Racine, Wis, Nov. 2, 1860.

To Dr. Herrick, Albany, N. Y.,—Dear Sir. I cannot refrain from informing you of the wonderful effect of your Sugar Coated Pills on a boy living with me. While hard at work, drawing cord wood, he fell to the carth, as if in a fit, was insensible and partially cold. We carried him to the house, and sent for a doctor, who bled him and gave him some medicine. He remained all night in the same situation. The doctor said he would die, and left him. My wife insisted upon giving him some of your pills. We administered four in five hours, and shortly after two more, robbing him with hot brandy and mustard. The pills operated powerfully. At four o'clock in the afternoon he opened his eyes and spoke, commenced getting bethis eyes and spoke, commenced getting ter, and in three days went to work. than fifty of our citizens saw the boy, will testify to what I have said. From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. BY THOMAS MILLER.

Summer time amid the corn Summer odors, eve and morn, Floating round in every way, Perfuming night and scenting day; Meadow sweet, whose creamy truss Is twined with pink convolvolus,
Spotted fox glove, hare-bell blue,
Forget-me-not, to lovers true,
That grows with wild mint by the stream, In which their pale blue shadows gleam; Eye-bright white and golden green, By the rose-a-ruby seen; Crimson-ling and purple beather Bending all their heads together O'er the scarlet pimpernel;
All these throw their mingled smell
Around summer's fading bowers, Forming her last wreath of flowers.

Corn rustles on the upland lea, Like the murmur of the sea That comes at pleasant eventide,
Where the beach winds smooth and wide; Bird boy's call heard loud and long, Clapper chiming to his song; From early morn to evening gray Doth he scare the birds away, And his cry comes in between The stop and stir of branches green, Little pauses, through which creep Faint jinglings of the bells of sheep; While the shepherd dog's deep bark Starts from the corn the frightened lark; And as the village children sing While through the corn-fields wandering, Convolvoli, and poppies red, They twine around each other's bead.

Sun tanned reapers 'mid the corn, From the earliest peep of morn, Long before the dew has dried, Leaving the shorn cars spread wide, Till the sun's red rays come down, And give them that rich golden brown They wear when bound in plumy sheaves. His labor oft the reaper leaves, And on the cool stream's flowery bank. Lays him down full length to drink, In the shadow of the wooden holt, Where the ass browses by her colt. Like e figure in a dream, Fast asleep beside the stream, Lies a maiden by her sickle, The ripples o'er her bare feet trickle, While bees murmur in the shade, And lull to sleep the weary maid. Close at her head the harvest mouse Has on three corn-stalks built her house; Wonder to all learned men How she feeds her children, ten, In compass of a cricket-ball? How she reaches them at all Without being smothered? how they rest, In such a small, close-woven nest?

Now the barred gate's thurst aside, Making passage clear and wide For the heavy-laden wain: Piled so high with ripened grain, That the trees along the road Take toll from the rocking load, Till their branches seem to stoop Through weight of gold that from them droop.

In a huge rick beside the grange, They the heavy sheaves will range, Placing all the ears inside. The long-tailed field-mouse there will hide, Sleep and feed the winter through, Without a care about the morrow.

In the sheafless fields are seen Rustic groups whe've come to glean; Children, always with an eye To where the dinner-baskets lie, O'er which the watchful dog keeps guard; And they think it very hard Meal-times are so long delayed. There the pretty village maid, Who has lately left her place,

It is always 'thar'—the mainstay, the unfailing support of the beloved ones of our hearts, whose sustenance and welfare should never be allowed to depend exclusively upon the fluctuations and uncertainties of trade. There is a charm surrounding the homestead—homely though it be—that penetrates every crevice of the heart, and binds us to the precious and familiar precincts with a magnetic influence.—Oh, for a free, good old home in the country, away from the struggles of business, the away from the struggles of business, the haste to be rich, the unseen pit-falls into which the ignus fatus of old is leading men, and all the other surroundings of an unreal fictitious life.

BOURBON ELIXIR.

THE proprietor intrudces his Elixir to the public with a positive knowledge that it will perform all that he claims for it. He did not originate it for the sake of having something to sell, but to cure himself of Dyspepsia, and Sore Throat, of years standing.—He succeeded completely in doing so, and, now, after having established its remarkable curative power beyond a doubt, by its use in a great variety of other cases, with equal success, he offers it to the public for the relief of the suffering.
