Relative Purity of American Society.

Whoever reads the novels of Balzac or George Sand, or in fact almost any French novels except those of Hugo, which are rather prose epics or rhapsodies than romances, must be astonished at the uniformity with which the interest is made to center in social immorality. A gallant student, a coquettish grisette, a debauched nobleman, an intriguing countess or, oftenest of all, a rich wife with one or more lovers—such are the characters that appear in endless repetition throughout the whole body of French fiction of all grades, from Dudevant down to Paul de Kock. Now the novel of the nineteenth century is the best index of the social condition of any given people. Indeed, it is the only safe index, for the observation of travelers is partial and imperfect and the recitals of history have reference chiefly to other and, generally, less important matters. But the standard novel of the country is the outgrowth of the inner life of the people. To be popular and successful it must be a reflection of society as it is. Like the poetry of an earlier day it is representative of the thoughts, feelings and life of the people of the author's age and country, or else it is utterly null and makes no impression. Accordingly we judge that French society made little advance under the first and second empires and that the orgies of the time of Louis XV have only given place to a little more decorous but no less decided form of social vice. Judged by the same standard, English society shows a high degree of purity. Charles Reade is the only reputable writer who makes marital infidelity or woman's frailty the basis of fictitious narrative, and he lacks the steady, general popularity of more exact delineators of the manners of their times like Dickens, Thackeray and George Eliot.

To those who would be glad to believe that, in freedom from the vice of licentiousness, America has at least not fallen behind the mother country, the Beecher scandal is a little discouraging, let its issue be ever so favorable to the accused. It reveals a kind of laxity, theoretically and practically, in the matter of the relations of the sexes, among a class of people who have been supposed by the general American public to live on a higher plane of virtue and goodness than almost anyone else in the world. Plymouth church would have been designated by almost any reflecting person as the very stronghold of American morality—the place where the noblest virtues found their most sincere and eloquent expression, and where intelligent goodness lived its most intense and vigorous life. On the platform of his church the Plymouth pastor shone like a star, radiating hope, charity, peace and comfort, while all his countrymen exulted in the genial warmth and light that emanated from him. Now it appears that, at best, questionable practices and an easy toleration of wrong have obtained a foothold among some of the most prominent of Mr. Beecher's congregation and among the members of the literary and reformatory coterie affiliated with them. Let the pastor come out from his trials as white as he may and as spotless as he is still, with good reason, believed to be by a majority of the American people, and the affair is still the most monstrous scandal that ever poisoned the moral atmosphere of the country.

There are people with a strong tendency to pessimism who will eagerly conclude from this untoward series of events in an American city, that vice has begun to undermine and pollute American as it has continental society. We shall not be long in waiting for declarations that America has failed to keep her early promise in this respect, too, and that the wild license of the restoration of the Stuarts or the reign of the last of the Spanish Bourbons is already repeated on this side of the Atlantic. Under such circumstances it is consoling to be able to point to the fact that no instance can be cited where the morals of a country have been thoroughly poisoned, without the transmission of the virus to the literature, and especially to its poetry and fiction. There are, as yet, no signs of moral decay in American literature. The stream of influence issuing from it is still pure and sweet. The fiction which is a true reflection of average American society is a mirror of virtue. The dime novel which, with us, is the type of the lowest class of romance, commonly owes its deleterious influence rather to its extravagant, improbable and sensational incidents, and the unreal life it depicts, than to any direct pandering to a prurient fancy. We are safe in concluding, then, that though licentiousness exists and is widely prevalent in America, it has not attained the monstrous growth which characterized society generally not many decades ago and which still characterizes that of some European countries. Let the Brooklyn scandal be as flagrant as it will, many years must pass before American womanhood ceases to be generally pure, and before chastity becomes a jest, as it is where the moral tone of a people has been permanently lowered.

AND now ex-Representative and ex-Senator Richardson of Illinois, always a Democrat, now a Democrat, and always to be a Democrat, denounces the Democratic State Committee for setting forth a platform for the party in that state. To say in a few words what the illustrious fossil says in many, the Democracy in Illinois want no hard money and no paying of five-twenties in gold in theirs any more than water in their whiskey.

THE results of the Saratoga railroad conference, so far as freight tariffs are concerned, may be learned from the following table which gives the rates between New York and the following places:

Current Notes.

The fact that Senator Morton's past speeches prove that he has been a student of political economy and knows the right path of honor and safety, only aggravates his offence when, apparently for political purposes, he turns his back upon the truth, and with his great power and eloquence advocates the false. True, he stands square and right on every other issue, but this is the most important of all, and to be wrong here is to be fatally wrong.—Hartford Courant.

The Poland act applies to offenses against the United States only; libel is not an offense against the United States, and that's the end of the worsted. It has no more to do with libel than with the doctrine of foreordination; that is as plain as the nose on any face, and when the newspapers get ready to shut their mouths and open their eyes for an instant, the hullabaloo will be ended.—Woodstock (Vt.) Post.

We shall soon have free banking, when any man can take his money and start a bank if he so desires. I think the national bank notes preferable as a medium of exchange to the treasury notes, because the latter are always at the mercy of the party in power, who can inflate or contract at pleasure, and thus disarrange the business interests of the country at will.—Hugh McCulloch.

The New York Economist tells Boston that its true strength lies in its manufacturing interests and not in foreign trade and western railroad lines.

The Kennebec Journal claims that the delegates elected in Hallowell, Saturday night, are Hamlin men. A resident of the city says that three of the six are Drummond men.

Our New York Letter.

The Scandal—Closing Acts of the Brooklyn Drama—A Trio of Conspirators, Tilton, Moulton, Butler.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10, 1874.

It was no small trial to public patience that the examination of Moulton should have been postponed for a couple of days, but there were doubtless, good reasons for it. The last night of the last day of the week is not an opportune moment to enter upon a line of inquiry that must, in the nature of things, consume a great deal of time. On Monday the curtain will rise upon the last act of this portentous drama, and a great community is waiting with breathless concern for the denonement.

The sharp letter which Mr. Beecher wrote to this enigmatical go-between, demanding the confidential letters he had addressed to him shows that he has at last discovered the hollowness of the pretensions of friendship, of which Moulton has been prodigal, all the while that he has been plotting against him. The insolent reply proves quite as clearly that the writer of it is aware that his disguise has been penetrated. He makes a wretchedly lame explanation of the mode in which Tilton became possessed of the fragments of private notes, which are embodied in his accusation. The idea of his having taken the words down in short hand while they were being read to him, is gauzy in the extreme. But the meanest paragraph in this offensive epistle is the allusion to Mrs. Hooker, the sister of Mr. Beecher. It was utterly uncalled for in the first place, and conveys a wholly false impression, in the second. All that Mrs. Hooker ever heard of the scandal, was derived from Mrs. Woodhull, and all that Mrs Woodhull knew of it came directly from Tilton. If Mrs. Hooker, sane or insane, believed the allegations against her brother, it was solely because she was the dupe of Mrs. Woodhull, and her biographer. It is generally known that Mrs. Hooker was at one time extravagant in her laudations of the high priestess of the order of free lovers. She regarded her as a perfect embodiment of purity and excellence. While she was laboring under this strange hallucination, any fiction emanating from that source would have been sure to impose upon her credulity. Nobody knew these things better than Mr. Moulton, and that is why it is impossible to account for his introduction of this extraneous topic without attributing to him the most malicious motives.

There is one feature of this scandal, that cannot have failed to engage the attention of those who have kept track of its details, and that is that everything that has been said inculpatory of Mr. Beecher, is traceable directly to Mr. Tilton. No matter what witness turns up, far or near, male or female, each and all of them tell merely what Mr. Tilton has told them, or told somebody else, from whom they have received it at second hand.

Gen. Butler's hand is perceptible in Moulton's performances for the last fortnight. His absence, just at the time he was wanted, the concealment of his place of sojourn, his subsequent assumption that Mr. Beecher's confidential notes were held by him subject to the joint demand of the accuser and the accused, all these things are palpably Butlerian. Butler has a natural bent towards precisely the kind of sensation, to which this scandal has given rise. There is a game flavor about it that is exactly to his liking. And then he and Moulton have lately grown to be fast friends through congenial tastes and mutual interests as counsel and client. The firm of which Mr. Moulton is a partner, fell under the direful clutch of the redoubtable Jayne, of moiety notoriety, upon accusations of frauds upon the revenue. Gen. Butler, as everybody knows, was Jayne's legal adviser. By one of those mysterious coincidences which rarely happen except among poeple who are prodigiously "smart" the case was "settled" by the payment of FIFTY THOUSAND DOLLARS, and this exaction so far from exciting the ire of the victims of it, against Jayne and all his works, and still more against Jayne's counsel, whose astuteness had helped to force the extortion—resulted in establishing the most cordial relations between the trio. Probably Mr. Moulton and his partners felt fully repaid for their loss by the knowledge it brought them of that marvellous acumen which could successfully manage both sides of a dispute and dispose of it so as to give entire satisfaction all round. It cannot be denied but that there was a profound mystery about the whole affair, and a great deal of curious speculation as to the basis of the settlement. The entire amount of duties claimed, or alleged to have been unintentionally withheld from the government, was $4500. Jayne was asked by the committee of Congress under what code of ethics he justified the taking of the extra $45,500 from parties whom he exonerated from any design to do a wrong. His answer was characteristic if not convincing. He said he had no scruples in accepting whatever amount they would offer. So far as Jayne was concerned, that explanation was conclusive. But as relates to Moulton's firm it must be confessed that there was still a difficulty in discovering on what principle a money penalty was voluntarily tendered in expiation of an offense, which, on the concurrent admission of complainant and defendant, had never been perpetrated. But perhaps it is asking too much to be made acquainted with the mode in which the inscrutable Butler makes crooked paths straight, and evolves radiant light from pitchy darkness. He has arrived in town to arrange the scenery and set the properties for the closing act of the Brooklyn drama, and it will not be his fault if his protege is not thoroughly coached for the occasion, so as to produce a startling effect.

The friends of Mr. Beecher anticipate that Moulton will say and do his worst. Nothing but a terror of the execration which further complicity with Tilton is sure to bring upon him, be the issue what it may, can restrain him. He is responsible for what has gone before. He could have prevented the original publication if he had chosen to do so. Any assertion to the contrary is an affront to ordinary intelligence. He was the constant companion of Mr. Tilton. They were inseparable. No step of that paramount gravity would ever have been taken without a consultation and agreement between them. At any rate if Moulton had simply declared, as he was bound by every obligation of honor to do, that so flagrant a breach of faith as the unloosing of this tattle, involved a permanent rupture between them, there would have been an end of the matter. That they talked the subject over before hand appears by the credit Moulton takes to himself for having suggested some softening modifications in the Bacon letter.

And then it is impossible to mistake the aggressive tone which Moulton assumes in his correspondence with Beecher. Even Beecher's eyes are open at last to the real character of this false friend (?) in whom he has trusted so implicitly, to whom he has bared his bosom without a misgiving as to his fidelity, and into whose treacherous ear he has whispered the secrets of his inmost heart. The only marvel is that he could have been deceived so long. His nearest and truest friends have pleaded with him long and sedulously to break off an intimacy in which they foresaw peril to his peace and reputation. "Given in confidence to Moulton!" Ominous sentence! Given, in fact, through Moulton to Tilton, and through Tilton, first to his associates by scores, and finally to the world. Unparalleled credulousness requited by unexampled perfidy.

And yet, there shines out through all this dense cloud of darkness, the explicit declaration of Beecher that he is guiltless of the offence imputed to him. Those who know him do not doubt his truthfulness in the least, and are therefore confident of the final result. They believe that the statement he will make, will be the master effort of his life; that he will present an array of facts showing by what processes he has been ensnared in the toils of a monstrous conspiracy; that every effort he has made to extricate himself has only served to render his involvement more complete; that he has been the prey of a system of black-mail as unrelenting and insatiable as ever was practiced upon mortal man; and that when the whole truth is known, the only stigma that will rest upon him, will be that he has displayed inexcusable weakness and timidity in not turning upon his assailants at the outset and treating them with indignant defiance.

The prospect of the publication of a private correspondence of a most delicate nature, invests this affair with additional interest; and it would be impossible to exaggerate the intensity of popular curiosity and solicitude in reference to it. Already this case has revealed the existence of a style of literature, hitherto supposed to be confined exclusively to the domain of fiction. To say nothing of the minor actors in the drama—who have developed an astonishing tendency to sentimentalism of the most aggravating type—Mr. Beecher has exhibited himself in some of his letters as an adept in fervid and impassioned expressions of friendship, love, sorrow, remorse and the whole scale of emotions.

There is an Oriental savor about many of the detached passages which have been woven into the painful narrative, which reminds one vividly of the self reproaches of David. The XXXVIIIth Psalm, for example, contains a "confession" from which the Tiltons and Moultons of that age might have framed an indictment against the venerable Psalmist more sweeping and terrible than they have elaborated concerning the modern exponent of religion. In so far as any inference can be drawn from this proneness to excessive word coloring, it is favorable to the theory of Mr. Beecher's innocence. He would be much more apt to overstate his faults than one who dealt in less ornate diction.

Before this reaches your readers, the story of Moulton will have been told, and the substance of it will perhaps appear in the same issue with this letter. I only hope that those who peruse it, will withhold their judgment until Mr. Beecher himself shall have been heard from. The decisive statement must come from him. I will not indulge in any further speculation or prediction touching its import, beyond avowing my abiding conviction that it will prove a successful and satisfactory vindication of himself, as it certainly will be a terrible exposition of the rancor, venality and malevolence of his enemies.

YARMOUTH.

Richmond Camp-Meeting.

SIXTH DAY.

RICHMOND, Aug. 10.

The exercises of the sixth day of the camp-meeting were badly interfered with by the rain, which poured in torrents.

The forenoon meeting was conducted by Rev. Mr. Inskip, who preached an eloquent sermon from the text: "Blessed are the pure in heart," &c. This was the great sermon of the week and was very closely listened to.

The afternoon service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. McDonald, who preached from Isaiah 67th chap. 10th verse. The attendance was rather thin on account of the rain, which at that time fell in sheets.

During the day the gates were closed and ingress and egress were forbidden, consequently the best of order prevailed.

To-day the forenoon service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Adams of Bowdoinham, but was not fully attended. The children's meeting was conducted by Mrs. Clark. About one hundred and fifty children were present.

The afternoon service was conducted by the Rev. W. T. Jewell of Orrington, and was held in the grove.

The meeting closes to-morrow.

Mr. Whittier was obliged to return in search of his missing wardrobe. The wonder is how the dancing master got along with the poet's coat.

The objectors hold that there was no rising of the Assembly as regards the May session, and therefore the law has not yet gone into effect.

Halifax flatters itself with the prospect of having one of the finest public gardens on the continent. The Horticultural Society's gardens are for sale and the city proposes to purchase and enlarge them.

A Prince Edward's Island paper says hard times this summer are driving back to that island many who have been to the states to seek their fortune. Five are now returning to one emigrating.

A number of members of the Dominion Parliament have clubbed together and leased the upper flat of the Royal Victoria building in Ottawa and propose to run a hotel on their own account. They are tired of being fleeced by hotel keepers.

For the quarter ending June 30th, the tonnage of new vessels built and registered at the port of St. John, N. B., was 9,134, with estimated value of $502,370. During the same period 2,581 tons of shipping belonging to that port were wrecked and abandoned, the total value of which was $52,900.

In London a prospectus has been issued of the Canadian Meat and Produce Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, in 20,000 shares of $50 each. The company is formed, it is mentioned, "for purchasing and slaughtering in Canada or elsewhere, cattle or other stock, exporting to Great Britain or elsewhere fresh joints of meat, manufacturing from fore cuts and other suitable parts of animals preserved meats of various kinds, and utilizing in various ways the fat, hides, bones and other parts." The wholesale price of beef sold by the carcass in the Canadian market is six cents per pound, and the freight, carriage and commission amounts to about two cents, making the price of beef delivered in London eight cents per pound.

The report of the select committee of the House of Commons on Canada manufacturing interests, shows that the total quantity of iron produced in the Dominion in 1873 was 3,226 tons, an amount totally inadequate to the needs of the country, while during the same period 47,200 tons of iron ore were reported. During the last five years Canada has imported nearly $60,000,000 worth of iron. The striking feature of the report is the unanimity with which all manufacturers agree in demanding a higher rate of duty with a view of protecting themselves from foreign competition.

Is Your Stomach Uneasy?

Many a dyspeptic Crœsus would be willing, it is said, to give half his wealth for an easy stomach. If this is a fact why do any of our "solid men" continue to endure the pangs of indigestion? Is it not patent to the whole community that Hostetter's Stomach Bitters will cure the worst case of chronic dyspepsia in six or eight weeks? No occasion for the expenditure of half a fortune; a few dollars will suffice to accomplish the object. Surely every man who is not "sand blind" to the great utilitarian facts of the day must know that this celebrated vegetable specific promptly relieves all diseased conditions of the stomach, liver, bowels and nervous system, restores their vigor and imparts regularity to their functions. Is your epigastrium uneasy? Is the vulture, disease, gnawing at your liver? If so, resort at once to the Bitters.

DR. SCHENCK'S

Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mankrake Pills.

These medicines have undoubtedly performed more cures of Consumption than any other remedy known to the American public. They are compounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain nothing which can be injurious to the human constitution.

Other remedies advertised as cures for Consumption, probably contain opium, which is a somewhat dangerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients, it must do great injury; for its tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which of course, must make a cure impossible.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is warranted not to contain a particle of opium: It is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expel all the diseased matter from the body. These are the only means by which Consumption can be cured, and as Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills are the only medicines which operate in this way, it is obvious they are the only genuine cure for Pulmonary Consumption. Each bottle of this invaluable medicine is accompanied by full directions.

Dr. Schenck is professally at his principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, and at the Quincy House, Boston, on the following Wednesdays, June 10th and 24th, July 8th and 22d, and August 5th and 19th.

Mayor Wescott, having examined the nature and extent of the damages to streets and sewers by the recent storm, says that $400 will make good the loss sustained by the city.

Almost a Murder.

About nine months ago, a young man named Thomas Libby, aged 22, and generally known about town, was discarded by Miss Hattie Rolfe, daughter of Mr. Charles P. Rolfe, who resides at No. 5 Cedar street, because of his intemperate habits. Before that event and even since, the fellow has threatened to take the life of the young woman, and while under the impulse of bad whiskey, last night about 11.30 o'clock, repaired to the residence of Mr. Rolfe (as it is supposed). Miss Rolfe and her sister having retired to an upper room in the story and a half house which had a dormer-window, were preparing to retire, when they were terrified by a pistol shot and a bullet which crashed through the window and embedded itself in the wall, almost grazing the head of Miss Rolfe. As soon as they could, an alarm was given but the man could not be found. Mr. Rolfe notified Deputy Williams, who with officer Horr went to the Commercial House, where Libby has been boarding, and going to his room found it locked and barracaded. The officers forced an entrance and found the fellow in a drunken sleep with a heavy navy revolver at his side with two empty chambers, and a whiskey flask entirely empty. The fellow had not taken off his clothes and when he laid down did so with a desperate purpose of shooting whoever might call for him.

It is supposed from the direction of the shot that Libby had climbed up a tree near the house about twelve feet, from which place he had a full view of the room and its occupants

The girls as they went into the house at about eleven o'clock, now recollect seeing a man about the premises, but would have thought nothing of it but for the affair which followed. The fellow refuses to say anything about the matter. He last visited the Rolfes' July 3d, when he said he was going to leave town.

POLICE NOTES.—A despatch was received yesterday from Biddeford asking for the arrest of a young girl named Nettie Whidden and her return to her home. Deputy Marshal Williams took the case in hand and after a long search found the girl at a house of ill fame on Fore street. She was returned by the five o'clock train.

About two weeks ago a lady living on India street missed a lot of jewelry valued at about $50. She gave the matter to Deputy Marshal Williams to work up. The officer suspected a certain young woman, and yesterday he visited her and charged her with the theft. She at once confessed her guilt and gave the officer the jewelry. She said she had been almost ready to give it to the lady several times but did not dare to. The matter will probably be settled up as the owner of the stolen articles does not wish to prosecute the young girl.

GORHAM.—A very stormy day prevented a full attendance at the Republican caucus in Gorham Saturday afternoon. Col. F. Robie was selected as chairman, and Stephen Hinkley, Esq., as secretary. A committee of seven was appointed by the chair, who selected the following delegates to the county convention, and the same were unanimously accepted by the caucus:—Stephen Hinkley, Humphrey Cousens, Merrill T. Files, William Wescott, William E. Strout, Samuel Cressy, S. W. Anderson, Solomon Cloudman. A ballot was taken for town representative as follows:

Charles Johnson.	106
George B. Emery,	43

The nomination of Mr. Johnson was made unanimous.

Cumberland Teachers' Institute.

The annual Teachers' Institute for Cumberland county opened yesterday morning in the High School room in this city, under the direction of Hon. John H. French, LL.D., Secretary of the Vermont State Board of Education, assisted by N. A. Luce and Superintendent Johnson. Mr. W. J. Corthell, who was advertised to be in attendance, is not present, being detained at his home by illness. Only about twenty-five teachers were present at the opening.

Superintendent Johnson opened the session with a few introductory remarks indicating the general line of work to be done. It is not the purpose of the session to give instruction in the branches to be taught, but rather to give suggestions which, acted upon by teachers, will add to their executive and teaching power. Of the seven thousand workers in the schools of Maine, less than two thousand are skilled workers, and the great lack is, not knowledge of subjects to be taught, but lack of executive skill, and a knowledge of how and when to impart to the children.

Dr. French was then introduced and began by tracing briefly the history of institute work. In the carliest institute held in the country, the work was chiefly instruction in the branches to be taught. Arithmetic, geography and grammar makers were engaged as instructors. Gradually this line of work changed, and institutes began to teach the how of school work. Methods of teaching the various subjects then became the staple of instruction. Within a few years another change has taken place. Underlying principles—the philosophy of teaching, marks the present character of the best work done in these assemblies of teachers. And such work is the real need of the times. Lack of philosophical, systematic, educational work is especially manifest among school workers. The real work of teaching, true teaching, is not to make the mind a store house of facts, but to develop its powers Principles are to be made the medium of that development.

The need of institute work is seen in the fact that on the average the teachers in the schools change every four years. The new workers taking the place of the old, must be trained to do good work, without waiting to learn from experience. Again, teaching is becoming more and more a science, and a progressive one, and, that teachers may keep abreast of the times, all improvements must be brought to their knowledge.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The afternoon was mainly devoted to work on the black-board, Dr. French introducing the subject by a few remarks on the necessity of the teacher understanding the tools with which he has to work. The boy or the girl is the chief problem which the teacher has to study. The boy is dependent upon the senses for his acquisition of knowledge. An understanding of the object to be taught as well as of the object which is taught is necessary.

The mental faculties of the child were then considered. Knowledge is acquired by the young child chiefly by hearing and seeing. Now no organ of perception can be successfully addressed until its attention is arrested by some sensation. The object to be taught being once perceived should be thoroughly lodged in the mind, so it may remain there. This matter of thorough knowledge and consequent retention is too much neglected by our teachers. The retentive faculties need to be cultivated. Memory, suggestion and association, all should command attention. Suggestion and association bring into use at a moment's demand the stores of memory. To lodge facts in the mind of the child and to cultivate the perceptive and retentive faculties is the work of the primary schools.

A time comes when the child begins to reason, to ask why such and such are so. This is the reflective power. To ask a question the child must dress his thought in the garb of language, must use his inventive powers. The child seldom, if ever, reasons logically. But he can be taught through his imagination, which is disproportionately developed. By and by he will learn to reason from cause to effect, and then he can form a judgment. This classification of mental powers is the basis of object teaching.

The germs of these faculties are all in the mind of the infant; gradually they develop, the perceptive faculties first, the reasoning faculties later on. The perceptive faculties have strength enough at five years, say, to be utilized by the teacher. The power of analysis is wanting now, and will be for some years, and all studies that require analysis should have no place in the school room. Those that require only the exercise of the perceptive, retentive and imaginative powers, are proper to be introduced. At ten years, say, the reason and judgment may come into play.

A recess of ten minutes was taken. The next hour was devoted to drawing, Mr. ——— giving a clear and intelligible exposition of the rudimentary principles of mechanical and industrial art drawing. He prefaced his work by remarks on the advantages of free-hand drawing and its coming general introduction into our schools. He gave an interesting recital of his experience as a teacher in this branch. Its advantages in turning out skilled artisans, in training the perceptive powers, in developing the imagination, in educating the power of attention, in training the memory and the power of expression, and in developing the taste for the beautiful.

The last hour was used by Dr. French in continuation of his remarks on the proper methods of school work.

To-day Dr. French speaks on school organization and class management, and Mr. Luce will speak on industrial and mechanical drawing, its theory and practice, and kindred subjects.

It would give the conductors of the institute great pleasure to see the parents of pupils, old High School graduates, and the friends of education generally in attendance to-day.

REGIMENTAL RE-UNION.—The annual re-union of the 1st Maine Cavalry Association will be held in this city, on Wednesday, September 9th, and the following programme has been adopted: Members of the 1st Maine and D C. Cavalry, on arrival will meet at G. A. R. Hall, corner Congress and Casco streets, at 10 o'clock a. M., accompanied by the Portland Band, march to Custom House wharf, and take the steamer for Peak's Island, where the business meeting will be held, after which a Clam Bake will be served. In the evening a banquet will be given in G. A. R. Hall, to which the ladies are invited. The usual arrangements will be made with the different railroad and steamboat routes for transportation. There will be an assessment of $2 which covers the annual assessment and defrays the expenses of the re-union. The comrades are requested to bring all the material they can furnish to aid the Historian in his work.

SOVEREIGNS OF INDUSTRY.—This evening Mr. A. G. Langley will organize in this city a council of the order of Sovereigns of Industry, the first and only council in the State. The meeting will be held in Temperance Hall on Congress street. This Order was started January 14th, 1874, in Worcester, Mass., by W. H. Earle, now President of the National Council. There are now sixty-two councils in that State. It has councils in twenty-two states and state councils in five. Its object is to do away with middle-men, and arrangements are made with wholesale dealers in every commodity by which members of the order can obtain what they want at a large discount from retail prices.

Mr. Langley goes to Saccarappa to-morrow to form a council there.

THE DISTRICT CONVENTION.—Very few delegates to the Democratic District Convention arrived last night and the indications are that the gathering will be a small one. The general sentiment seems to be in favor of the nomination of Hon. Bion Bradbury, though a movement, as indicated in last night's caucus, in favor of D. H. Ingraham, Esq., seems to have developed in certain quarters. A platform will be adopted declaring in favor of hard money and a strictly revenue tariff. There is also talk of introducing a civil service plank. The convention comes together at eleven o'clock this morning in City Hall.

NEW MUSIC.—Mr. Mullaly, of Chandler's Band has composed a grand march dedicated to the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows, which has been arranged by Fred Ter Linden, and will be played by all the Band at the celebration the 25th of this month. Piano forte copies will be for sale at the music stores on and after that date.

WESTBROOK SEMINARY.—It will be seen by the advertisement this week that Mrs. Helen Boothby, late lady Principal of "Oread Institute," Worcester, Mass, is to be added to the faculty at former institution.

A VICTOR.—Mr. M. F. Davis of this city, who won the single scull race at Providence yesterday against serious odds and in the face of obstacles, will meet a warm reception from his friends on his return to this city.

The New Contract.

Yesterday reference was made to the cancelling of the contract between the Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad Company and the builders, Messrs. Fuller & Harding, and an intimation of a new contract for the completion of the road from Dr. Bemis' place to the Fabyan House, where a connection can be made with the Boston, Concord & Montreal road. For some time the friends of the road and particularly the directors have been dissatisfied at the slow progress of the work, and have been desirous of devising a plan for the completion of the road at an earlier day than the present progress of the work promised. As time passed the anxiety of the directors increased, as all the while the interest on the construction account was increasing. It was evident that the contractors were unable to proceed faster, as they found it impossible to sell the company's bonds which they received in part payment for their work, at a price that would yield the sum requisite to do the work. As we understand it, though we do not get our information from an official source, the directors have settled under the contract for all the work done thus far and barred the company against any liabilities from any breach of contract. Hereafter the contractors will confine their work to the Notch section or from Dr. Bemis' to the Fabyan House. We understand that the compromise contract provides that the work done hereafter shall be by the yard and paid according to the quality; that the contractors shall employ a sufficient force of men to complete the road bed ready for the iron by June 1st, 1875; that any time when the directors may be dissatisfied with the progress of the work or the quality of it, they have power to break it and take the work into their own hands. The bonds, the directors propose to negotiate themselves, and pay the contractors in cash for their work, reserving 20 per cent. until the section is completed. The price paid for the grading, we understand, is nearly the same as was paid under the latest estimates except a slight increase on the price of solid rock cut.

A large force will be put upon the work at once and the section completed at the earliest day possible. The "Notch" division is the most difficult to build, and is that part over which it has been said, is impossible to build a railroad.

The part of the line from Upper Bartlett to Bemis', six miles, will be completed by the first of September, the two bridges being built before the new contract was made. The section hands of the company are now laying the iron.

We understand that the directors, in the new contract, recover all of the company's bonds except about $140,000. When the details of the new contract are adjusted, we propose to lay the whole before our readers.

A LIVELY CAUCUS.—The Democratic ward delegates met at the ward room of ward three last evening, to choose delegates at large to the District Convention, holden in this city to-day. A lively hair squall was indulged in and the delegates from ward two seceded. Until lately the Democracy have been too dispirited to indulge in quarreling, but the prospect of a war of the races in the South has apparently invigorated them, and they fell to fighting last night with all their old-time vigor.

Mr. Gardner Jordan presided. He was nominated and elected in hot haste, and a committee immediately appointed to receive ballots for delegates. Mr. John B. Littlefield from ward two was appointed on the committee, but emphatically declined to serve, intimating that the whole affair was cut and dried. So the votes were counted without the aid of Mr. Littlefield.

A motion was made and carried that the delegates be voted for on one ticket. Capt. A. J. M'Mahon strongly opposed the motion, claiming that a list should be made out by representatives from each ward, so that no ward should be slighted. Mr. L. F. Pingree also opposed the motion. Mr. James Cunningham followed, denouncing the caucus as packed, and declaring that a list of delegates had been prepared and was to be rushed through. Manasseh Smith, Esq., attempted to still the troubled waters, but was snubbed by Capt. M'Mahon, who vehemently asserted that the caucus was packed, and protested against a list of delegates which contained no representative from the banner Democratic ward.

The caucus proceeded to a vote, however, and chose as delegates L. D. M. Sweat, C. H. Fling, E. C. Shaw, S. R. Lyman, Alvin Neal and Ira Witham. Ward two refused to vote and protested against the action taken. The caucus broke up in much confusion.

It is understood that the delegates from ward two are supporters of D. H. Ingraham, Esq., for candidate for Congress, and they claim that the number of his adherents entitle him to a delegate at large. They say ward two has been overslaughed and its wishes disregarded, and that an outrage is perpetrated in refusing it, the heaviest Democratic ward in the city, a place on the list of delegates at large. Intimations that the caucus was packed are not infrequent, and threats of bolting are freely indulged in. It is claimed that unfair play has been used towards Ingraham.

Contracts of the Deceased.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The committee of tax payers to-day called upon the District Commissioners and entered a protest against the continuance of any contracts for improvements made with the late board of public works, insisting that they should be annulled because they are illegal, that the prices are in excess of those which should prevail and that they should be awarded to the lowest bidders. Mr. Dennison speaking for the commissioners, said that no contracts had been or would be awarded by them. The engineers had reported that there were 117 of them, and after examination recommended the revocation or suspension on 67 of the number, leaving 50 yet under ban of suspension. The work which has been done and was to be done upon them must go before the board of audit in accordance with the laws and the contractors take the bonds provided by Congress in payment.

Proposed Fight Between Collyer and Edwards.

PITTSBURG, PA., Aug. 10.—Trains arriving here last night and this morning brought large delegations of sporting men to witness the Collyer and Edwards prize fight, which takes place to-morrow morning. Yesterday a number of sporting men visited Collyer at his quarters at McKee's Rocks. Both men are in excellent condition. Collyer weighs 135 pounds and Edwards 132. Betting is about even. The steamer L. C. McCormick will leave at midnight for the scene of the fight. To prevent the arrest of the principals, they will not be taken on board at Pittsburg but will be picked up en route to the battle ground. Probably not a dozen men in the city know the exact locality of the ground, and the destination is not to be announced until after the boat has left the wharf. Passengers who came up on the steamer last evening state that the militia of West Virginia are on the alert and will do their utmost to prevent the fight.

The Kidnapped Boy.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 10.—Mrs. Fred Hamilton, formerly Mary Flynn of this place, was arrested here to-day with a child in her possession corresponding to the description of Charley Ross. He has the same colored hair and eyes. His hair has been recently cut, he is about the same age, talks plainly, says his name is Charlie and that he had a nice home once. It is a singular coincidence but there are other circumstances connected with the case which make it improbable that he is the lost child. Fred Hamilton is in the employ of P. T. Barnum's show at Boston and is in correspondence with his wife. She says the child came from New York. The officers await further description of the boy from Philadelphia.

J. Eager of New York, and Master Charles Booth, son of the proprietor of the Mansion House, were driving Sunday evening over Kettle bridge, East Manch Chunk, when the horse took fright at a hole in the bridge and backed the carriage to the side, throwing over both occupants. Eager was killed but Booth escaped without serious injury.

THE GREAT SCANDAL.

Moulton Testifies.

Conjectures as to the Testimony.

Significant Article of the Eagle, Etc.

Is Tilton Blackmailing Beecher.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—The Plymouth committee will receive Moulton's statement this afternoon, and if he will permit it, cross-examine him. They intend to complete it before evening and then call Mr. Beecher before them tonight.

Moulton was yesterday in consultation with Tilton and his lawyer, and Beecher's friends say his statement will be as strong as he can make it in support of Tilton.

Mayor Hunt of Brooklyn is credited with the following:—"I think when all the facts come out it will be shown that this has been a case of blackmail all through. I think Mr. Beecher has been blackmailed by Tilton for the last three or four years, and the blackmailing has been done through the medium, Moulton. I guess Mr. Beecher has been struck very heavily, too."

The Sun this morning, in an editorial, intimates the same thing, and charges that Tilton's letter to Dr. Bacon was shown to a friend of Mr. Beecher before its publication, with an offer to suppress it for $5000. The Sun intimates that the sum was named by Tilton's friend, F. B. Carpenter.

What Moulton's Statement Will Show.

The Brooklyn Argus says that the statement submitted by Moulton covers more than twice the number of pages of manuscript used by Tilton in his sworn statement. Moulton rests his case almost entirely on documentary evidence, which has been voluntarily placed in his possession by Beecher, Tilton, Mrs. Tilton, Mrs. Morse (Mrs. Tilton's mother) and other persons. Moulton declares with repeated and earnest assurances that he has preserved friendly relations with all the parties to the case during the long period covered by the documents in his possession, and has sincerely desired to effect a reconciliation between Beecher and Tilton. When the attacks upon Tilton were made public by Beecher's friends, Moulton felt compelled to come to the support of Tilton, and approved of the course taken by Tilton in self-defence. Moulton finds it necessary to recur to the beginning of the controversy, the whole difficulty having originated in the differences between Henry C. Bowen and Tilton. He gives the history of Tilton's serious complications with Bowen step by step, and traces the progress of the breach between them up to the final complication between Tilton and and Beecher, out of which grew the tri-partite covenant. Moulton makes incidental allusions to some of the important interviews mentioned by Frank B. Carpenter, especially those which related to Bowen's connection with the case, Moulton's narrative comes, in due course, to scenes between himself and Beecher in the house of the latter. The letters written by Mrs. Tilton at the request of her husband and Beecher, the writing of Beecher's apology, (the text of which has already been made public), and the remarkable letter in which Beecher describes himself as living "on the sharp and ragged edge of anxiety, remorse, fear and despair."

The last named letter has remained in the custody of Moulton from the day it was written to the present time. The small portion of it included in Tilton's sworn statement was all that was then placed by Mr. Moulton at Tilton's disposal. The whole letter occupies two full pages of foolscap and the intensity of expression revealed in the extracts already published is the prevailing tone throughout. All the letters from Beecher, from which quotations are made in Tilton's statement, have been laid in full by Moulton before the committee.

It is established by Moulton's evidence that the letter of apology written by Beecher on the evening of January 1st, 1871, was, as has already been intimated, written by Moulton at Beecher's dictation, and that Beecher himself wrote the last line and appended his signature.

The statements made by Mrs. Tilton in her published denial and in her cross-examination before the committee are not sustained by Mr. Moulton's evidence. He states that Mrs. Tilton communicated with him freely and confidentially in regard to the complications of this scandal, regarding him alike as a friend of herself, her husband and Mr. Beecher. Mrs. Morse also made a confident of Mr. Moulton, depositing with that gentleman some important letters bearing on the case. These letters, together with others from Tilton, go far towards strengthening Tilton's position.

It is now understood the statement revised by Moulton will be furnished to the press for publication about noon to-morrow.

More About Mrs. Hooker.

The Eagle publishes a letter from G. H. Beecher in relation to the Hooker feature of the scandal—which asserts that Mrs. Hooker's belief in her brother's guilt rested solely on the testimony of Mrs. Woodhull, Mrs. Stanton and Miss Anthony, and his refusal to discuss the subject with her. Mrs. Hooker's views on the marriage relation are somewhat similar to those of Mrs. Woodhull, though not so gross. She does not believe in promiscuous free love as does Mrs. Woodhull, but that law should not bind man and wife together when they have ceased to love each other. She also believes that having separated on such grounds, they should be at liberty to marry again if they find mates they truly love. She was devotedly attached to Mrs. Woodhull and has not withdrawn from her. The letter also says as is Mrs. Hooker's in her letter, makes a great point that he did not deny his guilt to her, it is but just to state the reasons her brother gave why he pursued this course with her mind off this subject and sooth and comfort her. He did tell her that he believed he had the spirit of God with him and was led by Him in the course he was pursuing, but refused to enter into any argument with her to prove his innocence. He did not deny anything because that would not convince her, but would only open the whole subject, she bringing forward her so-called evidence which he could not explain without making her his confidante in the whole matter—a thing he did not judge it safe to do.

Mr. Beecher's Statement Ready.

Mr. Shearman informed the Union reporter to-day that Beecher's statement would be ready to-morrow, when his examination would take place. The committee are to get through the investigation this week.

A Question of Veracity.

The Eagle to-night reiterates that its interview with Henry C. Bowen took place with results originally printed.

Meeting of the Committee.

The committee of investigation into the Beecher-Tilton scandal resumed its session this afternoon at Mr. Storr's house in Moore Place. The members of the committee present were Sage, chairman, White, Claflin and Cleveland, with Gen. Tracy and J. L. Hill, counsel for the committee. Moulton did not make his appearance till an hour after the committee had assembled. He was accompanied by his stenographer.

After a session of about two hours and a half the committee adjourned. The members in coming down the steps were surrounded by members of the press, but they stated that they had bound themselves to secrecy and would not make the statement public until they had held a consultation. Moulton stated he would hand copies of his statement to the press at eleven o'clock to-morrow. The committee will hold the next session to-morrow night at eight o'clock.

Significant Statement of a Brooklyn Paper.

The Brooklyn Eagle extra, issued to-night, says "Mr. Moulton has made his statement to the investigating committee, as from the beginning we knew he would. He refuses to take any side or any part whatever in the squabble in which the reputation of a woman and the future good name of her children are at stake. Mr. Moulton was called upon by the committee to produce documents entrusted to him in confidence; and it was intimated or insinuated that one of the parties to the case (Mr. Beecher) requested that he should unburden his mind of all verbal communication entrusted to him in regard to the matter. Mr. Moulton, even at that request, very properly refuses to be a party to any such action. Certain documents or extracts from documents fell into the possession of Mr. Tilton. They fell there with the knowledge and consent of Mr. Beecher, and Mr. Tilton in his statement published them. In justice to Mr. Tilton, Mr. Moulton was bound to confirm their authenticity. He does so by producing the originals thereof. In justice to Mr. Moulton, Mr. Moulton could do no less. In justice to Mr. Frank Moulton, Mr. Moulton could do no more. But here he stops and leaves the parties exactly in the position which he found them. He simply leaves it where he found it. No man and no woman is the worse for trusting his honor. As it was said and believed by Moulton from the beginning, the offence of Beecher, whatever it be, was a wrong, a man could forgive and it was forgiven. It was a wrong which could be condoned and it was condoned. This in itself does not indicate what was the wrong but indicates what it was not.

"From all the other indications that Tilton has given ever since he submitted his statement to the committee, it would appear that Tilton is in a position himself to re-establish his divided home. At the most, Beecher cannot have more than eight or ten years of usefulness before him. Women and children are deserving of chief consideration, and now the door can be safely closed in the face of morbid curiosity of the world as soon as Beecher shall have told his story. The world, even more than Tilton, can forgive the offence whatever it be into which Beecher fell.

There has been enough destruction done in this case. The friends of morality and religion of Beecher and Tilton will be now unchained to build up for there has been attempt enough to tear down; and though, in a manly course, Moulton has seen fit to adopt, the scandal managers and paltroons may find disappointments, every one else, men of religion, or honor and of the world will find satisfaction.

Moulton's Statement Favorable to Beecher.

The Eagle in another statement says Francis D. Moulton appeared before Plymouth investigating committ

POETRY.

No and Yes.

BY THEODORE TILTON.

[The following poem appeared originally in the Atlantic Monthly:]

I watched her at her spinning;
And this was my beginning
Of wooing and of winning.

But when a maid opposes,
And throws away your roses,
You say the case forecloses.

Yet sorry wit one uses,
Who loves and thinks he loses,
Because a maid refuses.

For by her once denying
She only means complying
Upon a second trying.

When first I said in pleading,
"Behold, my love lies bleeding!"
She heard me half unheeding.

When afterward I told her,
And blamed her growing colder—
She dropped upon my shoulder.

Had I a doubt? That quelled it,
Her very look dispelled it,
I caught her hand and held it.

Along the lane I led her,
And while her cheeks grew redder,
I sought outright to wed her.

Good end from bad beginning!
My wooing came to winning—
And still I watch her spinning.

MEDICAL

Treatise on Nervous Diseases

—AND THE—

Cordial Balm of Syricum.

During the year 1865 Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop had a new and peculiar drug, from the interior of Africa, brought prominently under his notice by the very strange effect it produced on an animal who had accidentally swallowed a large quantity. Owing to this circumstance he was led to make many experiments on the lower animals, and he soon discovered that it had a very peculiar effect on the Nervous System. This induced him to experiment both on himself and some of his patients, and such was the wonderfully beneficial effects, and so rapid the cure of those afflicted with nervous diseases, that Dr. Lothrop came to the conclusion that he had discovered a new and valuable addition to the medicines of the pharmacopœa. He soon found that this medicine, in conjunction with some others, cured nervous diseases of all kinds with a certainty and rapidity of which he had no previous conception.

A few words on that special disease generally known as Nervous Debility or Weakness. This is in most cases brought on by total ignorance of the fearful pernicious effects, but it is also brought on in many cases brought on through no fault of the person afflicted, but by disease, long confinement, and several other causes—but in all cases the effect on the constitution is the same. Heretofore, there has been no cure for this disease, but Dr. Lothrop, having put up his medicine in the form of CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS, combined with other medicines, offers them to all sufferers as a safe and speedy cure. Our Lunatic Asylums are full of patients, in many cases brought thither by the effects of Nervous Debility. Many thousands suffer in silence, hopeless of relief, having often been deceived by unprincipled quacks. Such is not the case with Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS. A very short trial will demonstrate their efficacy.

Any who suffer from the effects of over indulgence in tobacco, or alcoholic stimulants, Palpitation of the Heart, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Restlessness during Sleep, Loss of Memory, Irritability, Nervousness, Twitching of the Nerves, and all other Nervous Diseases, will find this medicine a real blessing.

Should any person into whose hands this notice comes, have a friend whom he knows or thinks is afflicted with any Nervous Disease, Nervous Debility, etc., he will confer a real kindness on his friend by sending it to him, so as to give him an opportunity of being cured by the use of Dr. Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS.
