"SECURE I REST UPON THE WAVE."

BY PORTIA

He had always wanted to be a sailor, and when sea fever is in your blood, it is incurable save by one remedy,—the sea. His father had been the captain of a large fishing boat and had been lost at sea when Joe was about four. He and his mother continued living in the Massachusetts coast-town and they both loved the ocean in spite of all that had happened. The mother, in fact, felt she would have betrayed her husband, if she had been false to the water he loved so dearly. Joe revelled in tales of adventure and the sea. "Robinson Crusoe" was his first love. Then he advanced to "Swiss Family Robinson," he owned a fat old fashioned copy of this,—which had been his grandpa's—and he read it threadbare. After that he graduated into Conrad's sea tales, the great sea tales of literature. He loved sea songs and his boyish soprano developed into a glorious tenor, in which he sang "Nancy Lee", "Starboard Watch" and "I Must Down To the Seas Again", never quite forgiving nature, heredity, or fate, or whatever it was, because he had not a deep bass and so could not effectively sing "Rocked In The Cradle of The Deep". One other song he greatly loved also, "Mother O'Mine," especially the second stanza:

"If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother O'Mine,
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother O'Mine."

So, of course, the inevitable happened when the war came and in a comparatively short time, Joseph Lambert was Ensign Joseph Lambert, and employed in Uncle Sam's Navy, and singing still "Anchors Away."

His mother was alone, she was not in need, nor was she ill, but she was terribly lonely. She did Red Cross work, and belonged to the Navy Mothers, and took a home nursing course, and was an air-raid warden, and worked at the telephone office as a spare hand, but even then she felt so alone. She and Joe had been not only mother and son, but, what is all too rare, intimate friends. The house spoke of him at every turn, his set of Conrad, his models of all sorts of boats, his cherished pictures of the sea, of noted admirals and well known vessels, his wax figure of a ship under a glass globe,—a gift of old Captain Nickerson,—and his partly built boat, oars and sail rigging in the shed. Once in a while Mirabel Lee called timidly. She was the nearest to a rival Margaret Lambert had ever had in Joe's affections. Joe always said that he had only two sweet-hearts, his mother and the ocean, but he did like Mirabel. Once she brought a letter from him and naively offered it to his mother to read. It was a nice friendly letter, but a trifle more intimate than usual. Mrs. Lambert asked her to dinner and Mirabel stayed, they ate salmon loaf, peas and French fried potatoes together, and Mirabel wiped the dishes. Margaret Lambert sat a long time with Joe's picture before her afterwards, and then twisted her own wedding-ring about her finger absent-mindedly.

Letters came for awhile fairly often, then less frequently, then not at all. One day Margaret received what she had been reluctantly expecting. "We regret to inform you that your son, Ensign Joseph Charles Lambert, is missing in action." Mirabel came over and sat silently beside Margaret, the tears running down her pale little face. Margaret who was holding an old toy compass of Joe's spoke finally. "He is not dead, I am sure, he is just 'Rocked in the cradle of the deep.'" (CON'D. NEXT PAGE)

Remember how he used to want a bass voice instead of a tenor, so he could sing that? 'Secure I rest upon the wave.' That's where he is somewhere on the wave, that's where he is, he'll come back." She laid the compass down, but Mirabel was a bit terrified and said "Lie down, Mrs. Lambert, I'm going to make you some tea." Wondering at her own boldness, she did just that, going out in the kitchen. She nearly got sidetracked when, in taking down a cup and saucer, she came upon a silver mug inscribed—"To Joseph from Grandma."

On a rubber raft, wet, hungry, cold, four lads from the sunken torpedoed vessel had been drifting for days. Ensign Joe was speaking: "I do wish the boat that's going to pick us up would hurry, rations are short, but she'll find us." "Say," said seaman second class Bates, "how do you know anyone'll ever find us? What makes you so all-fired sure we aint all agoin' go Davy Jones' Locker, hey lad?" What did they hear, the young officer was surely singing again, he had once or twice before.

"Secure I rest upon the wave
For Thou alone hast power to save."

"Say, do you feel all right," yelled Bates, and looking at the others, he said, under his breath, "Some times I think he's goin' nuts." "Sure I feel well, that is, as well as I could on half a slice of a hard loaf of bread. I always loved that 'Rocked In The Cradle of The Deep,' it's my song, even if I am a tenor and can't sing that last note as it should be, but God's going to hear me just as the song says—

I know Thou wilt not slight my call,

For Thou dost mark the sparrow's fall? You know, fellers, the Bible says we're more value than many sparrows, Yes sir, a boat's going to find us." "Well," said Bates, while the others looked a bit fearfully at Joe, "I'm sure I hope you're right, Ensign!"

At home Margaret was sick. She wouldn't admit it for a long while, but she collapsed at Red Cross and was put to bed, and Mirabel, who had taken a nurse's aid course, never left her. She was simply what we Americans call "all in." Not for one moment, however, would she accept her telegram as final. One day Mirabel heard her singing softly,

"If I were drowned in the deepest sea,
Mother O'Mine,
I know whose tears would come down to me,
Mother O'Mine!"

Mirabel fled to the kitchen and sobbed bitterly over the lunch she was getting for her friend: "My tears would go down too," she sobbed "mine too, Joe." When she went back Margaret was saying over and over "Thou alone hast power Thou alone."

She was very weak next day. The doctor was giving Mirabel some special instructions. It was many many weeks since the missing-in-action telegram. That day Mirabel felt she herself couldn't go on much longer, but suddenly, as the doctor went out, a slim lad in the Navy uniform came up the steps, pushed open the door and cried "Mother, Mother!"

It had all come true. "I sent word as soon as I could," Joe said, "but I got here before it after all. O Mother you're going to be all right again before long. O Mother, I did rest securely on the wave, your tears and prayers were always with me." Quietly they held each other's hands a long long time. "The other guys are all right too. I'll tell you the whole yarn later, just how the Canadian boat saw us and all. Say, I guess I'll go in the kitchen and see Mirabel a minute." "Yes, do," said Margaret, "she has been like a daughter to me Joe."

Over a kettle of steaming chicken soup, Mirabel was thinking unutterable things. "Mirabel" said Joe "you-er-er-you wouldn't give a fellow a kiss would you O Mirabel!" "Would I," said the girl "Would I? Just try me! I prayed too Joe."

I overtake Rev. Thompson on the way for his morning mail—Fogg & Clifford's windows appear attractive and I cross over. Looking in, I notice Forrest Fogg busy with a salesman, and Fred Clifford is behind a counter, re-arranging some fishing tackle—big George Smart drives the Railway Express wagon into the yard next door. Outwardly the building looks about the same as when Fred Peasley occupied it except for the new kitty corner entrance.

I cross over to Gonya's for a newspaper and when I turn to leave Harry very deftly trips my right foot over in back of my left—as I nearly sprawl on the floor, Bob Emerson laughs and holds me up. It reminds me of a similar incident when Bill Heebner owned the store and some chap tried the same stunt on Al Glover—only Al's leg was too big to be pushed readily.

An errand upstairs and I pass Sidney Stevens in the hallway—notice that Dr. Young is occupying Dr. London's old offices, and that Dr. MacKay is still at the same old stand. Our town fathers, George Stearns, Harry Walls and Frank Daisey, have just concluded a meeting and are listening while Bill Marden explains what happened to a "scoundrel" who had appeared in court this morning.

I start upstreet—J.A. Gonya is sitting on his store steps, contentedly smoking his short cigar while he watches Oville attach plates to a new Buick—Duffey is in a window, arranging a display of new summer merchandise. A car goes by with Junior Bradley driving—he is a senior at Maine and must be home for the week end.

I stroll along—Gil Moran is in front of his store discussing the Sourdnhunk Road with Bill O'Connell. I drop in at Bill Jewers' for cigarettes—business is slack for the moment and Bill and Welse Clark are deeply engrossed in a close game of cribbage—Percy Trott is standing by, leisurely honing a razor while acting as unofficial referee. I help myself to cigarettes and leave the correct change on the table so as not to disturb the players.

On the street again—I pass Mrs Hobbs' Candy Store, and wonder where George Morris might be—attractive entrance to the Millinocket Press—seems I heard that Frank Speed built the building and sold it to the Legion. Carl Whalen has gone and Carl Stockwell is running the drug store. Signs indicate that Dr. Grunley, Dr. Brown and Dr. Charles Sleight have offices upstairs. Is that the building where Fling's used to be, or was it back in the Doctor's Block? I stop to look over the Millinocket Fruit Company—Dave Drago is more or less a newcomer in town—I recall Harry Theall and his studio—Runt Thornton and his Army-Navy store.

I pass Smart's and Alec is trying to extricate himself from behind the wheel of a "Big Six Studey"—it certainly is a fine-looking car—Bill Seaver gets out from the opposite side and apparently Alec has made a sale.

I stop to look at some watches in "Cy" Boynton's window, and then, as Frank Rush's door is open, I drop in for a minute. Oscar is busy filling out a fishing license, and Frank is tilted back in his chair, listening while Isaac Cyr and some others recall events which took place in the old saw mill.

I saunter along—Christie's Fish Market looks nice with the black and white shelves—Mike Smart's Grocery seems busy but the bakery side does not show the activity formally occasioned by a batch of Bill Glann's bread. Harry Rush is standing in front of his store, with a friendly greeting.

I walk along—Johnnie Simon, Duke Dumas, Rex McNamee, Roddy Myshrell and some other youngsters, are playing with a football in back of Munson's. Mrs. Simon's store looks about the same—George finishes law school this year. Charlie McAvey's appears a bit on the down grade. I cross over to get a better look at a big pile of cord wood. Allen Tibbetts has stacked up along the side of his building. Wes Whittier is taking the day's run of movies into the Opera House, while "C.J." holds the door for him and scrutinizes the tins.

I move along and pass Cummings' and notice Pete's friendly face through the glass. Simon Weinstien is explaining something to Frank LePage and Ed Gillis is crossing over to his little store on Pine Street. Charlie Bishop hollers "Hello" through the open doorway at Rush's Hardware. I walk on—wonder the town doesn't build a sidewalk on this side of the street. I stop to read a sign on the door of Jones Brothers Insurance Agency—"Back in half an hour" M. Liss comes out of his store, buttoning his brown sweater, with Mrs. Liss

Section 4, of Chapter 40, Private and Special Laws of 1943, reads as follows:

"All provisions of the absent voting law as set forth in chapter 9 of the revised statutes and acts additional thereto and amendatory thereof, which provide for absent voting at city, primary, state, and presidential elections, shall be so construed as to apply at annual elections held in the town of Millinocket to elect town officers as herein provided, and to special elections held to fill vacancies in any elective office in said town. It shall be the duty of the town clerk to prepare absent voting ballots at least 25 days prior to the day of election and all other forms necessary to carry the provisions of the absent voting law into effect."

In other words, if you are planning to be out of town on town meeting day, or if you are physically incapacitated, you may apply to the town clerk as early as 25 days prior to town meeting, obtain an absent ballot and vote. The procedure is the same as if you were voting by absent ballot in a state election. In order to give the voters ample time in which to obtain absent ballots, section 1 provides that all nominations must be filed at least 30 days previous to the day of town meeting.

Chapter 9, section 5, R.S. of 1930 provides in part: "The clerk shall keep lists of the names and addresses, arranged by voting precincts, of all voters filing applications for absent ballots, and shall post copies of said lists for public inspection at each polling place." In other words, on town meeting day, the town clerk will post a list of all who have applied for absent voting ballots. You may examine that list and if you find a name that you do not believe should be there, then under the provisions of section 10 of the same chapter, you may challenge that ballot at the proper time.

SCHENCK HIGH NEWS

BY BARBARA BACON
& EDDIE AMES

Last Tuesday six officers from the Houlton Army Air Base visited the school to talk to the older boys about joining the Army Air Corps Cadets. The speakers were Captain Miller, Captain Moorehouse and Lieutenant Hatfield.

Tests were given by the officers Wendell Thrush, a senior, passed these tests, and went to Houlton Saturday to complete the final papers. The boys who are seventeen years old and who passed the tests will be allowed to finish the school year. They will not be called until they are eighteen years of age.

Doctor Milton Proctor of Westbrook Junior College, Portland, spoke to the Senior girls last week. He explained what a Junior College was and discussed the various courses which are offered at the institution.

An assembly was conducted Thursday afternoon by the Student Council. Evelyn Kimball, the treasurer of the school, gave a brief outline of the financial status of the school, and Elizabeth Spearrin, secretary of the school, gave a brief speech on the activities which have taken place during the year.

The treasurers from the four upper classes also gave a brief outline of the financial status of their class. The treasurer of the Freshman Class is Gloria Bacon; Sophomore Class, Earl Murry; Junior Class, Hilda Robertson and the Senior Class, Gloria MacKenzie.

During the Assembly, which was presided over by Armond Gaetani, president of the Student Council, it was decided to form an Athletic Association. All members of the student body are permitted to join this organization, with those participating in athletics particularly urged to do so. The aims and purpose of the association were outlined by Mr. Mercier.

It was also announced that Season tickets for athletic events would be available this year. The combination price of season ticket and membership in the Athletic Association will be one dollar.

The Problems of Democracy Class will draw up a constitution for this organization, stating its powers and obligations.

The Freshman Class sponsored a Halloween dance Friday night. The decoration and invitation committees consisted of John Casey, Helen Dentrement, Ross Waite, Gloria Bacon, and June Coffin. The advertising committee was composed of Leslie Lapham, Helen Ambrose and James Michaud.

The committee in charge of entertainment arranged a very successful program. Mrs. Woodrow Mercier, wife of the Freshman Class advisor, was vocal soloist. Rosemarie Gonya presented a piano selection. Reginald and Gerald Brewer also sang, accompanied by Roland Wilson with his guitar.

Last week the boys had only one game because of the tests scheduled during the week. The game that was played was between the Juniors and Seniors at 8:00 on Tuesday evening. The Juniors again defeated the Seniors with a narrow margin and that puts the Juniors way out ahead, having been beaten only once this season. This only defeat was suffered at the hands of the Seniors earlier this fall.

Miss Gillis has chosen her "A" squad. They are Helen Ambrose, Anna Curley, Jean Curley, Audrey Day, Helen Dentrement, Josephine Doe, Jean Hackett, Betty Johnson, Emma Maio, Marguerite Maio, Mary LeVasseur, Elaine McLaughlin, Priscilla Morin, Doris Willette. This squad played the preliminary game on Tuesday night.

On Tuesday, November 9, at 7:30, there will be a basketball game between the girls' "A" squad and the teachers. There will be three men and three women on the teachers' team. From the looks of the teams this promises to be a very exciting game. The admission fee has not yet been decided.

SEVENTY TWO BOYS REPORT FOR BASKETBALL—SQUAD CUT TO FIFTEEN

The largest turnout in the history of Stearns Basketball answered Coach Crowley's initial call for hoop candidates last Monday with no less than 72 youngsters of assorted shapes and sizes packing the gym. Crowley was taken somewhat aback by the huge response, but it took him only one practice to cut the squad to 33, and a week to cut it again to a workable 15. These elite 15, not yet named as this is written, will comprise the Varsity and Jayvees, eight for the former and seven for the latter. Another ten or twelve boys will make up a Jayvee B team, which will scrimmage with the Jayvee first team when the varsity is out of town, and may also have a short schedule of their own.

Crowley could do little coaching with the too large squad, but he will start in earnest this week with the fifteen boys who have survived the axe.

Our football predictions have been hovering about the .800 mark all season, and we'll keep our percentage up there by picking for Sat., Nov. 13: Army over Virginia, Brown over the Coast Guard, Bucknell over Case, California over Cornell, Duke over Wake Forest, Georgia over U.M.S., Indiana over Grant Lakes, Iowa P.F. over Camp Grant, Michigan over Wisconsin, Minnesota over Iowa, Missouri over Oklahoma, Pitt over Nebraska, Notre Dame over Northwestern, Ohio St. over Illinois, Texas A. & M. over Rice, Colgate over Syracuse, Texas over T.C.U., Ga. Tech. over Tulane So. Cal. over Stanford, Yale over Princeton.

Sunday: Stogles over Dodgers, Bears over Giants, Green Bay over Cards, Redskins over Lions.

Judge F. E. Doyle left Sunday for Boston where he will undergo a physical checkup at a Boston hospital.
