against Mr. Beecher wrote to him that he could stand if the whole case were known to-morrow.

If this may be taken as meaning anything, it means that Mr. Beecher was guiltless in any serious manner of doing wrong.

The relations between Mr. Beecher and Mrs. Tilton are explained, and it is claimed that the relations never exceeded those which might exist between the pastor and member of his congregation. The singular conduct and tergiversation of Mr. Tilton is also dwelt upon in a remarkable manner and the whole affair described circumstantially.

The report then goes on to show that a cross-examination of Mr. Beecher developed no important additional facts and the evidence in the case was closed.

The report then briefly and tersely gives the conclusions of the committee. It states that on the one hand they find as the accused person a man of well known character against whom, during 24 years in this metropolis, and a life of over 60 years, not a single charge of lack of duty, much less immorality, has ever been made. A man of great Christian goodness and high principles. On the other hand, as the accuser, a man of bad reputation and whom the testimony has shown to be a perjurer and adulterer. His charges are unsupported by any distinct evidence or corroborative proof. Many of his main statements are flatly contradicted by other persons of better character than the accuser, besides the accused himself. The proof seems almost all on one side. Tilton fails to prove anything except that a wrong had been practiced against him. Mr. Beecher manfully confesses this wrong and shows by his letters that he bitterly regretted it.

The Committee, therefore, comes to the conclusion that Beecher throughout this painful enquiry has acted in an open, undeviating manner, while his accuser's course has been subtle and underhanded, and the finding is that the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher is entirely guiltless of the accusations brought against him.

This ends the report as it now is. Some of the members of the committee believe it to be proper to notice Mr. Moulton's statement as bringing further proof to bear upon the matter at issue, but it is not certain that any notice whatever will be taken of a statement which, unimportant in itself, was made in an irregular manner, and after a distinct refusal on Mr. Moulton's part to make any statement.

The Brooklyn Eagle publishes the testimony of Tilton's adopted daughter, known as Bessie before the Plymouth Church Investigating Committee. She says Mrs. Tilton was the most devoted wife and mother.

The following came out in the cross examination:

Q. Did Mr. Tilton in any manner attempt your ruin?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. Will you state the circumstances?

A. He did on two occasions while Mrs. Tilton was away. I don't remember where she went. Horace Greeley was in the house at the time. I think Mrs. Tilton was in Schoharie. Mr. Tilton and I were there all alone, except Mr. Greeley and the servant. Mr. Greeley was there making a visit to Mr. Tilton. The first time I had been sleeping, and woke to find myself in his arms.

Q. At night or in the day time?

A.—At night; I hardly realized where I was. He must have lifted me out of my bed and put me in his. When I woke up I found where I was. I asked what he was doing that for. He said he was lonesome and wanted me to come and be with him. I said that wasn't right, and went home to my own room. There was nothing said about it at the time. When he came to me a second time and tried to get into bed with me I got very indignant and as he would not leave the room I went into another and locked the door after me. I had never thought of locking the door before. I left the house the next day and didn't come back until Mrs Tilton returned. Afterwards Mrs. T. told me that Mr. T. had made a confession of this to her and she wanted to know if it was so. I thought of telling her several times, but I knew she had a great deal of trouble, and I thought this would trouble her a great deal more.

Mr. Beecher.

Sunday there was a great influx of people at the Twin Mountain House where Mr. Beecher preached to an audience of 1200. His sermon was taken from 2d Timothy, 2d chap., parts of 19th verse. "Nevertheless the foundation of God standeth sure. Having this seat the Lord knoweth them that are His." This discourse lasted one hour and a quarter, and was a general one. No allusion was made whatever to the scandal.

Rumors.

Mr. Shearman, counsel for Beecher, said yesterday that when the proper time came such a defence would be entered and made as would surely vindicate Beecher in the eyes of the people and before the law.

Trouble in Kentucky.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.

A despatch from Lancaster, Garard Co., Ky., says that a political war has been going on there for several days, occasioned by a difference between two leaders, both white men. One has been killed, and the residence of Sellers, one of the leaders, in which his colored friends had taken refuge, has been burned.

DANVILLE, KY., Aug. 22.—The situation at Lancaster to a late hour this evening was as follows:

Kennedy's friends occupy the court house, and Mason & Saunder's hotel, situated on the road leading to Stanford. Seller's forces are located on his premises, just down the hill on the Lexington pike, and a short distance from the public square. A third party, whose mission is to preserve order or restore peace, occupy the corner building on the corner of the square, between the two parties, and on the road to Lexington. The Circuit Court has not adjourned.

Yeakley, who was shot, was a brother-in-law of Kennedy.

The business houses are closed, and people are in momentary expectation of further trouble.

Later.—"There is more shooting at Lancaster. The negroes near the Sellers premises fired on a party of whites in Brown's building, on the corner above spoken of. The fire was returned, and a skirmish between the parties was kept up till the time the messenger left. Two negroes were shot and are supposed to be killed. No other casualties are known."

CINCINNATI, Aug 23.—A special despatch to the Gazette from Danvill, Ky., gives the following account of last night's troubles at Lancaster. A party from Lincoln Co. attacked Kennedy party commenced firing on the negroes who occupied the Sellers property, and from all we can learn the negroes did no firing. They were fortified in Sellers house and occasionally came out to reconoitre. The whites were under command of Sheriff Sanders of Lincoln Co., who had his forces surrounding the Sellers property.

About 4 o'clock the wood and coal houses immediately back of Sellers' residence were ignited by fire balls. These houses were in close proximity to the main building, to which the flames soon communicated. Town Marshal Miller and other citizens protested against firing the houses, but without effect. Miller called upon Capt. Fletcher, in command of the U. S. troops, to assist him in protecting the building from fire, but the request was not heeded until the flames had control of the main building.

Richer than Ever.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 22.—A telegram from Bismarck conveys a despatch from a special correspondent with Custer's Expedition, as follows:

CAMP CUSTER, Black Hills Expedition, Bear's Butte D. T., Aug. 15.

The Expedition has completed the exploration of Black Hills, which prove even richer than before reported. Gold and silver is found in numerous places, and in quantities so great that with a pick and pan a single miner may take out $100 per day. The distance from Bismarck to the gold regions is about 250 miles over a practicable route. Citizens of Bismarck are greatly excited, and already expeditions are organizing.

Custer's Country.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 22.—General Custer in his report of the expedition to the Black Hills says, "I referred in a former dispatch to the discovery of gold. Subsequent examinations at numerous points confirm and strengthen the fact of the existence of gold in Black Hills in some of the water courses. Almost every earth produced gold in small but paying quantities.

Our brief halts in rapid marching prevents anything but very hasty examination of country in this respect, but in one place, and the only one within my knowledge where so great a depth was reached, a hole was dug eight feet deep, the miners report they found gold—among the roots of grass and from that point to the lowest point reached gold was found in paying quantities. It has needed no expert to find gold in the Black Hills, as men without former experience have discovered it at the expense of but little time or labor."

POETRY.

Afternoon.

BY HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD.

The boat is rocking on the river;
The river life is all awake;
The tide is coming in:
A thousand ripples run and shiver;
Oars flash; and where the waters break
Flashes a silver fin.

Oars flash and dip; as if on wings
We sweep above the sweeping stream,
While like a fount of light
Into the sun the sturgeon springs,
And blue the arrowy swallows gleam
About us in their flight.

Beyond the breakers and the bar
The great ships with their swelling sails
Are tossing out to sea;
They slide through night and distance far
For gulls where brood the unknown gales,
To tempt their mystery.

But we, between the blossoming shores,
Will pluck the boughs, will mark the rills
Tumbling their foam along,
Will wait, in resting on our oars,
Some message from the mighty hills,
Or catch some plowboy's song.

Oh, happier we than they whose choice
Pursues the dark and awful swells,
Thus, till the stars, to roam,
And turn when, like a mother's voice,
We hear the tender evening bells
Chiding us sweetly home!

No Extra Insurance to Pay!

No Danger from Explosion—No liability to get out of Order.

In short it is the SIMPLEST, SAFEST, most DURABLE and most ECONOMICAL Engine in the world. We fully guarantee them in all the above particulars. COLT'S ARMS CO. have spared no expense in getting up SPECIAL TOOLS AND MACHINES with which to build these Engines, so that every part is made up to gauge, and are perfectly interchangeable, the importance of which will be understood by all who are at all familiar with machinery. Thus, every Engine of a given size is an exact duplicate of every other one of that size, and in case of breakage, the broken part can be immediately replaced by its perfect duplicate.

The inventor of this Engine had in view, in its construction, the great need that exists for a perfect Steam Engine—of small power—adapted to all kinds of light mechanical work, and that should also combine all that is good in Steam Engineering.

The first point was, to secure a perfectly philosophical Boiler and Furnace, in order to insure the most perfect combustion, and to take up the greatest possible amount of heat in generating steam.

The second point was, to make a perfect cut-off Engine, working steam expansively, and keeping up the temperature of the cylinder to prevent loss by radiation or condensation.

The third point was, to combine and make the whole a mechanically and scientifically correct machine; all its parts being provided with means to take up lost motion, so that it may be used for any number of years, and always run smoothly. In all these particulars as much care has been taken as in the largest and most perfect engine ever constructed.

The result is—THE GREATEST AMOUNT OF POWER PROPORTIONED TO THE AMOUNT OF FUEL CONSUMED—thus proving the fact—well known to men of science—that water is the best medium to transmit the mechanical forces, generated in the combustion of fuel, to the production of motive power.

Machinery for any purpose furnished at Manufacturers' Prices.

JURUBEBA.

ARE YOU

Weak, Nervous, or Debilitated?

Are you so Languid that any exertion requires more of an effort than you feel capable of making?

Then try JURUBEBA, the wonderful tonic and invigorator, which acts so beneficially on the secretive organs as to impart vigor to all the vital forces.

It is no alcoholic appetizer, which stimulates for a short time, only to let the sufferer fall to a lower depth of misery, but it is a vegetable tonic acting directly on the liver and spleen.

It regulates the Bowels, quiets the nerves, and gives such a healthy tone to the whole system as to soon make the invalid feel like a new person.

Its operation is not violent, but is characterized by great gentleness; the patient experiences no sudden change, no marked results, but gradually his troubles

"Fold their tents, like the Arabs,
And silently steal away."

This is no new discovery, but has been long used with wonderful remedial results, and is pronounced by the highest medical authorities, "the most powerful tonic and alterative known"

Treatise on Nervous Diseases
— AND THE —
Cordial Balm of Syricum.

During the year 1865 Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop had a new and peculiar drug, from the interior of Africa, brought prominently under his notice by the very strange effect it produced on an animal who had accidentally swallowed a large quantity. Owing to this circumstance he was led to make many experiments on the lower animals, and he soon discovered that it had a very peculiar effect on the Nervous System. This induced him to experiment both on himself and some of his patients, and such was the wonderfully beneficial effects, and so rapid the cure of those afflicted with nervous disease, that Dr. Lothrop came to the conclusion that he had discovered a new and valuable addition to the medicines of the pharmacopœa. He soon found that this medicine, in conjunction with some others, cured nervous diseases of all kinds with a certainty and rapidity of which he had no previous conception.

A few words on that special disease generally known as Nervous Debility or Weakness. This is in most cases brought on by total ignorance of the fearful pernicious effects, but it is also brought on in many cases brought on through no fault of the person afflicted, but by disease, long confinement, and several other causes—but in all cases the effect on the constitution is the same. Heretofore, there has been no cure for this disease, but Dr. Lothrop, having put up this medicine in the form of CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS, combined with other medicines, offers them to all sufferers as a safe and speedy cure. Our Lunatic Asylums are full of patients, in many cases brought thither by the effects of Nervous Debility. Many thousands suffer in silence, hopeless of relief, having often been deceived by unprincipled quacks. Such is not the case with Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS. A very short trial will demonstrate their efficacy.

Any who suffer from the effects of over indulgence in tobacco, or alcoholic stimulants, Palpitation of the Heart, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Restlessness during Sleep, Loss of Memory, Irritability, Nervousness, Twitching of the Nerves, and all other Nervous Diseases, will find this medicine a real blessing.

Should any person into whose hands this notice comes, have a friend whom he knows or thinks is afflicted with any Nervous Disease, Nervous Debility, etc., he will confer a real kindness on his friend by sending it to him, so as to give him an opportunity of being cured by the use of Dr. Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS.

Sold by all Druggists.

DR. FLINT'S
QUAKER BITTERS

These celebrated Bitters are composed of choice Roots, Herbs, and Barks, among which are Gentian, Sarsaparilla, Wild Cherry, Dandelion, Juniper, and other berries, and are so prepared as to retain all their medicinal qualities. They invariably cure or greatly relieve the following complaints: Dyspepsia, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Loss of Appetite, Headache, Bilious Attacks, Remittent and Intermittent Fevers, Ague, Cold Chills, Rheumatism, Summer Complaints, Piles, Kidney Diseases, Female Difficulties, Lassitude, Low Spirits, General Debility, and, in fact, everything caused by an impure state of the Blood or deranged condition of Stomach, Liver, or Kidneys. The aged find in the Quaker Bitters a gentle, soothing stimulant, so desirable in their declining years. No one can remain long unwell (unless afflicted with an incurable disease) after taking a few bottles of the Quaker Bitters.
