Charles W. Thompson

(Communicated)

Charles W. Thompson, one of the oldest and most highly respected citizens of Waterboro, passed away suddenly on Monday morning, Sept. 7, in his old home. He was the last member of his generation in the family. Mr. Thompson was born in Chelsea, Mass., May 30, 1844, the son of Henry Thompson of Waterboro and Nancy F. Wilson Thompson of Saugus, Mass.

When Mr. Thompson was 11 years of age, his parents came to the old Thompson farm in Waterboro and here he lived the remainder of his life, except for a number of years, when in Winter he resided at Pine Point.

Mr. Thompson first married Abbie L. Guptill of Waterboro and they had one son, Chester G. Thompson. Mrs. Thompson passed away 18 years ago. Mr. Thompson then married Mrs. Annie M. Guptill of Pine Point who has been a faithful companion in the closing years of his life.

Mr. Thompson has lived a useful life: a devoted husband and father and lover of his home. He leaves his wife, a number of nieces and nephews and a host of friends to miss his winning smile and cheerful and kind nature.

Funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 9, in the old home, the Rev. Leslie Holmes of Dover, the officiating clergyman. The house was filled with relatives and friends and the many floral tributes were beautiful messages of love and sympathy. The pall bearers were nephews of Mr. Thompson: Charles H. Thompson of Somerville, Mass., Andrew J. Thompson and Almon C. Thompson of Farmington, N. H., Walter S. Fracker of Chelsea, Mass., William H. Fracker of Reading, Mass., and Cullen K. Bigelow of Somerville, Mass.

Tribute

Portland's the darndest town I know
To get out of one's head.
I guess that one's affection lasts
Until one's really dead.

Of course I boost for this swell state—
Its summers free of rain;
But for real honest joy in life
I'll take old Portland, Maine.

The different organizations before which they are speaking plan the special programs. Mr. Beard's subjects are to be an association speech, "Some Men Who Have Never Died"; a dinner speech, "Activities And Significance Of A Great Corporation"; a morning topic, "The Really Big Business of the Hour"; and a Sunday evening topic, "Multiplying Life."

Miss Smith will have as an association lecture "Present Day Frontiers In The Homeland," as her church address, "Incurable Pioneers," before women's groups, "Dawn of a New Day," and before young people's groups, "Widening the Horizons."

The Rev. Rodney W. Roundy

Mr. Beard is a graduate of Phillips Andover Academy, Yale University and Yale Divinity School. After serving as pastor at Durham, N. H., and Willimantic, Conn., in 1916 Mr. Beard became assistant secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society. Later he directed the Pilgrim Memorial Fund Campaign in Washington, Oregon and Idaho and from 1921 to 1924 he was secretary of promotion of the Commission on Missions. He has served in his present capacity since 1925.

Miss Smith is project secretary of the home boards with an office at the National Headquarters in New York, a position she has held since 1928. Prior to that time she served as associate secretary in the Home Department of the Woman's Board of Missions, Boston, and as office and literary secretary of the Congregational Church Women of New York.

REV. WILLIAM S. BEARD

Mr. Beard is the incarnation of cheerful aggressiveness. His after-dinner addresses are marked by many witticisms as well as by "passion, pertinency, pungency and persuasiveness." He is a product of "The Little White Church on the Hilltop", at South Killingly, Conn., where his father for twenty-four years was pastor.

Mr. Beard is a graduate of Phillips Academy and of Yale College and Divinity School.

Following in his father's steps he entered the Congregational ministry and became pastor at Durban, N. H., then in 1908 he returned to Connecticut and became pastor of the Willimantic church. A thirty-mile radius from Willimantic includes "The Little White Church on the Hilltop" and two other churches which have been served in long pastorates by Mr. Beard's uncle and his grandfather.

In 1916 Mr. Beard became assistant secretary of the Congregational Home Missionary Society. Three years later he was appointed state campaign director in Connecticut for the Pilgrim Memorial Fund and afterward directed the Pilgrim Memorial Fund Campaign in Washington, Oregon and Idaho.

From 1921 to 1924 he was secretary of promotion of the Commission on Missions. Since 1925 he had been the executive secretary of the Laymen's Advisory Committee, and as secretary of this Committee he has promoted a number of large dinner meetings of Congregational laymen in many cities throughout the country. These dinners are said by Mr. Beard to be properly comparable to meetings of groups of stockholders.

"All Congregational men," he states, "are stockholders in the most significant enterprise in the world—the Church and its worldwide work—and they have been making investments in this work at home and abroad. They want to know how the work is progressing, what the prospects and opportunities are, what the hope is for the continuance of the dividends, and what about an extra now and then and an occasional 'split-up.' There is no corporation in existence with the dividend record of the Christian church. 'Souls for our hire'—that is the way the Bible puts it. New men and new nations in Christ Jesus is our reward."

Mr. Beard will serve under the auspices of the Commission on Missions on the Maine Missionary team from September 26 to October 25 inclusive.

ALFRED

Rev. Willard Palmer of Portland, assistant superintendent of the Congregational Conference and Missionary society of Maine, occupied the pulpit at the Alfred Congregational church at both the morning and evening services on Sunday, March 22.

The reading of a letter from Rev. G. Elmer Mossman, resigning his pastorate here, by Mr. Palmer, at the morning service, was the occasion of real surprise and much regret to the congregation. Mr. Mossman came to Alfred from Brockton, Mass., nine years ago, to become pastor of the Alfred Congregational church and has performed his duties here in a most acceptable and efficient manner. He has been active in many of the town organizations, the grange, Fraternal lodge of Masons, the New Century club and the Boy Scouts. Mr. Mossman has accepted a call to the Congregational church in Scarborough and will enter upon his duties as pastor of that church in the very near future.

Damrosch, At 70, Hopes Career Will Last Three Years Longer

Declares Opportunity Now Greatest In History Of Music

By Lorena A. Hickok

New York, Jan. 29.—(AP)—Walter Damrosch, who began his musical career 53 years ago in the second violin stands of his father's orchestra, will be 70 Saturday.

"And enjoying right now," he said today, "the greatest opportunity ever offered to a musician in the whole history of music.

"Every Friday morning I conduct a symphony concert for six million school children. Think of it—six million! Why, out on the Pacific coast they assemble in their schoolrooms, at 8 o'clock in the morning to listen in.

"Never has there been such an opportunity offered to a musician before—not in the whole history of music. Six years ago I wanted to retire. Now I want to go on. I'm hoping for at least three years more."

Six years ago he retired as conductor of the New York Symphony Society, after 41 years of service, and became leader of the first radio symphony orchestra ever organized.

Just now he is giving Mondays, Tuesdays, and Wednesdays to his latest job as chairman of the relief organization to raise $300,000 for needy musicians. The rest of the week is devoted to rehearsals and concerts.

There will be a small family dinner Saturday night. Three of his daughters and their husbands will be there. His fourth daughter is in Europe.

To young musicians the head of the House of Damrosch offers this advice:

"Go west, young man! Or north, or south. And keep out of the big cities. For New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago," he said, "are overcrowded with musicians.

"But there are hundreds, even thousands, of cities of good size absolutely devoid of authoritative leadership in music, especially for their children. All these cities need piano teachers, violin teachers, and singing teachers, and men who would form choral societies, high school orchestras, town bands.

"I wish that some of our generous-minded and rich music lovers, instead of subsidizing at large expense young artists to be sent from New York to give sporadic concerts here and there over the Country, would pick out—say from the schools of the Juilliard Foundation—the best graduates of music and, in cooperation with local chambers of commerce or other civic organizations, settle them in these smaller cities and help them until they get started."

Bible Sunday

Today is Bible Sunday and in thousands of churches in America and in foreign countries the 400th anniversary of the publication of Martin Luther's translation of the Bible will be commemorated.

Bible Sunday is sponsored by the American Bible Society through whose missionary activities the Bible is circulated in more than 40 countries in close to 200 languages.

In urging the observance of Universal Bible Sunday, President Roosevelt says: "The American Bible Society has performed a distinctive and helpful service in the dissemination of the Scriptures. Its sponsorship of Bible Sunday will do much to make this a significant day in the church calendar.

"The observance of Universal Bible Sunday, in which many of the churches of America will engage today, has my hearty approval."

Almira H. Plummer Empowered To Sell Late Sister's Land

Court Rules That Under Will
She May Dispose Of Real Estate To Pay Taxes

Almira H. Plummer of Portland is empowered to sell real estate of the estate of her late sister, Caroline M. Witham of Scarborough, according to a ruling Monday afternoon by Supreme Court Justice Guy H. Sturgis. The ruling was made in a bill in equity brought by Miss Plummer against her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford A. Plummer of Portland, to place a construction on Mrs. Witham's will.

Under the will, Miss Plummer was given the use of the residue of the estate during her lifetime with such power to sell real estate as was necessary to her comfortable support.

Justice Sturgis ruled that, inasmuch as Miss Plummer was compelled to pay taxes on the property and the taxes were an item in her "comfortable support," she might sell property to pay taxes.

Sir Thomas Lipton, 81, Renowned Yachtsman, Merchant Prince, Dies

End Comes In Sleep To Man Who Had Risen From Errand Boy To Head Great Business

By P. H. Myring
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton, fine old sea dog and one of the world's great merchant princes, died today at the age of 81.

The cause of his death was a heart attack which followed a severe chill he caught while motoring several days ago. The last year his health had been a cause of recurrent anxiety.

Sir Thomas died peacefully in his sleep. Several old friends were at the bedside but no near relatives as he is the last of his family.

He died without attaining the great objective of his life, on which he had spent huge sums from a fortune made primarily from tea—the winning of the America's cup. Instead he won the epitaph, "the world's best loser" and the affectionate admiration of millions on both sides of the Atlantic.

His fifth and last attempt to capture "that elusive old mug," as he always called the trophy symbolizing yachting supremacy, was made in September last year, when the Shamrock V was beaten by the Enterprise off Rhode Island.

World Realizing Need Of Spiritual Guide, Says Rev. Morris H. Turk

The modern world, like the prodigal son, has come to a realization of the need for the spiritual guidance of the Father, the Rev. Morris H. Turk, D. D., pastor of the Williston Congregational Church, asserted in his sermon Sunday morning.

"Ours is a prodigal world," the Rev. Dr. Turk declared. "We have gone farther and because of our scientific knowledge and material wealth have thought that we could get on without Him. We have been so devoted to making money with which to enjoy ourselves that God has been very generally deserted. Our spiritual world is in a far country trying to have a good time without God.

"It can't be done. The prodigal son came to the end of his rope and found that he did not enjoy his good times. But the foolish boy found deeper hunger in his heart when he discovered that he was hungering for his father.

"Our present world is beginning to discover the futility of trying to have a good time without the Father. Our boasted scientific progress has not given us either peace of mind or world peace. Our material progress has not satisfied souls.

"We have wasted our strength on secondary things and have not given primacy to the will of God. In the hearts of the modern world is the deep hunger for the fellowship of the Father. Of every other need we are beginning to understand that our deepest necessity is for God. We must come back to the Father."

Mellie Dunham Maine's Beloved Fiddler, Dead

Body Lies in Little Farmhouse at Crockett's Ridge; Gained Nationwide Fame As Protege Of Henry Ford Six Years Ago

NORWAY, Me. (UP)—Death has silenced Mellie Dunham's fiddle.

Alanson Mellen Dunham, 78, known the nation over as "Mellie," the oldtime fiddling protege of Henry Ford, died late Sunday at a Lewiston Hospital after an operation. Monday his body lay in his farmhouse at Crockett's Ridge, where he was born and where he lived his entire life.

Though Mellie did not become a national figure until six years ago, when he went to Dearborn, Mich., to play his fiddle for Ford, he had a prior claim to fame. It was his hands which fashioned the sturdy snowshoes which Admiral Robert E. Peary carried to the North Pole in 1909.

For more than his allotted three score years and ten, Mellie, farmer, fiddler and snowshoe maker, lived quietly in the obscurity of Crockett's Ridge, a mile and a half from here. No country dance was considered complete without the rollicking tunes from his battered fiddle. And no expedition into Arctic wastes was planned

Mellie's Fiddle To Lie Beside Him At Funeral Service Today; Gram Reconciled To His Going

Special Despatch to The Press Herald

Norway, Sept. 29.—Mellie Dunham's beloved fiddle, which he played for so many years, will be nestled among flowers close beside him Wednesday afternoon, as he lies in the Universalist Church while townsfolk and people from afar pay their final tribute to the best beloved and most widely known resident of Crockett's Ridge.

Deftly worked into a portion of the huge floral display by Fred Cummings, so that it will be visible to all, the instrument with which Mellie won his share of fame and a modest fortune that looked like a million to him, will be close at hand in death as in life—its strings as mute as the cheery voice of its owner.

Gram, his good wife and companion for the last 57 years, went about her daily household tasks today, bravely keeping the tears that occasionally started as she talked of Mellie, and in anticipation of the visitors at their modest home on the ridge on the day of the funeral, she baked a big batch of bread.

Gram is reconciled to his going. She feels that it was best, if he could not be restored to health and be his old self again.

"I had him 57 years," she said brokenly, "and we parted friends."

Telegrams of condolence are pouring in from every point of the compass, one of them coming today from Harry T. Jordan, manager of the Proctor Theater in Philadelphia. "I admired and loved Mellie," it stated.

Among those who arrived here today to attend the funeral services were Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Gooding of Dorchester, Mass., Mrs. Gooding having been manager for Mellie on his tour.

All places of business in town will be closed during the funeral services Wednesday and it is expected that the church will be crowded. The Rev. Conrad B. Rheiner will officiate.

Norway, Jan. 4.—Mrs. 'Emma "Gram" Dunham, widow of Mellie Dunham, Maine's famous and beloved country fiddler, has suffered a shock at her home at Crockett's Ridge.

Mrs. Dunham, who is 74, was reported tonight to be "fairly comfortable," and she is being cared for by a granddaughter, Mrs. Ethna Dion.

The home is one which Mellie built after fire destroyed his ancestral home on the ridge a few years ago, the old man never recovering from his grief over the loss.

"Gram" has been in failing health throughout the Fall, in fact, she has never been her old self since Mellie died, and some of the neighbors say that on the day he left her, she seemed to grow ten years older within a few hours.

without an order to Mellie for snowshoes.

One bleak November day in 1925 the rural carrier delivered a letter to the Dunham homestead. It was an invitation from Henry Ford for Mellie and his wife of a half century, "Gram," to come to Dearborn. "Be sure to bring your fiddle," postscripted the motor magnate.

Shortly before, Mellie had won an oldtime fiddling contest at Lewiston Armory, and Ford, an old-fashioned dancing enthusiast, had read of this victory.

The elderly couple went to Dearborn and Mellie exhausted his repertoire, delighting his host with such old favorites as "Turkey in the Straw," "Devil's Dream," and "Irish Washerwoman." After that Mellie and "Gram" toured the country as a vaudeville team, netting $20,000 with which to ease their declining years.

The first thing Mellie did on his return to Crockett's Ridge was to pay a friend $90 he had borrowed to cover the taxes on his 120-acre farm.

Mellie, who combined Yankee shrewdness with Irish wit, was one of Maine's most lovable characters.

When his home was destroyed by fire last year he accepted his loss philosophically.

"Still got Gram. Still got the fiddles. We will begin right over again," he said.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 2 P. M., with burial in Pine Grove Cemetery, where last year Mellie had headstones erected for himself and "Gram."

PASTOR QUILTS IN CAPE CITY

Dr. Charles Quigley's
Resignation Effective
In February

Dr. Charles A. Quigley, formerly of New York City, who accepted the pastorate of Bethany Congregational Church Oct. 28, 1928, read his resignation before a capacity congregation in that church Sunday evening. The resignation, if accepted, will become effective in February.

Dr. Quigley entered upon the pastorate with a view to putting the church on its feet, so to speak, but to date no arrangement has been made for the budget necessary to the accomplishment of this object, it is understood. No action has been taken on the pastor's resignation, which reads as follows:

To the Members of Bethany Congregational Church:

It is not an easy matter for me to pen these lines to you. In the short time I have been your minister, I have grown to love you and truly appreciate your kindness to me that has been rendered on more than one occasion.

I know that your church can become a dynamic power for good in South Portland and my earnest prayer is that you continue in that direction. I should like to remain with you and see this accomplished. But this is not for me to do. I sincerely trust that you shall realize what lies before you as to Christian service.

Therefore I desire at this time to tender my resignation as pastor of this church the same to become effective, inclusive with the date of Feb. 10.

CHARLES A. QUIGLEY.

Wife Granted Divorce From Silent Husband

Paris—(INS)—It's going to be hard on the men in the future. If husbands do too much talking their wives don't like it, and if they don't talk at all, they don't like it either!

From Rennes comes the news of a French woman who obtained a divorce from her better-half because he refused to talk. For several years, she told the judge, she had not heard a word from his mouth and the only way of getting money for her needs was to leave an empty pocketbook on his desk. Silently, he would stick five or six bills of 100 francs into it and go on his way.

Voluntary silence of this sort constitutes "a disdainful and scornful attitude and is equivalent to serious injury as indicated in article 231," said the judge. A divorce was granted the wife.

The Spires Of Maine

By The Rev. Rodney W. Roundy

Above my office desk hangs a picture of a little white meeting house. It was built something more than three-quarters of a century ago on Isle au Haut. A faithful woman of the island whose children rose up to call her blessed in co-operation with one of our missionaries, the Rev. Joshua Eaton, raised the money for the building by visits to seacoast towns along the shores even to Massachusetts.

It has been for these well-nigh eight decades a shrine for fisher-folks and sea-faring men. Miles away across the waters its spire has been a beacon to travelers on the sea, a center of worship for those of continuing habitations and for those who truly sought rest and recuperation in summer weather. Emblem of the everlasting it has been an unwearied witness to the true, the beautiful, the good. "Beautiful in elevation, the joy of the whole earth" sang the Psalmist of "Mount Zion, the city of the great King." Beneath sunny skies, over infinite miles of blue waters, this little white church is more beautiful in its elevation than templed Mount Zion with no surrounding sparkling waters could ever be.

Along Maine's hundreds of miles of rugged coast and outlying rocky islands it makes glorious the realities of God. The scene from Mount Cadillac may be the most beautiful along the Atlantic Coast; there is no spot on the whole long shore more worshipful than this little church in its silent invitations to reverence, the uplifting of men's thoughts to the unseen realities of God.

Its soaring steeple is typical of the many spires of Maine. It tells the story of the finest of the old. Out of the best of four centuries of Protestantism comes this simple architecture of Puritan faith. It was first known on the streets of London where the conceptions of Sir Christopher Wren found expression in no less than 250 churches in the greatest city of his day. In many a builder's book came to our American shores these models of finest "things made in Europe." Maine's shores, her valleys, her hilltops, are made glorious by these evidences of structures more wonderful and everlasting than the artist ever dreamed.

These spires of Maine are glorious in the present. In times of change, disillusionment, depression, they tell of a continuing city whose Maker and Builder is God. Banks controlled by the boasted skill of financiers have closed their doors; riches counted as everlasting have taken wings to the realms of chaos; machinery for the expressions of industry and inventions has been silenced; marts of business have been deserted; countless evidences of science and trade have disappeared; yet the spires of Maine abide. They still stand for the strengthening and the heartening of all who realize that the things which count gloriously remain, the continuing beacons of inspiration.

The spires of Maine are prophetic. Man's best never dies. God's best for man and through man does not fail. The foundations of God stand true.

Peterson, who reports the sale of the 33d automobile to Ben Barker of 40 Exchange Street. The sale of these 33 cars has taken place since May 1915 when Mr. Barker bought his first car, a Ford, from Mr. Peterson. The car delivered this past week was a Plymouth.

Mr. Barker has purchased all his cars since 1915 of Mr. Peterson, personally. The first five were Fords, then came Maxwells, Chryslers, Hupps, Gardiners, Durants and now the Plymouth. Mr. Barker also gave Mr. Peterson the order this past week for the delivery of a Chrysler car on the first of September. The Chrysler will be Mr. Barker's 34th car purchased from Elliott S. March Of Progress And Greater Traffic Eliminates Landmark

Drinking Fountain In Railroad Square To Be Removed

Whereas filling stations for motor vehicles are constantly on the increase filling stations for horses are rapidly passing from the picture. Portland at present has five drinking fountains for horses, but within a very short time the number will be reduced to four as the above fountain, located in Railroad Square, is to be removed by the City and placed in storage.

It was originally lighted with the gas fixture shown in the picture, but recently it has remained dark, and has become a menace to traffic. This is particularly so during the winter months when motor cars and trucks coming down Congress Street on slippery pavement many times have difficulty in preventing a crash against the fountain.

Rev. H. O. Hough To Observe Fifteen Years' Service Nov. 5

Special Speakers To Be Featured At Radio Service

Sunday, Nov. 5, is the date set for the celebration of the 15th anniversary of the ordination to the Christian ministry of the Rev. Howard O. Hough, pastor of the First Radio Parish Church of America. Speakers of prominence will participate in the program for the special radio services which will be held in the Eastland ball room from 1.30 to 2.30 o'clock.

Mr. Hough is one of the small number of ministers who has gained wide recognition for the service which he has rendered in the interpretation of religion by means of the radio. From all over the Country have come letters speaking of the help the services have been. From woodsmen in their cabins far away from human habitation, from families in lonely farm houses, from people on ocean liners, from lighthouses and Coast Guard stations, from hospitals and sick beds in private homes have come messages which have been so stimulating to Mr. Hough in their import that he has steadily carried on.

Through the courtesy of Henry P. Rines, the facilities of the local radio station were offered and Mr. Hough was installed April 18, 1926, as pastor of the First Radio Parish Church of America. Mr. Hough was at that time a minister in the Advent Christian Church of Portland, and had served with distinction a number of churches in this denomination. Nine denominations were represented at the inauguration of the First Radio Parish Church of America.

Although born in Waterbury, Conn., and receiving his early education in that city, Mr. Hough has long since become a part of Maine's religious life. Known as the "Boy Preacher" in his younger days, Mr. Hough at the age of 15, felt called to the ministry, and entered the New England School of Theology of Boston. During his first pastorate in New Hampshire, he worked in the hayfields and in various capacities on the surrounding farms in his struggle for a livelihood. He has also held pastorates in Rhode Island, New York and Maine.

As head of the most unusual and also one of the largest parishes in the world, as the First Parish Radio Church is now conceded to be, Mr. Hough has the cooperation of a group of outstanding citizens of this section who voluntarily joined with him in effecting a chartered church.

The board of directors includes the following: Kenneth C. M. Sills, president of Bowdoin College; Henry F. Merrill, Lyman B. Chipman, Henry P. Rines, the Rev. Charles F. King, D. D., William R. Copp, Edward W. Hannaford, Lewis W. Haskell, Nathan A. Cushman, Llewellyn Carleton, Daniel W. Hoegg, Neal W. Allen, Mrs. T. C. Wentworth, Mrs. Sadie P. Norcross, Elmer N. Bachelder, Louis E. Rev. F. Jefferson Neal Is Elected President Of Church Federation

Delegates

The Rev. F. Jefferson Neal, pastor of the St. Lawrence Congregational Church, was elected president of the Church Federation of Portland, South Portland and Vicinity at the annual dinner meeting Thursday evening in the Immanuel Baptist Church. He succeeds the Rev. John C. Schroeder, D. D., pastor of the State Street Church.

Reelected were Ralph M. Sommerville, first vice president; Mrs. George S. Ellis, second vice president; Miss Mary E. Woodman, recording secretary; and Alvah N. Kitchen, treasurer. Fourteen members also were elected to the Executive Board.

Churches should preach alike to the successful, the unsuccessful, the poor and the rich and should strive to keep vivid the life of Jesus, the Rev. Rayborn L. Zerby, professor of Biblical religion at Bates College, told the 200 delegates present at the meeting. Jesus, he said, must be reinterpreted to coming generations as His Gospel cannot be handed down from generation to generation but must be planted in the hearts of people and be permitted to grow. Professor Zerby cited 10 areas in which he believes the church can function, stressing that the church is really an institution for seeing the living Jesus.

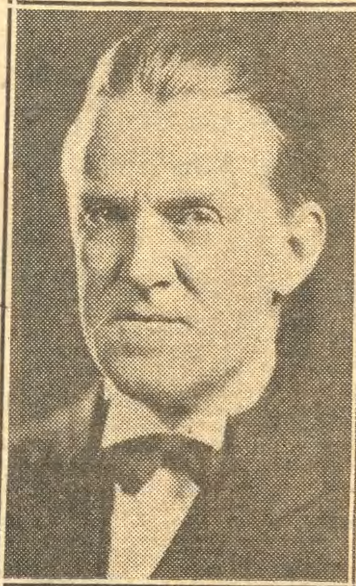

The church, he said, has discovered the importance of the life of Jesus and must keep alive how Jesus met social problems and must stress that the life of Jesus was not mapped out for him. Jesus' life, he added, was a real struggle in which He groped in comprehension of the Task before Him. The Rev. Mr. Zerby urged that people be trained to see beyond the confines of "narrow patriotism" and added that the church should send delegates into the business world with a professional spirit and pointed out that permanent reform cannot be expected unless experts in various lines share their thoughts with other people.

The Rev. Mr. Zerby warned against interdenominational narrowness, urged adoption of expressions of confidence as a means of solving social problems and stressed that the church is the place in which to culture religion.

Dr. Schroeder welcomed the delegates and urged them to attend the lecture to be given by Miss Margaret Slattery at 3.30 p. m. Sunday in the Williston Congregational Church. Reports were given by the Rev. Cornelius E. Clark, chairman of the Evangelism Committee; the Rev. Ernest W. Robinson, chairman of the International Justice and Goodwill Committee; the Rev. Walter K. Miller, president of the Portland Council of Religious Education; Mrs. Richard D. Small, chairman of the Woman's Department; and Merrill A. Beer, executive secretary.

Dr. Gerald P. Clifford was chairman of the Nominating Committee.

Elected to the Executive Board were Lindley M. Binford, Charles H. Blatchford, Mrs. Carl C. Coffin, Fred E. Eastman, the Rev. W. Nevin Elliott, Mrs. George Hardy, George Hutchinson, the Rev. William H. Jones, D. D., Warren McDonald, the Rev. Charles D. Paul, the Rev. John F. Rodgers, the Rev. Vincent B. Silliman, the Rev. Elwin L. Wilson and Mrs. Winthrop Wilson.

Rev. F. Jefferson Neal.

Sir Harry Lauder, Scottish Comedian, Succumbs At 79

Death Follows Lengthy Illness

Strathaven, Scotland, Feb. 26. (AP)—Sir Harry Lauder, 79, left tonight on his last farewell tour. The world-famed Scottish comedian died at his home after long months of illness.

Sir Harry started as a millboy and became one of the best loved—and one of the richest—figures of the stage in the world. It was he who wrote "Roamin' In The Gloamin'" and made it almost a folksong in its popularity and familiarity.

Suffering from arterio-thrombosis (an arterial blood clot) complicated by kidney ailments, he was near death late in 1949 but rallied and for weeks appeared greatly improved.

Sir Harry, whose twinkling eyes and broad Scotch baritone first won him fame in 1900, was widely known in the United States, where he made some two dozen tours from coast to coast.

His last trip to the U. S. was in 1937 but he stoutly denied until early last year that he was thinking of retiring from the stage. Still hale and hearty, he skirled his kilts and waved his knobbly stick for soldier audiences in Britain during World War II.

Until last Summer he was organizing local shows for charity in England and Scotland. He even talked of making another "farewell appearance" in America.

A CENTURY AGO—This was Munjoy Hill in the 1840's, as sketched from memory in 1895 by C. Q. Goodhue. The Portland Observatory, built in 1807, dominates the rock-strewn slopes. The bump on the hilltop at left center was a fortification of Fort Sumner, which was built in 1794 on North Street near where Fort Sumner Park stands today. The depression in the lower right corner was a sand pit, and the structure next to it was a gun house. The street in the foreground, along which a farmer with a team of oxen is shown hauling hay, is apparently Mountfort Street. Recollections Of Maine's Past

The original Old Orchard House as it looked in the Summer of 1879 when life at this famous Maine resort was more leisurely and less crowded. It would be impossible to gather all the patrons of the present Old Orchard House together for a "family group" picture such as this. We might, though, for posterity, make a photographic record of the numbers of cars which gather so easily that unlike the one object of transportation pictured here, the horse at the left, they seem nowadays to outnumber the people.

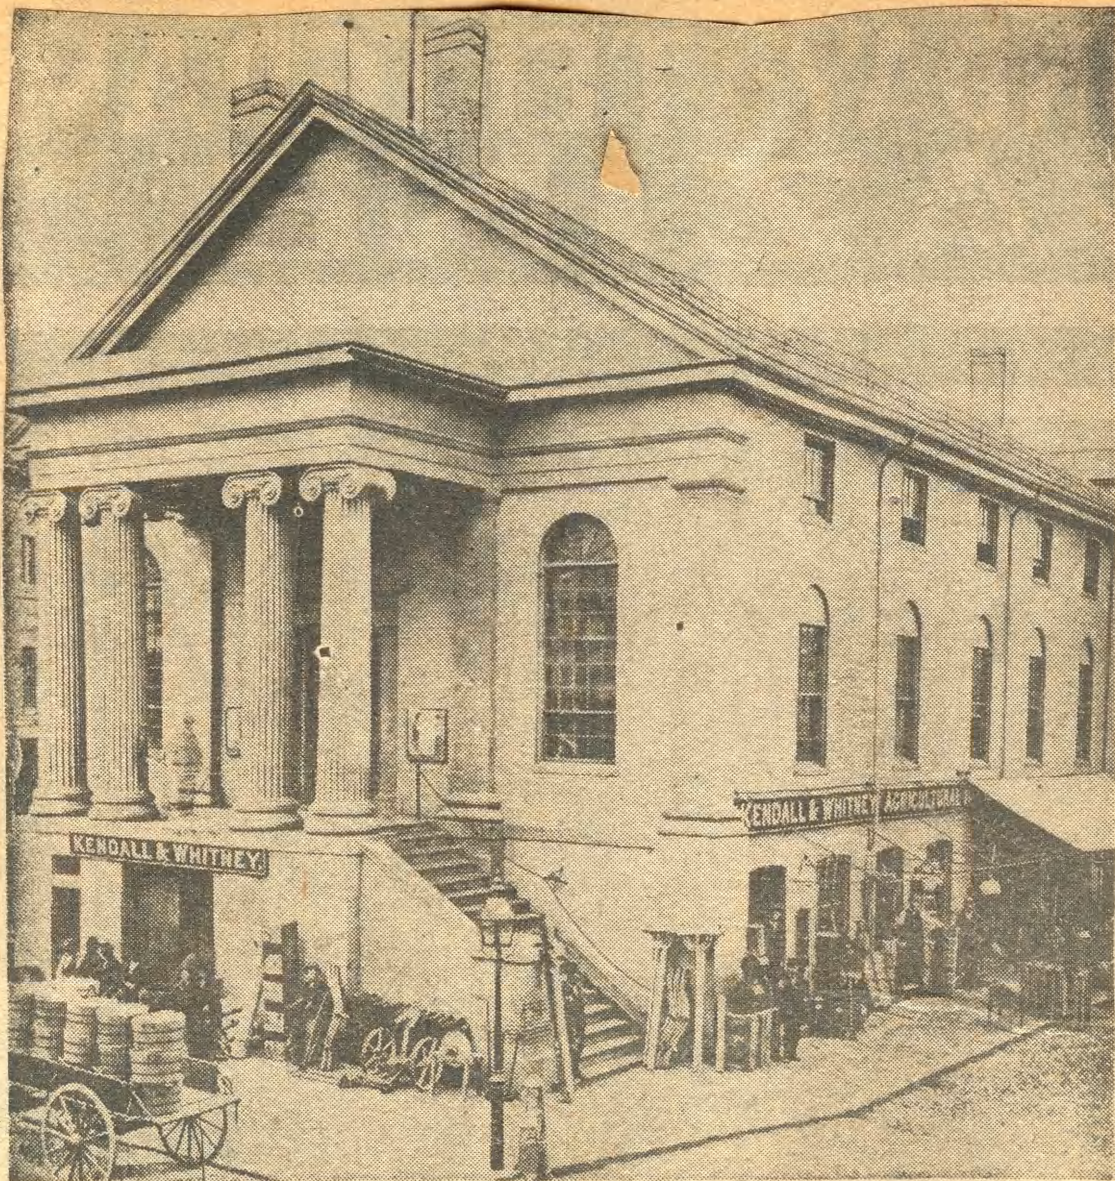

Recollections Of Maine's Past

The First Congregational Church, Meeting House Hill, South Portland, is seen here in its first location in Mount Pleasant Cemetery before it was moved across the street to its present location in 1891. When the first meeting house was erected in 1734, its frame was hewn from white oak trees cut on the premises. The building had square pews and no steeple. It was taken down in 1834 being in bad repair, and the church pictured here was built and dedicated in 1835. It remained in the churchyard cemetery until 1891 when increased noise from passing travel on Cottage Road necessitated its removal to its present site across the street.

In 1946 an annex was constructed to meet the needs of the growing congregation.

THE OLD JEFF—The Jefferson Theater, which once stood where the Sears Roebuck store now stands. Built through public sale of stock at a cost of more than $200,000 and opened in 1897, it seated 1,600. On its stage appeared such stars as Sarah Bernhardt, Richard Mansfield, Sir Henry Irving, Southern and Marlowe, Maude Adams, Ethel Barrymore, Nazimova, Billie Burke, Nance O'Neill, Mrs. Fiske, Elsie Janis, Blanche Ring, George Arliss, William Gillette, Otis Skinner, DeWolf Hopper, Fanny Davenport and others. It closed in 1933. (Another in a series of photographs of Greater Portland scenes of the past.)

The Old City Hall as it looked in 1887, a year before it was razed to make way for the Sailors and Soldiers Monument which now stands in Monument Square, once called Market Square and one of the busiest market centers in all Maine.

City Hall or Market Hall, as it was often called, was built in 1825 and was a structure so severely plain, both within and without, that the citizens finally succeeded in adding the ionic front seen here.

In 1858 the lower part of the building was rented to Kendall & Whitney and in this picture may be seen the farming and household wares displayed on the sidewalk, as they sometimes are today.

OLD HAND AT "KEEPING HOUSE"—Mrs. Undine R. Ladd, housekeeper at the Columbia Hotel, boasts a long record of keeping things "shipshape" in guest rooms in local hotels. She worked as a maid for three years at the Congress Square Hotel, served in the same capacity at the Columbia for the next 19 years, and has held the position of housekeeper there since 1937.

Men Neater Than Women,

Traveling Men Are Neatest Of All,
 Says Veteran Of 12 Years At Columbia

This is the sixth in a series on hotel jobs by Staff Writer John T. Boyd.

"Anybody that wants anything comes to me."

When Mrs. Undine R. Ladd, housekeeper at the Columbia Hotel, said that, it was in the tone of someone who takes pleasure in helping others, not as a complaint. And it had the ring of assurance that she usually can fill a request, too.

This pleasant, soft-spoken woman who supervises the crew of maids at the local hostelry came up through the ranks. She was a maid herself for 22 years before assuming her present post 12 years ago.

It was quite by accident that Mrs. Ladd began her hotel career—an accident to her husband. After he began to knit from the injury, she decided to "pitch-in" and help him financially.

A friend of hers was working at the Congress Square Hotel as a maid, and persuaded the Long Island resident to do likewise. She took the job and stayed there for three years before going to the Columbia in 1918.

"After I had been a maid for a while," she said, "I discovered that I enjoyed the work so much, all the guests I have served, and liked meeting people so, that I decided to keep at it."

She recalled that during those early years women always dressed for dinner in evening gowns, and their husbands dressed formally, too.

Tracing her experiences, Mrs. Ladd said the one occasion that stood out clearest in her memory was the time she was asked to see if a guest was still in his room.

"In those days we didn't have the same kind of locks on our doors as there are now. There was a long key, and of course a keyhole.

"I was bent over, peeking through the keyhole to see if this room was occupied, when the man inside suddenly opened the door. And there was I! Many times afterward that man used to twit me by saying, 'Still looking through keyholes?'"

Before the last war many people used to leave tips for maids, but things have changed since 1945, she asserted. In the old days, Mrs. Ladd said, some permanent guests paid her $5 a week for tending their rooms.

"This may surprise you," she remarked, "but men are much more tidy than women. And of traveling men are the most satisfactory. They're so neat and friendly."

Once she found $1,500 in bills tucked inside a pillowcase. She turned the money over to the manager. Later a man called from Portsmouth, N. H., nervously asking if the cash had been found. He got it back.

Most hotels expect guests to take towels, wash-cloths and shoe-shining cloths, but Mrs. Ladd said there is really a small percentage of people who do so.

"It's good advertising for the hotel, anyhow. Our name is on everything," she philosophized.

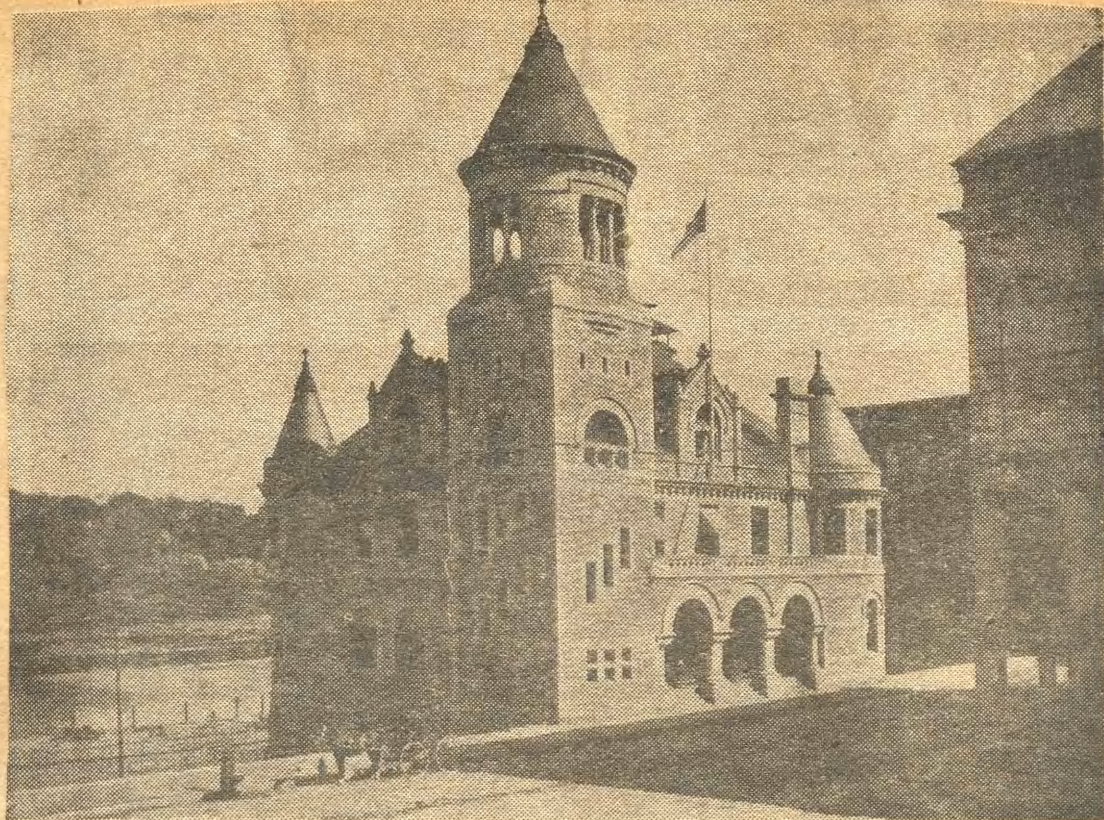

Mrs. Ladd's maids average well over 40 years of age. "I don't hire young girls. They're too undependable."

Being a hotel maid isn't easy work, but the majority of them at the Columbia have been on the job for at least 12 years.

If you're a housewife who thinks you have a tough job handling your weekly wash, consider the 6,000 pieces of laundry that come and go each week through the linen room at the Columbia. The guests use about 1,000 cakes of soap each week, too.

Besides supervising her maids, Mrs. Ladd sees to it that all linens and curtains in the hotel's rooms, dining rooms, kitchen and bars are provided, supervises the work of the cleaning man and tries her best to keep the guests happy.

"That's my biggest job," she admitted, "but most people are so nice to do things for that it really isn't a job at all."

Recollections Of Maine's Past

The Augusta Post Office as it looked in 1906 before the first addition was built. Rapidly growing State and business affairs have necessitated the construction of two additions and today the building not only houses the Post Office, but also the Maine Department of Internal Revenue.

The original building pictured here is Norman-Romanesque and this type of architecture has been maintained in both additions. The Norridgewock and Hallowsell granite, used in the original building, has also been used in the construction of the additions. The present building is one of the finest examples of this type in the Country.

Recollections Of Maine's Past

This historic tide mill on the Kennebunk River at Kennebunkport was established in 1749 by Tristram Perkins and is still owned by a member of the Perkins family.

This picture was taken in 1879 and, except for the addition of a cupola and a few shingles, the mill remains unchanged today. Now known as The Olde Grist Mill, it has become one of Maine's most popular eating places.

Inside the quaint old mill are the same wide floor boards, the hand hewn beams of the ceiling supported by ships' knees, and the wooden blinds.

The old scales, the hopper, and the slender little elevator which carried the grist up in an endless chain of tiny carriers are still as they were placed there 200 years ago.

Columbia Operator Believes In Voice With Smile

Helen Morrison On Job 8 Years

This is the last in a series on hotel jobs by Staff Writer John T. Boyd.

A smile goes a long, long way, and a voice with a smile in it can charm the most indifferent ear and melt the iciest disposition.

That's the opinion of Miss Helen A. Morrison, switchboard operator at the Columbia Hotel, and she should know. She's been "at it" for the past eight years.

"It's so easy to be pleasant," she said, "and if you're nice and cheerful to people you talk to over the phone, they treat you the same."

This diminutive lady, who is a good-will ambassador of the hotel's staff, is a native of South Portland and attended SPHS.

Her first job was at the Columbia, when a friend left there as elevator operator in 1929. Miss Morrison, who thought working in a hotel might be interesting, took her place. And she's been there ever since.

"Gee! I was frightened the first few times I went up and down. And twice shortly after I took the job I had trouble, but luckily nothing serious happened."

Has Minor Mishap

On one of those occasions, however, the cab "got away" from her and hit the shock absorbers below the first floor, jostling an elderly passenger. The oldster clambered out "boiling mad," and began cutting the air with his cane, scattering bell boys in all directions.

"I ran the elevator for 12 years, then one day I asked the manager if I could run the switchboard for a change," Miss Morrison remarked. She got her chance and made good.

"When I began in 1941," she recalled, "we had lots of servicemen here. Most of the boys were very nice and so appreciative of the calls I put through for them." She told the story about one, however, who "gave me a little trouble."

This sailor asked her to call his "girl" at a Boston number. After trying for three hours, she finally put the call through and the boy ran up a $3 toll. When she tried to collect from him he denied making the call.

"But I got the money after all," she laughed. "A couple of days later this same sailor asked me to get a local number for him, and I told him I didn't feel I should after the way he had acted the last time. He said if I'd get the number he'd pay what he owed. I decided it must mean a lot to him, so I filled his request. And he paid for both calls, too."

THE VOICE WITH A SMILE—That's the rare accomplishment of Miss Helen A. Morrison, switchboard operator at the Columbia Hotel. She has a gift, too, for remembering the names and voices of the hundreds of guests she talks to daily at the local hostelry. She's been employed at the Columbia since 1929, hopes to stay there indefinitely. Many of the guests hope so, too.

What qualifications should a telephone girl have? Miss Morrison lists them in the order of their importance: politeness, punctuality, patience.

Remembers Voices

A valuable asset, too, according to her, is being able to recognize a person's voice. And she rates remembering a person's name as important, too.

"Guests like to be called by their name. It makes them feel 'at home'. Traveling men are especially pleased if you can recognize their voice when they call in for a reservation and can call them by name."

Miss Morrison has an opportunity to meet many of the Columbia's guests when she pinch-hits for the room clerk while he has his dinner. In this way she can associate the voices she talks with and the personalities behind the voices. She prides herself on her ability to remember names, faces and voices of the guests who regularly come and go there.

Has 'Pet Peeve'

Her one "pet peeve" is caused by people who don't say "please" or "thank you" over the telephone. "It's such a little thing, but it means a lot, I think," said said.

She shrugged off the mechanics of running a switchboard as being "easy once you get the hang of it." Sometimes the "board" is lighted up like a Christmas tree, but she never gets excited or panicky.

Miss Morrison has no other ambitions, as far as her business career is concerned.

"I like my work, and I wouldn't want to work anywhere else. Hotel life is fascinating," she smiled contentedly as she turned away and expertly plugged in a call.
