Summer Traditions and Patriotic Legacies

by Esther J. Perne

Where water, woods and close communities are the fabric of the region; where outdoor recreation, appreciation of nature and a relaxed pace are the lifestyle of the summer; where independence, survival and self sufficiency drive local lifestyles, the 4th of July, the traditions of the day and the rewards of the long holiday weekend are the high point and the best part of summer.

Flags and music, parades and picnics, food, fun and family togetherness and all the rites of celebration will be widely available this July 4 in central Maine. These celebrations are family-oriented events, wholesome, safe, good fun, and a short destination drive. Most of the programs include children's activities and contests. The locations are near waterways, rivers, streams or lakes - reminders of the reasons to celebrate independence in this beautiful part of the world and reminders that it's possible to attend a 4th of July celebration and enjoy the recreation of the region, too.

And, for a finale, there will be fireworks. In 1776, early in the Revolutionary War, the United States declared its independence from England and celebrated with fireworks. The tradition continues...a celebration of independence, and a celebration of summer.

Flutist, Emi Ferguson

On Sunday, July 3rd at 7:30pm five award winning and internationally celebrated classical musicians will present an exciting concert of classical and pop music in the Mount Vernon Community Center on Minnehonk Lake in Mt. Vernon.

Flutist, Emi Ferguson has performed as concerto soloist in concerts and festivals around the world and was a featured performer alongside Yo-Yo Ma, Paul Simon, and James Taylor at the 10th Anniversary Memorial Ceremony of 9/11 at Ground Zero, where her performance of Amazing Grace was televised worldwide. Violinist Charles Yang has been described by the Boston Globe as one who "plays classical violin with the charisma of a rock star." Yang has performed as a soloist with prominent orchestras at Carnegie Hall and Lincoln Center's Metropolitan Opera House, as well as being featured in Nick Romeo's new book, Driven and on Discovery Channel's Curiosity. Vocalist Kara Dugan has been praised by the New York Times for her "vocal warmth and rich character and has performed in recitals and summer festivals nation wide and most recently with the New World Symphony premiering Four Preludes on Playthings of the Wind, composed and conducted by Michael Tilson Thomas. Pianist Peter Dugan was hailed "a formidable soloist" by the Washington Post after his Kennedy Center debut last season with baritone John Brancy. Equally at home in classical, jazz, and pop idioms, Dugan has appeared as a soloist throughout the United States and abroad including performances in Carnegie Hall, NY and the Wiener Konzerthaus in Vienna. Pianist Katherine Liu is a fifth grader living in Wellesley, Massachusetts. She started her musical journey at the age of 3 and in 2014 was the first place winner of both the Steinway Piano Competition and the Bay State Piano Competition.

Alex Katz's "Ada Vane" Installed at Colby College

The latest in a series of important acquisitions for the Colby College Museum of Art is the installation of a 12.3-foot-tall steel wind vane with a dramatic female portrait.

The 2016 sculpture by Alex Katz - informally called the "Ada Vane" because it depicts the artist's wife, Ada, his muse of many decades - joins a series of outdoor art encircling the museum. Its location complements Sol LeWitt's concrete "Seven Walls" (2002) situated on the grassy slope nearby.

The Katz wind vane, made of porcelain-coated steel with a powder-coated base, is on the southeastern lawn of the museum along Mayflower Hill Drive. It is one in a series of six wind vanes by Katz, another of which will be installed in London's Hyde Park this summer in conjunction with Katz's exhibition at the Serpentine Galleries.

The museum's commitment to Katz's work is central to its mission. Most recently, in 2015, the museum presented "Brand New and Terrific: Alex Katz in the 1950s," a survey of the artist's early work. The exhibition will travel to the Cleveland Museum of Art in April 2017.

The "Ada Vane" is the most recent important gift. This spring the museum received 100 Pablo Picasso etchings known as the Vollard Suite, about half of which are currently on view.

Founded in 1959, the Colby College Museum of Art comprises five wings, more than 38,000 square feet and more than 8,000 works of art. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday, 10 am-5 pm and Sunday noon-5 pm. Admission is free. For information visit colby.edu/museum or call 859-5600.

Memories of The Old Belgrade Lakes Library

by Rod Johnson

The quaint little library that you see in the photo once was alive and well right in the middle of Belgrade Lakes village. Sadly, it no longer exists and this is the true story of its demise. My parent's house was ten feet or so to the south with barely enough space to drive an auto between the two. My friends and I played around the building from the early 1950's, though it remained locked and we were not allowed inside. Peeking in the windows was common of course and the building was totally intact and still had a few books on the shelves. The straight back oak chairs and a library type desk or two were in perfect order. To my knowledge and memory the library was never operated during that era and had essentially been abandoned. This is only a guess, but I imagine it was only ever used in the summer months, though I do recall a small wood or coal stove and a fieldstone hearth and chimney.

As the years went by the building showed more and more lack of maintenance. During the 1960's I recall the roof had started to leak and water puddles could be seen through the windows accumulating on the floor. When I came home from my service time in 1971, my wife and I bought the house on the north side of the library property. My mother was still living in the house on the south side. It was clear that the building was an eyesore and the idea came to either fix it and make it usable or tear it down if we could. After inquiring at the selectmen's office as to the ownership, we were told that the property and building were donated by the Hersom sisters (founders of the Camp Abena girls camp), I do not know when. The women had stated in the deed that the property would revert to them or their heirs should the library cease operating. The selectmen decided to begin taxing the property so they could take ownership and then dispose of it. A tax was levied on the property that year to the Hersom heirs but none was found, so the tax was left unpaid. The town took the property and claimed it a liability. At town meeting in 1972 or 1973, I offered to purchase the property for the back taxes of $26 (yes, twenty six dollars). The voters agreed, with the stipulation that the building be torn down and the small lot of 40' x 60' be attached to my lot. Over the next few months my friends and I tore it down piece by piece and burned it in a bonfire right on site. The only known pieces that were saved are the two white pillars and they can be easily seen on the house owned by Jan Partridge just south of Day's store. I still have 2 of the oak chairs. We asked the Colby College library department to come see if any of the remaining books were special in any way. They found and took a few Maine authors but found that silverfish were in some of the books and couldn't risk contaminating another library.

The current group called Friends of The Belgrade Library are working on recording any information that can be collected about this library and also a precursor to this that was located in a private home of a Damren family member. If anyone has any remembrances, photos or written documents concerning this piece of our Belgrade history please contact my sister-in-law, Friends member Judy Johnson at 495-2101, or Linda McLoon of the Belgrade Historical Society. Thanks, TLB

Another Great Week in Paradise

by Pete Kallin

Another great week in paradise! I got to spend time fishing, hiking, and canoeing. Dick Greenan and I put his canoe into the Kennebec River in Waterville and fished for shad and stripers, which are both in the river right now. The shad are trying to spawn and the stripers are trying to catch the shad, American eels, and the alewives, all of which are also headed up the river right now. Fish were jumping everywhere and there were plenty of human and avian anglers trying to get in on the action, including lots of Bald eagles, Ospreys, and cormorants. We caught lots of big shad, a couple of small stripers, and an alewife. These anadromous fish (live in salt-water, spawn in freshwater) spend their lives swimming, usually upstream, and tend to be stronger and have more stamina than freshwater fish of the same size. They put up a real battle on light spinning gear or flyrods. The big smile on Dick's face in the pictures below not only reflects how much fun the fish were to catch but also the fact that he was able to get out into his canoe for the first time in two years after getting two new hips earlier this year and two new knees last year. It was fun to share his joy.

Shad are a large member of the herring family (Alosa sapidissima) that are extremely tasty (sapidissima is Latin for "most savory") but contain many fine bones. A few years ago, John McPhee wrote a book about shad called, "The Founding Fish," in which he made a strong case that there would be no United States of America without shad. In 1776, when George Washington's army was encamped at Valley Forge, the British occupied Philadelphia and tried to starve the Colonial Army by shutting off the food imports from the city. The most significant source of food that got through to Valley Forge were barrels of Delaware River and Susquehanna River shad that provided sustenance for the army to build up their strength in order to row across the Delaware and attack Trenton on Christmas Eve. That was the turning point of the Revolutionary War.

I also hiked a couple of BRCA properties this week, including The Mountain and Mount Phillip. At Mount Phillip, I hiked with Mark Paddock of Farmington, whose family has a camp on the northern shore of Great Pond, and his cousin, Ellen Baker

The Dams Keeper Report

As of this writing the Belgrades just received a well-needed deluge of rain. Although it came down with a fury the rain gauge at the MLRC in the Village recorded just a 1/10" or so. Their Village Weather Station is a wonderful asset for the area and is easily accessible via: http://www.colby.edu/chemistry/Weather/Weather/MLRC\_Weather.html.

Great Pond is just about 4" below full pond with Gate 1 open a meager 3" to give our residents and fisheries a little water to work while trying to retain the water levels that we already have. The warm temperatures and evaporation this week have really taken its toll on this large 8,533 acre pond.

Long Pond is presently right at full pond with both Wings Mill Gates completely closed. Let's hope that we do not have another dry summer like last year's.

Enjoy this beautiful summer and weather!

Dick Greenan

Secretary, Belgrade Lakes Watershed Dams Committee

when her son started school. She was part of a landscape group and participated in workshops from Alaska to Cape Cod. Monotype, she said, has given her the opportunity to test her limits.

"The variety of tools – anything from brushes to rollers to palette knives -- can be used to ink the plates. Any number of materials can create forms and shapes from paper cut outs, string, rug liners and on and on," Warren said. "Marks in the ink can be created with Q-tips, combs, fingers. The image once pulled can be altered on the paper with pencil, crayon, collaged elements."

Webber, who sells real estate with her husband, operated the Minnehonk Gallery from 1993 to 2006 and then reopened it again in 2015 for Flying Bear Prints. She grew up in Wilton, Maine, graduated from Colby College, and ultimately settled in Mount Vernon where she met her husband, and the couple raised their two sons.

Webber has been fascinated with printmaking since the 1980s and attended workshops at the Round Top Art Center and Midcoast Printmakers in Damariscotta as well as the Great River Art Institute in Vermont.

"I experiment with collagraphs, gel plates, collage, and other methods to make one-of-a-kind works. One print may involve a number of layers, always a surprise in the final outcome," Webber said. "I have been influenced by abstract Japanese printmaker Hideo Hagiwara, and poetic artist Paul Klee, among others. I try to make each print, like a poem, speak from the heart. Moods, rhythm, color and structure all play a part in my work."

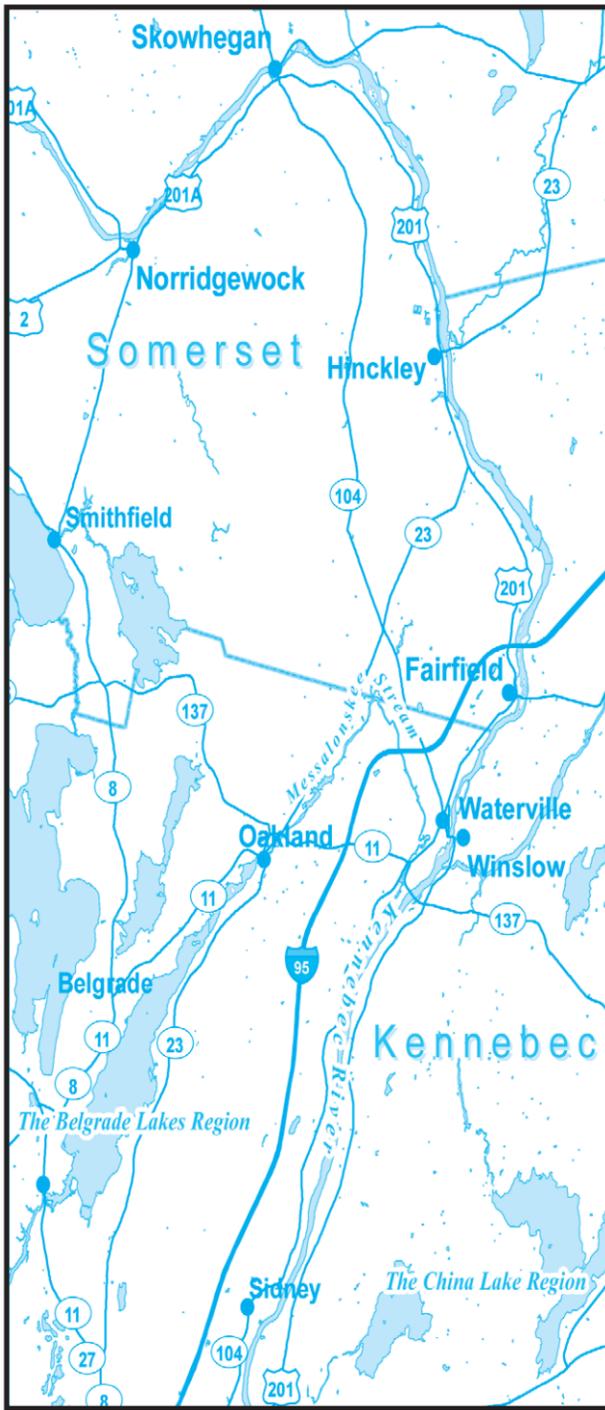

Krischik-Brinton grew up in the Ruhr Valley in Germany and worked in Switzerland in her 20s as a writer and editor in the headquarters of the Rudolf Steiner movement, inspired by the Austrian philosopher, author and social reformer.

She met her husband while doing an interview and ended up following him to the states, ultimately coming to Mount Vernon

While in Switzerland she had taken painting classes, but said it's when she finally came to Maine that she started taking her art more seriously. Her work has been shown in Portland, Hallowell, Milbridge and Rockport.

In recent years, her interests shifted from

Kennebec Corridor

"I love working with translucence and multiple layers, and printmaking has proven to be an excellent medium for it," she said. "Art for me is all about abstract shapes and how they relate to each other. I am fascinated by the edges and contours which manifest when I pull a print. It is something I've always wanted to create in painting. It comes so naturally in printmaking."

High Spirited Art on Display in Mount Vernon Village

Three accomplished women artists, who took very different paths to make the lakeside town of Mount Vernon their home, have created an art collaborative producing some of the most high-spirited monotype prints in the region.

Their styles, like their backgrounds, are very different. What they all share is the love of monotype printmaking – where the artist puts paint or ink on a glass or metal plate and then applies it to paper on an etching press, creating a one-of-a-kind textured print.

The three – Ann Warren, Jan Webber and Judith Krischik-Brinton – work together in Warren's renovated barn turned studio under the name of "Flying Bear Prints", a nod to the bear sculpture outside the studio window. (The bear, created by Dennis Pinette, was part of the Belfast Bearfest.)

They will show their prints this summer in Webber's Minnehonk Gallery in Mount Vernon's village center on the shores of Minnehonk Lake.

Jan Webber - Lime Machine

The show opens on July 1, and the gallery will be open Thursday through Saturday, from 10 am to 4 pm, until Labor Day.

The village center is a nexus of summertime activity in this community that was once part of the back-to-the land movement. In addition to the gallery, which is attached to the Webber Real Estate office, are two antique shops, The Olde Post Office Café, a fine arts furniture maker, country store and Mount Vernon Community Center – which hosts community breakfasts every week.

Warren was born in Bangor and graduated from Mount Holyoke College. Before moving to Mount Vernon in 1999, she and her husband lived in New York, and she returned to painting

Salon programs are never announced in advance, but are always eclectic. Patrons may come and go at will and may order food and drink to enjoy while listening.

Other performances during the festival will include piano recitals on Tuesday, July 12, and Monday, July 18, and a Future Music Lab, on Thursday, July 21, at 3:30 in the art museum lobby. For the latter performance, musicians use "interactive computer technology" to augment performances on traditional instruments.

Atlantic Music Festival Offers Free Classical Concerts

by Grgor Smith

AMF Orchestra

The Atlantic Music Festival will launch its eighth season on Saturday, July 2, with renditions by the AMF Orchestra of Ravel's Mother Goose Suite and Mozart's final symphony, # 41 ("Jupiter"). Conducted by Maestro David Amado, music director of the Delaware Symphony and an AMF favorite, this free concert will, like the majority of AMF performances, take place in Colby College's Lorimer Chapel and will begin at 7:00. The orchestra will also perform on July 16 and July 23.

After that first orchestral concert, the next scheduled performance will be a chamber music recital on Wednesday, July 6. From that point on, there will be a concert or recital nearly every evening — and some afternoons too — through Saturday, July 23. There will be around two dozen performances during the festival, all at Colby College and all with free admission.

The performers are drawn from the 160 to 170

students and fellows, mostly in their 20s, and the 35 to 40 faculty members at the AMF Institute, which runs from June 27 to July 24. This year, roughly three quarters of the participants will come from the United States and the rest from other countries, mainly Taiwan, South Korea, and China.

The chamber concerts will feature a variety of works performed by duos, trios, and other small instrumental ensembles. Chamber concerts will

This Week's LakeSmart Tip

SHORE LINE BUFFERS

Buffer

A vegetative buffer (trees, shrubs, groundcover, duff) at least 10 feet deep across the shoreline catches sediment, pollution, and breaks up raindrops. Root systems hold soil in place. Many varieties of native plants can be used that do not block the view but afford privacy and noisecontrol.

Lawns, however, are unfriendly to water quality and native habitat. The shallow mats speed phosphorus, nitrogen and fertilizers into the lake. Reducing the size of lawns for recreation and relaxation reduces the carbon footprint of machinery used to maintain lawns.

Tree Spirits Absinthe Verte is Best of Maine

Tree Spirits winery and distillery received the 2016 Down East magazine Editors' Choice award for Best Spirit for its absinthe verte. Using locally sourced apple cider, pear cider and maple syrup, Tree Spirits' wines and distilled apple, pear and maple spirits have been winning awards in international competitions since 2011 in New York and San Francisco. In 2014 it won the New York International Spirits Competition's Maine distiller award and in 2015 received a bronze medal for its absinthe. While it's been legal to make in the US since 2007, only a handful of distilleries are making the spirit, most of them small, boutique operations. Tree Spirits is the only producer of absinthe in New England. Tree Spirits is owned by Bruce Olson and Karen Heck, the former mayor of Waterville.

Tree Spirits winery and distillery, retail store and tasting room are located at 152 Fairfield Street in Oakland. Private group tastings and tours are available. Visit www.treespiritsofmaine.com or call 861-2723 for hours open and schedule of tastings.

of Minneapolis, MN. Ellen stopped by to hike for a bit after spending a week at Maine Audubon's Hog Island Camp in Bremen, Maine. She was very excited about all the new species she added to her "Life List" while visiting the Maine coast and equally excited by the Scarlet tanagers, Hermit thrushes, Bald Eagles, Turkey vultures, Pileated woodpeckers, Pine siskins, Veerys, and vireos that she saw and heard on Mount Phillip while we were hiking. This area has a wide diversity of bird species and is prominently featured in "The Maine Birding Trail" by Bob Duchesne.

This is a perfect time to enjoy the outdoors before it gets too warm. Now that school's out, it's easy to take a kid fishing or on a hike, or paddling in a canoe. You won't be sorry.
