HOTELS AND SCENERY

OF KENNEBUNKPORT AND KENNEBUNK
BEACH,

With a Complete Hotel Directory.

For the benefit of those who come to our shores for the season, as well as for the sojourners for a few days, it has been deemed advisable to mention a few of the principal places of interest and amusement at these growing and attractive summer resorts. Leaving the R. R. station and crossing the bridge one enters at once into the heart of Kennebunkport village with its wide streets, broad, spreading trees and its large, old-fashioned houses built by sea captains and ship owners in the palmy days of the West India trade. The tourist can well afford to spend a day in looking over the many quaint articles of interest in this delightful, old-fashioned sort of a place.
They will notice the front yard fences of antique design, doubtless copied from foreign patterns that the builders may have seen in some trans-Atlantic town. The weathercocks of odd design, the old-fashioned knockers that have done duty since the days when great ships sailed out of this, then busy, seaport town. All these will come in for their share of his attention, and should he enter these quaint but comfortable abodes he would see queer old articles such as would set the anti-quarian's heart beating with joy.

Right in the center of the village is located the Parker House. This elegant house, combining convenient and sumptuously furnished rooms with great architectural beauty make it a most desirable summer house for those needing rest and recreation from the busy mill of life. The grounds are finely laid out and ornamented with beautiful flowers and plants. Tall trees shed down their grateful shade, while between their branches steals the invigorating air heavy with saline odors from the ocean.

Leaving the Port village, where the Norton House, a favorite resort for transients as well as regular boarders, is located, and moving toward Cape Arundel we come first, after passing the Nonantum House, which is one of the most comfortable and best managed houses at the beach, to the Highland House. This place is very appropriately named, the house being situated on a cliff overlooking the river and ocean and commanding a fine view inland. The house is designed for the comfort of the guests, as well as their amusement, as a glance at its broad piazzas and green lawns will show.

Moving on past the boat houses and Indian tents we come to the Riverside House and the Arundel. The former is located close to the river bank and on a spot of much beauty. The grounds are well kept and shady, and all in all, the house is a most attractive one. The Arundel is a mansion of imposing appearance and beauty.
While sufficiently retired, it yet gives its guests a magnificent view of the sea, calm in repose or terrific in storm as the case may be.

Passing on we come to the Glen House. All that has been said of any other house may well be said of this,
for an inviting summer house it is unrivalled. Just beyond and past the Bickford House, finely located so as to command a magnificent ocean view and one of the best patronized hotels at the beach, is the Cliff House and Glen Cottage which, under the efficient management of Mr. B. F. Eldridge, has acquired a justly famous reputation. To those who know anything of the house no words of praise are necessary. Slightly in rear of this, on rising ground, is the celebrated Ocean Bluff Hotel. This is the largest hotel in Kennebunkport, and for years has been noted as a famous rendezvous for Southern and Western people. The view from the house is indescribably grand. But a stone's throw away the waters leap and lash themselves against the "stern and rock bound coast," throwing up a vast cloud of misty spray. Every room commands an ocean view. One thing may be said of the Bluff—it is never hot there. So near the sea and so elevated is the location that no matter how torrid the day may be it is always cold here.
Crossing the river is a ferry, the only house that at first presents itself is the Seaside, kept by Mr. I. P. Gooch, one

The Wave

Careless and absent-minded people innocently give post office officials considerable annoyance and not a little amusement, and Kennebunkport is no exception. It would astonish the perpetrators to have the freaks performed in posting mail matter brought to their notice. Letters mailed without stamps is something to frequent to deserve mention. Not so often mail matter is confidently placed in "Uncle Sam's" care without any address at all, or with the most important part left out. Some thoughtless people at Kennebunkport have the habit of addressing letters to some street and number "City" as though there were only one city in the United States and that the one which is favored with their domicile. The other day a dainty little envelope was dropped in at the office bearing simply the indefinite superscription "For Aunt Emma," and not even a stamp to compensate the P. M. for puzzling his brains over it. The next day's curiosity happened to be an envelope, evidently containing a sizable and possible important letter, without stamp or address, but scrawled all over with meaningless lead pencil marks. Some such blunders as those named will account for pine out of ten of the delays and failures in receipt of mail which the public complain of.

The Whistling Maid.

(Written for THE WAVE.)

I stole to the wood away,
For the sun was hot and dry,
And down on the moss I lay,
And I gazed on the far blue sky;
I was dreaming of castles fair,
And with fairy's light-spread wings,
I flew, as a bird, here, everywhere,
To all delightful things.

Broke a sound from the woodland bowers,
Sweetest music to my brain,
And, with open eyes, I saw the flowers
Giving ears to the happy strain;
And the birds, in the shady grove,
Their songs rung wild with glee,
As tho' they answered the queen of love,
Who sang sweet melody.

I looked thro' the leafy trees,
I saw a maiden fair,
And she whistled her melodies
To the roses growing there.
Oh! her lips were as cherries red,
And her eyes as the rarest blue.
Ah, me! as I looked, she saw and fled,
Like a bird away from view.

I have heard her melodies,
I have seen her merry face
While peering thro' the leafy trees,
I have lost her in the chase,
And I wonder is she a maid
Or a woodland nymph. Ah, me!
Each day I am lost in the singing glade,
That whistling maid to see.

I have looked in her soft blue eyes,
And my heart has with passion beat,
And I listened, in love, to the tender sighs
That my bosom sung silent, sweet,
I have marked both her beauty and grace,
I have listened to her melody;
But, ah! it was not either eyes or face
Or her voice that enraptured me.

Ah! deeper I looked than eyes,
Or the rose on lip and cheek,
I read in her heart the qualities
That made me love to speak.
Ah! the pages were white and clear
That her heart had folded away;
I read of your love for me, my dear,
And mine for my young love, May.

Masquerade Ball at the Parker House.
With the brilliant spirits and indomitable desire for a good time generally, which characterizes the guests of the Parker House, it was impossible that the excellent "Jarley Wax Works" show of last week should not be followed by a Masquerade ball which took place last evening.

The exceedingly damp weather did not dampen their ardor, and the ball albeit an almost impromptu affair, came off as the Parker House entertainments always do, with great effect.
The masqueraders entered the hall in force; and after two or three dances during which the utmost ingenuity of the onlookers, who filled the seats around the walls, was exercised to discern the identity of the various individuals concealed under the attractive representations, unmasked.

There were noticed a Jack in a glaring orange garb accompanied by a sweet little Jill whose name we were unable to learn.

Oscar Wilde was as impressive as ever, though his sunflowers had somewhat of a reminiscence of Old Orchard about them, while a French cook showed the guests very plainly to whom they were to look for their daily bread.

A very impressive pair were the Card Friend, whose dancing, by the way, seemed as disordered as his pack of cards, and a modest little Quakeress, of whom the remark was made that it was of no use for her to disguise herself; she did it so well that everybody knew her at once. A stylish and genteel equestrian costume served only to reveal the pretty figure beneath, while the pirate at her side seemed to have just stepped out of the Penzance where he belonged.

A Flower Girl proved a puzzler even to those who knew her best, revealing at last a lady whose efforts have never been wanting to amuse and entertain the guests of the house.

An effective dress was that of the "Queen of Hearts," who wore all her trophies fastened upon her flowing garments.

An Irish woman, in a mob cap, was unique in her way, while a gentle little nun was a fine offset to her emphatic style.

Jack Spratt, who might have passed for a first-class Yankee Doodle, was well matched with the Goddess of Liberty, who with her dress of bunting attracted much attention.

A military costume was considered most fitting a "healer of men" and a Farmer Hayseed was represented by a gentleman well known in Kennebunkport.

Little Bo Peep must of course have her representative, and with a most becoming Greek costume, and a pink domino, a fascinating Swiss girl and a graceful Marguerite, formed a group in the entertaining procession which charmed and delighted all the spectators. The trailing garments of the Night must not be forgotten, a stylish costume spangled with stars and surmounted by the crescent of Diana; or her contrast, the light and gracious Day, whose tall and slender figure never showed to more advantage.

There were hints of repairing to Norton's for an ice cream soda, but the elders looked the other way and discreetly say no more.

The engine broke down on Wednesday morn so that the early morning trip was not made. It is now in the repair shops and Engineer Stronach handles the throttle on a different one.

In another column will be found the list of Capt. S. Brown, who wishes to dispose of his dry goods, boots and shoes, and gents' furnishings business. This is an excellent chance for an investment.

Arrived Monday night, Mrs. J. R. Low, Greenwood, Mass., Mrs. Marina Avery, daughter and son, of Cambridgeport, Mass., Mrs. E. Frankie Melville and daughter of Cambridgeport, Mass., are stopping with Mrs. George W. Maling.

Parties having boats in line and intending to illuminate will do well to read a description of their decorations in The Wave not later than Monday morning. We propose to run an elaborate account of the event.

The electric lights at the Grove Hill Hotel are remarkable for their steadiness and brilliancy. Eight thousand candle power is furnished. Mr. Morrell the engineer who has charge of them, understands his business to perfection.

REMEMBER! THE WAVE

is the only paper publishing a complete account of the grand Carnival to-night. The name and decoration of every boat in line, with a full description of the illumination, &c., will be published in Wednesday's paper. Order in advance so as not to miss getting it.

The Ocean Bluff remains crowded to its utmost capacity. Many cots are being used. Parties coming from Old Orchard to spend a day are charmed and delighted with the place and find would linger longer were there accommodations.

There will be a musicale at the Parker house next Wednesday evening, complimentary to the Amphion ladies' orchestra, which has furnished music so satisfactorily this season. A short program of choice selections will be given, followed by an informal hop. All summer visitors who wish to spend a pleasant evening socially and listen to some fine music given by charming young ladies will do well to attend this musicale. Admission 25 cents. To be had at the Parker house hall, Wednesday evening, Aug. 22, at 8 o'clock.

Mr. Melancholy.

(Written for THE WAVE.)

Out in the leafy woods

You may see him strolling alone,

Or resting beneath a shady tree,

Where the wildest vines are grown.

Strange is he in his way,

For he never companion craves,

Unless it be the flowers or birds,

Or the dead ones in their graves.

Not a white haired man is he,

For raven black his hair;

So the young and old oft marvel at

His solitude and care.

Twos only a year ago,

With a fair miss by his side,

He wandered along, with laugh and song,

Yet to-day he has no bride.

She lies neath a marble stone,

In a land of death and flowers,

And he, with her spirit, fair would walk

In the dear old woodland bowers.

And day by day he goes

To the woodlands, silent, sad;

And he seeks alone to dream of hours

With the sweet young love he had.

There is passion enough, enough in all,

But so little love, I own,

That I love this man of grief and sighs,

Who loved and still loves one.

And methinks if I should love

It would be a love as he,

Who would love me ever, in life and death,

Yes, through eternity.

BY ONE LENGTH.

Howe and Pearson Win Over Cumneck and Taylor in the Final Heat of the Canoe Race.

Two hundred and sixty-seven boats attended the races on the river Tuesday. Nearly as many were present at the conclusion of the canoe race on Wednesday. On the preceding day on account of fogs only the first prize was awarded that to Agnew and Agnew, so yesterday's race was for second prize only. There were but two starters. At the start Cumneck and Taylor took the lead but were soon passed by their opponents. When near the finish and leading by two lengths, Mr. Pearson stopped rowing, thinking they had reached "the goal of their long ambition." He discovered his mistake barely in time to prevent defeat. Both crews rowed a gamo race. Mr. Howe and Pearson took their honors and congratulations meekly and have the satisfaction of knowing that the result of the former race might have been different had there been no fogs. The result was a surprise to those who were interested in the race.

Village and Seashore Property for Sale.

The pleasantly located and beautiful homestead of the late Capt. Bradford Oakes, together with four other houses in the Port village, are for sale to wind up the affairs of his estate. His late residence is on the corner of Main and Beach streets and only about 600 feet west from the R. R. station. The house and ell are two stories, containing twelve rooms; the front gable is supported by four high, massive pillars, has a piazza, the underpinning and steps are of hammered granite, the grounds are ample, dry and thickly set with well developed shade trees. The adjoining cottage and stable will be sold separate or with the homestead if desired. This is a rare chance to purchase a very fine seashore summer or permanent residence. Further particulars can be learned of Enoch Cousens, one of the executors.

St. Ann's Church.

Rev. Mr. Small will conduct the services next Sunday at Arundel hall, at 11 a. m. Early communion in the church building at 1-4 of 8 a. m.

Rev. Edward L. Clark's Cottage.

THE WAVE representative yesterday had the pleasure of looking over the cottage of Rev. Edward L. Clark of New York. It is built of stone picked up by the seashore and put together in walls three feet thick with cement. It is adorned with terraces and towers, making it present a very striking and unique appearance. Inside the house is simply elegant. Many beautiful carvings, the result of Mr. Clark's handiwork, decorate the walls. Everything is in the old colonial style and suggestive of a hundred or more ago rather than this modern era. The views from the rooms are a charming combination of sea, river, country and village scenery. Almost all the money invested in this elegant structure went directly into the families of Kennebunkport laboring men, as the cost of the building was mainly labor. Mr. Clark has long been identified with the growth of the place and is one of the many who believe that Kennebunkport is destined to become one of the leading resorts of the country.

AFRICAN CHIROMBOS.

Creatures That Look Exactly Like Dried Yellow Grass Stalks.

My introduction to them occurred on the borders of Lake Shirwa—one of the smaller and less known of the great African lakes—and I shall record the incident exactly as I find it in my notes.

I stopped one day among some tall, dry grass to mark a reading of the aneroid, when one of my men suddenly shouted: "Chirombo!"

"Chirombo!" means an inedible beast of any kind, and I turned around to see where the animal was. The native pointed straight at myself. I could see nothing, but he approached, and pointing to a wisp of hay which had fallen upon my coat repeated: "Chirombo."

Believing it must be some insect among the hay, I took it in my fingers, looked over it, and told him pointedly there was no "Chirombo" there. He smiled, and, pointing again to the hay, exclaimed, "Moio!" "It's alive!"

The hay itself was the Chirombo. I do not exaggerate when I say that that wisp of hay was no more like an insect than my aneroid barometer. I had mentally resolved never to be taken in by any of these mimetic frauds; I was incredulous enough to suspect that the descriptions of Wallace and others where somewhat highly colored; but I confess to have been completely stultified and beaten by the very first mimetic form I met. It was one of that very remarkable family, the Phasmdie, but surely nowhere else in nature could there be such another creature. Take two inches of dried yellow grass stalk, such as one might pluck to run through the stem of a pipe; then take six other pieces nearly as long and a quarter as thick; bend each in the middle at any angle you like, stick them in three opposite pairs, and again at any angle you like, upon the first grass stalk, and you have my Chirombo. When you catch him, his limbs are twisted about at every angle as if the whole were made of one long stalk of the most delicate grass, hinged in a dozen places, and then gently crushed up into a disheveled heap. Having once assumed a position, by a wonderful instinct, he never moves, or varies one of his many angles by half a degree. The way this instinct keeps up the delusion is indeed almost as wonderful as the mimicry itself; you may turn him about, and over and over, but he is mere dried grass, and nothing will induce him to acknowledge the animal kingdom by the faintest suspicion of spontaneous movement. All members of this family have this power of shamming death; but how such emaciated and juiceless skeletons should ever presume to be alive is the real mystery. These Phasmdie look more like ghosts than living creatures, and so slim are they that, in trying to kill them for the collecting box, the strongest squeeze between finger and thumb makes no more impression upon them than it would upon fine steel wire, and one has to half guillotine them against some hard substance before any little life they have is sacrificed to science.—Good Words.

the of pioneer hotel keepers of this vicinity. The beach for a mile in length is owned by the proprietor of the Seaside House and affords excellent bathing facilities.

Following the beach we near the Bass Rock House, a fine large hotel which in the fifth year of its existence can look back with pride to its record and to the number of guests that have patronized it. Half a gun shot away is the Granite State House, well known as a favorite resort for many others than New Hampshire people. Located as it is directly on the beach, the location is a most desirable one for those wishing to be near the water. Still farther on is Cove Cottage, which for genuine comfort is second to none on the beach. Under its present management it had a very prosperous season last year and will undoubtedly do so this season.

Up the beach a little is the well known Sea View house. This house always has a long season beginning early in June and not ending until far into September. Up the Kennebunk road from the beach is the new Eagle Rock House which is admitted to be one of the strongest built and most desirably located houses at the beach. This is its second year and it is rapidly filling up and bids fair to have a most successful season. On up the road and situated about five minutes walk from the beach is the Beach House of Owen Wentworth. Mr. Wentworth began taking boarders in 1865 and his success since then speaks well for the care he must have given them.

But in this journey the tourist has skipped the finest fitted up hotel at the beach and one whose location is second to none. We refer to the Grove Hill House. Located about three minutes walk from the beach, on a high elevation, with beautiful sloping lawns and green terraces, the house stands out in bold relief. Steam elevator, electric lights, a mineral spring and every modern convenience for the comfort of the guests is destined to make the Grove Hill House stand second to none on the coast. When the visitor has been these rounds he has by no means seen all there is to be seen at Kennebunkport and Kennebunk Beach.

There is Blowing Cave, Spouting Rock, Aquarium, the piers and numerous romantic little nooks along the coast which will well repay the tourist for visiting. All are places of great natural beauty, but they need to be seen to be appreciated and will have to be written up later.

PRESIDENTIAL CORNS.

A Washingtonian Who Has Attended the Toes of Many Presidents.

There is an old chiropodist in Washington who has doctored the corns of all the great men in the country for the last third of a century. I asked him the other day how many Presidents had sat in his chair.

"Let me see," he said. "I believe I have had every one of them since the time of Buchanan. I came to Washington in his administration, but had not much practice then. People used to doctor their own corns. Several times a year I went to the White House while Lincoln was there. Both he and his wife had very troublesome feet. While I was operating on a clergyman who had come to see him about extending the work of the Christian Commission in the army. They were very much astonished when they were shown into the room where he sat on a table with his bare feet upon a chair, and I do not know of any other President who would have received so dignified a delegation under similar circumstances, but his time was very valuable and he did not want to keep them waiting. He told a number of funny stories about his experience with corns and bunions, and very soon the doctors of divinity recovered from their astonishment and began to exchange views on the subject. Then they sobered down and presented their case to Mr. Lincoln, who promised to issue the order they wanted."

"At another time I was with him when Secretary Stanton came over from the War Department with the news of a great victory, and the President was so pleased that he jumped around the room with bare feet like a boy."

"I never had much to do with Johnson, and never treated him but once that I remember of, when he came to the office. Grant had very good feet. They were quite small for a man of his build, and he had little trouble with them. I do not remember having treated him more than three or four times while he was President, although after he went out of office he came down here on several occasions. He was visiting General Beale. I believe it was after his trip around the world."

"Hayes sent for me only once, but Garfield was a regular customer all the while he was in Congress, and after he became President. I suppose I have his name twenty or thirty times on my books. He was always troubled with corns. The day before he was assassinated a colored man in footman's livery came into my office and asked if I could treat General Garfield at once, as he was to leave town the next day. I had a patient in the chair, but he kindly consented to give way for the President, who then came up, and was here for half an hour. Arthur never had any trouble with his feet—he always was very careful about his shoes—but I was sent for several times while he was President to treat members of his family or guests."—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

CHILDHOOD'S JOYS.

How a Good Man Was Obeyed by a Crowd of Little Ones.

"Now, children," said the superintendent at a Sunday-school festival the other night, "we are going to open the doors of the dining-room and I want you all to be the little ladies and gentlemen you always are, and march out quietly and in order and take your places at the table and sit quietly there until you can be waited upon. The doors will now be opened."

The doors are opened and the following remarks coming from the "little ladies and gentlemen" will show how their dear superintendent was obeyed:

"Stop yer crowding!"
"Git off me!"
"Push me again, will you?"
"Hit me if you dare!"
"Back back!" from the superintendent.
"I got this chair first!"
"You never!"
"I did!"
"You didn't!"
"I shan't give it up!"
"Teacher, make him!"
"Gimme some cake!"
"I want some ice-cream, quick!"
"Fetch along your frozen pudding!"
"Where's my cream?"
"Stop pushing this table!"
"Let me alone!"
"Boys!" says the superintendent, jumping on a chair and shouting like a sea-captain in a storm. "If you don't look out you'll upset that table, keep quiet and—"

"Is that ice-cream coming to-night?"
"You got my spoon!"
"I ain't!"
"I saw you grab it!"
"Never!"
"Here! bring some spoons this way!"

"Hi, Toddy, throw us a slab o' that cokenut cake, will ye?"
"Here she comes!"
"Let her fly—who stole my cream?"
"Order! order! order!" but there is no order.—Detroit Free Press.

THOUSANDS OF MOTTOES.

How Mercantile Signs About Credit and Other Things are Made.

It is something a little startling to hear a man say that he "has 3,000 mottoes." Just one good all-round, working motto for every-day use is about as much as any body ought to try to have and live up to. But a manufacturer on Canal street claims to have "3,000, and all different, the largest stock in the world, of various sizes, in all colors and styles." At that point the thing begins to look a little clearer. He doesn't keep so many in order to live up to them himself, or pretend to, as he might if they were glittering generalities, such as "I'd rather be right than President," or "God bless or board-house." He constructs them for others, and they have a directly pertinent bearing upon trade interests that keeps them in constant demand; as, for instance: "Poor Credit is dead, but Cash still lives;" "Credit to-morrow, not to-day;" or the outburst accompanying a picture of a man dangling from a gallows:

This man was hung,
But don't you fear,
For "hanging up"
Is played out here.

Sometimes he descends from those playful fancies to such presumably matter-of-fact statements as "Our goods are unsurpassed," "come in and see our new stock," "Our prices are the lowest," and he calls those mottoes, too. He is not quite positive that "This style, $3," or "Simply elegant, 75c," should not be classed as a motto, by reason of the words added to the figures raising the inscription to a dignity above that of a mere "price card." Call it what you like if you only buy it, and you must be hard to suit if you can't find in his stock the motto you want. But if you can not he will produce it for you in a few minutes. His mottoes are painted upon cardboard of various colors, and upon black or white oil-cloth, and are in almost infinite variety of tints and styles. They are executed with very rapidly-drying paints, water colors when laid upon card-board, and a more durable preparation when put upon oil-cloth, which is intended to make a wet-weather sign. Out-of-town merchants buy his largest and grandest products, country clothiers especially affecting styles that seem to be across between a circus poster and a Good Templar's regalia. The opposite extreme is reached in the big square block-lettered legends, in plain black and white. "Forton's Ice Cream," or "Russell's Ice Cream," for city use. These he paints literally by the thousand.

Cardboard "mottoes," 11x14 inches, in assorted tints, are sold for $2 a dozen, and for $6 per dozen one can buy them 22x28 inches in size and of such gorgeous variety of colors as would discount Joseph's famous coat. Oil-cloth signs come rather higher, but last longer. One that is 21x27 inches cost 75 cents, and a very big one, 21x54 inches, $1.50. The little price cards are so cheap that their prices hardly seem to cover the cost of material.

He employs four men to lay out the letters in outline, and a couple of boys to fill in the solid colors in the larger letters; work that is done with surprising rapidity, accuracy and taste. From the facts that he has been called upon to supply considerable quantities of his pretty-colored cards for use in England, and that English painters he has employed tell him they never saw such work done over there, he believes that our American style of cardboard color decoration for commercial use is practically unknown in Great Britain. His business amounts to about $10,000 per annum, and is good all the year through, except in the months of July and August, when it temporarily wilts. It is his boast, which seems to be sustained by the facts, that there is not a trade or business, or hardly even an office requirement for any thing in his line that he is not ready to meet at any moment from his stock. The principal strain on the intellectual department of his establishment is in the invention of new and forcible ways of presenting the "No credit" idea, and he has done so much in that line that he has come to regard that as the principal one of his "three thousand mottoes" for his own observance.—N. Y. Sun.

A Jail-Bird's Cruel Joke.

"I had a funny experience once," said a young farmer. "When a boy I confess I was pretty green. I lived with my father upon a farm near Columbus and used to haul wood into the city and sell it for him. One day I had entered town with my customary load, when, as I passed a large building, some one poked his head partly out of a window and asked if the wood was for sale. I replied in the affirmative. 'Well, throw it over the fence,' came back from the upper window. The house was surrounded by a high wall, but I managed to pitch it over, and then went around to the front gate for my pay. I could not get in. I hammered and called in vain, when some passer-by, attracted by my frantic efforts to gain entrance, inquired what was the matter, and informed me that the building was the jail. One of the prisoners had played a joke on me. I could not get my money or the wood back and returned home with empty wagon and pockets."—Atlanta Constitution.

Constant disposition to clear the throat, hacking cough, dimness of sight, pain over the eyes, pain in one or both temples, roaring in the ears, pain in the back of the head, nose stopped up, sick stomach, dizziness, poor digestion, no appetite for breakfast, you feel a general depression, imagining you have dyspepsia liver trouble, lung disease, and you are treated by your physician for various diseases, yet you get no better, and are advised to change climate, and in the matter of a very short time you are a confirmed invalid, and nine out of ten cases run into a confirmed case of consumption. Now, reader, why is this? We will tell you; Catarrh is an ulcer formed in the posterior nerves just above the uvula, the passage between the nose and the throat; the ulcer continues to eat and discharge a poisonous flow of pus, running down the throat into the stomach and lungs. This, my friend, is what causes the constant clearing of the throat. Can you wonder why you do not have good health with all this poisonous matter constantly running into your stomach? The remedy is applied directly to the ulcer, cleanses and heals in a few applications. The treatment is very simple and harmless.

Mrs. John P. Moulton.

Saco, Me., Aug. 28, 1888.
My wife suffered terribly from rheumatism and neuralgia for 10 years; was prostrated most of the time; each acute attack being severe. At last, 15 months ago, she took to her bed remaining there for over a year. Suffering tortures indescribable. For months I did not sleep, and but stood over her trying to relieve her terrible pains. At first large doses of morphia seemed to relieve her some, but at last even that in enormous doses had no effect whatever. Finally she returned to take Dr. Cobb's Rheumatic Cure, and in twenty-four hours her pain left her and she was able to walk about the room. Next day she walked to the gate, and the day she walked to the gate, and in ten days walked a mile without inconvenience and a fortnight was entirely well and able to do her housework, and has remained in perfect health since; praise God for this wonderful remedy.

From all over the country come thousands of statements of the wonderful cures made by this medicine. This medicine is not a stimulant. It cannot cure these blood diseases by application to the skin. This remedy destroys the impurities from the blood and is a sure cure for rheumatism and neuralgia. It is also one of the best tonics in the world, and strengthens the stomach, nerves and kidneys. Send for circular containing the statements of persons cured in your own town. Prepared only by
