Truncation

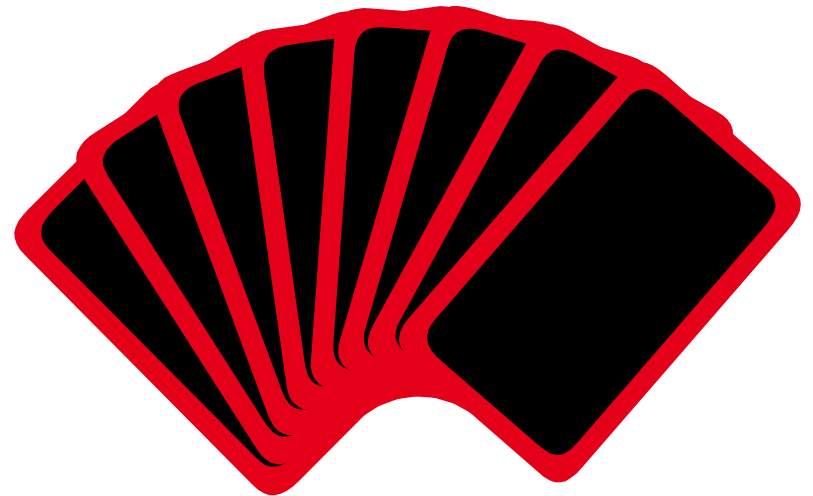

- By using the asterisk at the end of a root word, you will get results for all variations of that word.
- For example, `librar*` brings back results for `library`, `libraries`, `librarian` and `librarians`.

The Wildcard

- The question mark replaces one letter. A search for either woman or women would look like this:

wom?n

Proximity Searching

- N = the Near Operator

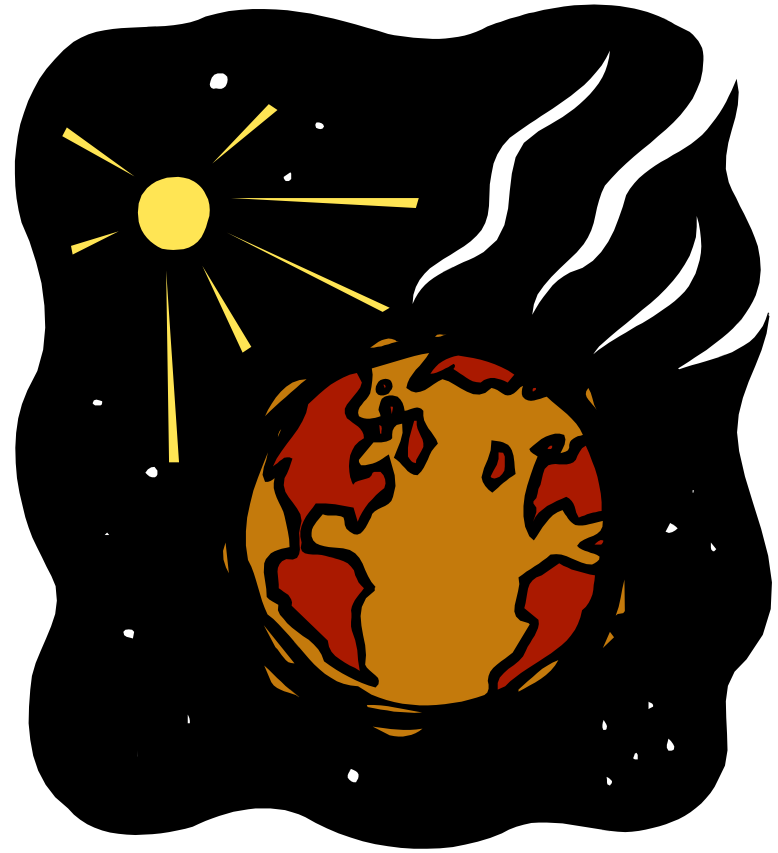

Women N3 Investors would put the two terms within each other by 3 words in the order you typed them.

- W = the Within Operator

Men W3 Investors would put the two terms within 3 words of each other in any order.

- Try a search for global warming
- Try other limiters and expanders. It is interesting how the number of results will vary!

Title: LOU DOBBS MONEYLINE, CNNfn, Moneyline News Hour (CNNfn), Apr 11, 2003

Database: Regional Business News

LOU DOBBS MONEYLINE, CNNfn

LOU DOBBS, CNNfn ANCHOR, LOU DOBBS MONEYLINE: Good evening, everyone.

U.S. and Kurdish forces tonight are in control of Iraq's northern oil region. Coalition troops took the city of Mosul today, one day after they seized the region's oil capital, Kirkuk. Mosul fell when the Iraqi army's 5th Corps surrendered entirely and without a fight. The corps would normally have a strength of some 30,000 troops, but only 15,000 were reported to be at their posts when their commanders surrendered. Many of those troops deserted their units and are heading home on foot.

U.S. forces in Baghdad are trying to stop looters from ransacking government buildings. They've increased security at checkpoints and declared a curfew in parts of the city. Coalition forces have only been in Baghdad for 36 hours. Many Iraqis are asking soldiers and Marines to restore order now. More coalition units are being sent to Baghdad, including reinforcements from the 101st Airborne Division.

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said today the looting is what he called a transitional phase on the way to freedom from Saddam Hussein's rule. And Secretary Rumsfeld said that coalition forces are stopping looting whenever they see it. Senior Pentagon correspondent Jamie McIntyre reports.
