Original Poetry.

A Mountain Song.

Two years ago this summer day,
Where were you, 'neath the boundless blue?
Wandering up a flowery way
That were you with a heart all true!
Merrily, merrily flew the hours,
Beautiful, beautiful were the days,
And over your head in golden showers
Poured the sunlight down.

To-day you fit about the wood,
A careless bird, Minnie ha! ha!
And though you stand where once he stood,
You can laugh, Minnie ha! ha!
Say can you find within your soul
A depth where gladness doth not roll
A boundless sea, from pole to pole
Of all the inner world?

O, wonderful is the mountain air
With songs of wild birds near and far
No fearful thought or earthly care,
Can stay where nature's songsters are.
And the forest anthems swelling free,
From every heaven-aspiring tree,
When winds chant their varied lay,
Impell my life to song.

Our Story Teller.

The Two Quakers.

BY SOPHIE MAY.

'There now, thee shan't be abused,' said good James Eaton, as he rode slowly along the dusty road, stooping every now and then to pick a clinging fly off his sleek horse. 'There now, thee must keep thy temper, good beast, and I'll soon put these little fellows out of mischief.'

And tenderly he dropped the buzzing tormentors into his drab coat-pocket. 'Poor little creeter,' chuckled he, 'it's struggling agin the law! Them that disturbs the peace must go to jail!—Well for 'em if they don't fare worse and lose their heads!'

So saying the drab figure jogged peacefully along the highway toward friend Dean's yellow farm house, a man whose big swelling heart Strained the straight-breasted drab of his Quaker apron.

'Here comes friend Eaton,' cried several childish voices joyfully, as he rode leisurely up to the porch door.

'Why, how does thee do, Patience, and Solomon and Benjamin?' said the dear man heartily, while the little ones flew around their old friend, alighting upon him like a flock of birds.

'Is thy mother well and about the house? Really, children, thee must let me have a chance to hitch my horse.—And now I will release my prisoners,' added the old gentleman, opening wide his pocket and letting out scores of dizzy, crazy flies. 'There now, my poor little fellows, thee can get an honest living here, if thee's industrious.'

Little Benjamin and Patience laughed aloud at this, and seizing their tender-hearted old friend by the arms, led him into the back kitchen, where their mother was pulling worsted.

'Why, James, how dost thou do?' said the good woman, rising, 'I am right glad to see thee!'

And they shook hands heartily after the Quaker fashion, as if shaking hands were an honest pleasure, instead of being, as some polite people seem to regard it, a painful duty.

'Thee is as busy as ever,' said friend Eaton, pointing to the immense ball of worsted which lay on the floor beside his hostess.

'Busy? echoed Mary Dean, as she pulled off long flakes from the soft ball rolled them over her finger, and tossed them into the basket ready for spinning. 'Thee would think there was no time for idling, if the country called thy son to the war!'

And she looked at him, her fresh, matronly face glowing with suppressed feeling, her plain cap shaking a little at the borders.

'Mary!' exclaimed the good old man, opening his mild blue eyes as far as the lids would allow, 'thee don't mean to tell me that thee is going to send one of thy children to battle? To battle!'

'I do mean it, James,' answered she steadily, plucking with all her might at the worsteds.

The poor old gentleman fairly turned pale. 'Patience,' said he, 'won't thee fetch me a drink of water?'

With a skip and a bound the little damsel brought some water in a long-handled tin dipper.

'Thank thee, Patience,' said the Quaker, the ruddy color stealing back to his face. 'Now, Mary, I hope thee won't be offended if I ask thee a searching question? But before the question had formed itself into words, Mary Dean had arisen to perform one of her household duties. Seizing a towel she went quickly to the kitchen table, where on was spread a primitive fly trap, if being nothing else than a pool of delusive molasses.

'Here's a goodly lot of the little tormentors,' said she, making an onslaught upon them with her towel. Friend Eaton's soul was stirred within him.

'Mary, Mary,' said he in a pained tone, 'Consider what thee is doing!—Thee can't make a fly!'

'I know it,' said Mary, as she proceeded coolly with her savage work, 'and I'm sure I shouldn't want to.'

'Thee really hurts my feelings, Mary. Well, thee knows, James, I haven't thy patience. I desire to possess a meek and quiet spirit, but I tell thee I've no notion of being turned out of my own house by an army of flies!'

'Mary, Mary, it's no wonder thee has a heart to kill flies, when thee is lending a helping hand to kill thy fellow-creeters! If the means to send thy son along with the world's people to fight for—'

'Our country,' Mary threw the two words in with strong emphasis.

'Thee is taking a strange step for a friend! Has thee made this a subject of meditation? Does thee feel that thee has been instructed by the Inward Teacher?'

'James,' said Mary Dean, calmly, 'thou knowest little of the inward strife I have suffered. But I verily believe I have been led by the Spirit, and my mind is now centered down into quietness. The war is just, and Moses shall stand up for his country.'

Good James Eaton looked puzzled, but Mary, thee knows the Scriptures go agin fighting.'

'No, I don't know any such thing, James,' said Mary Dean, unpinning her checked kerchief in her warmth 'for didn't the Lord persecute Pharaoh till he let His people go? And when the Israelites had crossed the Red Sea, didn't they sing, 'The Lord is a man of war, the Lord his name? I do know that the South has her heart fully set within her to do evil, and I believe it is the will of the Lord that she shall be beaten with many stripes.'

'Mary, friend Mary, can it be that thee is harboring bitterness in thy heart against the people of thy own country? against the nation which the God of our fathers hath blessed?'

'My brethren have fallen,' exclaimed Mary. 'Righteousness exalteth a nation, but sin is a reproach to any people.'

'But Mary, Christ forbids thee to hold bitterness. If thy enemy smite thee—'

'Thou canst hardly tell me any new thing out of that Holy Book,' said Mary Dean quickly, 'but remember, James, we are to be aware of taking the Scripture too literally; it is the spirit that giveth life!'

'Mary, what does thee make of these words? 'Pray for them which despitefully use you!'

'James,' replied Mary Dean with a trembling voice, 'If thou dost think I have not the spirit of prayer thou misjudge me. While I am sewing and spinning for Moses, it is borne in upon me to pray for our misguided Southern brethren as I never prayed before.'

'I thank the Lord for thee,' said the Quaker wiping his eyes, 'but Mary, thee hasn't any children to spare; or has thee lost all a mother's feelings?'

Mary Dean arose nervously. 'Friend James,' said she, 'I have got a country; hast thou got one? I remember noble George Washington; dost thou remember him? Art thou willing to wipe out all he has done for us? Wilt thou put the necks of thy children under a yoke, and die, to have them curse thee?'

Patience and Benjamin looked at each other in dismay, wondering why the spirit should move their mother to preach in such a way to good friend Eaton. 'Or wilt thou help to loose the bands of wickedness?' continued the good woman, 'to undo the heavy burdens and let the oppressed go free? to break every yoke?'

'I don't know what to say to thee,' said friend Eaton, rubbing his hands together in a perplexed way. 'My heart is heavy within me when I think of the poor bondmen down South, but 'vengeance is mine, I will repay,' saith the Lord.'

'Thee is right, but 'he that justifieth the wicked is an abomination to the Lord,' think of that, James! an abomination to the Lord! Dostn't thee justify the wicked when thee folds thy hands and holds thy tongue?'

'O Mary, Mary, thee is rather hard on me!'

'I verily believe I am moved to speak friend James. Thee musn't think hard of me for saying those things that bear in upon my mind! I speak in love.'

'Speak on, Mary, I am in a state of preparation to hear thee.'

'Well James, don't thee remember this passage in Revelations, 'He that leadeth into captivity shall go into captivity; he that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword? How plain this is, James, so that a little child might understand it! And then it says: 'Here is the patience and faith of the saints.' Oh, James, we think we have patience and faith, we trust the Lord will let the poor black men out of the land of Egypt; but ain't we willing to help? Does thee think, James, our blood is richer and redder than the blood of the world's people? If it is, I tell thee we ought to shed it all the quicker! Let us make a Red Sea of it, and the Lord will make the sea dry land that the children of Israel may pass over to the promised land of Canaan!'

'Why Mary,' said James Eaton, rubbing his hands and looking at them, 'thee keeps pushing me into a corner! Verily and truly I don't know what to say to thee!'

'Thee needn't say anything,' replied Mary Dean calmly, 'the Lord has enlightened thee yet; but I will pray for thee that thy eyes may be opened.'

'Amen,' said the Quaker solemnly.

COURT LIFE AND THE PRINCE OF WALES.—Social life in England, or rather, court life, has received a powerful impetus by the advent of the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the world of fashion is rapidly reassuming the aspect it wore during the early years of the present reign. The obdurate retirement of the Queen contrasts strangely with the bustle and animation constantly prevailing in the court of the Prince of Wales. The young couple are out almost every night, at the opera or theatre, or honoring some distinguished members of the aristocracy with their presence at dinner. They mingle freely in all the gaieties of the town, and their faces are becoming quite familiar at all the usual haunts of people of quality. They appear to be winning for themselves 'golden opinions from all sorts of people,' and in case of anything occurring to the Queen, would unquestionably ride into power on the very topmost tide of popularity. The Prince does not by any means confine himself to the mere gaieties of life, but is to be seen at more important gatherings, attending the exhibitions at Eton, and other schools and colleges, anniversaries of agricultural and scientific societies, and, in short, seems to be pursuing about the same career that rendered his father so popular. He has begun life well. Let it be hoped that he will so continue to its close.

THE WONDERS OF QUACK MEDICINE.—'Which it's wonderful sir,' exclaimed Mrs. C., one morning, 'What them pills and ointment has done for the benefit of huming natur. I'm sure, there was my Sairey Jane's cousin, which he were not exactly a journeyman bricklayer, sir, but more what you terminate a jobbing bricklayer, as jobs about off and on at piecework, he fell off from a scuffle in the Boro' Road, and lay very dangerous at St. Thomas' Orspittle, and nothink in the world would have prevented a camera obscura from a settin' in (as he told me with his own lips, and he would make his affidavit of it any day of the week, 'cepting of the Sabbath, which he were religious, although a bricklayer,) but that there blessed ointment—or he might have gone about on wooden legs to his dying day. And as for the pills, sir, there's an aunt of mine down in Lincolnshire, who hadn't so much as an ounce of liver left, and used to go off in fits in a harm chair, and fancy that Nana Sahib was a tickling of the soles of her feet, to induce her to marry him, which bigamy it would have been, sir, in the eyes of justice, being her husband's lawful wife, let lone the disgrace of going to church with such a wagabone; and after a box of them pills which, as the advertisement says is for scrofuly pains in the back, dislike to society, chilblains, and inwarranty blushing is a certain remedy; she righted herself quite convalescent as you may say, sir, and sent a testimonium to the professor that I see printed with mine own eyes in the Weekly Register, which its a most respectable journal, sir, and took in by most of the nobility and gentry, on account of its moral tone. And what I say is sir, and I'm sure if I intrude on your time—which precious it is I know, to most littery gents—I beg you to excuse, and not mention of it—what I say that it's a sin and a shame to make knights and baronknights of indywidles now a days for what you may call nothink, and keep Professor Gullaway out of the peerage, which in the peerage he ought to be for all the good he's done in the middle line or my name's not Betsy Croker.'—Apartment to Let, in London Society Magazine.

DRAFTING.—The Scripture is opposed to drafting young men just married.—'When a man hath taken a new wife he shall not go to war, neither shall he be charged with any new business; but he shall be free at home one year, and cheer up the wife which he has taken.' Deut., 24th chap., 5th verse.

If a law to that effect was passed, what a land of weddings we should have and how the old maids would rejoice.

—The following curious specimen of elegant verse, of the date of 1801, is copied from a grave stone standing in the cemetery at Springfield:

'My days are run, my work is done,
My resting place is here;
This stone was got, to mark the spot,
Lest some should dig too near.'

—'Going, going, just a-going!' cried out an auctioneer. 'Where are you going?' asked a passer-by. 'Well,' replied the knight of the hammer, 'I'm going to the Zoological Gardens to tell the managers one of their baboons is loose.'

—The first thunder shower of the season was accompanied by lightning,

THE CAUSE OF INFERIOR STOCK.

Some farmers sell or slaughter their best stock of mares, cows, ewes or sows, and thus cut off all hope of any improvement at one blow. Does a heifer show a disposition to fatten easily? She is encouraged to feed until fat, and she is then sold and eaten, while her fellows, who belong to the same breed with Pharaoh's lean kine, are kept for milk or rearing calves, because they are not and cannot be made fat for the butcher.

Has a farmer a sow pig which becomes fat upon the feed on which the rest of his pigs are starving? He gives her over to the butcher's knife and propagates from 'land shads' and corn cribs.

Has he a fine, round, bright-eyed ewe? She will be fat about the time his half-filled pork barrels are empty and she is stripped of her fair skin and fair proportions simply because she is worth the trouble of killing; and thus many of our farmers perpetuate a breed of animals that are a disgrace to the country. They seem uneasy while they possess an animal that will draw the attention of the neighbors or the butchers, and woe be to it if it puts on a better appearance than its fellows, for from that time its doom is sealed.

To improve the breed of animals it is by no means necessary to incur a great expense in bringing animals from a distance. If a farmer will mount his horse and ride across the country some fine day, and view the live stock of his neighbors, he will soon perceive that there are abundant means of bettering his circumstances by a cross or exchange, at a slight cost, and he by this plan is improving his judgment by comparison and hoarding up experience for a future day that will be of more value to him than the expense of many such excursions; and improvement once begun and persisted in for a short time, will produce such a corresponding improvement in the mind and circumstances of the farmer as will ensure its continuation, and richly reward all his labor and outlay.

Many of our farmers destroy the hope of improving their stock by a system of false economy in the selection of the males from which they breed their stock; many do not keep a male from which to breed their horses or horned stock, nor is it necessary as one will do for a neighbor's herd! but this one should be the best; and in order to keep a good one, a good price must and should be charged for his services.

Many farmers lose thirty and even fifty dollars in the value of a full grown horse, steer, ox or cow, by a system of false economy,—by not being willing to pay two or three dollars more for the services of a male.

I have repeatedly driven my cows three miles to a good male, at a cost of four or five dollars, when I could have found a male on my neighbor's farm at the cost of twenty-five cents.

About three weeks ago I sold a five year old colt for one hundred and eighty dollars, when colts of the same age could be bought for from one hundred and forty to one hundred and fifty, and could only attribute the extra price to the additional expense of five dollars in the choice of a male.—Germantown Telegraph.

Hay.—Cut when it contains the most nourishment. Secure all under cover when practicable. If stacks must be made, keep them from the ground by laying upon timber and rails, and erect temporary movable roofs, or thatch with straw. Better stack grain than hay, if there be sheds for only one.

Hedge Rows, and scattered bushes may be subdued by repeated cuttings in hot weather. Allow none to disfigure the farm and give shelter to weeds, mice, and other nuisances.

FRIENDS AND RELATIVES

Fun and Sentiment.

— From one of the hospitals we get this characteristic incident:—An Irish soldier had died, and left behind him at home an affectionate father and a faithful wife to weep over the news of his death and to mourn his loss. The usual letter was written by the nurse who had charge of the ward he died in, stating the fact of his death, and asking their pleasure as to his effects and remains. In due time the answer came, and ran something like this:—His dues from Government (about six dollars) were to be carefully forwarded; but owing to the expense, they had concluded not to send for his body, but had "dacently waked his clothes!"

— The Abbe Caselli is stated by the French papers to have invented an apparatus by which colors, sounds, and fac-similes of drawings can be transmitted by telegraph. The Empress by its agency sent her portrait to a friend. Rossini telegraphed a melody, and the Abbe himself sent a colored picture of a rose from the Paris Observatory to the Telegraph Administration office.—The story seems hardly credible, but it is told by the papers with apparent sincerity—in fact the influence of electricity over color and sound render it unsafe to be sceptical as to the Abbe's invention.

— During a musical festival at Hamburg, a musician from another city boarded in a private house where an uncommonly good table was kept. One day, when all the family were assembled for dinner, the stranger was absent. The house maid, who was sent to call him, found him occupied at his toilet, he being at that moment engaged in using his tooth brush. "Well is he coming?" said the lady of the house, as the servant returned. "Yes ma'am, directly," was the reply, "he's just sharpening his teeth."

— A Western editor, who hasn't a wife to take care of him, went the other night to a ladies' fair. He says that he saw there "an article" which he fain would call his own, but it was not for sale. He declares that since that night he has been "rapturously wretched."—As the article was bound in hoops, the reader is left to infer that it was either a girl or a keg of whiskey.

— When—, of the — delegation in Congress, deserted his friends and joined the "enemy," his demeanor toward his colleagues was particularly gruff and surly. Said one of these to another, "our colleague —, since he has turned 'peace man,' goes the whole hog." "Yes," replied the other, "and acts the hog he goes."

PRODIGAL.—"Come home my son," said a parent to one who had been from home for some time; "come home, and your mother will kill the fatted calf for you." "Tell her not to do it, father," replied the offspring, "for I've lived on real ever since I've been here. Tell her to kill a quarter of a pig instead."

VERY GOOD.—"A person," says the Paris Sport, "who looks at the world in somewhat gloomy colors, recently complained, in M. Auber's presence, how hard it was that people must grow old. 'Hard as it is,' replied the veteran composer, 'it seems to be the only means yet discovered of enjoying long life.'"

— A clergyman being much pressed by a lady of his acquaintance to preach a sermon the first Sunday after her marriage, complied, and chose the following passage in the Psalms for his text: "And there shall be abundance of peace—while the moon endureth."

— "Why, Sambo, how black you are!" said a gentleman, the other day to a negro waiter at a hotel: "how in the world did you get so black?" "Why look a here, massa, the reason am dis—de day dis chile was born there was an eclipse."

— Sidney Smith on 'good intentions': "Good intentions! my dear sir—good intentions! Believe me, my dear sir, a Bengal tiger, with his tail up, is not half so dangerous as a genuine fool with good intentions!"

— Leigh Hunt was asked by a lady at dessert, if he would not venture on an orange—"Madam," he replied, "I should be happy to do so; but I am afraid I should tumble off."

Young men fail not to send and get this book.

A Word of Solemn Conventions Adverts to those who will reflect.

A class of maladies prevail to a fearful extent in our community, and at least 100,000 youth of both sexes annually to an early grave. Those diseases are very imperfectly understood. Their external manifestations or symptoms are Nervous Debility, Relaxation, and Exhaustion; Marasmus or wasting and consumption of the tissue of the whole body, shortness of breathing or hurried breathing on ascending a hill or a flight of stairs, great palpitation of the heart, Asthma, Bronchitis and sore Throat; shaking of the hands and limbs; aversion to society and to business or study; dimness of Eyesight; loss of Memory; dizziness of the head; Neuralgic Pains in various parts of the body; Pains in the Back or Limbs; Lumbago, Diarrhea or Indigestion; irregularity of the Bowels; deranged sections of Kidneys and other glands of the body, as Leucorrhoea or Fleur Allure, &c.; likewise Epilepsy, Hysteria, and Nervous Spasm.

Now, in ninety nine cases out of every one hundred all the above named disorders, and a host of others not named, as consumption of the Lungs, and the most insidious and wily form of Consumption of the Spine, Nerves, known as Tubercles Dorsales, and Tubercles miltaires. Hence the want of success on the part of old school practice in treating symptoms only.

Dr. Andrew Stone, Physician to the Troy Lung and Hygienic Institute, is now engaged in treating this class of modern maladies with the most astonishing success.

The treatment adopted by the institution is new, it is based upon scientific principles, with new discovered remedies, without narcotics or poisons. The facilities of cure are such that patients can be cured at their homes, in any part of the country from accurate description of their case, by letter, and have the medicines sent them by mail express. Printed interrogatories will be forwarded on application.

Consumption, Catarrh, and diseases of the Throat cured as well at the homes of patients as at the Institution by sending the Cold Medicated Inhalant, Balsamic Vapors, with inhaler and ample directions for their use, and direct correspondence.

Patients applying for interrogatories or advice must enclose return stamps to meet attention.

The attending physician will be found at the institution for consultation from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. of each day. Sundays in the forenoon.
