The trial of Allison McFarland, who is charged with the murder of his wife (formerly Evelyn Crockett of Rockland) begins in Newark, N. J., next Monday. Mr. and Mrs. George A. Crockett, parents of Mrs. McFarland, leave today for Newark where they will be asked to testify for the prosecution. The letter received by Mrs. Crockett, written on the day of her daughter's death, may figure in the case, as showing an utter lack of suicidal intent. Mrs. and Mrs. Crockett, feel as others do, that the case against McFarland looks dark, but are content to reserve their decision until the evidence has been presented.

A telegram received here Wednesday announced the death of Miss Margaret Bancroft of the Bancroft Training school, which has summer quarters at Garthannan Lodge, Owl's Head and winter quarters at Haddonfield, N. J. Letters previously received by Rockland friends contained an intimation of Miss Bancroft's serious condition, which is understood here to have been due to a paralytic shock. Miss Bancroft was a woman of remarkable and charming personality, and her success in building up such an institution with its accompanying properties, was an achievement worthy of more than passing mention. It is understood that provisions have been made whereby the school at Owl's Head will continue.

All next week at the Methodist church the pastor with his people will observe the Week of Prayer.

The annual meeting of the Wight Philharmonic Society Thursday evening the following officers were elected: President, Dr. T. E. Tibbets; vice president, Clarence A. Pendleton; secretary, George E. When Manager Rosenberg booked a classic singing act that featured the prison scene from "Il Trovatore" he took a chance that most theatrical managers would dread, especially in a play house where the admission price appeals more to the popular classes than to the followers of classic music.

While the classic notes of that famous opera waited throughout the house yesterday the theatrically wise people watched the audience with awe, expecting that the audience would be up or uneasy. As the duo carried their notes to such an harmonious blend the audience, from pit to dome kept perfectly quiet. When the two singers, who are known this week as Harry and Edwards, finished the house shook with applause.

The singing of "Mother" previous to the operatic scene by Mr. Edwards was so musically correct that the audience called for more.

Harry Brooks was next on the bill who offered several selections of "Sleep Baby Sleep" with a yelling finish who certainly put it over in a perfect style and better than any of his predecessors. Harry styles himself as a black face comedy novelty artist, and he can do some of the most daring stunts with his teeth that is seldom seen.

Tonight and tomorrow will be shown Edison's most powerful drama "The Sign of the Cross" by Harry Brooks. Read's famous novel reproduced in 3000 feet of film. This beautiful drama will be shown in three reels. Don't fail to see it.

NEW EMPIRE THEATRE
 Yesterday was still another big day at this theatre with a new change of all-star vaudeville acts, including the great Samberg Bros., one of the greatest acts of this kind ever at the Empire and an act which is sure to draw big houses even if nothing more was on the bill. Not since the visit of Maximus have there been well developed men seen either at the old Maxwell opera house or the New Empire as these two boys. In strength they claim to have no equal and in muscular development they are in a class by themselves. In the comedy line Ted and Elsie Evans are there with a bunch of laughter, which is a scene from start to finish. Get on the joy line and have a good New Year's laugh. Four big shows are on for Saturday, and with special prices of five cents to all school children the Empire will see one of the biggest houses in its history Saturday afternoon. Doors open at 1.30 and 6.30 p. m. Look for the big electric sign.

Card of Thanks
 It being quite impossible to make individual acknowledgments of the seemingly countless greetings received by mail in recognition of my recent 89th birthday, I take this method of thanking, in the warmest manner, the many friends, near and far, who so graciously took note of this anniversary. To all such, and to all others who expressed their so kindly in that connection, I wish to extend my heartfelt appreciation.
 Henry Young.

The Knight of the Silver Star

A Romance of Drusensland

By PERCY BRENNER

Copyright, 1907, by R. F. Fenns & Co.

SYNOPSIS.

Clinton Verrall, a traveler, hears from Mustapha of a mysterious country beyond the Caucasian range. They are carried by an avalanche into this mysterious country. Mustapha is killed, and Verrall is captured by Captain O'Ryan. O'Ryan serves the king of Drusensland, who is at war with Princess Daria, whose soldiers capture O'Ryan and Verrall. Verrall meets the princess, who is beautiful. Prompted by O'Ryan, Verrall claims to be the expected knight of the Silver Star, who is to aid the princess and find a great treasure. Verrall discovers an enemy in Count Vasca.

Killing prisoners is a custom in Drusensland. Verrall is accepted as the knight, Vasca plots to defeat him in a lance tournament. Drusensland's people are prepared to go no further than the time of the crusades.

Verrall challenges Vasca. Daria gives Verrall her handkerchief for a moment and then hastily conceals it. I had almost forgotten what occasioned the gift until rudely reminded by Verrall as we left the hall together.

"I fear you have played into Vasca's hands, Verrall," he said.

"Or he into mine," he said.

"True, or he into yours. It is difficult to judge."

"Knowing so little of me, you would say, I went on, putting, I knew, his thoughts into words. "My dear Verrall, I ask only a fair field and no favor. A few true friends and a good cause and success is half won."

"Men fall in a good cause, Verrall."

"To prove that it is good to those who remain," I answered.

His news gets abroad quickly, and O'Ryan had heard what had taken place before I joined him.

"Verrall, you're an almighty fool. Sure, it's sorry I am to be compelled to tell you the truth."

"I don't fancy you've succeeded in doing it now. There was nothing for it but a bold move. Vasca had determined to force me into this fight and to leave no loophole for escape. Better surely to grip the situation firmly and trust to luck."

"Luck," he exclaimed. "I know what Vasca can do. You don't."

"I very soon shall."

"I'd like to change places with you," O'Ryan said.
"A piece of national conceit. My lance play may be as good as yours."
"Sure, that's not it at all. The one who fights dies fighting; the one who is left dies there. I'm the one who's left. That is what troubles me." And he waved his hand toward the square.
"It's a bad sign when a man barks as loudly as Vasca does," I said.
"That's a sound enough argument when civilization has knocked half the fighting power out of a man, but it's just meaningless here. In Drusensland a man doesn't bark unless he can bite. I'd give a good deal to be back in Yadasara. The place is full of blackguards, to be sure, but they're blackguards you can understand—none of these tournament businesses and nonsense of that kind."

There were three days of waiting before the tournament, three days in which I had to steel myself to behave calmly, as usual, three days during which I could hardly remain still for a moment.

The day dawned bright and sunny, but with a keenness in the air which perhaps my nervous excitement exaggerated. I woke early and never, surely, have hours been so laden with worry as they were that morning.

"We will not be the first to arrive," said O'Ryan, curling my impatience.
"It would only be to show anxiety."

"Which, of course, we do not feel," I said, with a nervous laugh.

We waited in silence until it was time to go, and in silence we rode to the camp.

Plentiful as the accommodation in the lists had seemed to me, it was evidently not too much. Every seat, every point of vantage, had been taken.

There were two entrances reserved for the knights who were to take part in the day's proceedings, facing each other and shut off from the arena by a barrier which was only opened to let a knight pass in to combat.

On one side of the lists was a gallery, in which were the marshal and his heralds, and opposite a similar gallery, where Princess Daria sat with her retinue. My eyes were riveted on this gallery, but I could not tell whether she had noticed me or whether she looked anxious or indifferent.

"Your time approaches, Verrall," said O'Ryan, looking to the harness of my horse.

The trumpets sounded, and a roar of welcome came from a thousand throats. Other combats had excited, but my entrance heralded the performance which had brought this crowd together. As I rode past the gallery the marshal and his attendants rose to give me courteous welcome. So had they risen to each knight as he entered the lists, but there was keener criticism in their eyes as they rose to me. Some friends I had among them, some enemies. I could probably have divided friends from foes by the expression on their faces. I kept my horse well in hand. I had no desire now to show off gallantly. The business before me was too serious and might all too soon give the lie to my vainglorious appearance. Slowly I walked the horse round the lists until I was opposite the gallery in which Princess Daria sat.

The princess rose, and I saluted her gravely, wondering if at that moment the same thought ran through both our brains—the thought of the handkerchief which she had given and which even then was lying close to my heart. Then I rode back and stood beneath the marshal's gallery.

"Heralds, sound the challenge of the Knight of the Silver Star—once!" he cried.

The trumpets' music filled the air, and before the echoes had died among the hills the barrier at the opposite side of the lists to which I had entered was thrown open, and Count Vasca rode into the arena.

"I accept the challenge," he cried, and then, approaching me, he said in a lower voice: "No love creeps into our combat, Sir Verrall. You have willed that it shall be for honor."

"For honor, Count Vasca, and for love, too, if you will," I answered defiantly.

"So soon a different tale! Danger gives increasing beauty to a fair face likely to be lost."

"It is rather to challenge you to your best. You harp on love so constantly perchance honor is not enough to strengthen your arm against me."

A hiss of rage was my only answer. "To achievement, knights!" cried the herald. "Sound trumpets!"

As the blast rang out I turned my horse, and the next moment the count and I were rushing madly at each other. In that instant my mind was a blank. Action had driven out even the thought of fear. We met. His lance shivered against my shield, a blow which shook me, but did not make me reel in the saddle. Either my aim was untrue or he avoided the blow, for my lance only glanced along his armor, and I continued my rush toward the opposite side of the lists. Perhaps there was some surprise that I was still in the saddle, a satisfaction that the combat was not to be a one-sided affair, that if not all I claimed to be I was at least no craven carpet knight. At any rate, a cheer rang out, and I felt encouraged.

Turning, I saw that the count had been supplied with another lance and was ready to charge again. There was a moment's pause; then the trumpets sounded, and once more we rushed upon each other. The spirit of battle was upon me. I had more confidence, and I dug the spurs into my horse, leaning forward to the charge.

I hardly knew what had happened, brought as I was to a sudden standstill by a blow which seemed to strike me full in the body. I reeled backward, but my horse, being thrown upon his haunches, saved me, and with mighty effort I succeeded in keeping my seat. As my horse struggled up I regained my full consciousness, to find Vasca's horse also struggling to his feet, his rider still in the saddle, and to see that both our lances were broken short to the handle. My blow had been as force as his. Victory was with neither of us yet.

A great roar of applause arose around us as we passed to opposite sides of the lists.

Both of us had to be given a fresh lance, and probably the count, like myself, felt the need of recovering himself a little before again rushing to the onslaught. I had no knowledge of how much of this kind of thing he could stand without showing signs of weakness, but I was perfectly sure that another blow like the last would be quite enough for me.

Even now we seemed a long time reaching each other, and my eyes refused to see my enemy clearly as he came, yet I felt that he, too, wished to end the combat; that he, too, was bent on making a desperate endeavor. Gathering all my strength together, I rushed to meet him, and even as I did so I remembered O'Ryan's advice. Perhaps even at that late moment I feared to receive such a blow as the last, but whatever the motive was that decided me I acted upon the advice. I slightly checked my pace, and as we met I swayed a little and let my lance at Vasca's helmet. The sudden action made me reel, and had the count's lance struck me then I should have been unhorsed. But for time favored me. Vasca attempted to alter his course in a similar manner, but his horse, going faster than mine, stumbled forward. His lance missed me altogether, while mine only struck him lightly. It was not my blow that unhorsed him, but his stumbling charger. The count made a frantic effort to keep his horse from falling, but in vain, and he rolled heavily from his saddle to the ground.

Shout after shout rent the air. Who could tell how the count had fallen? The fact remained that, while he rolled in the dust, I remained in the saddle. So they shouted as men will at victory, satisfied and jubilant.

"Sir Verrall! Sir Verrall! The Knight of the Silver Star!"

The count struggled to his feet. "A stumbling block is no knight's dishonor. Another horse!" he cried.

"Or on foot, Sir Verrall, as you will." I sat still and mute. As through a mist I saw waving hands in the galleries; as through a thick fog I heard my name and Vasca's.

The sharp note of a bugle aroused me somewhat. For an instant I fancied it the summons to another charge and turned my horse mechanically. But there was other business in hand. A blare of trumpets had summoned to the mimic battle, but this was one sharp, long drawn note, a note of alarm always in Drusensland. The shouting ceased; hands no longer waved. I think I saw the princess rise and leave her gallery suddenly. I knew that there was a mass of movement on all sides of the lists. Knights and soldiers rushed across the turf, and I was borne along with them to the barrier.

"To arms! To arms!" was now the cry on every side.

"Bravely done, Sir Verrall!" And I saw O'Ryan press toward me through the crowd.

"What is it?" I said almost in a whisper.

"Faith, it's what suits us best—real fighting. The enemy are in force before the town."

"I—I— And then I should have slipped from my saddle had not Sir Verrall literally lifted me to the ground."

The excitement at the news of coming conflict was so great that forthwith I was borne along with them to the barrier.

Shall we Rejoice

Gladness comes with a better understanding of the transient nature of the many physical ills which vanish before proper efforts—gentle efforts—pleasant efforts—rightly directed and assisted by the pleasant laxative remedy Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna.

Its beneficial effects are due to the fact that it is the one remedy which promotes internal cleanliness without debilitating the organs on which it acts. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

borne on the bosom of a summer wind, whispering voices calling softly, "Daria," and then a vision of her with arms outstretched, a smile upon her lips, radiant as the smile of morning, and then, before I could hear her speak, before I could throw myself at her feet, deep sleep with no dream in it.

"Time, Verrall."

I started up.

"You ought to be rested," said O'Ryan. "I've been shaking you long enough, and by St. Patrick, your snoring has been mighty."

It was early morning. The world at our feet was still in twilight, but the top of Khyran had caught the sun. I felt refreshed, but certainly not in condition for a hard day's fighting.

"It's to be real war this time, not games," said O'Ryan.

"The other was no game to me, and I would sooner wait a little while for the real fighting," I answered.

The camp was in considerable confusion as O'Ryan and I rode in.

"You're a much bigger man than you were yesterday," said O'Ryan.

Surrounded by her guards and by several knights, the princess was in earnest conversation with Count Vasca as I went to salute her. Naturally her mind was full of anxious thought, and I should not have noticed her casual acceptance of me had not a knight saluted her just before me. To him she smiled graciously; to me she gave a bare acknowledgment.

"Your prowess yesterday argues ill for many a brave knight yonder in Yadasara," Count Vasca said.

"You are gracious to say so, count," I answered.

"Truly I speak only as I have cause to know. I can prove honestly a friend, although I fear you do not so consider me."

"I have a habit of being honest too," I said.

"I have judged by actions," I said. "I ask no more than that you continue to do so," he replied.

He held out his hand, and I took it. I could do no less, and his frankness almost deceived me.

"There is work before us," he went on. "You will march your men toward Yadasara. Tonight, maybe, we will pledge our friendship in a cup of wine. Perhaps tomorrow we shall ride side by side in pleasant rivalry against our common enemies."

A New Back for an Old One—How it is Done in Rockland.

The back aches at times with a dull indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Follow the example of this Rockland citizen.

A. B. Cook, 41 Pearl St., Rockland, Me., says: "I verify my former endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills given in 1908. My kidneys annoyed me off and on for quite awhile and I had attacks of pain in my back. Often I was obliged to give up work for a week at a time. I had heard a great deal about Doan's Kidney Pills, and getting a box at Hill's Drug Store, I began their use. They acted on my kidneys at once, and continued use restored me to good health."

PLEASANT POINT

The community was shocked to learn of the death of Lizzie, wife of Ferdinand Morse, which occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alton Morse, December 28. The deceased was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stimpson of St. George, and was married a little less than a year ago to Ferdinand Morse of this place, and came to live with his parents.

Although of a very quiet nature, by her cheerful and loving disposition, she made many friends, and none knew her, but to love her. All that loving hands could do, was done for her, but God wanted her most and took her to be with him. Much sympathy is felt for the young husband. Besides her husband, she leaves a father, mother, one sister and three brothers, and a large circle of friends, to whom the sympathy of the entire community is extended. The funeral was held from her late home Saturday afternoon, Rev. Mr. Carver of Friendship officiating. A trio composed of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Orne and Mrs. Grace Maloney sang, "Nearer My God to Thee," and "We are Going Down the Valley One by One." There were many beautiful floral offerings. The pall bearers were: W. H. Trefethen, F. D. Hathorn, Leon Chadwick and Byron Davis, all K. of P. brothers of which order Mr. Morse is a member. The interment was in the family lot at Davis Point. Her age was 24 years. "She is gone, but not forgotten."

THREE-SIDED LITIGATION Creditors and Bondholders Have Slim Chance in the Matter of the Gilbert Transportation Co.

It will be of interest to Rockland vessel interests to learn that the Gilbert Transportation Co., of Noank, Conn., which went into the hands of a receiver some time ago, is now in litigation and there are three sides to the suits, the receiver acting for the company, the bondholders who are looking out for their own interests and the stockholders from whom the bondholders and the receiver want to collect. The Hartford Courant says:

"As matters now stand there is no hope that the creditors will get anything and the outlook is poor for the bondholders. If the court should hold that the stockholders are liable on their common stock holdings, there is hope that the bondholders will realize in full and that the creditors will receive a good dividend after the bondholders are satisfied."

Knox County Supreme Court

Civil Cases Being Weighed on Scales of Justice—Grand Jury May Report Tonight.

The January term of Knox county supreme court began at 10 o'clock Tuesday, with Associate Justice Albert R. Savage of Auburn presiding. Judge Savage is now the Senior Associate Justice, and was last here at the September term 1908.

The officers of the court are as follows: Chaplain, Rev. W. O. Holman of South Thomaston.

Clerk, Gilford B. Butler of South Thomaston.

County Attorney, Philip Howard of Rockland.

Deputy Sheriff, E. S. Sprague of Vinalhaven.

Messenger, Fred A. Packard of Rockland.

Reporter, W. H. Cornforth of Auburn.

Deputy Sheriffs in charge of juries: Grand Jury, Fred S. Small of Rockport; First Traverse Jury, John E. Doherty of Rockland; Second Traverse Jury, C. S. Coburn of Warren.

Other deputies in attendance are Charles F. Duffy of Camden and Ralph W. Davis of Friendship.

The grand jury retains the organization effected at the September term for the year, with Ralph W. Carleton of Rockport as foreman, and immediately got down to business in the grand jury room.

The traverse juries were impaneled as follows: First jury—Granville N. Bachelier and Charles E. Wheeler of St. George; Charles H. Burgess and Charles A. Churchill of Rockport; Joseph W. Cushman of Friendship; Stephen H. Cables and Fred H. Sanborn of Rockland; John P. French of Camden; John H. Feehan and Matthew K. Linen of Thomaston; Leslie A. Packard of Warren and Adolphus B. Ripley of Appleton. Fred H. Sanborn was chosen foreman.

Second jury—M. Bartlett and Albion Caddy of South Thomaston; Miles Ernest Cramer of Washington; W. E. Dornan of Union; Lemuel A. Grant, E. T. G. Rawson and Elkanah Spear of Rockland; George D. Hall of Warren; Willie G. Maloney of Cushing; Richard M. Moody of Hope; Marshall A. Ripley of Matineux; and George M. Tuttle of Camden. J. M. Bartlett was elected foreman.

William W. Case and John C. F. Simmons of Rockland sought to be excused from service on account of business matters and engagements but were put on the supernumerary jury list as were also Arthur W. Mills and Ernest Norwood of Vinalhaven.

The rest of the forenoon was occupied in calling the docket and making up the trial list and in hearing counsel in one or two matters by the Court.

Joseph Williamson of the law firm of Williamson, Burleigh & McLean of Augusta and the present county attorney of Kennebec county, was in attendance in connection with the damage case of McGown vs. the town of Washington. Charles W. Lovett of Boston associated with attorney Thompson in the cases of Turner vs. Hyster and Hyster vs. Turner was also on hand. Mr. Lovett has been here before, as he was counsel in the case of Lenfest vs. Robbins, tried several terms ago. The term bids fair to be nearly two weeks in length. The January term, 1909, holds the record for length, 23 days, and the shortest January term was in 1905, five days.

The case of Warren F. Davis vs. Ulysses Wotton, last term, set for trial for the first day of this term, was continued on account of the illness of the defendant so the juries were excused and only matters for the Court were taken up.

The case of Sidney E. Butler vs. Flora A. Day and R. D. Day has been deferred; Miller for plaintiff, Walker for defendant.

Tuesday morning the cases of H. L. Turner vs. Wright W. Hyster and Wright W. Hyster vs. H. L. Turner were opened to the first jury and tried to get together as the same parties are involved in each.

Mr. Turner at the time of the suit resided in Washington, and Mr. Hyster about eight miles from him, in China. Mr. Turner seeks to recover $400 for the half interest which he claimed to own in the horses Antonio, Carrie Pointer and Millie Wilkes, claiming that Mr. Hyster had agreed to pay him that sum therefor, also for cash advanced, feed furnished and balance due for board of horses, the whole amount sued for being $614.26.

Mr. Hyster is a farmer at Week's Mills and also imports, buys and sells horses and cattle. Mr. Turner boarded and trained horses for him during the period from Oct. 21, 1904, to April 8, 1905. Turner received $1 per day in the racing season, and 50 cents per day during the rest of the year, for keeping, boarding and caring for each horse and training and keeping each in condition. Mr. Hyster paying for shoeing, medicine and furnishing blankets and racing equipment. The defense claimed that the parties had settled all matters involved in this suit and the only issue submitted to the jury was whether or not there had been a final settlement between the parties by which all claims were satisfied. The defense claimed that Mr. Hyster got tired of owning horses for racing purposes and was about to bring his horses home when Turner agreed that he would board and train the horses if Hyster would give him a half interest in the mare Millie Wilkes and the horse Antonio, claiming that he thought he could mark these two horses in better than 2.20. Hyster agreed to this and the matter stood until Dec. 21, 1904, when a settlement took place and Mr. Hyster paid Mr. Turner $175 for his interest in the horses and loaned him $125 for the latter gave him his note, which note is the subject of the suit of Hyster vs. Turner.

According to Turner's figures at this time Hyster had paid him (payments had been made at various times before) enough to pay in advance to Jan. 3 and Hyster was to get the horses by the last date.

Even so, he didn't get them until April 8. Turner's figure then was $750 due him and for that and some blacksmith tools which Hyster owned, Turner sold to him half of a sulky which he owned and the other half. Subsequently Turner wished Hyster to buy another race horse for him to train and develop and wrote and saw him about it but Hyster did not buy. After that Turner wrote Hyster that he had found an unpaid board bill and on the latter refusing to pay a suit was brought for board only which was subsequently dropped and the present suit was commenced. Hyster denied that he had ever owned half of Carrie Pointer. In rebuttal the plaintiff Turner introduced evidence to show that the two horses were worth more than the price which the defendant claimed he paid Dec. 21, 1904, for Turner's half interest in them ($175) and that Hyster had been offered $600 for the mare at Waterville. Turner denied that any final settlement had been made and produced a check for $175 which he said he had on April 8, 1905, when he took his horses. "I will pay you that bill in a few days."

While Turner did not succeed in marking the horses in the 2.20 class, the jury was not asked to make "qualifications" of the horses and to show that Hyster was satisfied with Turner's work.

In the case which Hyster brings against Turner on the note the position of the defense is that the note was given by Turner to Hyster for the purpose of enabling Hyster to discount the same at the Granite National Bank and then draw against the bank a check for $175 payable to Turner on account of moneys due from Hyster for expenses in boarding horses. Turner claims that it wasn't a loan from Hyster but that the note was an accommodation note.

The case went to the jury Thursday afternoon and the findings were that $400 and not $175 was the price for the horses and that there had been no accord and satisfaction in the case of Turner vs. Hyster. In Hyster vs. Turner the jury found that $175.89 was due Hyster on the note. Lovett and Thompson for Turner; A. S. Littlefield for the defendant.

Three men were admitted to citizenship Wednesday. The only day of the term when naturalizations can take place, as follows: Myer Ross of Rockland, a native of Russia; George Gienstels of Rockport, a native of Germany; and James Arthur Plaisant of Camden, a native of Nova Scotia.

Former Bank Examiner William B. Skelton of the law firm of Newell & Skelton and Wallace H. White, Jr., of the firm of White & Carter, were in town to see Judge Savage Thursday, from Lewiston.

Hon. Herbert M. Heath of Augusta was in attendance Wednesday and Thursday and another member of the Kennebec bar, Attorney McLean of the firm of Williamson, Burleigh & McLean, arrived Thursday and is assisting the senior member of the firm in trying the case of McGown vs. Washington.

Hon. C. E. Littlefield and Charles W. Littlefield of Littlefield & Littlefield, New York City, received the glad hand at court Thursday, as did also James E. Rhodes, 2d, of Hartford, Conn., who was formerly city solicitor, and in active practice here.

The case of George E. Allen of Camden vs. Georgianna and William G. Alden of that place was opened to a jury composed of part of the second jury, supernumeraries Mills and Norwood and E. K. Winchenbach of Thomaston, the latter chosen from the audience by Sheriff Tolman.

The case was presented in behalf of the plaintiff by Hon. H. M. Heath and from his statements and those of attorney Littlefield for the defense the following points are obtained:

Mr. Allen brings the action for breach of a written contract dated Nov. 29, 1909, which was introduced as evidence, for the sale of the Berry block, so called at the corner of Main and Limerock streets owned by Mrs. Alden and for the assignment of two mortgages on the Kimball block adjoining the Berry block on the south, the first mortgage having been given by the late George W. Kimball on the whole block and the second by S. T. Kimball on his undivided two-thirds interest in the block inherited from his father, the mortgagor in the first mortgage. The first mortgage was for $5,000, and was given to the Rockland Savings Bank while the second mortgage was given to Mrs. Alden and the amount thereof was estimated as about $5,000. The last named was not in the usual form but consists of a warranty deed to Mrs. Alden and an instrument of defeasance or agreement to recovery on repayment of money loaned, given to Mr. Kimball by Mrs. Alden. The two mortgages practically covered the Kimball block so that the contract was in effect a contract for the sale of both blocks. Mr. Allen was acting for a syndicate composed of Maynard S. Bird, H. N. McDougall and D. M. Murphy, but the names of the latter did not appear, though the Aldens knew that Mr. Allen was acting for another party or parties. Five hundred dollars was paid to bind the bargain and $28,500 additional was to be paid on or before Feb. 1, 1910, less a commission of $575 to Mr. Allen. Mr. Allen was to have the income of the property to March 1, 1910, pay all taxes and assign any claim by reason of subpayment. The deed and assignments were to be subject to all leases and it was stipulated that the contract should be null and void in case Mrs. Alden was unable to obtain an assignment of the Savings Bank mortgage, in case the mortgages should be paid prior to carrying out the agreement or if the title was not found satisfactory. The plaintiff claimed the defendants refused to carry out the contract on the ground that they could not obtain an assignment of the Savings Bank mortgage and tender of the balance of the purchase price was duly made to Mrs. Alden by Mr. Allen in the presence of Judge Reuel Robinson of Camden. The plaintiff claimed that the defendants could have obtained the assignment from the bank.

The position of the defense was that Mrs. Alden did all that she could do and that the contract became void she being unable to obtain the assignment of the mortgage. It was also claimed that no tender was made to Mrs. Alden and that as Mr. Allen had first elected specific performance and endeavored to compel the same by a bill in equity, he was bringing the present action for damages, he was estopped from bringing the latter suit. The bill in equity was brought April 1, 1910, pleadments were filed and issue joined, it was admitted, but no hearing was had and the bill was dismissed.

The plaintiff on the other hand claimed that Mrs. Alden, who had the title, having refused to convey the same to Mr. Allen, was in material default and said that, as a matter of law, Mrs. Alden at the time holding a second mortgage on two-thirds of the Kimball block and the first mortgage being overdue, could compel the first mortgagee, the Savings Bank, to assign its mortgage. If this contention of the plaintiff was not correct, Mr. Heath said, they could not proceed, if it was they could go ahead on the question of damages. The plaintiff admitted twice receiving by mail the check for $500 (from Mr. Alden as agent) which was given when the contract was executed, it not having been cashed, and the same was returned in each case to Mr. Alden. The contract and mortgage were introduced, after which the case was taken from the jury and will be reported to the Law Court for decision of the legal questions involved. An agreed statement, Robinson, Heath & Andrews and Bird for plaintiff; A. S. Littlefield for defendants.

The case of McGown against the town of Washington followed and is now on trial. This is an action to recover damages for personal injuries received through an alleged defect in the highway. Williamson, Burleigh & McLean for plaintiff; Staples for town.

ROCKLAND IN WAR TIMES

The progress of the Civil War, as especially relating to the interests of our own community, is set forth in this series of articles, reproduced from the Rockland Gazette files of the corresponding period.

Naval Appointments: Capt. H. J. Sleeper, George Cables and Joshua N. Rowe, all of this city, have received appointments as acting masters in the navy, and have entered upon service. They are gentlemen well qualified for the positions to which they have been appointed.

Contributions for the Soldiers from the Ladies of Hope: We learn that the Ladies of Hope have forwarded to Co. H, Fourth Maine Regiment, contributions to the value of $120, consisting of the following articles: 34 quilts and comforters, 36 pillows, 27 pairs pillow cases, 9 sheets, 4 hop pillows, 1100 yards bandages, 6 cushions, 6 flannel bedgowns, 2 pairs drawers, 50 pairs stockings, 22 pairs mittens, with fingers, 38 towels, 3 blankets, 17 combs, 2 boxes cranberries, 2 jars preserves, 23 pounds dried apples, 2 bars soap and 2 bottles of home manufacture. The Ladies of Hope deserve much praise for their patriotic attention to the wants of our volunteers.

Capt. L. D. Carver of Co. D, Fourth Regiment, has been at home, on a short furlough, for a few days past, and returns to duty to resume his duties in camp. Capt. Carver is a good officer, and his friends were glad to find him looking so hearty and giving evidence of having thrived so well on camp fare. He represents that, in health, discipline, and efficiency the Fourth is in excellent condition, and will compare favorably with any corps in the field.

An Augusta special to the Portland Press says that Augusta may furnish two candidates for the vice presidency next year—Ex-Gov. John F. Hill on the Republican ticket, and Gov. F. W. Plaisted on the Democratic ticket. A local politician says that Gov. Plaisted's principal ambition is to be elected to the office he now holds, and doesn't believe that a vice presidential nomination could tempt him from it.

MRS. GARDNER INTERVIEWED

Wife of Maine's New Senator Tells What Grange Has Done to Make Farming Attractive—Getting Acquainted with Washington.

The following interview with Mrs. Obadiah Gardner by Margaret B. Downing, a Washington correspondent, appeared in the Sunday Globe:

From the standpoint of new blood infused into the body political, this winter will stand forth conspicuously in local annals. From Maine, so long represented by Senators Frye and Hale, come two men entirely strange to the capital, though of major importance to their own Commonwealth. Senator Johnson was in Washington for the extra session, but Obadiah Gardner of Rockland arrived only two weeks ago, and with his wife is enjoying the first taste of social and political life at the capital. Senator Johnson's wife, Mrs. Obadiah Gardner, of Rockland, arrived only two weeks ago, and with his wife is enjoying the first taste of social and political life at the capital. Senator Johnson's wife, Mrs. Obadiah Gardner, of Rockland, arrived only two weeks ago, and with his wife is enjoying the first taste of social and political life at the capital.

"In my brief experience of Washington," said Mrs. Gardner, "I note that almost every person I meet knows Maine, or rather alleges a knowledge of my State, but I find it entirely from the viewpoint of the summer tourist. Maine as a resort has an international reputation, and we are proud of her magnificent resources, but the resident takes the same sort of interest and pride in this aspect as the busy citizen does in golf tournaments or football games considering it interesting but apart from the real importance of the State.

"The lakes which make Maine the sportsman's paradise attract visitors from every part of the country, and even from beyond the seas. Our mountain ranges, and most impressive, have their worshippers and furnish a livelihood for a certain element of our population, while our traditional glory, the forest primeval, still stands majestically and isolated, and goes to make the Pine Tree State one of the most wonderful and resourceful in the sisterhood which comprises the Union.

"Maine, as an agricultural State, seems a totally unknown feature to many who have spent summer after summer along its superb sea front. This aspect of the State is important, and one in which Mr. Gardner and myself have been vitally interested for the past 30 years. Maine, as the most superficial study of the resources will convince one, is not an agricultural State, and less than half of the total acreage is fitted for any kind of crop.

"The vast forests, the lakes, which are so numerous, the magnificent mountains—all these deduct from the extent of the farming land. Nevertheless, we have one of the most flourishing farming communities in the world, and considering the number of acres cultivated we get the best returns. Potatoes have been for years one of the chief sources of wealth and buck wheat is a close competitor. Wheat is raised also, and it yields splendid returns considering the small area of wheat country which we have. The small fruits are cultivated and they add to the general prosperity of the farmer.

"My particular pride in the agricultural resources of Maine arises from the fact that the Grangers are so firmly established and that we have so organized farmers and made rural life so attractive and enjoyable that I can say that in Maine the problem of 'Back to the Soil' is almost solved. "I do not need to dwell on the fact that the deserted farms of New England formed a menace which spelled disaster bound to come with the passing years. The lot of the farmer in the bleak north was indeed one which could not appeal to the young enthusiastic youth to whom education had opened a wider prospect than drudgery of the dreariest sort for a bare living or most probably for the carrying of debts.

"The city lured many a farmer's son away. The question of helpers on the farm is still a grave one; in spite of improved prospects it became acute, in fact, a hopeless one. Here is where the Grangers came to the aid of the State and of the country.

"The organizations of farmers and the concentration of farming interests is to my mind one of the greatest blessings the country has known, and will, as the idea develops and becomes accepted in every commonwealth as it is in ours, be productive of the most important industrial results.

"The telephone and rural free delivery have, of course, contributed effectively to making the Grangers prosperous. With these powerful assistants our work has been comparatively light, but I think the principal cause of success is the feeling of companionship, the community of interests which such orders as the Grangers give its members.

"There are now more than 60,000 Grangers in Maine, and the State is fairly honeycombed with the subdivisions of the society, and there is scarcely a locality where the meetings are not accessible to all the members. It is presumably an order for men, but it is only the order, society, organization, anything you may choose to call it, where women are admitted on equal terms with men. The farmers have a right to bring their wives as members and their children over.

"For men the initiation fee is $3 and women and children $1, and for all the annual dues are 10 cents a month. There are women who are on the National board of directors, and the Grangers, and Maine has several women who are master Grangers, one of the high honors which the order confers.

There are all kinds of meetings. Those for business alone when men discuss their problems, report the results of experiments and go deep into the serious aspects of farming, present and future.

"This brotherhood is of immense value and makes every man stand together as a unit for the general welfare and not as hostile separate powers to promote his own interest, whether it be that of the community or his own.

"Then the social side of the Grangers is another of tremendous import. In the rural districts, home talent is cultivated exclusively. Someone with talent for direction finds out the boys and girls who can sing or recite, or she gets up small dramas, musicals, has papers read, anything to get people together and to improve the mental as well as the physical side of life.

"With these means at our command the Grangers have made farming attractive for the young.

"They are reared in the ideals of farming life, taught the dignity of cultivating the soil, and when the time comes to take part in the actual work they do it with pride and ambition and with no feeling that their father is defrauding them of the more subtle love of city life.

"Our boys are now content to work the farm inherited from their parents, and our girls are willing to marry the farmer boys and help keep the home in order. All this is a grateful change and due to the organization of the interests of husbandmen and to educating and encouraging and making it possible for them to enjoy intellectual and social pleasure in spite of their isolation."

"There are so many Senators and members of the Legislature here and their families resident in that locality that they frequently get up large and brilliant receptions together instead of on separate days. Tuesdays for members' wives and Thursdays for the Senatorial ladies. Monday is the calling day for all Capitol Hill, and as it is somewhat remote from the other residential sections, it is a great convenience for the callers to group their several obligations.

There are two children in the Gardner family, Mina, who was married last summer to Clarence S. Beverage of Rockland, and a son, Albert Kingsley Gardner, who is State horticulturist at Augusta. Mrs. Gardner hopes to have her son for a brief visit next month, and Mrs. Beverage will spend part of the season with her parents, and will be joined by Mr. Beverage about Feb. 1.

Mrs. Gardner has spent all her life in her present home, and her parents were prominent in the social life of the city. Her father, Charles Sher, was a prosperous business man with large industrial interests, for many years identified with Rockland, and her mother, an adjoining township, was well known in her community.

Mrs. Gardner is philanthropic and broad in her views. For years she has given her best efforts to the Grangers, and has held important offices in the order. She is of a religious trend, and attends the Congregational church in Rockland, although she is not regularly affiliated with the congregation. She and Senator Gardner will attend the same church here, which is situated on the corner of 10th and G streets.

A stranger to the Capitol, except in the matter of a few hasty visits, Mrs. Gardner is deriving much pleasure sightseeing, though she is leaving the greater part of this until her daughter joins her, about the middle of January.
