A Promised Land.

Our exchanges have, for several days, been giving accounts of an enchanted land discovered by the government expedition under command of Gen. Custer. The Black Hills, now becoming so famous in connection with this newly explored and marvelously described country, lie in the southeastern part of the large Territory of Dakota, the latitude being 44 north and the longitude about 103 west. The country is well watered by tributaries of the Missouri. Of this country less hitherto has been known than of any other portion of our domain. Indians have now and then reported the existence of deposits of the precious metals and the extraordinary richness of its valleys. At length the government determined to make an exploration of this country, and accordingly, attended by scientific gentlemen and a military escort of nearly a thousand men, Gen. Custer has undertaken the work.

Since leaving Fort Lincoln, Dakota Territory, two reports have been received from Gen. Custer. The first was dated July 15, and was written when he had reached a distance of one hundred and twenty miles due west from his starting point, in which nothing was said except that the country is well watered and remarkably fertile. The second report dated August 2, has been published in full. It was written when the expedition was eight miles southeast of Humez Peak, in the very center of the Black Hills. Approaching the Black Hills he found for the most part excellent grazing and abundance of timber. With the intention of ascending a peak of the hills, Gen. Custer, while exploring the country for a favorable point to ascend, entered a valley of which he gives the following description:

This valley, in one respect, presented the most wonderful as well as beautiful aspect. Its equal I have never seen, and such, too, was the testimony of all who beheld it. In no public or private park have I ever seen such a profuse display of flowers. Every step of our march that day was amidst flowers of the most exquisite colors and perfume. So luxuriant were they that the men plucked them without dismounting from the saddle. Prof. Donaldson, the botanist of the expedition, estimated the number of flowers in bloom at fifty, while an equal number of varieties had bloomed or were yet to bloom. The number of trees, shrubs and grasses were twenty-five, making the total flora of the valley embrace one hundred and twenty-five species.

Other valleys are noticed of similar richness which lead to the supposition that amid the Hills there is a considerable area of this fine country. Only twenty-seven Indians were seen and these refused to fraternize or be interviewed by the gallant cavalry leader.

Gen. Custer further states that in no portion of the United States, not even in the famous blue grass region of Kentucky, has he ever seen finer grazing than is found growing wild in Dakota. He knows of "no portion of our country where nature has done so much to prepare homes for husbandmen and left so little for the latter to do, as here." Open and timbered spaces succeed each other at such intervals that farms of any dimensions can be selected having both. The soil is moist, rich and well-watered, and the grazing such that in that climate cattle can live during the winter running at large.

In other portions, gold has been found in paying quantities, but Gen. Custer does not indicate in his report that it is loosely laying about, as other reports have declared. There are also indications of lead and silver; but the country is evidently one of rare agricultural capacities rather than mining.

The public will await further reports of Gen. Custer's expedition with great interest, particularly as this portion of Uncle Sam's real estate has been deemed of little value for any purpose except for Indian reservations.

ONE of the select families in Great Britain has lately become extinct by the death of the daughter and only child of the last Baron Kirkcudbright. The family, that of MacLellan, appeared as landholders in Scotland as early as 1217, and for centuries furnished warriors and statesmen for the northern kingdom. It became greatly impoverished through its attachment to the ill-fated house of Stuart, and in 1750 the sixth baron was forced to sink the peer and open a glover's shop in Edinburgh. Once a year, on the occasion of the "Peer's Ball," he made his appearance in full dress among his equals in station, and then returned to his shop. The family never recovered its prosperity, though the mercantile house of McLellan soon came to an end.

AN exchange concludes by the way the grasshoppers are going at it in the west, that in the course of a year or two, these lovely pests will devastate all of the cultivated lands in Minnesota, Iowa, Kansas and Nebraska. It also suggests, that these insects may be kept down, by burning over the ground upon which they alight to deposit their eggs. In addition to fire, quick lime, and heavy rollers, it also suggests that farmers should introduce large flocks of poultry to feed upon grasshoppers. The Mormons have several times been attacked by these pests, but have rid themselves of them by vigorously applying the above-mentioned agencies.

IF reports from French sources be true Germany is determined to "carry the war into Africa," for it is alleged that the formidable revolt now threatening among the hill tribes of Algeria is instigated by Germany, who furnishes aams and ammunition to the Arabs. The report may well be doubted, for Algeria has always been a source of weakness to France, and Germany will not care to curtail her suffering.

LET the holders of Northern Pacifics take courage, for if Gen. Custer's reports prove half true respecting the wonderful country about the Black Hills, the company can find gold enough in the mere surface of its real estate in that region to build the whole road and send its bonds up to par—perhaps.

Current Notes.

If any one ever doubted that a national reputation could be won by a member of Congress in a single session, that doubt must vanish in view of the complimentary allusions made by the press of the country everywhere to the recent renomination of Hon. Wm. Walter Phelps by his New Jersey constituents.

The other night, in consequence of detention by land slides, a hundred passengers passed an entire night in the cars on the Long Island Railroad. To enliven the proceedings a vote was taken on the Presidential question, resulting as follows: Grant, 79; Hancock, 17; Geo. Francis Train, 2; Victoria Woodhull, 1; Tom Collins 1.

We in the South know what revolution is. We are used to it. If the people of the North want to try it, they can sail in, and we hold ourselves ready to see that they get their bellyful of it. The South cannot be remanded to anarchy for nothing. That gratification will prove an expensive luxury to the North. There is a point beyond which human power and vengeance cannot go without paying the penalty which nature has very wisely and properly fixed upon unnatural self-indulgence. We say nothing of the cowardice of the Republican policy, for, as a rule, the Republican leaders are equally debauched with the Democratic leaders, all leadership having sunk to the level of its following, differing chiefly in degree, not in kind. We merely point to tendencies and likelihoods, observing that, if the North wants a war of races at the South, it must prepare for a civil war at home and a despotism at Washington. We have for years sought to escape the race issue and the sectional issue; but, if they must come, let them come; and devil take the hindmost!—Louisville Courier-Journal.

I am in favor of legislating slowly—it must not be attempted suddenly—and gradually bringing our currency up to the money standard of the world, when you can say to Congress: Stand out of our daylight; we can transact our business without your interference.—Gen. Garfield.

How is the peril of the Republican party to be met? There is but one way. Certainly it is not by "pointing with pride" to what has been done, proud though the record be; it is not by the mere logic of argument, that, as the party has done this, so it will do that. It is only by the frankest declaration of a truly wise, humane and courageous policy made by those whose characters interpret and illuminate every word, and embodied in nominations of men whose names are their credentials.—Harper's Weekly.

SECOND MAINE CAVALRY RE-UNION.—The re-union of the surviving members of the Second Maine Cavalry took place at Bucksport, Wednesday. Seventy-five members were present. A large number arrived by the steamer Cambridge, accompanied by the Belfast Cornet Band. They were received at the wharf by their old commander, Gen. A. B. Spurling, and under escort of the fire department marched through the principal streets to Parker's Hall, at which a bountiful collation was served. At 2 o'clock p. m. the association met in Torrent Engine Hall, where the business meeting was held, and the following officers chosen for the ensuing year: Gen. A. B. Spurling, president; N. H. Martin, Capt. A. B. Matthews, Sergt. Studley, vice-presidents; Lieut. S. Small, secretary; Capt. John H. Roberts, treasurer. The meeting then adjourned till 4 p. m., when the Cavalry met at Lyceum Hall, where an eloquent oration was delivered by Capt. John H. Roberts of Boston and a fine poem read by Col. Eben Hutchinson of the same city. The event of the day was the banquet, from 6 to 8 p. m., at Parkers hall. The tables were laden with the choicest "rations." Gen. Spurling introduced, in a short and pithy speech, Col. Hutchinson of Boston a presiding officer of the evening, and Lieut. Small as toast master. Among the distinguished guests were Senator Hamlin and Congressman Hale. At 8 o'clock the floors were cleared and dancing commenced, which was continued till the small hours, the distinguished guests participating in the festivities of the occasion.

The next re-union is to be held at Bath on the first Wednesday of September, 1875.

BETHEL CENTENNIAL.—The following is the order of procession at the Bethel Centennial celebration, which occurs next Wednesday: Marshal of the day, Major G. A. Hastings, and aids; Indians; hunters and trappers; pioneer with his axe; carriage with men sawing and shaving shingles; carriage with men breaking and dressing flax; a man stripping birch broom; a doctor on horseback with medicine in his saddle-bags; postman with mail bag and tin horn; antique carriages and costumes; the Twitchell family; the oldest citizens, representing "Ye olden times"; military band; volunteer militia; president of the day, Hon. Abernethy Grover; vice presidents, selectmen of Bethel and Hanover; chaplain, orator and poet; Governor of the States; invited guests; a carriage with thirteen young ladies, representing the original states; a carriage with sixteen young misses, representing the coming woman; Norway brass band; school districts in order of numbers; citizens from other towns. Procession will form on the Common at 10 o'clock, A. M., and march through the principal streets to the grounds of Dr. N. T. True, where there will be seats to accommodate two thousand people.

THE BAND CONTROVERSY.—The leader of the Bangor Cornet Band writes to the Whig as follows:

MR. EDITOR:—The Bangor Cornet Bank wish the public to understand that they have taken no part in the controversy which has lately been going on in the Argus and Commercial concerning the comparative merits of the Bangor Band and Chandler's Band of Portland. The two bands have always been on excellent terms, and nothing has occurred to disturb in the least the warm friendship we feel for our Portland neighbors. We have always been treated "first-class" in Portland, and trust that the newspaper controversy (which we have in vain tried to check) will not change the kindly feelings the musicians, and citizens generally, of Portland have exhibited towards our organization.

LIFE IN KENTUCKY.—The Louisville Commercial publishes a list of eleven homicides and twenty-two affrays, and says that it is an incomplete account of the shooting, cutting and lynching affairs that have taken place in Kentucky within the past five weeks. In some instances the killing was the act of a sheriff or town marshal, done in the performance of official duty. In other cases the surviving party in the affray was acquitted on the ground that the homicide was done in self-defence.

PENOBSCOT REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.—The Republican County Convention for Penobscot county was held in Bangor, Thursday, and the following nominations made:

Senators—Joab W. Palmer of Bangor, Geo. Cutler of Medway, John Morrison of Corinth, George R. Thurlough of Newburgh.
Sheriff—Simon G. Jerrard of Levant.
Register of Probate—Ambrose C. Flint of Bangor.
County Commissioner—Willard B. Ferguson of Dixmont.

DROWNED.—Charles Marston, a young man seventeen years old, was drowned in Crooked River, Naples, Thursday afternoon. He was alone in a boat at the time, and it is thought he had a fit and fell overboard.

Burrage, now editor of the Zion's Advocate, says that the correspondent gained a wrong impression from his conversation with him, and asserts that Tholuck was not a Universalist, though he did infer from the Scriptures that there would, between death and the judgment, be an opportunity for those to whom the gospel had not been preached in lifes in which to accept or reject it.

Mischief in the Air.

We cannot analyze the aerial poisons that produce epidemic and endemic diseases; but the valuable discoveries which have been made in vegetable pharmacy enable us to counteract their malific influence. The most powerful known antidote to every species of malaria is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a pure botanical medicine in which the finest antiseptics, tonics, alteratives and stimulants of the vegetable kingdom are skillfully and effectively combined. At seasons of the year when the atmosphere is surcharged with miasma, and whenever the specific virus of any infectious disease is supposed to be present in the air, this famous corrective should be taken regularly as a protective. All who choose to observe this precaution may bid defiance to intermittent and remittent fevers, and in fact to all disorders generated by foul exhalations or impure water.

Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mankrake Pills.

These medicines have undoubtedly performed more cures of Consumption than any other remedy known to the American public. They are compounded of vegetable ingredients, and contain nothing which can be injurious to the human constitution.

Other remedies advertised as cures for Consumption, probably contain opium, which is a somewhat dangerous drug in all cases, and if taken freely by consumptive patients, it must do great injury; for its tendency is to confine the morbid matter in the system, which of course, must make a cure impossible.

Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup is warranted not to contain a particle of opium: It is composed of powerful but harmless herbs, which act on the lungs, liver, stomach and blood, and thus correct all morbid secretions, and expel all the diseased matter from the body. These are the only means by which Consumption can be cured, and as Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic, and Mandrake Pills are the only medicines which operate in this way, it is obvious they are the only genuine cure for Pulmonary Consumption. Each bottle of this invaluable medicine is accompanied by full directions.

Dr. Schenck is professedly at his principal office, corner Sixth and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, every Monday, and at the Quincy House, Boston, on the following Wednesdays: June 10th and 24th, July 8th and 22d, and August 5th and 19th.

WHITE'S

SPECIALTY FOR DYSPEPSIA.

This is the only prompt, efficient and safe master of such symptoms as loss of appetite, heartburn, palpitation of the heart, dizziness, sleeplessness, melancholy, costiveness, wind, mental and physical debility, as well as many others, which, if neglected, will soon place "the house we live in" beyond the reach of any remedy.

I had "Dyspepsia" twenty years, sometimes able to eat only the plainest food, and very little of that. I tried physicians and remedies without relief until I learned of "White's Specialty for Dyspepsia," which has entirely cured me. (Signed)

FIRE.—Between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning an alarm was given from box 42, corner of Danforth and Brackett streets occasioned by discovery of fire in an old and unoccupied house belonging to John Neal on Summer near Brackett. The fire caught on the roof of the house of John Brooks which was seriously damaged by the flooding. Mr. Brook's house was in part new, and his damage cannot be less than $800 or $1,000. Mr. Brook's is insured at the agency of Rollins, Loring & Adams for about $1,600. Mr. Brooks says that the old house has been on fire several times within the past two years. As no family had lived in the building for a month the fire was doubtless the work of an incendiary. The fire department came out promptly although this is the first general alarm in nearly three months.

LODGE MARSHALS.—The several lodges of Odd Fellows in this city have designated the following marshals and assistants for next Tuesday: Maine Lodge No. 1: Z. A. Smith, marshal; J. M. Peck and J. F. Land, assistants.

Ancient Brothers Lodge No. 4: W. H. Green, marshal; Milton Higgins and C. H. Babb, assistants.

COUNTY COMMITTEE.—At a meeting of the Republican County Committee, held after the convention, Wm. T. Small, Esq., chairman, tendered his resignation, both as its head and as a member. The committee insisted that he should retain his place, but as his course was determined, after considerable persuasion William C. How, Esq., consented to act the balance of the year.

BASE BALL.—The Haymakers of this city will play the Unions of Lewiston next Tuesday on the Deering grounds. The horse cars will run to the grounds to accommodate passengers.

A game was played yesterday afternoon on the Western Promenade between the Juniors of this city and the Starlights of Cape Elizabeth, resulting in favor of the former by a score of 30 to 17.

THE MARR HEIRS.—About a year ago the Marr heirs met in this city, formed an association, and prepared to make investigations into the immense Earl of Marr property now awaiting heirs in England. Yesterday a number of ladies and gentlemen met at the United States Hotel on the same business.

A MISUNDERSTANDING.—Charles J. Gross of Cape Elizabeth, hired a team of J. F. Libby, Thursday morning, to be gone a few hours. As he did not return Mr. Libby started after him and found him yesterday morning near Gray. He was brought into the city and locked up.

SO FUNNY.—The Boston operator "slipped up" on the Moulton statement about one o'clock and begun to send horse races and such. It took two night editors to convince him that it was not all right.

Physicians report the prevalence of summer complaints in this city.

The Marr heirs voted yesterday to send an agent to England to collect a fortune for them.

LADIES, Davis & Co., have marked down a lot of kid gloves so very low that they ought to sell the lot to-day. Also many other goods at prices which will draw a crowd to their store.

NELSON & Co., as will be seen by their advertisement, are offering great inducements in their summer suits.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTICES.

MATTERS IN MAINE

Honors to Gen. Hancock and Party.

EASTPORT, Aug. 21.—The steamer Iris, with Gen. Hancock, Col. Mitchell, Mr. Carter of Portland, and others, arrived here last night and left to pay for Mt. Desert. Many of our prominent citizens and members of the Grand Army called upon Gen. Hancock and a salute was fired by the Grand Army boys as the steamer left.

Lewiston Races.

LEWISTON, Aug. 21.—The August meeting of the Lewiston Driving Park closed to-day. The grand sweepstakes, open to all horses, was won by Wally Morris, entered by Geo. W. Bingham of Boston, in three straight heats. Time 2.35. The purse for the 2.44 class was won by Mabel Gray, entered by Frank Haseltine of Skowhegan. Time 2.40.

NEW YORK.

An Informer Claims $4,000,000 from the Government.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Rev. Warrick Martin, who became conspicuous here in the revenue service immediately after the flight of Joshua F. Bailey, the defaulting collector to South America, is stated to have filed a claim for $4,000,000, which he says is due him from the government for informers' notices in many costly and fruitless prosecutions begun by him in this city against distillers.

The Porto Rico Rumor Again.

McMasters, of the Freemen's Journal, reiterates the truth of his publication about the cession of Porto Rico to Germany, and says that he will perhaps give the sources of his information when Don Carlos ascends the throne of Spain, as he is sure he will soon.

On the other hand, the German Minister Baron Schlozer, stated to a correspondent, yesterday that the whole story was a monstrous absurdity, and that there was not the remotest truth in the statement of the Freeman's Journal. He said Germany had but one ambition, and that was to establish itself on the foundation of lasting peace; that she looked upon what is called the "colonial policy" as a relic of the eighteenth century, a source of weakness, and in no way acceptable to the German people; that Germany had no wish to enlarge her domain, and would be specially opposed to acquiring an island remote from Europe.

Cruelty on Shipboard.

The British sailing vessel Juraur arrived from Calcutta Monday, and yesterday one of the crew (all Mussulmen) counselled with ex-Judge Troy concerning their brutal treatment on the voyage. He said they were nearly starved to death, and when they complained to the captain (J. D. Davis), he met them with oaths and curses. Many of the men went nearly mad with hunger. Owing to weakness from want of nourishment one man had to be left at St. Helena; another fell from the topmast and was drowned; two fell on deck and had their legs broken; and another died. The backs and legs of the men are badly scarred they say by the lash of the captain.

WASHINGTON.

The War of Races.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—A Washington despatch to the Tribune says that the condition of certain parties of the Southern States excites grave apprehensions in the mind of the Attorney General, who believes that the issues of the next election will turn on the question of race. The government is appealed to by both sides for protection, but aside from instructing attorneys and marshals to exercise every precaution to prevent violence, the government is powerless. The facts are to be brought to the attention of the Cabinet at its next meeting.

Treasury Balances.

The following are the Treasury balances today:—Currency, $15,053,840; special deposit of legal tenders for redemption of certificates of deposit, $61,005,000; coin, $71,847,474, including coin certificates $30,729,000; outstanding legal tenders, $382,000,000.

A fire at Wilton, Iowa, Thursday, destroyed J. L. Lyford's elevator, with 6000 bushels of grain and fifteen buildings, chiefly saloons and boarding houses. Loss between $60,000 and $70,000.

His full Version of the Affair

HE CHARGES MR. BEECHER WITH ADULTERY.

An Interesting Series of Intrigues.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The Graphic furnishes in advance the following full statement of Moulton:

Explanatory.

To the Public:—I became a party also accidently in an unhappy controversity between Mr. Beecher and Mr. Tilton. I had been a friend of Mr. T. since my boyhood, and for Mr. B. I had also entertained the warmest admiration. In 1870 I learned for the first time that Mr. Beecher had given Mr. Tilton so grave a cause of offense that if the truth should be made public, a great national calamity would ensue. I believe that the scandal would tend to undermine the very foundation of social order, to lay low a beneficient power for good in our country, and blast the prospects and blight the family of one of the most brilliant and promising of rising men of the generation. This disaster, as I deem it and still regard it, I determined to try to avoid. For nearly four years I have labored most assidously to save both of these men from the consequences of their acts, whether of unwisdom or passion acts, which have already seriously involved them in a needless and disastrous quarrel, which is made the pretext of pouring on the community a flood of impurity and scandal deeply affecting their own families and threatening, like a whirlpool, if not stilled, to draw into the vortex the peace of mind and good repute of a host of others. More than all, I saw that because of the trangression of another, innocent children would be burdened with a load of obloquy which would weigh most heavily and cruelly on their young lives. All these considerations determined me to take an active part in the transactions which have since became so notorious, and this decision involved me in great anxiety and labor, for which the hope of saving these interests could be my only compensation. Even that reward has now failed me, and instead of it, an attempt is made to throw on me a part of the shame and disgrace which belongs to the actors alone. One of them who I have zealously endeavored to serve, has seen fit with all the power of his vast influence and matchless art as a writer to visit on me the penalties of his own wrong doing, at the same time publicy appealing to me to make known the truth as if it would justify his attack on me. I feel that the failure of my exertions has not been owing to any fault of mine. I worked faithfully and sincerely under the daily advice and direction of Mr. Beecher with his fullest approbation, confidence and beaming gratitude, until, as I think, in an evil hour for him he took other advisers.

I have failed and now strangely enough, he seems to desire to punish me for the sad consequences of the folly insincerity and wickedness of his present counsellors.

Efforts to save Beecher.

Mr. Beecher in his statement testifies that he brought on this investigation without any knowledge or advise. Even while mourning what seemed to me, the utter unwisdom of this proceeding, I have done all I could honorably to avert the catastrophe. I have kept silent, although I saw with sorrow that this silence was deeply injuring the friend of my boyhood. Prompted by a sense of duty, not to one only, but all the parties involved, I denied the united and public appeals made to me by Mr. Tilton and Mr. Beecher to produce the evidence in my possession, partly because I felt that the injury thereby done to Mr. Tilton was far less calamitous than the destruction which must come on all the interest I had for years tried to conserve, and especially on Mr. Beecher himself, if I should comply with request. But I stated clearly that in one emergency I should speak, namely, in defense of my own integrity of action if it should be wantonly assailed. I left Mr. Beecher untrammeled by the facts in my hands to defend himself without the necessity of attacking me by the published accusations of Mr. Beecher affecting my character. My own self respect, the advice of friends and public justice make it imperative that the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the whole truth should now be fully declared.

Why he Withheld the the Statement from the Committee.

I gave to the public therefore the statement I had prepared to bring before the committee without the alteration, addition of a single sentence and scarcely a word, certainly without the change of a single syllable, since I read Mr. Beecher's statement and the evidence, at the cause of it. This paper I withheld from the committee when before it in a last despairing effort for peace at the solicitation of some of Mr. Beecher's friends, and with the approval also of some of the most valued of my own. I do not now give it to the committee but to the public, because its production concerns myself rather than the principals in the strife, for my own protection against the public accusations, and not to aid either party to the controversy.

Regrets.

For the needless and cruel necessity that now so imperatively compels its production I have the most profound grief for which there is but a single alleviation, namely: That the disclosure of the facts at this time can scarcely work more harm to him whom I at first tried to befriend by withholding them from the public than they would have caused him injury in January, 1871, when, but for my interference, the public most assuredly would have been put in possession of the whole truth. This publication to which Mr. Beecher forces me renders fruitless four years of constant and sincere efforts to save him. It leaves him and Mrs. Tilton in almost the same position in which I found them, excepting in so far as their own late disingenuous untruthfulness in their solemn statements may lower them in the estimation of the world.

I reserve to myself the right hereafter to review the statement of Mr. Beecher in contrast with facts as shown by the documents herewith subjoined and others which I have at my hands, the production of which did not seem to be necessary until some portion of the published evidence of Mr. Beecher demanded contradiction. (Signed) FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

STATEMENT OF FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

Gentlemen of the Committee:

I need not repeat to you my great, very great, sorrow to feel obliged to answer your invitation and with the permission of the parties to put before you the exact facts which have been committed to me or come to my knowledge in the unhappy affair under investigation. In so doing, I shall use no words of characterization of them, or of inculpation of the parties, nor shall I attempt to ascribe motives save when necessary to exactly state the fact, leaving the occurences, their acts of omission and commission, to be interpreted by yourselves. In giving conversations or narratives, I, of course, can, in most cases, give only the substance of the first and will attempt to give words only when they so impressed themselves upon my mind as to remain in my memory; of the latter only so much as seems to me material. I have known Theodore Tilton since 1850 intimately, in kindest and social and personal friendship. I have known Rev. Henry Ward Beecher since 1862, and then casually as an acquaintance and an attendant upon his ministrations up to the beginning of the occurrences of which I shall speak.

Tilton's Family Relations.

Seeing Mr. Tilton's valedictory as editor of the Independent on the 22d of December, 1870, I inferred that there had been some differences between himself and Mr. H. C. Bowen, the proprietor, but learning that Tilton had been retained as contributor to that journal and editor of the Brooklyn Union, of which Bowen was also proprietor, I supposed the differences were not personal or unkind. Up to that time, although I had been a frequent visitor at Tilton's house and had seen himself and Mrs. Tilton under all the phases of social intercourse, I had never heard or known of the slightest disagreement or unkindness existing between them, but had believed their marital relations were almost exceptionally pleasant.

Bowen Makes a Charge Against Beecher.

On the 26th day of December, 1870, being at Mr. Tilton's house, he came home from an interview with Mr. Bowen. At that interview Bowen had made certain accusations against Beecher, and had challenged him (Tilton) as a matter of duty to the public to write an open letter, which Bowen was to take to Beecher, of which he showed me the original draft, which is as follows: (First draft marked "A.")

TILTON TO BEECHER.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 26, 1870.

Henry Ward Beecher:—Sir—I demand that for the reasons which you explicitly understand you immediately cease from the ministry of Plymouth church, and that you quit the city of Brooklyn as a residence.

(Signed) THEODORE TILTON.

Tilton explained that the words, "for reasons which you explicitly understand," were interlined at request of Bowen, and he further stated that he told Bowen he was prepared to believe his charges because Beecher had made improper advances to Mrs. Tilton. Surprised at this, I asked him: "What?" when he replied "Don't ask me; I can't tell you." I then said:

"Is it possible you could have been so foolish as to sign that letter on the strength of Bowen's assertion and not have Bowen sign it too, although, as you say, he was to carry it to Beecher?"

He answered: "Mr. Bowen gave me his word that he would sustain the charges, and adduce the evidence to prove them whenever called upon."

I said: "I fear that you will find yourself mistaken. Has the letter gone?"

He answered: "Bowen said he would take it immediately."

I afterwards learned from Beecher that Bowen had done so because on first of January following, Beecher gave me the copy he received, as I find by a memorandum, made at the time on an envelope, and I find by a later memorandum on the envelope that the original draft was given to me by Tilton on the 5th of the same month. I insert here the following memorandum of facts above stated, made at the time giving the hour when it was made.

MOULTON'S MEMORANDUM.

BROOKLYN, Dec. 36

Theodore Tilton informed me to-day that he had sent a note to Mr. Beecher, of which Mr. H. C. Bowen was the bearer, demanding that Beecher should retire from his pulpit and quit the city of Brooklyn. The letter was an open one. H. C. Bowen knew the contents of it and said that he (Bowen) would sustain Tilton in this demand.

3.45 P. M.—In a day or two after that Mr. Tilton called on me at my house and said he had sent word to Bowen that he was going to call on Beecher within half an hour or shortly; that Bowen came up into his office with great anger and told him he should say to Beecher what he (Bowen) had told him concerning his (Beecher's) adulteries, he would dismiss him from the Independent and Union. Tilton told him he never had been influenced by threats, and he would not be in the present case, and he subsequently received Bowen's letter of dismissal.

What the Charges Were.

What these charges were and the account of interview will appear in the following letter addressed to Bowen by Tilton dated 1st of Jan. 1861, which also gives in substance and in more detail what Tilton had said to me in the two conversations which I have mentioned. (Letter already published.

Moulton continues:

In this letter I have omitted the sentence quoted as the words of Mr. Bowen after the words "as nearly as I can recall your words, that," simply desiring to say that it contained a charge of rape and something very nearly like ravishment of a woman other than Mrs. Tilton, told in words unfit to be spread upon the record, but if desired the original is for the inspection of the committee.

Mrs. Tilton's Confession Shown Beecher.

On Friday evening, 30th December, being the night of the Plymouth Church prayer meeting, Tilton came to me and said in substance that by his wife's request he had determined to see Beecher, in order to show to Beecher a confession of his wife's of the intercourse between them, which he (Tilton) had never up to that time mentioned to him (Beecher), and the fact of the confession of which his wife had told him that she had never told Beecher, although her confession had been made in July previous, in writing, which writing he (Tilton) had afterwards destroyed, but that his wife hearing that if the Bowen accusations were made public the whole matter would be known, and her own conduct with Beecher become exposed, had renewed her confession in her own hand-writing, which he handed me to read, which was the first knowledge I had of its existence.

Tilton did not tell me how his wife came to make the confession in July last. Indeed, I may state here, once for all, I refrained from asking confessions of the acts of all the parties further than they chose to make them voluntarily for the purpose for which I was acting. Tilton wanted me to go down and ask Beecher to come up and see him at my house, which I did.

I said to Mr Beecher, "Mr. Tilton wants you to come and see him at my house, immediately."

He asked "what for?"

I replied, "He wants to make some statement to you in reference to your relations with his family."

He then called to some one in a back room to go down and say he should not be at prayer meeting, and we went out together. It was storming at the time, when he remarked there is an appropriateness in this storm and asked, "What can I do?"

I said, "Mr. Beecher, I am not a Christian, but if you wish I will show you how well a heathen can serve you." We then went to my house and I showed him into the chamber over the parlor, where Mr. Tilton was, and left them together. In about an hour Mr. Beecher came down and asked me if I had seen the confession of Elizabeth. I said I had.

Said he, "This will kill me," and asked me to walk out with him. I did so and we walked to Mr. Tilton's house together, and he went in. On the way he said, "This is a terrible catastrophe; it comes upon me as if I was struck by lighting." He went into Tilton's house and I returned home.

Within an hour he returned to my house and we left my house again together and I walked with him to his house. Tilton remained at my house while Beecher was absent at Tilton's house, and when he returned he said there was no conversation between them. When we arrived at Beecher's house, he wanted me to stand by him in this emergency and procure a reconciliation if possible. I told him I would because the interests of women, children and families were involved, if for no other reason. That ended the interview for that night.

During this evening nothing was said by Mr. Beecher as to the truth or falsity of Mrs. Tilton's confession, nor did he inform me that he had obtained from her any recautation of the confession, which I afterwards learned he had. I returned to my house and had some conversation with Tilton in which he told me he had recited to Beecher the details of the confession of his wife's adulteries, and the remark which Beecher made was, "This is all a dream, Theodore," and that that was all the answer Beecher made to him. I then advised Tilton that for the sake of his wife and family and for the sake of Beecher's family the matter should be kept quiet and hushed up.

Mrs. Tilton's Recantation.

The next morning as I was leaving home for business Tilton came to my house, and with great anger said Beecher had done a mean act; that he had gone from that interview of last night to his house and procured from Elizabeth a recantation and retraction of her confession. He said for that act he would smite him—that there could be no peace. He said you said that what I have told you of meanness of that man is now evident. Tilton said Beecher at the interview last night asked his permission to go and see Elizabeth, and he told him he might go, which statement was confirmed by Beecher himself, and Beecher left him for that purpose. I said, "Tilton, now don't get angry. Let us see if this can't be arranged. I will go down and get that retraction from him."

Moulton Rescues the Retraction.

I was then going to my business, so I was unable to go that morning, but went that evening; saw Beecher and told him I thought that he had been doing a very mean and treacherous act. Treacherous first towards me from whom he wanted help, in that he did not tell me on our way to his house last night what he had procured from Mrs. Tilton and that he could not expect my friendship in this matter unless he acted truthfully and honestly towards me. I further said, "Mr. Beecher, you have had criminal intercourse with Mrs. Tilton, you have done great injury to Tilton otherwise. Now when you are confronted with it, you ask permission of the man to go in again visit the house and you get from that woman, who has confessed you have ruined her, a recantation, and retraction of trouble for your mere personal safety. That won't save you."

At that interview he admitted with grief and sorrow, the fact of his sexual relations with Mrs. Tilton, expressed some indignation that she had not told him she had told her husband; that in consequence of being in ignorance of that fact, he had been walking on a volcano, referring to what he had done in connection with Bowen's and in reference to Tilton's family. He said that he had sympathized with Bowen and had taken sides with him as against Tilton in consequence of stories which were in circulation in regard to him, and especially of one specific case. He had been informed that Tilton had improper relations with a woman he named and to whom a letter from his wife will make a part of this statement, and had so stated to Bowen, and he told me he would write to Bowen and withdraw those charges, and gave me the rough draft of the letter which he wrote and sent to Bowen, which letter is here produced:

BEECHER TO BOWEN.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 2, 1871.

My Dear Mr. Bowen,—Since I saw you last Tuesday I have reason to think that the only cases of which I spoke to you in regard to Mr. Tilton were exaggerated in being reported to me, and I should be unwilling to have anything I said, though it has been but little, weigh on your mind in a matter so important to his welfare. I am informed by one in whose judgment and integrity I greatly rely, and who has the means of forming an opinion better than any of us, that he knows the whole matter about Mrs. Ballard, and that the stories are not true, and that the same is the case with other stories. I don't wish any reply to this. I thought it only due to justice that I should say so much. Yours,

H. W. BEECHER.

Mr. Beecher told me that Mrs. Beecher and himself, without knowing of the confession of Mrs. Tilton to her husband, has been expressing great sympathy towards Mrs. Tilton, and taking an active interest with her against her husband. I said, "Mr. Beecher, I want that reconciliation, I have come for it." "Well," said he, "what shall I do without it?" I replied, "I don't know; I can tell you what will happen with it." He asked, "What will you do if I give it to you?" I answered, "I will keep it as I kept her confession. If you act honorably I will protect it with my life as I would protect the other with my life." Mr. Tilton asked for that confession this morning, and I said, "I will never give it to you; you shall not have it from my hands until I have exhausted every effort for peace." Mr. Beecher gave me back the paper, the original of which I now produce in Mr. Tilton's handwriting.

[The note in substance has already been published.]

Afterwards Tilton left with me another letter, dated the same night of the reconciliation, Dec. 30, bearing on the same topic, to be left with the papers which were in his wife's handwriting. It is here produced.

[Already published.]

When I went home with the recautation, I found Tilton there and showed it him. He expressed his surprise and gratification that I should have been able to get it, and I then showed to him how very foolish it would have been in the morning to have proceeded angrily against Beecher. I made another appeal for peace saying that notwithstanding great difficulties appeared in the way if they were properly dealt with they could be beaten out of the way. He expressed his willingness and desire for peace. When I saw Beecher I made an agreement at his request to meet him on Sunday, Jan. 1. I went to his house in accordance with the engagement. He took me into his study and then told me of his great surprise that Elizabeth should have made the confession of his criminal commerce with her to her husband without letting him (B) know anything about it, making his destruction at any moment possible without warning to him.

Mr. Beecher's Apology.

He expressed his great grief at this wrong which he had done as a minister and friend to Theodore, and at his request I took pen and paper and he dictated to me the following paper, all of which is my hand writing except the words, "I have trusted this to Moulton in confidence" and the signature, which latter are in Mr. Beecher's. [Letter of apology already published.]

This was intrusted to me in confidence to be shown only to Tilton, which I did.

Alleged Confession of Mr. Beecher.

It has reference to no other fact or act than the confession of sexual intercourse between Beecher and Mrs Tilton, which he at that interview confessed and denied not. He also, at other interviews held subsequently between us in relation to this unfortunate affair, unqualifiedly confessed that he had been guilty of adultery with Mrs. Tilton, and always in a spirit of grief and sorrow at the enormity of the crime he had committed against Mr. Tilton.

At such times he would speak with much feeling of the relation he had sustained towards them as pastor, spiritual advisor and trusted friend His self condemnation at the ruin he had wrought under such circumstances was full and complete, and at times he was so bowed down with grief in consequence of the wrong he had done that he threatened to put an end to his life. He also gave me a letter, the first draft of which (marked "A") is above given, in reference to which he said that Bowen had given it to him, that he had told Bowen that Tilton must be crazy to write such a letter as that, he didn't understand it. Bowen said, "I will be your friend in this matter." He then made a statement which Tilton had made to me at my house of the charge that Bowen had made to him (Tilton) and said that Bowen had been treacherous toward Tilton as well as towards himself, because he (Beecher) had had a reconciliation with Bowen, of which he told me the terms and Bowen had never in his (Beecher's) presence spoken of or referred to any allegation of crime or wrong doing on his part with any woman whatever.

The Beecher-Bowen Reconciliation.

He gave me in general terms the reconciliation, and afterwards gave me the memoranda which I here produce which show the terms of the reconciliation. The first in the hand writing of Beecher, containing five items which Beecher assured me were the terms which Bowen claimed should be the basis of reconciliation. It is as follows:

BOWEN'S TERMS.

1st, report and publish sermons and lecture room talks; 2d, new edition Plymouth collection and Beecher's interest; 3d, explanations to church; 4th, write me a letter; 5th, retract in every quarter what has been said to my injury.

The second paper is a pencil memorandum of the reconciliation with Bowen in Beecher's hand writing, giving an account of the affair.

BEECHER'S MEMORANDUM OF INTERVIEW AT FREELAND'S.

[About February, 1870.]

At a long interview at Mr. Freelands house, for the purpose of having a full and final reconciliation, Mr. Bowen stated his grievances, which were all either of a business nature, of my treatment of him personally (as per memorandum in his writing.) After hours of conference everything was adjusted. We shook hands; we pledged each other to work henceforth without jar or break. I said to him,—"Mr. Bowen, if you hear anything of me not in accordance with this agreement of harmony, don't let it rest; come straight to me at once, and I will do the same by you." He agreed. In the lecture room I stated that all our differences were over and we were friends again. This public recognition he heard and expressed himself greatly pleased with it. It was after all this, that I asked Mr. Howard to help me carry out this reconciliation, and to call on Mr. Bowen and remove the little differences between them. Mr. Howard called and expressed his gratification. Then it was that he (Mr. Bowen) without any provocation, told Mr. Howard that this reconciliation did not include one matter that he (Bowen) knew about Mr. Beecher, which if he should speak, it would drive Mr. Beecher out of Brooklyn. Mr. Howard protested with horror against such a statement, unless he had most absolute evidence: To this Mr. Beecher replied that he had this evidence, and said pointedly that he (Howard) might go to Mr. Beecher, and that Mr. Beecher would never give his consent that he (Bowen) should tell Mr. Howard this secret. Mr. Bowen at no time had ever made known to Mr. B. what this secret was, and the hints which Mr. Beecher had had of it led him to think that it was another matter, and not the slander which he now finds it to be.

In that interview Beecher was very earnest in his expression of regret at what had been done against Tilton in relation to his business in connection with Bowen, besought me to do everything I could do to save him from the destruction which would come upon him if the story of his (Beecher's) intercourse with Mrs. Tilton should be divulged. In compliance with the directions of Beecher (Jan. 1, 1871) I took the paper which he dictated to me to Mr. Tilton, detailed to him Beecher's expressions of regret and sorrow, spoke to him of his agony of mind and again appealed to him to have the whole matter kept quiet if for no other reason than for the sake of the children.

To this Tilton assented. I found him writing the letter to Bowen of that date, which I have before produced. He told me also of the contracts he had with a penalty when he left the Independent to be editor of the Brooklyn Union and special contributor to the Independent at a salary of $100 per week, with another salary of equal amount for his editorship of the Brooklyn Union and a portion of the profits. Copies of these contracts I cannot produce, because both papers were delivered to Bowen after the arbitration of the controversy of which I am about to speak.

These contracts provided that they could be terminated by mutual consent, or upon six months' notice, or upon the death of either party, or at once by the party who wished to break, or annul them by paying the other the sum of $2500.

The Bowen-Tilton Trouble.

Tilton insisted that that sum, with his arrears of salary, was justly due him, and that he should bring a suit against Bowen unless he settled, and he gave me an authorization to settle his affairs with Bowen, which paper I gave to Bowen when I went down to treat with him, retaining this copy:

TILTON TO BOWEN.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 2. 1871.

H. C. B.—Sir,—I hereby authorize Mr. Francis D. Moulton to act in my behalf in full settlement with you of all my accounts growing out of my contracts for services to the Independent and the Brooklyn Daily Union. (Signed,) THEODORE TILTON.

Acting in the interest of Beecher, I told Tilton that this controversy with Bowen, if possible, should be peacefully settled lest it might reopen the other matters relating to Beecher's conduct in Tilton's family and the charges made by Bowen against Beecher.

To this Tilton assented, giving me the authorization above quoted.

At my earliest convenience I called upon Bowen at his office upon this business, telling him I wanted him to settle with me, as I was authorized by Tilton by this letter (handing him the letter) to settle for the breaking of his contract with Tilton as contributor to the Independent, and editor of the Brooklyn Union. I also handed him an article written by Tilton for the Independent, which he (Tilton) claimed was in part performance of his contract, which article was subsequently returned to Tilton by Bowen through me.

Bowen said he did not consider that he owed Tilton any money at all for breaking the contracts that he had terminated them, having in his opinion sufficient reasons for so doing. "Well," I said, "Mr. Bowen, your contracts are specific." He said he knew they were, but they provided for arbitration in case of any differences between the parties. I replied in substance that the arbitration only referred to differences between parties as to articles to be published as editor and contributor by Tilton, and as to Bowen's conduct as publisher, and that there was a fixed sum as penalty for breach of the contracts.

The interview terminated with his refusal. I reported to Tilton advising him still not to sue Bowen. The following correspondence is with reference to my meeting Mr. Bowen on this business:

MOULTON TO BOWEN.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 9, 1871.

Mr. H. C. Bowen, dear sir:—Referring to a recent interview with you, I would state that in consequence of illness, I have been detained at home, and as I deem it of great importance to the interests of all concerned in the affairs about which we talked, that you and I should meet at an early moment, if you will call at my house, 143 Clinton street, I shall be glad to see you at any hour convenient to yourself tomorrow.

Truly yours, F. D. MOULTON.

BOWEN TO MOULTON.

BROOKLYN, Jan. 10, 1871.

Sir—I am not very well myself, but will try to call at your house Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. I am engaged to-morrow evening. I can go this evening if you will inform me that it will be convenient for you to see me. Unless I learn from you to the contrary, I will see you on Thursday.

Very respectfully, H. C. BOWEN.

In pursuance of this correspondence we met at my house and entered into negotiations about the settlements of the contract with Tilton at that time. During the interview I showed Bowen the letter of Jan. 1st of Tilton which he (Tilton) had placed in my hands to use in accordance with my own views (heretofore given.) Bowen, during the reading of the letter, seemed to be much excited, and at only one point of the letter questioned the accuracy of the statements which states as follows: "That alluding by name to a woman, now a widow, whose husband's death no doubt was hastened by his knowledge that Mr. Beecher had maintained with her an improper intimacy."

To that he said, "I didn't make that allusion, Mr. Tilton made it." I went on to the close of the letter and finished it when Bowen said to me, "Has Tilton told Beecher the contents of this letter?" I replied "He has." He said, "What shall I do?" What I said at that interview was said in confidence. We struck hands there and pledged ourselves to God that no one there present would reveal anything there spoken. I said to him, "It would be an easy matter to confirm what you say, or prove that what you say is false."

Mr. Johnson says, and this confirms what you say in regard to one point, namely, that the allusion to the widow was made by Theodore Tilton and that you said you had no doubt that her husband's death was caused by his knowledge of her improper intimacy with Beecher. Quoting your language he says that you said—"I have no doubt of it whatever." Mr. Johnson also says that your statements in regard to Beecher were not intimations of his adulteries, but plain and straightforward charges of the same. He says that you said that you knew of four or five cases of Mr. Beecher's adulterous intercourse with women.

Mr. Johnson says also that you at that interview you plainly declared that Beecher had confessed his guilt to you.

I also said to him, "Mr. Tilton states that you said, 'I can't stand it any longer. You and I owe a duty to society in this matter.—That man ought not to stay a week in his pulpit. It isn't safe for our families to have him in this city. I also said to him, "Mr. Johnson also states that at the interview of December 26th, at your house, you voluntarily pledged your word to Mr. Johnson that you would take no further measures in regard to Mr. Tilton without consultation with him (Mr. Johnson); that you had said substantially the same thing to him during private conversation between you and him.

I then said to Bowen that I then thought he was a vere treacherous man for this reason, that I knew he had had a reconciliation with Beecher, or rather that I was informed of it, which was perfected in the house of God, and that within 48 hours from that time he had avowed to Mr. Howard that he (Bowen) could, if he chose, drive Mr. Beecher out of town. I told him further that I was informed that prior to that reconciliation, he had made no charge against Beecher's character to Beecher, but only behind his back, and I said. "Mr. Bowen, I have the points of settlement between you and Mr. Beecher in your own hand writing, and there is no reference to any charge of crime of any kind against Beecher."

Mr. Bowen made no denial of these assertions of mine, but seemed on the contrary abashed and dejected, and in reply to my question "What do you say to these charges which you have made against Beecher?" He declined to say anything about them but repeated the question. "What can I do?" I answered. I am not your adviser. I can't dictate to you what course you should pursue, but you have done great injustice to Mr. Tilton and to Mr. Beecher, and you ought to take the earliest means of repairing the injury. I should think it would be just for you to restore Tilton to the Independent, but I don't believe he would go back if you should offer it to him. His reply was, "How can I do that now?" I told him I didn't know. He must find a way to settle his own difficulties. He again expressed his willingness to arbitrate the question of money between himself and Tilton growing out of contract. I told him that Tilton would not arbitrate; that a plain provision of the contract provided that he should pay what I demanded and he must fulfill it.

Mr. Bowen rose to leave, and said before leaving, whenever I wanted to see him he would be happy to come to my house and confer on this subject, and he did on several subsequent occasions visit me at my house whenever I sent for him for consultation in this matter.

The means I have of giving so accurately the conversation between myself and Bowen as to the conversations had with Tilton and Oliver Johnson are, that prior to my meeting with Bowen, as I told him, I had an interview with Oliver Johnson in the presence of Tilton, where the whole matter was discussed, and a memorandum of Oliver Johnson's statement, in which he gave his recollections of the interview of Dec. 26, when Tilton and Johnson were present, was taken down by Tilton in shorthand in my presence, and copied out of it in Mr. Johnson's presence, which memorandum has been in my possession ever since, and from which I read each statement, one after the other, to Bowen. I here produce it.

OLIVER JOHNSON'S STATEMENT.

At the interview of Dec. 26, Mr. Bowen voluntarily pledged his word to Mr. Johnson that he, H. C. B., would take no further measures in regard to Mr. Tilton without consultation with Mr. Johnson. Mr. Bowen had likewise said substantially the same thing to Johnson. Mr. Johnson, personally, during private conversations between those two persons said there was no obligatory confidence on any of the parties concerning anything said at this interview, save a special pledge mutually given that nothing should be said concerning Mr. Beecher's demonstrations towards Mr. Tilton. Mr. O. J. says that Mr. Bowen's statements in regard to H. W. B. were not intimations of Mr. B's adulteries, but plain, straightforward charges of the shame. H. C. B. stated he knew four or five cases of Mr. B's adulterous intercourse with women. O. J. says that H. C. B., at this interview plainly declared that H. W. B. had confessed his guilt to H. C. B. H. C. B.—"I cannot stand it any longer. You and I owe a duty to society in this matter. That man ought not to stay a week in his pulpit. It is not safe for our families to have him in the city." Allusion to the widow was made by H. T., and H. C. B. said he had no doubt that her husband's death was caused by his knowledge of her improper intimacy with H. W. B. I have no doubt about it whatever to make an end of the statement as to the controversy between Tilton and Bowen.

The Arbitration.

I further state that various negotiations were had between Bowen and myself, which resulted finally in an arbitration in which H. B. Claflin, Chas. Storrs and James Neeland were referees; that there was very considerable delay arising from my own absence in the South in the early spring, on account of sickness, Mr. Bowen's absence during summer and Tilton's absence during the summer and Tilton's absence during the fall and winter on his lecturing tour, so that the arbitration did not terminate till the 2d of April, 1872. This arbitration was determined upon by me, and my determination given to Mr. Claflin in the following note:

MOULTON TO CLAFLIN.

BROOKLYN, April 1st, 1872.

My Dear Mr. Claflin,—After a full consideration of all interests other than Theodore's, I have advised him to arbitrate, on grounds which he will explain to you, and which I hope will accord with your judgment and kind wishes toward all concerned.

Cordially yours,

FRANCIS D. MOULTON.

Tilton and Bowen and myself appeared before the arbitration. In Tilton's statement was included the letter before given, of which he had put into type which influenced me to consent to the arbitration in order to do away with the necessity of its publication. After full hearing, nothing having been submitted to the arbitrators except the business differences of Tilton and Bowen, the arbitrators made an award that Mr. Bowen should pay Tilton the sum of $7000 for which he (Mr. Bowen) drew his check upon the spot and the contracts were given up to him.

The Tripartite Agreement.

After the above settlement a paper which has since been called the tripartite agreement was signed by Bowen and Tilton. The inducing cause to this arbitration was the fact that Tilton had commenced a suit against Bowen and prepared an article for the Golden Age in which he embodied his letter to Mr. Bowen and a statement of the circumstances. He submitted that article to me and I begged him to withhold it from publication. I also brought Tilton and Beecher together, and Beecher added his entreaties to mine. To prevent its publication and close the suit which might work injury to Beecher and others I agreed to submit Mr. Tilton's claim to arbitration, to which I had been invited before by Bowen, but which I had refused as before stated. In this interview between Beecher, Tilton and myself, I said, "Perhaps we can settle the whole matter if I can see Mr. Claflin, for Claflin knows Bowen well, and understands the importance of all these interests." Beecher said he would send Clafl

POETRY.

A Long Branch Episode.

Upon the broad Atlantic sands
I saw a maiden and her lover,
Her dimpled fingers in his hands,
Her shy blue eyes the sea looked over;
With coy girl's love to him she turned
And said: "Dear,
Do you think any one will know
That you have dared to kiss me so?"

Alone upon the pebbly strand
Break ocean swell and pale moonbeam,
The lovers are walking hand in hand,
From the bluff to where the gas-lamps stream:
They reach the peopled colonnade—
Trembling she said;
"Dear, I'm sure they all will know
That you have dared to kiss me so."

The waltz floats through the casement low,
And the lovers stand at the open door;
The maid shyly whispers, "Will they know?"
Her eyes seem fastened to the floor;
Fond he looks down on that fair young face—
"All will see
That my arms are empty," he said,
"And no kisses cling to your lips so red."

They join the dancers' merry whirl,
The room is filled with beauties fair,
With cheeks aflush and ruffled curl.
My maiden dances with absent air;
She fears that every one can tell—
Yet I trow,
Only the lover and I could know
Which was the girl that had been kissed so.

"Tricks that are Vain."

CHAPTER I.

"Schooner ahoy!"

"Jerusalem pancakes! What's that?" said Captain Obediah Skillins, starting nervously, and peering over the side of the Lively Turtle into the darkness.

"Schooner ahoy!" again came the summons, and this time so close under the good captain's nose, as he leaned far out over the rail, in his anxiety to discover the hailers, that he started back involuntarily, and so suddenly as to double up Jake Pendergrast, first mate, who stood close beside him, by a swinging blow of his elbow in that gentleman's stomach.

"Wall, that beats all, now," said the captain, referring to the unexpected summons, and not at all to the damaging assault upon his first officer; "who do you suppose it is, Jake?"

"Who do I suppose the devil;" gasped the mate, clasping his waistcoat buttons in anguish, "what in thunder do you mean by knocking the wind outer me. Why don't you answer their hail if you want to know who they are and not go staving in a feller's ribs with your pesky flippers?"

"Sho now, Jake, don't git riled. I didn't go to do it," answered the captain soothingly. "I swan to man, if they ain't towing astarn now; I heard 'em hook on. Guess I'll see who it is, any way. Hello!" he roared, stepping aft, and staring over the rail, "Who is it? What yer want?"

"Want to come aboard," replied a voice from the boat, which the captain now perceived, dimly, through the darkness, to be towing astern, holding on to his rudder chains with a boat hook. There appeared to be several men in her and in the bottom some object covered over with a tarpaulin.

"Smugglers, Jake," said Obadiah, turning to his mate after a careful survey of the various objects enumerated, "I don't want none of that in mine—not much;" and he shook his head virtuously as he remembered the little lapses of his more youthful days and certain packages detained at the receipt of customs down to Machias on account of some little informalities in the manifest. "Had enough of that, by gam; don't ketch me in no such pickle again," he muttered to himself.

"What?" said Jake, not catching the drift of the captain's soliloquy.

"I say," said Skillins, "I don't have no smuggling aboard my vessel, if I know it."

"No, of course not," replied Jake, with a grin which was happily lost to the captain in the darkness.

"I say, captain, do you intend to keep us here all night?" at this point inquired the spokesman of the boat in an impatient tone.

"No, I don't," returned Obediah, sharply, "you kin cast off just as soon as you like and a little sooner. Come now, clear out, I say," he continued, as the boat's crew showed no disposition to accept his delicate hint that their company was not acceptable.

"Good heavens, man!" said the spokesman of the boat, now rising in his seat, "you don't mean to send us adrift out here in the middle of Chesapeake Bay in the night. There is a storm coming on, too, and we shall be swamped. Come, come, captain," he continued, in a persuasive tone, "give us a lift and we will pay you well for your trouble."

"I don't want nothing to do with no smugglers, and I won't have you aboard this vessel; so clear out, I say," replied the captain in a surly tone.

"Good heavens! hear the fool!" muttered the stranger, angrily; "I tell you we are no smugglers," turning to the captain, "We want to go up to Baltimore. One of my men is wounded and will die if he does not receive assistance. I'll give you a hundred dollars to take us—what say you?"

"A hundred dollars," repeated the captain in a softened tone. "He talks well, don't he, Jake? What do you say? Best to take 'em?"

"I don't like the looks on it, no how," returned Jake, shaking his head wisely; "how came they out here in that little cockle shell at this time of night? Tell me that, will you?"

"That's so," said Obediah, "I guess I'll have that p'int cleared up afore I go any further. I say, you," turning to the boat, "How came you out here in this way? Just tell me that now."

"I'll tell you no such thing," replied the stranger, angrily. "It is none of your business how we came here. You can take us or leave us, as you like; all I can say is, if you don't you are a hundred dollars out of pocket, and likely several drowned men to answer for," saying which he cast a glance around the darkening sky and sat down.

"Wall, now, that sounds reasonable, Jake. I callate that itim about the drownin' is about so, and I don't want to be a murderer at my time of life."

"More like you ain't a goin to lose that hundred dollars," muttered Jake, walking forward to get the ladder.

"Well, squire, you kin come aboard, I s pose, if you are sure you ain't in the smuggling line. I couldn't allow that, nohow," said Obediah to the stranger. "Here, you ketch this line, and I'll haul you alongside. Throw over that ladder, Jake. Be lively, now;" and the captain walking forward with the painter, made it fast with a turn around the fire shrouds, bringing the little boat to the gangway where Jake stood with the ladder ready to assist the strangers aboard. The transfer of the crew and luggage of the boat to the schooner's deck was speedily and safely accomplished as the craft lay almost motionless on the water, her tall sails and massive booms swinging idly, with the occasional puffs of wind, from side to side, dragging the heavy sheet blocks noisily back and forth along the traveller.

"Here you Bob, Dave, lay aft here and lend a hand with the dunnage," cried the captain to the balance of the crew who stood with their hands in their pockets idly regarding the performance. This order referred to a heavy iron box which the crew of the boat were lifting, with some difficulty, over the rail.

"We do not require any help, sir," said the captain of the boat, who now stood on the deck by Obediah's side giving directions to his men,

"All right, Capting," said Obediah, offended at the stranger's sharp refusal, "you ain't obliged fur to have none."

"No offence, sir," said the stranger, by way of apology; "my own men can manage it."

"Not at all, not at all, sir, just fetch your traps right down into the cabin," said Skillins, briskly, preparing to lead the way and if possible discover the contents of the iron box. "Heavy, ain't it?"

"Yes sir, it is heavy; and with your permission, I will leave it here," said the stranger directing his men to deposit the chest near the main mast, where one of his men seated himself upon it while the remainder of the men prepared to bring the wounded man on board.

This was speedily accomplished, and the wounded man carefully covered by a heavy cloak was conveyed to the cabin and deposited in the captain's own bunk.

The two men belonging to the boat, then returned to the deck to secure their boat against the coming storm, leaving the captain alone with the stranger and his companion.

"I reckon you are some chilly" said Obadiah, producing a square bottle of old Holland from a locker. "Take a nip?"

"Thank you, I will take a drop," replied the stranger, shivering slightly; "the nights are a trifle cold at this season."

"Perhaps your friend will take a drop," said Skillins, after watching the stranger dispose of a stiff horn.

"No, thank you, not any," said he, hastily intercepting the captain in his endeavor to reach the bunk with the bottle and glass. "He don't drink."

"Oh!" said Obadiah, baffled; and proceeded to shift his position in order to obtain a better view of the stranger's face. In this laudable purpose, he was defeated however, partly by the feeble light afforded by the single oil lamp which swung from the ceiling, and partly by the stranger himself, who purposely kept his face in shadow. Finding himself unable to gratify his curiosity, in this manner, the good captain changed his tactics to a bolder course, and demanded abruptly, "What might you call yourself, now, capting?"

"What?" said the stranger starting from a brown study, into which he had fallen, with his head on his breast, as Obadiah stood watching him,

"What is your name?" repeated Obadiah.

"My name—oh name is—is Baker—Joseph Baker", answered the stranger, confusedly.

"Ah, Baker—well, Baker is a good name; I had an aunt named Baker, once, and where"—pursued Obadiah with an insinuating smile—"do you hail from?"

"See here now, captain," said Mr. Baker, rousing himself, and regarding the captain angrily, "I think you have asked questions enough. I pay you for your services and that is enough for you to know. You better go on deck and look after your vessel. I judge from the sounds, you may be needed;" and in fact, at that moment, Jake Pendergrast thrust his head down the companion-way and requested the captain to come on deck and assist in putting the vessel in trim, for the gale which was fast coming upon them.

Captain Skillins reluctantly followed his mate, and mentally summed up his discoveries which amounted to the fact that Mr. Baker was a tall, strongly built man, somewhat stooping, with a full gray beard and sharp eyes glancing out from under his broad-brimmed, slouched hat, in an unpleasant manner at times; also, that he had a white, slender, delicate hand, upon which he wore a beautiful ring which flashed and glowed in the lamp-light as he drank.

"I don't know about all this," mused Obediah. "Wonder what he keeps in that chest—gold probably, mebby diamonds. I shouldn't wonder if he was a smuggler, after all. Well, well, it is no consarn of mine; I kin swear, and so kin Jake, that they said they was all right."

Arriving on deck the meditations of the captain were quickly forgotten in his hasty preparations for the safety of the schooner.

The heavy black masses of clouds hung over the water like a pall, obscuring the starlight and rendering the night pitchy dark, save an occasional flash of lightning which lighted up the scene with a ghastly glare. The hollow rumbling of the distant thunder gave token that there was no time to lose. With the assistance of the boat's crew the vessel was soon put in trim, however, and Captain Skillins himself took the wheel and all awaited the blast. At that moment Jake Pendergast hastily approached the captain, guiding himself along by the rail. Thrusting his face close to the captain's ear he whispered, "Just look off to leeward now, just over the lee quarter, and wait for the next flash."

"Why, what is it?" said Skillins, peering into the darkness in the direction indicated.

"You just look and you'll see," said Jake. "There—there, did you see that?" he cried as the sea and sky were for a moment lighted up with a vivid flash.

"By jingo! a revenue cutter!" gasped Obediah.

He had time to say no more. With a terrific crash of thunder the rushing blast and hissing rain and hail were upon them. The little schooner heeled over till her long booms nearly touched the water. Then rising, plunged madly forward burying her bowsprit in foam and sending a flood of water rushing aft over the decks.

"Hold on, all!" yelled the captain, but his voice was blown away by the rushing wind almost before it left his mouth. His warning was not needed, however, for all hands had made haste to secure themselves, and now stood clinging to the rigging and anxiously waiting, as the schooner rode swiftly forward borne by the wind and buffeted by huge waves which shook her to the very keel with the force of their ponderous blows. For some moments Capt. Skillins had enough to do to keep the wheel from being wrested from his grasp by the force of the waves, but now getting his bearings he brought her to, a couple of points, so that she steered easier. Casting his eyes to leeward he now watched for a flash to reveal the position of the cutter. In a moment a dazzling sheet of flame lighted up the scene, and he beheld with consternation the cutter on his lee quarter still holding her relative position.

"What in thunder do they want now, I wonder," said Obediah, uneasily. "Guess I'll sheer off a bit; I don't like the looks of this."

Giving the wheel a turn he kept away a couple of points and at the next flash beheld with increasing dismay that the cutter had followed his example and seemed bent upon keeping him in view.

"Blast their picters, what do they mean by doggin' me in this way?" said Obediah, wrathfully; and he gave the wheel another turn, motioning to Jake to round in the mainsail. The little schooner was now almost on her beam ends, and the water boiled and hissed as it flew by her counter. Again the cutter followed and kept her position.

"They mean me, sure," groaned Obediah.

"Here's a nice scrape, and them fifty barrels of rum in the hold under the pertaters," and he fairly writhed in anguish. "Wonder if I couldn't throw 'em overboard in the dark," he muttered. "No, there's them boat fellers would see it." Here the captain's feelings overcame him, and he relieved his rage by a wild volley of profane ejaculations. For half an hour the wild race between the two vessels continued—neither gaining any permanent advantage; and now the wind began to abate somewhat of its violence. The black clouds rolled away to the southward and the moon struggled out faintly between the ragged remnants of the broken and retreating masses. The waves still ran high, and a brisk breeze drew them swiftly along.

"Shake out a reef, Captain," said a voice at his elbow, and, turning, Capt. Skillins discovered the stranger, who had approached him unperceived.

"What?" yelled Skillins, staring at him in amazement.

"Shake out a reef, I say," repeated Baker, calmly.

For a moment Obediah regarded him with speechless anger and astonishment. That any man living should dare, should presume to dictate to him—to Captain Obediah Skillins, on the deck of his own vessel, was beyond belief. It was simply astounding.

"See here, you," said Obediah, as soon as he could find voice, and regarding Baker fiercely, "Who is a bossin' this here craft, you or me? I'll shake a reef out o' you, if you come orderin' around me."

"You had better do as I request, sir," said the stranger quietly, and Obediah suddenly felt a powerful grip on his arm and the cold ring of a pistol barrel was pressed to his ear. At the same moment he noticed that the two men belonging to the boat had left their stations and quietly placed themselves by his side. Captain Obediah Skillins was by no means a timid man, but he was taken by surprise and for a moment he hesitated, but the next, with a movement like lightning, he straightened his powerful arm; a sharp thud as his ponderous fist brought up on the stranger's nose, and that gentleman lay sprawling upon the deck; in another moment he was engaged in a fierce struggle with the other two men. Jake Pendegrast, seeing the state of affairs, threw himself wildly upon the combatants with a handspike and aimed a furious blow at one of the assailants, which would have ended his career forever, but, unfortunately, at that moment, Mr. Baker, somewhat recovered from the effects of Obediah's sledge-hammer fist, staggered to his feet, and rushing forward dealt Jake a swinging blow under the ear, which causing him to swerve, the handspike descended upon the head of Captain Skillins and stretched him senseless upon the deck. In another moment the two remaining hands were secured and all four found themselves fast bound and gagged under the lee rail. The boat's crew were now masters of the schooner. At the first moment the man on guard over the iron box had left his post and running aft seized the wheel, and the crew now proceeded to clap on every stitch of sail which the schooner could carry. Her masts bent like reeds, under the enormous pressure, and she sprang through the water like a race horse.

Mr. Baker now directed one of his men to look after the wounded captain, who soon recovered his senses under a vigorous application of salt water from a bucket, and a strong pull at his private bottle of old Holland, which was produced for the purpose, and sitting up gazed about him. The sky was clear and beautiful, with a flood of silvery light from the full moon. However poetic the natural temperament of Captain Skillins might have been, he was not, at that moment, absorbed by the fresh, sparkling beauty of the scene. The flash and gleam of the moonlight as it danced over the rippling waves, and, catching the flying spray under the bows changed it into a cascade of purest silver—had no charms for him. His first glance was at the standing rigging, to see how it bore the unwonted strain. The little craft was bowling along at a terrific rate. The new commander stood by the rail watching the cutter through a night glass, and smiled grimly as she gradually lost ground.

"D—d pirates," growled Obediah in his throat—articulate speech being denied him on account of the gag, "I'll be even with them yet, or my name aint Obediah Skillins."

His further meditations were cut short by a loud crash and tearing sound as the foresail fell and carried the topmast over the side. The strain was too much and the backstays snapped like tow. The flying jib came down by the run, and dragging in the water carried away the jib-boom close down to the cap. Relieved suddenly of the pressure forward the stern swung around bringing the schooner broadside to the sea, and a tremendous wave swept over her, threatening to carry all before it. In a moment all was confusion. Baker jumped aft and catching up an axe, cut the mainsail halyards, bringing that huge sail down by the run. The schooner swung around head on, and drifted stern foremost helplessly on the waves. Capt. Skillins watched all this exhibition of seamanship in silent rage, occasionally relieving his feelings by an inarticulate oath as blunder after blunder reduced his beautiful Turtle to an unsightly wreck. After a vain endeavor to set matters to rights, Baker approached Obediah, and removing the gag from his mouth, said, laconically:

"What now?"

Unmindful of his grievances for the nonce, and only anxious to save what was left, Capt. Skillins gave a few rapid orders which soon set matters partly in trim. The tangled and broken rigging was cut away, the decks cleared, and in a short time the Turtle was driving along under easy sail, with the cutter rapidly overhauling her. Baker paced the deck with rapid strides, casting frequent and anxious glances toward the cutter, and Obediah locked on and said not a word.

His time was coming; he would soon show these pirates a few things—just wait till the cutter comes within hail and then see. "By jimminy—we'll see who's who if I lose every barrel of rum in Maine," he muttered.

The cutter was now close under the lee quarter of the schooner, and Obediah was preparing to hail her, when a figure was dimly seen in her weather rigging, and a voice came ringing across the water:

"Schooner ahoy!"

Before Captain Skillins could open his mouth to reply, he felt a pair of hands clasped tightly across that capacious organ from behind, and at the same moment a voice so exactly like his own that he started in some alarm, answering with a broad nasal twang:

"Hulloa!"

"What schooner is that?"

"Lively Turtle."

"Where from and whither bound?"

"Bangor for Baltimore—pertate-e-ers."

"Have you seen a boat with four men in it hereabouts?"

"Haow?"

The question was repeated with a curse upon the stupidity of the supposed Yankee skipper.

"No; not as I know on, Capting," bawled Baker.

"All right; want any help?"

"No, I guess not; reckon we shall make out somehow."

The cutter altered her course and was rapidly lost to view in the distance.

"I think you had better go below now, Captain, and turn in," said Baker and without awaiting any reply he called to two of his men, who assisted the captain below and deposited him in his bunk. He wondered vaguely where the wounded man was, but his head swam with pain and his eyes closed in spite of his efforts to keep awake. In a few moments he was buried in profound sleep. Once he had an uneasy consciousness of some one coming and holding a light close to his face, and of a woman, sitting at the table, talking earnestly with Baker.

"I tell you, you shall not," said the woman's voice, sharply, in his dream.

"But Annette, listen to reason. Everything may depend upon it," answered the man's voice, and then he wandered away into deeper dreams till he was roused suddenly by a smothered shriek and starting up in his bunk, all was dark. He listened intently for a moment, but his brain seemed to be like lead. A penetrating odor of some strange thing filled the cabin and he sank back unconscious.

When he came to himself he was roused by Jake Pendegrast, who was accompanied by a policeman, and on going on deck he found the schooner fast moored to the dock in Baltimore. The policeman was making inquiries of Jake, and from his replies Obediah learned that the boat's crew had worked the vessel into the dock, and having made her fast, had decamped, carrying with them their box and wounded companion. "Only," said Jake, "it is my opinion that it was a woman, and she warn't wounded at all. She stepped off as peart as a grasshopper when they left, and I saw her hand and arm, as her cloak blew back, and you needn't tell me any man ever had limbs like them ere;" and Jake slapped his leg in so convincing a manner that it left no doubt in the minds of his auditors as to the correctness of his deductions. It further appeared that they had left Jake and the two men bound and gagged, and they had only been relieved from their uncomfortable predicament a few moments before by one of the harbor police who was then present. Obediah listened to all this in silence, but he kept up a mighty thinking, the result of which was that he put the schooner in charge of his mate, and encasing himself in his long togs, stepped ashore and was soon lost to view behind a tier of molasses hogsheads at the head of the wharf.

Treatise on Nervous Diseases

— AND THE —

Cordial Balm of Syricum.

During the year 1865 Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop had a new and peculiar drug, from the interior of Africa, brought prominently under his notice by the very strange effect it produced on an animal who had accidentally swallowed a large quantity. Owing to this circumstance he was led to make many experiments on the lower animals, and he soon discovered that it had a very peculiar effect on the Nervous System. This induced him to experiment both on himself and some of his patients, and such was the wonderfully beneficial effects, and so rapid the cure of those afflicted with nervous diseases, that Dr. Lothrop came to the conclusion that he had discovered a new and valuable addition to the medicines of the pharmacopœa. He soon found that this medicine, in conjunction with some others, cured nervous diseases of all kinds with a certainty and rapidity of which he had no previous conception.

A few words on that special disease generally known as Nervous Debility or Weakness. This is in most cases brought on by total ignorance of the fearful pernicious effects, but it is also brought on in many cases by unavoidable causes, and such was the case with Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM AND TONIC PILLS, combined with other medicines, offers them to all sufferers as a safe and speedy cure. Our Lunatic Asylums are full of patients, in many cases brought thither by the effects of Nervous Debility. Many thousands suffer in silence, hopeless of relief, having often been deceived by unprincipled quacks. Such is not the case with Dr. G. Edgar Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS. A very short trial will demonstrate their efficacy.

Any who suffer from the effects of over indulgence in tobacco, or alcoholic stimulants, Palpitation of the Heart, St. Vitus' Dance, Epilepsy, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Restlessness during Sleep, Loss of Memory, Irritability, Nervousness, Twitching of the Nerves, and all other Nervous Diseases, will find this medicine a real blessing.

Should any person into whose hands this notice comes, have a friend whom he knows or thinks is afflicted with any Nervous Disease, Nervous Debility, etc., he will confer a real kindness on his friend by sending it to him, so as to give him an opportunity of being cured by the use of Dr. Lothrop's CORDIAL BALM OF SYRICUM and TONIC PILLS.

No Extra Insurance to Pay!

No Danger from Explosion—No liability to get out of Order.

In short it is the SIMPLEST, SAFEST, most DURABLE and most ECONOMICAL Engine in the world. We fully guarantee them in all the above particulars. COLT'S ARMS CO. have spared no expense in getting up SPECIAL TOOLS AND MACHINES with which to build these Engines, so that every part is made up to gauge, and are perfectly interchangeable, the importance of which will be understood by all who are at all familiar with machinery. Thus, every Engine of a given size is an exact duplicate of every other one of that size, and in case of breakage, the broken part can be immediately replaced by its perfect duplicate.

The inventor of this Engine had in view, in its construction, the great need that exists for a perfect Steam Engine—of small power—adapted to all kinds of light mechanical work, and that should also combine all that is good in Steam Engineering.

The first point was, to secure a perfectly philosophical Boiler and Furnace, in order to insure the most perfect combustion, and to take up the greatest possible amount of heat in generating steam.

The second point was, to make a perfect cut-off Engine, working steam expansively, and keeping up the temperature of the cylinder to prevent loss by radiation or condensation.

The third point was, to combine and make the whole a mechanically and scientifically correct machine; all its parts being provided with means to take up lost motion, so that it may be used for any number of years, and always run smoothly. In all these particulars as much care has been taken as in the largest and most perfect engine ever constructed.

The result is—THE GREATEST AMOUNT OF POWER PROPORTIONED TO THE AMOUNT OF FUEL CONSUMED—thus proving the fact—well known to men of science—that water is the best medium to transmit the mechanical forces, generated in the combustion of fuel, to the production of motive power.
