Poetical Selections.

THE JOURNER A-LA-MODE.

BY JOHN G. SAKE.

I saw her last night at a party, (The elegant party at Meade's) And looking remarkably hearty For a widow so young in her weeds; Yet I knew she was suffering sorrow Too deep for tongue to express—Or why had she chosen to borrow So much from the language of dress?

Her shawl was sable as the night;
And her gloves were as black as her shawl—
And her jewels flashed in the light.
Were black as a funeral pall;
Her robe had the hue of the rest, (How nicely it fitted her shape!)
And the grief that was leaving her breast Boiled over in billows of craze!

What tears of vicarious woe That else might have sullied her face, Were kindly permitted to flow In ripples of ebony lace!
While even her fan in its play, Had quite a lugubrious scope, And seems to be waving away
The ghost of the angel of Hope!

But rich as the robes of a queen, Was the somber apparel she wore; I'm certain I never had seen Such a sumptuous sorrow before;
And I couldn't help thinking the beauty, In mourning the loved and the lost,
Was doing her conjugal duty, Although regardless of cost!

One surely would say of devotion Performed at so vast an expense, Betrayed an excess of emotion That was really something immense;
And yet as I view at my leisure, Those tokens of tender regard, I thought—It is scarce without measure—The sorrow that goes by the yard!

Ah! grief is a curious passion;
And yours—I am sorely afraid, The very next phase of the fashion Will find it beginning to fade.
Though dark are the shadows of grief,
The morning will follow the night, Half tints will be token of relief.

Till joy shall be symbolized in white!
Ah!—well!—it were idle to quarrel With fashion, or ought she may do;
And so I conclude with a moral And metaphor—warranted new—When meads come handsomely out, The patient is sated, they say;
And the sorrow is mildest, no doubt,
That works in a similar way!

Our Story Teller.

A YANKEE MAN-TRAP.

Ethan Balch was not swearing exactly; yet he was undeniably wishing uncharitable wishes, respecting the future of certain Englishmen, and using exclamatory epithets to do it with. It was August the 15th, 1813, and Mr. Balch was walking slowly homeward from the sea-shore of New London county, Connecticut; and as he went, he whistled.
The precise expressions in which he indulged were these:

"Consarn the darned Britishers to dar-nation! Blame their everlastin' peters!
I hope to gracious the plaguy old boat will go slam down with 'em, earse and all!"

Then, after a pause, he added:
"Just as ef I mightn't a knowed they'd a done it! Ef I'd only kept her hum-till night, and crept round, I could a gone strate into New London just as easy.

Near about two hundred dollars gone slap-dab for nothin'? O, good thunder! cried the mourning young Yankee in the bitterness of his soul, as this crowning misery rose fresh to his mind.

It is no wonder that he was seriously displeased, for the British, then maintaining a strict blockade upon Commodore Decatur, who with the frigates United States and Macedonian, and the brig-of-war Hornet, had run up the River Thames, had that day made prize of a certain small craft, in which together with her cargo, was invested a full moiety of his private worldly estate.

Nevertheless, with continuous whittling, and many quaint excretions, home went Ethan, and told his sad tale to his parents, who sympathized with him and were grieved.

"Who was there in the boat, Ethan?" asked Mr. Balch, senior.

"That's the worst on't, father," said the junior gentleman. "I've got to go'n tell Marthy Robbins—and what on earth she'll say, I don't know. They was Peleg and Zack Robbins; and them darned everlastin' rotten pizen cusses has got 'em and the boat besides, and sarse enough to keep the fleet a week."

"Wal, my son," said the old gentleman "I rather guess you'd better go right over'n tell her, and hev it done with. She'll take on sum at fust, that's sartain; but the boys'll come back some time or another, and she'll Misses Robbins kin come'n stay with us ef they're a mind to.
I guess we could tend up to that 'ere little farm, a while."

For Mrs. Robbins's, the widowed mother of 'Marthy,' and of Peleg and Zach-ariah, owned and occupied, with her children, a small farm near by, and carried on the same; and the capture of her two stout sons had, of course, left the farm quite bare of men. Ethan walked modestly over to Mrs. Robbins's house. He was warmly welcomed by the two women, but received their greetings with so much embarrassment, that they perceived that something was wrong.

"What on 'arth's the matter with ye, Ethan?" asked the lady, cocking back her head so that she could peer at him through her spectacles, which usually abode some ways down her nose; you are shorter'n pie-crust, seems to me."

"Perhaps," said Miss Robbins, with a small smirk, "he didn't want to come—Tain't necessary to come here unless you enjoy it, Mister Balch."

"Well, well!" expostulated the discon-solate Yankee, "Don't go plaguin' a man, when he's in trouble already. I did want to come, and it's the first time; and you know it Marthy. But wasn't cos I wasn't glad to see you. I s'pose I might just as well out with it. Them ere darned British has ketch'd the boat, and Peleg and Zack along with it."

An outburst of lamentation from the women interrupted the further progress of the tale, which Ethan's awkward attempts at consolation did not avail to quench. They gradually recovered themselves, however, and proceeded to inquire how it happened.

"It was," Ethan said, "by means of a well-known row-galley belonging to Admiral's, the flag ship, Ramilies, seventy-four, which had already captured many small coasting crafts, and which had secured its booty, in the present instance, by 'snakin' out,' as he described it, 'with the joint use of sails and oars, the fair breeze with which the Martha (as Ethan's boat was named,) had set sail, having unexpectedly died away nearly to a calm."

Miss Martha Robbins having cried a good deal, did now, as woman-kind are often apt to do, experience a sudden and not very reasonable reaction into anger; and chose to innumerate, first that her lover had very cunningly avoided any personal risk to himself, by sending her brothers off with the boat alone; secondly, that anybody who had not sufficient brains to keep him from such losses as that, was hardly likely to make a thrifty or a properous helpmate.

These aspersions Ethan vigorously repelled, asserting that 'the boys' had chosen to go together, both desiring to visit New London; and that as they were not necessary for managing the boat or for selling the cargo, he had given them their own way; and as to the latter part of the accusation, he inquired:

"I want to know ef you think a man ort to hev brains enough to know exactly when it's agoin to fall calm on the Sound ten hours ahead?"

But, Miss Robbins being, as we have insinuated, a womanly woman, vouched no answer to these considerations, which he urged by way of argument—argument being a thing totally unknown to the majority of the female sex—and of the male, too, for that matter. And she accordingly said over again what she had said before, rather more loudly and earnestly; and having thus refuted Ethan in the discussion, she informed him that unless he could get her brothers out of the captivity into which he had been the means of their felling, he need not look upon her face again.

Ethan remonstrated, and even Mrs. Robbins ventured a few mild expostulations, but all in vain; the Yankee damsel's blood was up, and the discomfited lover, not considering that it was highly complimentary to him that his lady-love should take it for granted that he was simply able to rescue the prisoners from the whole British fleet, pursued his homeward way in much dejection of mind.

"I wish to gracious there'd been fifty men in her!" he exclaimed. "Twould a been frustrate fun to jump up and gin 'em a volley!"

Then his keen Yankee intellect, pursuing the train of thought thus started, a scheme suggested itself to him which seemed to promise him both a fair revenge and the means of liberating the two brethren of his obdurate mistress. Hastening homeward, he consulted with his father, and, after some difficulty, succeeded in gaining his co-operation. Early next morning the two men, harnessing up the old farm-horse, drove speedily over to New London, and procuring introductions from one or two gentlemen of standing in that place, who bore witness to the trustworthiness and abilities of the bearers, they proceeded up the river to Norwich, near which place the three American vessels were moored.

With the customary formalities, they were admitted on board the Macedonian, then Commodore Decatur's flag-ship, and having introduced themselves and presented their testimonials, they proceeded to request his assistance in carrying out the scheme which they unfolded to him. After careful investigations and inquiry the mode, time, and manner of proceeding were agreed upon, and Decatur agreed that a sufficient number of marines should be at the appointed place upon the afternoon of the succeeding day, and having partaken of the refreshments which the hospital sailor set before them, the well-satisfied Yankee farmers set out on their return.

We pass over to the next day, at a little past noon. At that time there crept out of Mystic river, taking the inside passage between Ram Island and the main land, a sail-boat, heavily laden and managed by two men. With a fine breeze from the West of North, they steered along, close hauled and hugging the shore, until they had passed Long Point, perhaps a third of the distance between the mouth of the Mystic and New London Light. They could now see distinctly the lofty hulls and towering masts and rigging of Sir Thomas Nard'y a fleet, riding at single anchor in side of Fisher's Island; the two seventyfours looming up in the warm air, and attended, as it were, by the smaller Orpheus and Eolus frigates, and by two or three gun brigs and tenders. After passing Long Point, the sail-boat stood rather further out to sea.

"Don't bear away too far, father," said Ethan—for he and Mr. Balch, senior constituted the boat's crew—"they'll smell a rat."

"No they won't my son," said the old gentleman, luffing a little, however.
"They don't give us no credit for knowin' how to handle a boat—I'll reckon they'll have to allow that we kin manage a frigate, though! There they be, Ethan," said the old man, his eyes brightening with excitement. "Set still, set still. They've got good glasses—they'll see us. Make 'em see you don't see nothin' on em."

And sore enough as he spoke, there shot out from behind the Ramilies, the low, long, black row galley, which had been the means of so many petty depredations along the coast. Hoisting a lug sail and bracing sharp up, she steered, with the double impetus of sail and oar, straight across in a direction to cut off the deeply laden and slow moving boat.

"Ain't it almost time to go about, father?" asked Ethan, after ten minutes of rather uneasy silence.

"Don't git worried, my son," said the old gentleman, drily. "Your father has sailed a great many boats. We was to run ashore with them two high trees in range, wasn't we?"

"Yes—there 's a peeled pole on the beach, jest at the spot."

"Wal, I reckon we kin see them feller aboard the galley now," said the elder Balch, with a grin. "You kin be jest as frightened as you please."

And he pretended to spy the unfriendly pursuers for the first time; and with an elaborate display of terrified haste and awkwardness, the boat was put about and steered straight for the beach, now nearly half a mile distant. The English galley hereupon slightly varying her course, came in pursuit. Ethan and his father, as the foe approached, by way of maintaining the deception, crouched out of sight, occasionally popping up, as if to watch the enemy, and then quickly hiding again.

"Peck a boo!" said Ethan, looking up a moment. We shall be hard aground in three minutes, father. They're coming up hand over hand. There's the pole on the beach."

"Come well aft, Ethan," said his father,
"lets run her well on."

"Hello, there, you Yankee lubbers!" hailed the English lieutenant, now within three rods, if you beach the boat we'll shoot you!"

But as he spoke the boat grounded, and the two men quickly disappeared over the steep sand hills bordering the shore.
The English galley grounded fast on the sand in full pursuit. As she stopped, fifty American marines rose from behind the crest of the sand hills, poured in a fatal volley, and rushing forward, captured the remaining crew. One third of their number were dead or desperately wounded, the lieutenant and two or three others being all that were unhurt.

"You've paid rather mor'n 'ts wuth," said Ethan, pointing to the load of cob-ble stones. "I reckon we're even with ye now for hookin' that boat-load of garden-sars of mine, day before yesterday, and ketchin' them two fellers."

In the exchange of prisoners, shortly after negotiated, the liberation of the Messrs. Robbins was secured, and this fulfilment, by Ethan's means, of the hard commands of his lady-love, restored, and even enhanced, the amiable relations of the relations heretofore existing between them.

THOUGHTS FOR YOUNG MEN.—Costly apparatus and splendid cabinets have no magical power to make scholars. In all circumstances, as a man is, under God, the master of his own fortunes, so is he the maker of his own mind. The Creator has so constituted the human intellect that it can grow only by its own action, and by its own action it must certainly and necessarily grow. Every man must, therefore, in an important sense, educate himself. His books and teachers are but helps, the work is his. A man is not educated until he has the ability to summon, in case of emergency, all his mental power in vigorous exercise to effect his proposed object. It is not the man who has seen the most, who can do this; such an one is in danger of being bourn down like a beast of burden, by a overloaded mass of other men's thoughts.— Nor is it a man that can boast merely of native vigor and capacity. The greatest of all the warriors that went to the siege of Troy had the pre-eminence not because nature had given him strength, and he carried the largest bow, but self-discipline had taught him how to bend it.—Daniel Webster.

DON'T EAT TOO MUCH. The celebrated Abernethy once remarked to a friend—"I tell you honestly what I think is the whole cause of the complicated maladies of the human frame; it is their gormandizing, and stuffing and stimulating the digestive organs to excess; thereby creating irritation. The state of our minds is another cause—the fretting and discontending themselves about what cannot be helped—passions of all kinds;—malignant passions, and worldly cares pressing on the mind, disturb the central action, and do a great deal of harm."

A German periodical says, that of twenty deaths of men between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five, one half originate in the waist of the constitution by smoking. The same periodical says, tobacco burns out the blood, the teeth, the eyes, the brains.—Uncle Toby

LADIES ON HORSEBACK.

Learning that our article on Saddle Horses, a few months ago, interested many, and was the occasion of benefiting several invalids, the writer will now present a few hints on female equestrianism.
As a mere accomplishment for young ladies, it ranks high. Perhaps in no place do female charms appear more fascinating, than in the saddle. You may think it is the jaunty cap and plume our Belle wears, or her flowing dress, or the fresh color which riding brings into her cheek, and the sparkle it gives her eye; you may say it is the spirited motion of her palfrey, or the contrast between his rugged strength and her delicate beauty.
Analyze it as you please, it will yet be confessed, (certainly by every young man open to conviction) that Belle never looks so charming as when on horseback. We have heard of more than one susceptible youth who has lost his peace of mind by witnessing such a sight. Indeed, to old or young, it is very pleasing. And then if to this sight you add several young ladies and gentlemen in different colored dresses, prancing along the highway together, you make a picture worth looking at.

The healthfulness of this exercise, few will question. It tends to give a young lady an erect posture; it strengthens her arms, chest and limbs; expands the lungs, gives tone to the stomach, and clearness to the brain. If the digestion is impaired, it will restore it much quicker and better than bran-bread. The fine effect it has upon the spirits is enough to recommend it. How much more enlivening it is than rolling luxuriously over a smooth road in a modern, spring-seated, close-covered, velvet-cushioned, carriage! Yet, many of our sighing young misses prefer the latter, 'tis so much more refined! They think their complexions of satin softness and lily whiteness, would suffer from the exposure of horseback riding! Did you but know it, young lady, nine out of ten young gentlemen would be more pleased with you, if your complexion had the healthier tinge that comes from vigorous exercise in the open air. Who has not known or heard of invalids so weak that they had, at first, to be lifted into the saddle, but who, by steadily pursuing horseback riding for a period of weeks and months, have recovered vigorous health? All of us have known invalids with pulmonary affections, who, having tried the prescriptions of doctors of every school in rain, and having traveled to the sunny South to little purpose, have at last resorted to the saddle, and gained therein more advantage than from all things beside. Many a lady needs outdoor exercise, but is too feeble to walk a great distance. Mount your horse, then, not your luxurious carriage. Mount your saddle, and you will find your weak back strengthened, your nerves braced, your head-ache dissipated, and every part of your system tuned and invigorated. Your horse will do the hard work for you, and yet give you all needful exercise. He will bear you over the hills and far away into the woods, to gather flowers and see the birds, and if you like, down yonder gorge to see a waterfall, and over the bridge to a certain farm house to visit some friend, and see her pleasant occupations. Wherever you will, you can ride, and then come home refreshed and inspired with new health. In England the ladies ride horseback more than in the Northern United States. It often forms a part of their education to learn to sit in the saddle gracefully, and to manage a horse with skill. In the Southern States of this country, it has long been a very common practice. The writer of these lines has often raced with Virginia lasses, leaping brooks and ditches, and low fences, side by side with them, and he confesses that he generally (gallantly?) come off second best in the contest—as in duty bound. We are happy to know that female equestrianism is becoming, of late, more popular among us. In many of our cities, riding schools have been established, and along our parks and broad thoroughfares, many a gay company of lady riders can be seen almost any fair day. So too in the country generally, there is an increasing fondness for this exercise.—American Agriculturist.

It is rumored that Madame Goldschmidt (Jenny Lind) will visit the United States next autumn.

FRENCH METHOD OF CULTIVATING THE TOMATO.

The best French gardeners are quite particular about topping their plants, so that as nice a balance may be maintained between fruit and leaves as in a peach tree. They are not satisfied with mere toppings as soon as there are plenty of flowers, and with pinching off laterals afterwards. Their method is this: As soon as a cluster of flowers is visible, they top the stem down to the cluster, so that the flower terminates the stem.
The effect is that sap is immediately impelled into the two buds next before the cluster, which push strongly, and presently produce another cluster of flowers each. The moment these are visible, the branch to which they also belong is also topped down to their level; and this is done five times successively. The effect is to form stout dwarf bushes, not above eighteen inches high. In order to prevent their falling over, sticks and strings are stretched horizontally along the rows, so as to keep the plants tolerably upright.
In addition to this, all laterals whatsoever are nipped off. In this way the ripe sap is directed into the fruit, which acquires a beauty, size and excellence unattainable by other means; and we are assured that fourteen pounds of ripe tomatoes per plant is no very unusual produce—even sixteen pounds being known.

The London Gardener's Chronicle remarks as follows upon the mode practised in France:

Whether or not this exact method is suited to our climate, (England) may be doubted; but the soundness of its principle is beyond dispute. Five successive toppings are more than our short summers will justify, except in very hot dry places. Three we should consider quite enough: for although the fourth and fifth toppings would doubtless increase the quantity of the fruit, yet there is little probability of such late fruit ripening well; and it must be safest to direct the energies of the plant to bear a smaller quantity, of the highest excellence that our soil and climate can secure, in a species which grows best in a country where the summer heat rises to 100 deg., and does not fall below 50 deg., and with a mean in the warmest month to 73 degrees.

INSECTS ON FRUIT TREES.

On looking over my apple trees to-day, in company with a friend from New-Bedford, I chanced to remark that it was a pity some sure and cheap preventive of the depredations of insects upon our fruit trees and of fruit could not be devised, that was capable of being applied by the least skillful operator. He surprised me by remarking that he was not sure but that had already been attained, and instantly an experiment of a man of his acquaintance that last season took a piece of light canvass, cut it in the form of a cone, tying the small end around the end of the trees, expanding the base with a hoop, and encasing it over with tar.
This made a bringing up place for all such insects as pass up the tree. They were found in large numbers in the folds of the canvass, and they and their larvæ were lost. A lady visiting in the neighborhood of this gentleman, stated that for two seasons past a man in the vicinity of Providence, R. I., scraped his trees clean of old bark and bugs, then tied cotton batting around the trunk, which has proved, for two years past, a complete barrier to their ascent into the tree. The insects become entangled in the cotton, deposit their larvæ there, and both die without hope or escape.
Incredibly numbers of them are found all through the loose batting.

Would it not be well for these simple reputed remedies to be tried very generally by all, on a few trees, even now, and report the result? The expense is a mere trifle, and the trouble small. Should success attend the experiment, the facts cannot be too widely known.

TO CURE SHEEP SKINS WITH THE WOOL ON.—Take one tablespoonful of alum, and two of salpêtre; pulverize well, and mix together thoroughly. Sprinkle this powder on the flesh side of the skin, and fold together with the wool out; hang up in a cool place. In two or three days, as soon as dry, take down and scrape the flesh with a blunt edged knife till clean.

To cure warts on cattle, dissolve potash to a paste and cover the wart with it for half an hour and then wash it off with vinegar.

News and State Items.

SINGULAR OMISSION.—The Kennebec Journal, in common with a good many people in this region, is astonished at the total omission of all mention of the important services of our Maine Cavalry in the official report of General Banks! Says the Journaler in a column:

That Gen. Banks who is a brave and skillful commander, made a faithful report of the facts as they came to him by his officers. We have no doubt. But there is a significant omission by somebody. Justice to the country, to the brave and gallant men who have been neglected, demands that the whole facts should be made public and prize awarded where it has been so dearly won, and the responsibility and blame of officers be correctly fixed. It becomes the public agents and the people of Maine to take proper care of the services and reputation of its heroic soldiers engaged in the service of the Republic. And for these reasons we ask what does it mean that the Maine Cavalry, who were so recklessly and unaccountably omitted from the report, are wholly ignored in Bank's report? Can Gen. Banks or any one else give us light on the subject?

The following characteristic Munchausenism is from a late Memphis paper, and is a wholesale unmitigated "whopper" if it is not a genuine fact. It is from the London Times. "We learn by a gentleman direct from Corinth, that a party of thirty-six of our troops while on a foraging expedition, were surrounded by four regiments of Hessians. Nothing intimidated by the great numerical superiority of the enemy, they throw down their muskets, and drew their bowie knives, dashed toward their barbarous foe, routing their way through, and leaping eight hundred and sixteen disemboweled carcasses on the field. Our loss was one man wounded."

THE ATTACK ON CHARLESTON.—The New York Evening Post, in an article on Charleston, concludes as follows:

When the place is taken—as taken it assuredly will be—we hope Gen. Anderson will be placed once more in command of Fort Sumter. There he will be the man chosen to run the American ensign on the very spot where it was lowered a year ago—and that the same flag which he brought away will be the one that is waved in triumph in its old place. It is enough to conquer the rebels of other States who have been forced or seduced into the rebellion, but to the conquest of the very beginners of it should be added some degree of moral humiliation.

THE WEATHER.—The hope that a favorable May would repair the damage to the agricultural interest of the North, west by the unusual wet and cold March and April, has been blasted by a third month even more unseasonable if anything than those which preceded it. Frequent rains and almost constant Northerly or Easterly winds have kept back vegetation, and farm work of all kinds, while fires have been innumerable nearly every day for the comfort of persons remaining in doors. A more propitious Spring has never visited this region, and cannot fail to have its influence on the summer and autumn harvest.

THE RANGOR COURIER learns from Governor Washburn, who returned home on Saturday evening, that the recruiting for the new (16th) regiment of Infantry is going on admirably in various parts of the State. Also that Brig. Gen. Caldwell is to be as city. These soldiers to the brigade of Gen. Howard, now at home wounded. Gen. H., we are happy to learn is recovering strength rapidly, and is anxious to return to the service of his country. His brother, Lt. Howard, is also doing well, but not recovering so rapidly as the general.

ST. JOHN'S DAY.—Tuesday the 24th inst. is the one hundredth anniversary of the introduction of Masonry into Maine, and the one hundredth anniversary of the Portland Lodge. The day is to be celebrated with great display by the members of the Masonic order. Members, encampments and Lodges from other States are expected to participate. The Grand Lodge of Massachusetts and De Molay Encampment of Night Templars of Boston, will arrive in a special train of cars on the 23d.—Christian Mirror.

GENERAL JAMESON.—We regret to learn of the serious illness of Gen. Jameson. Mrs. Jameson and her father passed through here today en route for Washington in answer to a telegraphic dispatch from that city to the effect that Gen. J. is dangerously ill and requires their immediate presence. His illness is said to have been contracted by exposure and severe duty.—Portland Courier of Tuesday.

ROBATA ON THE 4TH OF JULY.—The City Council last evening voted $500, additional for the purpose of celebrating the 4th of July plannage, by. This additional sum is for the purpose of giving a regatta on the Back Bay, in the afternoon of that day.

The several club of this city are requested to meet with the Committee of Arrangements, at the room of the Board of Aldermen, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.—Advertiser.

THE CAPE ANN ADVERTISER says two vessels arrived there last week, one with 120 blbls. mackerel, and the other with 120 blbls. mackerel. Most of the mackerel were caught within the last two weeks, and the prospect was considered very good. There is a demand for the new mackerel, and $6 per barrel has been offered, which holders decline.—Other vessels are daily expected.

Fun and Sentiment

WHAT WE SOW WE SHALL REAP.—There was once an old man whose eyes had become dim, his ears deaf. When he sat at the dinner table, he could hardly hold on to his spoon, so that sometimes he spill his soup on the cloth. His son and daughter-in-law were much displeased with this; at last they put him in a corner behind the stove, and gave him food in a little earthen pail. He never got as much as he could eat, and would often look towards the table with wet yet longing eyes.

One day his shaking hands let the little dish fall, and it was broken. The woman recoiled, but he said nothing; he only sighed. They brought a wooden trough for him. Once as he was sitting thus in the corner, his little grandchild, about four years old, was playing on the floor near him, with some pieces of wood.

"What are you making?" asked the father smiling.

"I am making a trough, answered the child, 'for father and mother to eat from when they are old and I am grown big.'"

The man and his wife looked at each other in silence. They brought their old father back to the table and gave him as much as he wished, and they never again spoke angry when his trembling hands spilt soup on the cloth."

— A schoolmaster in one of the neighboring towns, while on his morning's walk, passed by the door of a neighbor, who was excavating a log for a pig's trough. "Why," said the schoolmaster, "Mr. — have you not furniture enough yet?" "Yes," said the man, "enough for my own family, but I expect to board the master this winter, and am making preparations."

— Matthews, the comedian, stepped into an auction room on his way home. "Who bids more?" cried the auctioneer. "I bid more," cried a voice from the far end of the crowd.

"And pray, sir, what do you bid?" cried the auctioneer, in a tone of contempt.

"I bid you good night," said Matthews and left.

— A little boy, after being whipped for begging cents, promised never to do so again. The next day, he stopped a gentleman in the street and said to him, "I'm a poor boy, sir, and am ashamed to beg. Would you be so kind as to lend me a cent until I grow to be a man?"

— An Irishman in a time of revival joined the church, but was found sinning gravely not long afterwards. "Didn't you join the Methodist?" inquired a piously disposed person. "Faix and I did. I joined for six months and behaved as well that they let me off with three."

— It has been said that it is the man who makes the most that secures the attention of the world. A silent elephant may remain unobserved amid the foliage of the wood, but a croaking bullfrog will be sure to attract attention in the darkest night.

Coleridge says, "The happiness of life is made up of minute fractions, the little, soon-forgotten charities of a kiss or a smile, a kind look, a heart-felt compliment, and the countless infinitesimals of pleasurable thoughts and genial feeling."

— It is said that when a Frenchman has to wait he smokes; a German meditates; an Italian sleeps; an Englishman takes a walk; an American invents some new contrivance of the limbs, and tries to put his feet higher than ever.

— It is said of Channing as a credible thing that he never omitted a Sunday in writing to his mother, during his life. How nobly such a custom as this, if persisted in, must tell on the life of one adopting it.

— Brigham Young the Prophet, thinks that St. Paul in saying that a Bishop should be the husband of one wife, meant not to interdict him for having any more but that he should have one wife to begin with.

— A lady well advanced in maidenhood at her marriage, requested the choir to sing the hymn commencing

"This is the way I long have sought, And mourn because I found it not."

— A little fellow four years old, the other day nonplussed his mother by making the following inquiry: "Mother, if a man is Mister, isn't a woman a Mystery?"

Seize them on truth where'er 'tis found, Among your friends, among your foes;
On Christian, or on heathen ground,
The plants divide where'er it grows!
Neglect the pickles and assume the rose.
—Watts.

— We cannot conquer necessity, but we may yield to it in such a manner as to be greater than if we could.

— An ungrateful man is justly regarded as the common injurer of all those who stand in need of assistance.

U. S. MARSHAL'S OFFICE
New York, Nov. 6, 1861.

WM. GRAY, Esq. Dear Sir:—Two mo. ago my head was "dreadfully bald," and the little hair I had was all grey and falling out very fast, until I feared I should lose all. I commenced using your HAIR RESTORATIVE, and it immediately stopped the hair falling off, and soon restored the color, and after using two bottles my head is completely covered with a healthy growth of hair, and of the same color it was in early manhood. I take great pleasure in recommending your excellent Hair Restorative, and you may also refer any doubting person to me.

Warranted superior to any Pill before the public.

READ THE EVIDENCE.
Racine, Wis., Nov. 2, 1860.

To Dr. Herrick, Albany, N. Y.—Dear Sir: I cannot refrain from informing you of the wonderful effect of your Sugar Coated Pills on a boy living with me. While hard at work, drawing cord wood, he fell to the earth, as if in a fit, was insensible and partially cold. We carried him to the house, and sent for a doctor, who bled him and gave him some medicine. He remained all night in the same situation. The doctor said he would give up the case, but my wife insisted upon giving him some of your Pills. We administered four in five hours, and shortly after two more, rubbing him with hot brandy and mustard. The pills operated powerfully. At four o'clock in the afternoon he opened his eyes and spoke, commenced getting better, and three days went to work. More than fifty of our citizens saw the boy, and will testify to what I have said. You are a stranger to me, but I thought I would write.

Yours, ALEXANDER MORTON.

PRIVATE MEDICAL TREATIES

ON THE

Physiological View of Marriage.

250 PAGES and 130 ENGRAVINGS.—Price only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS. Sent free of postage to all parts of the Union. On the intricacies of youth and maturity, disclosing the secret furies of both sexes of all ages, causing debility, nervousness, depression of spirits, indigestion of the heart, suicidal imaginations, involuntary emissions, bluishings, defective memory, indigestion and lassitude, with confessions of thrilling interest of a boarding school Miss, a College Student, and a young married Lady, &c., &c. It is a faithful adviser to the married, those contemplating marriage, who entertain secret doubts of their physical condition, and who are conscious of having hazarded the health, happiness and privileges to which every human being is entitled.

Young Men who are troubled with weakness, generally caused by a bad habit in youth, the effects of which are dizziness, pains, forgetfulness, sometimes a ringing in the ears, weak eyes, weakness of the back and lower extremities, confusion of ideas, loss of memory, with melancholy may be cured by the author's NEW PARIS AND LONDON TREATISE.

We have recently devoted much of our time in VISITING THE EUROPEAN HOSPITALS, availing ourselves of the knowledge and researches of the most skilled Physicians and Surgeons in Europe and the Continent. Those who place themselves under heretofore, as a physician, in the possession of many NEW AND EFFICACIOUS REMEDIES which we are enabled to introduce to our practice, and the public may rest assured of the same zeal, assiduity, SECRECY and attention being paid to their cases, which has so successfully distinguished us, heretofore, as a physician in our PECULIAR department of professional Practice for the past twenty-five years.

FRENCH FEMALE PILLS. Ladies who wish for medicines, the efficacy of which has been tested in thousands of cases, and never failed to effect speedy cures without any bad results, will use none but Dr. DeLange's Female Periodical Pills. The only medicine necessary to be observed is, ladies should not take them if they have reason to believe they are in certain conditions (the particulars of which will be found on the wrapper accompanying each box,) though always safe and healthy, so gentle, yet so active are they.

Price $1 per box. They can be mailed to any part of the United States or Canada.

TO THE LADIES—Who need a confidential medical adviser with regard to any of those interesting complaints to their delicate organization renders them liable, are particularly invited to consult us.

The "Electro-Magnetic Protective" For married ladies whose health will not admit, or who have no desire to increase their families, may be obtained as above. It is a perfectly safe preventive to conception, and has been extensively used during the last twenty years. Price reduced to $10.

The Secrets of Youth Unveiled.

CAUTION.

As certain unprincipled persons are attempting to palm off on the unsuspecting public imitations of my PREPARED GLUE, I would caution all persons to examine before purchasing and see that the full name is—on the outside wrapper; all others are swindling counterfeits.

SPALDING'S PREPARED GLUE
