Dear Mr. Goss:

Your gift of AFTERGLOW to the Maine Author Collection is very much appreciated. Although you write that you were seven months old in 1886, we hope you will be so kind as to let us have the exact date of your birth, and also the place. We like to have this information on our Maine authors.

The book will of course be brought to the attention of those responsible for selecting bookmobile books. We hope that AFTERGLOW is enjoying a warm reception from readers, and that you will be encouraged by its success.

Thank you very much for the Maine Author Collection copy.

Sincerely yours

hmj

“AFTERGLOW”

A Maine Narrative of Penobscot Bay Islanders

by LEROY E. GOSS

In this evocation of the past the author has sought to live again some of the events and adventures of an active life with some delightful surprises and humor—together with a portrait of one who knew how to live right and was determined to do so.

This account is set in the Maine scene he knows so well, using the members of his own family to make it a live picture for viewing from time to time in the “AFTERGLOW,” a glow which remains.

About the Author

Leroy E. Goss spent his boyhood on an island in Maine on Penobscot Bay. He became a small-time merchant at fifteen, delivering his grocery orders on a wheelbarrow. Enduring that for a year, he then set out for the mainland to try and better himself. He became a traveling salesman a year later, with the distinction of being rated the greenest and youngest salesman on the road, being educated in the school of hard knocks and adversity.

Although retired for several years, he is still active and feels confident that other adventures, situations and experiences will arise. He looks forward to them eagerly. “Lee,” as he is called, resides in Portland, Maine in the winter and has a summer home in Weld, Mount Blue, Maine.

Dear Mrs Jacob-

The writer/Author is at his Summer home in Weld. Mt Blue Maine and under separate cover I am send you as courtesy a copy of "Afterglow" which I trust you will read and enjoy.
