She was born in Hampden, October 7, 1846 the daughter of the late General and Mahala Wyman Grant. Her parents died when she was a child and her early home was with relatives in Pittsfield and Harmony, August 13, 1865, she married Edmund Q. Frost, who had just returned from a four years' service in the Civil War in Co. D, Ninth Maine Regiment. Their married life was congenial and happy. They celebrated their golden wedding August 13, 1915, at their home on Cedar street with only a small family gathering because of Mrs. Frost's then impaired health. Their early home was in St. Albans, but in 1870 they moved to Palmyra, where Mr. Frost engaged in farming, etc. In 1902 they located in Pittsfield and resided there until September, 1914, when they came to Belfast to be near their only son, Clarence E. Frost, who had moved here from Pittsfield in 1912. Mrs. Frost was for many years an active and consistent member of the Free Will Baptist Church. Ever considerate of the comfort of those about her she was present in the homes of neighbors and friends in times of sickness and sorrow. She did well and cheerfully her woman's part in an active life. She is survived by her husband and son, and by one sister, Mrs. Emma G. Frost of Palmyra. A prayer service will be held at her late home today, Thursday, at 10:30 a. m., Rev. Horace B. She was born in Belfast, the daughter of Orris G. and Emma Hammen Hall. She was twice married. First, to Charles L. Ward of New York, and later to Charles H. Brier, who is employed by the United States Dredging Co., and with whom she has spent the winters for many years. Last winter she was in Providence, R. I. She was a devoted wife and mother, and her chief interest was in the family circle. For years she had been a member of the Belfast Baptist church and its societies and was an earnest worker in the W. C. T. U. She is survived by her husband, who by two daughters, Mrs. Goldie Ward Carter, and Miss Helen G. Brier; by her mother, now Mrs. Emma Patterson of Belfast, and by two brothers, Leslie T. Mrs. Hadassah J. Bangs, widow of Col. I. S. Bangs, died Sept. 15th at her home in Augusta, aged 82 years. She had been an invalid for the past few years, but was able to be about the house somewhat until about a week before her death, when she suffered a shock from which she never recovered. She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Miliken of Burnham. She was married to her late husband in early life and moved to Augusta. One son was born to them, who died several years ago. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Mary Alden of Portland, and by three nieces, Miss Susan Miliken, Mrs. May Noyes and Mrs. Walter Emerson, all of Portland.

Miss Rosella H. Evans passed peacefully away Sept. 9th at the home of her sister, Mrs. L. W. Bennett, in Seaboard. Everything that could be done for her comfort and pleasure was done by the brother and sisters. She had been about as usual, calling on friends in town only the week before her death. She was a member of Maiden Cliff Rebeek Lodge of Camden. The funeral services were held Sept. 12th, Rev. J. M. Palmer officiating. The floral offerings were many and beautiful, especially those from her Knox Mill friends, where she had worked for a number of years. She leaves to mourn their loss one brother, Eden C. Maddocks of Camden, and two sisters, Mrs. V. K. Cummings of Camden and Mrs. L. W. Bennett of Seaboard.

Joseph Grant Mudgett, the last of nine sons, all of whom lived eighty years or more, died Sept. 14th at his home in Barre, Vt., at the age of 90 years. Mr. Mudgett was a native of Stockton, Me., and as a young man was employed for several years as a Government inspector in Vinahaven, Rockland and Portland, Me. Later he was engaged in the granite business in Barre and Ryegate, and went to California after the death of his wife eight years ago. Alone he crossed the Continent last May to be near the grave of his wife in Barre. He is survived by his daughter-in-law and several grandchildren.

John A. Clark, who was in Sherman's army in the famous march to the sea, died Sept. 15th at his home in Machias, aged 74. He served in Co. D of the 2nd Maine Cavalry. He was in several battles, and two horses were shot from under him in one engagement. Since the war he had been in the employ of the lumber mills at Machias. He was an officer of Bradbury Post, G. A. R., which conducted the funeral service Sunday at the M. E. church. He leaves three sons, Jacob Clark of Methuen, Mass., Frank and Fred Clark of Machias, and a daughter, Mrs. Joseph O'Donnell of Portland.

Col. Charles C. Burrill, president of the Burrill National Bank and treasurer and trustee of the Hancock County Savings Bank, both of which institutions he founded, died Sept. 17th at his home in Ellsworth, aged 78 years. In addition to his banking interests, he was engaged in the insurance business. He served as a member of Governor Frederick Robie's staff and was prominent in the fraternal orders.

State of Trade.

Activity. A record trade at record prices. Rather better accounts as to crops. High prices seem to offset some of the yields. New high level for Bradstreet's index number. Labor scarce. Car shortages press on some industries. Money easy, collections good, speculation active. New high levels for stock prices. —Bradstreet & Co., Sept. 16th.

In Northport Again.

"It was eighteen years ago," said Mr. Dyer, "that Belfast parties used to come to my place for lobster dinners." His Northport farm bordered on Deep Cove, and in a cottage on the shore, occupied later in the season by a Philadelphia family, the lobsters were served, with such accompaniments as the parties chose to bring with them. Mr. Dyer having been notified beforehand, a party would be made up that comfortably filled one of the big backboards of the Belfast Livery Co., and of course it included "Dana," who held the ribbons. It seems hard to realize that automobiles were not then in evidence. I don't think that any of the party were specially attracted by the scenery. Their attention was wholly directed to lobsters—about two pieces of "counts" was the average consumption—but one of the party discovered that there was good cunner fishing off the shore in the direction of Wright's Point, near by, and where for many years the Diessels of Philadelphia occupied a cottage and had a wharf and boat-landing in the cove above.

But the scenic attractions of this section were not to go unrecognized. Some years ago Mrs. Louise J. Pratt, having previously become the owner of Bald Rock, bought the dyer farm, giving Mr. Dyer a life lease of his home and retaining him as caretaker of the property. The dyer homestead is in a comparatively level area a little distance from the shore, with rising ground at the rear and on the west side, where it attains the highest elevation just before reaching the highway, the summit crowned with a grove of fir trees. On this eminence, commanding a wide view of the bay and overlooking Deep Cove and the islands opposite, a pavilion was built, and visits there were especially enjoyed by Mrs. Pratt's father, the late Edward Johnson, who from earliest boyhood had been interested in nautical affairs, and loved to watch the passing shipping. Last year Mr. Pratt had a cottage built on the site of the pavilion, and though designed at first as a place where the family might go as formerly to the pavilion, or entertain friends for the day, it developed into one of the most attractive cottages, both as to exterior and interior, in this section and would make a charming summer home. The builder was J. G. Aborn of this city and the workmanship is of the best. A detailed description of the cottage, its dimensions, plan, etc., was published at the time of its completion, and need not be repeated here.

On approaching the cottage from the city only the chimneys are visible over the dark fir trees that shut off the building from the highway. A driveway through this grove brings the car to the entrance, which leads directly into the living room, a spacious apartment with many windows, which answer the double purpose of flooding the room with light and affording most charming views of sea and shore and hill and vale. The finish of the room is of cypress and at each end is a fireplace, and in the larger one, whose dimensions recalled the old-time fireplaces in which swung a crane and where all the family cooking was done, there was a cheerful blaze the other day, heightened from time to time as the hostess threw upon the fire a handful of pine cones, taken from an old brass kettle that had been used in the early days as a dye kettle.

Not far away, on the road to Duck Trap, is the Pennington place, of which the writer had heard much and where a brief call was greatly enjoyed. I recall hearing soon after the Penningtons had established their summer home here that they dated their notes to friends "Nine Miles from a Yeast Cake," and some were horrified at this designation. Whether this is the name adopted for one of the most attractive summer estates on the coast of Maine we cannot say, but it is a departure from the many hackneyed titles, and has the additional merit of truth. It is nine miles to Belfast and the same distance to Camden. I knew of a Bayview House from which the bay was not visible, and the only view was of the interior of a lively stable. There may have been a bay horse or two in the stable, but as to that I cannot say. Then a two-story colonial residence with the pillars in front was christened "Larch Cottage," though I am sure there was not a larch tree on the grounds. Of like misnomers there is no end. You find them everywhere, not only as applied to summer homes, but to hotels and restaurants.

While it may take the Pennington's Mercedes car fifteen minutes or so to go to Belfast or Camden for a yeast cake they have all the modern conveniences and the comforts of a city home under their own roof. A driven well, an engine and water tower furnish an abundant water supply for the bath rooms and for all domestic purposes. The old house on the place was retained and a two story addition was built on the front to accommodate the family and the many guests they entertain during the season, and the interior is most attractive, especially the living room with its cheerful open fire. The call was made in the Pratt car, with Mr. Alfred Johnson acting as chauffeur, and accompanied by our host we went down to the shore, passing first through a grove of trees and then coming to a broad expanse of cleared land. The view from a pavilion at the water front was a surprise. The view it commanded was from Turtle Head to Owl Head, with the intervening islands, and landward the Northport and Camden hills. Just above in a little harbor Mr. Pennington's cabin cruiser, "Black Rabbit," rode at her moorings, and a pier extended from the shore to the water mark. The Pennington's not only have a broad frontage on the bay but their estate extends back to Knight's Pond, the shore there is a nice beach, and where they have boats, etc., so that they can have fresh or salt water bathing at will. There is a hill quite near the house that might pass for a mountain, there are woods and clearings, and we believe this estate to be unique among the many on the Maine coast in its attractions and advantages.

It does one Maine-born and bred good to meet the summer people and become imbued with their enthusiasm over the Maine climate and the Maine scenery. People pay large prices for paintings; works of art that are unwelcome to the owner, while the scenes of nature are ever changing with the passing clouds and the alternating light and shade. The water may be like a mirror, reflecting on its surface the shores and islands; or storm-tossed, its surface broken into angry waves, crested with foam, that send up showers of spray as they break upon the rock-bound shore. On the day of which I write we were specially favored in the atmospheric conditions. The wind at first was easterly, the sky grey and the water leaden-blue; but it was clear enough to distinguish the Mt. Desert hills and Isle au Haut from both the places visited. Before starting from Belfast the moon was showing itself occasionally, and when on the way home we were treated to a most gorgeous sunset. It was a day to be remembered, not alone for its scenic attractions but for the pleasant people met and the hospitality enjoyed.

THE CHAPEL IN GROVE CEMETERY.

Attention is called to the new chapel now being built in Grove cemetery. This chapel is for the free use of everybody, as occasion may need, and such a chapel has long been very much needed in this city. Furthermore, it will add very much to the attractiveness of Grove cemetery. By the kindness and generosity of Charles R. Swift and W. Augustus Swift, and a few others, who voluntarily contributed goodly amounts, the trustees have gone ahead with the work, and the result will be a fine and convenient chapel, and a lasting monument to the generosity of the givers. I wish to call the attention of every reader of The Journal that we still lack about $600 of enough to finish and pay for the building. We would ask all good citizens of Belfast, or former citizens who are still interested in the welfare of their home city, to contribute whatever amount they can feel to give toward this most worthy object. Any contribution, however small, will be very acceptable, and be much appreciated by the trustees. We all dislike very much to go out and personally ask each individual for a contribution, and would like everybody to understand that we need this money for the general good of the inhabitants of Belfast or visitors in our midst. So let us have your voluntary gift. Let your contributions come right along, and we will give ample notice when we have got what we need to finish the work. Make checks payable or pass the money to Charles R. Coombs, Treasurer. CHAS. F. SWIFT, R. H. HOWES, CHAS. R. COOMBS, Trustees.

MAINE FEDERATION OF WOMAN'S CLUBS.

The business sessions were presided over by the president, Miss Fanny E. Lord of Bangor, vice president, presided. Reports of the various officers and committees were read, showing that the revised membership list of Maine clubwomen numbers more than 6500. Nine clubs were admitted to the federation as follows: Cosmos Club of Lewiston, Lithgow Club of Winslow, Round Table and Current Events Club of Columbia Falls and the Writers Research Club, made up of writers who contributed to the federation book, with headquarters at Old Orchard. Mrs. Grace A. Wing of Auburn, federation president, gave her annual address Thursday and reports were made by the corresponding secretary and the treasurer. Three sessions were held Thursday, and the program for the business sessions was practically completed. The matter of revising the constitution was discussed at some length but no definite action was taken. The geologist's report included in the list of those who had passed away during the year Mrs. Hiram P. Farrow of the Belfast Woman's Club. It was voted to publish a new book, a collection of the prize stories written by Federation members, to be ready for circulation at holiday time, the Federation guaranteeing the sale of an edition of 2,000 copies. At the opening of the session Thursday night an informal reception was held. In the receiving lines were the president, Mrs. Wing, and members of the executive board, Miss Fanny Lord of Bangor, Mrs. Ezra White of Lewiston, Mrs. Myrtle White of Presque Isle, Mrs. C. F. Roberts of Portland, Mrs. S. C. Ward of Lewiston. Musicians from the Kineo House orchestra assisted. The management provided motorboat trips for the visitors during the day. The annual session closed Friday after a morning business session. Amendments to the constitution were adopted providing that the annual session be held in the spring and a session in the fall, abolishing the mid-winter session; establishing the office of second vice president; and making the state secretary an ex-officio member of the executive board. Resolutions were adopted favoring National prohibition, a State congress of vocational school instructors, the appointment of matrons for the care of female prisoners in all police stations, jails and prisons of the State, and the making of kindergartens a part of the State school system. After some discussion a resolution "that we urge should show in State and National Government" was passed. Officers were elected as follows: Mrs. Grace A. Wing of Auburn, president; Miss Fanny Lord of Bangor, vice president; Mrs. Myrtle L. White of Presque Isle, recording secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth C. Porter of Westbrook, treasurer.

WEDDING BELLS.

LINTON-CHAMBERLAIN. Basil F. Linton and Miss Elizabeth M. Chamberlain were married at the Methodist parsonage at 8 p. m. Sept. 16th, Rev. Horace B. Sellers officiating and using the single ring service. They were unattended. The bride was becomingly gowned in light blue brocade silk with white lace trimmings and white accessories. THE WAR NEWS.

German positions exceeding four miles in length were captured last Saturday night and Sunday by the British and French armies in the continuation of their offensive north and west of the Somme river in France. In addition quantities of war material and a large number of prisoners fell into the hands of the Entente Allies—700 prisoners being taken by the French alone. Heavy counter-attacks against the British Sunday were repulsed with large losses to the Germans, according to London. The advance of the Allies continued in the Somme region until checked by inclement weather. Heavy battles are reported in progress on the eastern front in Russia, Galicia, Transylvania, Rumania and on the southern front in Macedonia, and the Germans are claiming success over the Russian troops along the Stockhold river.

Eastern S. C. 230 to be Reorganized.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 15. A step toward the reorganization of the Eastern Steamship Corporation, which has been in receivership the past two years, was taken in the United States court today when Judge William L. Putnam granted a decree of foreclosure and sale of the property. The court also ordered the sale of the property not embraced in the mortgage or deed of trust. The date for the sale will be fixed later. The lowest price receivable on the mortgaged property is to be $35,615,000 which is 60 percent of the total bond issue. The property will be sold in two parcels, one consisting of the Union property at Boston, at an upset price of $200,000. Hon. Frederic E. Boothby of Waterville is a candidate for State treasurer. Mr. Boothby only made his wishes known on the assurance that there is thus far no avowed candidate. Frederic E. Boothby is the present mayor of Waterville and is well known to the people of Maine as to need no introduction or enumeration of the public trusts he has held.—Keenebe Journal.

Up the Missouri.

Military Men and Matters at Fort Leavenworth.

II.

What follows is mainly compiled from letters written at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas Territory, in May, 1858, and published at that time:

May 11, 1858. Left St. Louis on the Pacific railroad, so called because it is hoped that at some future day it may be extended to the Pacific coast. (It may be added here that it was then the only railroad west of the Mississippi river.) A short distance from the city we whizzed through three tunnels and a great part of the way was through high ledges. We crossed the long bridge at the Gasconade, where a terrible accident had taken place a short time before. The steamer Silver Heels, taking on freight here, had on board Gen. Persifer F. Smith and staff on their way to Fort Leavenworth.

On arriving at Kansas City, where the steamer F. H. Aubrey was awaiting the arrival of the train, we went on board for the trip up river. We got one of the best staterooms, but some twenty or thirty passengers were not so lucky and had to sleep on the cabin floor. The boat had been built only five years, but was so flimsily constructed that she was all cut of shape, and it looked as though a person with a pair of heavy boots might kick her upper works off in a few minutes. The great difficulties in navigating the Missouri are snags, sawyers and bars, and it is often necessary to back, go sideways, or round and round, to get ahead. Just after dark a snag poked itself up through the deck, frightening some of the passengers. That night what did we not suffer from the permanent tenants of our stateroom. An old rhyme tells us that

There are small bugs with peaked heads
That do inhabit people's beds, and they were in ours in such numbers that I resigned my bed in their favor.

We were six hours and a half in the night getting 161-2 miles ahead, and to run on a bar three or four times a day was a common occurrence. The bluffs all along the river are filled with soft coal which can be dug out with very little labor and is sold for 8 cents a bushel. At Lexington there is a hemp factory, two or three saw mills and a large flour mill, but the greater part of the town is hidden by the bluff. It is only 60 miles from Leavenworth by land, but 130 by the river.

Early the next morning we arrived at Leavenworth City, and it seemed wonderful that so large a town could have grown up where three years before there was not a house.

Two miles farther on brought us to Fort Leavenworth. A government steamer was at the landing with 300 recruits on board. The fort was found to be quite a city in itself, and all was bustle and confusion. The troops with which we have gone into camp preparatory to starting on the march to Utah. Gen. Smith arrived during the day, but was very feeble and saw no one but the doctor. It seems to be the general opinion that he cannot live long, and how he could expect to cross the Plains in his condition was beyond the comprehension of any one.

News arrived yesterday (not official) that Brigham Young had consented to let Col. Johnson, commanding the first division of the Utah army, enter Salt Lake City, and it seems to be considered correct by everyone here.

May 20, 1858. Gen. Smith died even sooner than expected. Last Tuesday evening at 12:30 he breathed his last, and his funeral took place yesterday. It was the first military funeral I had ever seen and was most impressive. First came the 4th regiment of artillery in full uniform, trailing their arms, their regimental colors draped in crepe; then the batteries of light artillery, their brass pieces draped with crepe; then the 1st Cavalry and 2nd Dragoons, mounted, with drawn sabers; then the hearse, covered with the American flag, while the dead officer's horse was led close behind, saddled and with his boots and spurs in the stirrups. This was to me the most touching part of the whole display. In the rear walked the staff officers, two abreast, in full uniform. After marching around the garrison, the band playing the Dead March, they went to the landing, where a volley was fired and the coffin was placed on board the steamer Emma to go down river.

Gen. Wm. F. Harvey succeeded Gen. Smith in command at Fort Leavenworth. He had been brevetted "for gallant and meritorious service" in the Indian war in Florida and in the war with Mexico, and was considered very much of a martinet and the most fluent user of profane language in the U. S. army. It was told of him that on a tour of inspection about the fort he stopped in the carpenter shop to criticize, in his vigorous language, the work of one of the men, when the man turned on him and retorted in kind—only more so. Gen. Harvey passed on, and nothing more was said, then or later, and the man kept his job.

Gen. Harvey at once modified some of the orders of Gen. Smith, one of which was that the men were not to be paid until they reached Fort Laramie, which would have been a great hardship for them; but under the new orders they are to be paid before leaving here.

The second column, which had been camped near the garrison since the 14th and was to have started on the 15th, makes a start of three miles today and we leave tomorrow to overtake it. The third column is also in camp and was to have started today, but will be delayed as the other has been.

Day before yesterday I took a ride to Leavenworth City, two miles distant. The road all the way was as thronged with people, going and coming, as the street in a large city. The country is very pretty, rolling into hills and valleys and covered with beautiful green grass and groves of trees. Leavenworth City is a jumble of fine brick buildings and rickety wooden ones, and the streets were knee deep in mud. It boasts of two theaters, two daily newspapers and the Planters House, a fine brick building, and has a levee, where the boats land and receive their freight and passengers. C. A. P.

Ridiculously Untrue.

The Claim that the President has "Kept us out of War."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18, 1916. Claims that President Wilson has kept us from becoming involved in the European war, and prevented war with Mexico, are so ridiculously untrue that it is amusing to those who know the facts.

What are the facts about the President's "keeping us out of war?"

Congress voted him a free hand up to the point of declaring war with Mexico. How did he use that power? His refusal to recognize Huerta as the de facto President was done by European nations, encouraged the bandit chiefs to continue their guerrilla warfare. Since then his vacillating policy, putting on embargoes one day and lifting them the next, supporting one faction today and another tomorrow, dictating who should not be a candidate for the Presidency of Mexico, and his meddling generally, caused originally by his personal antipathy to Huerta, which was based on an uncomplimentary remark about him by Huerta, prolonged the revolutions. The net result is that our sister republic is in anarchy and ruins. Lives of hundreds of American citizens have been needlessly sacrificed.

President Wilson committed two acts of war against Mexico, notwithstanding the explanation that they were directed at individuals and not at Mexico. One punitive expedition was for the avowed purpose of compelling Huerta to fire a salute of twenty-one guns to our flag; a number of American Marines and Mexicans were killed at Vera Cruz, the supply of note paper at the White House was exhausted, but the salute was not fired. The second punitive expedition was after the raid on Columbus and was to "get Villa dead or alive." Villa still lives and is at liberty. Scores of Americans and Mexicans have been killed.

The President favored intervention in Mexico. With martial valor he marched right in and turned around and boldly marched right out again. Today he says he is opposed to intervention, but so far as Wilson's policies are concerned, "no one knoweth what the morrow may bring forth." One day he was ready to recognize Villa, the next he would have none of him. He called for a conference of the Mexican factions to establish a de facto government and select a provisional President, but said he would not recognize the leader of any faction that failed to attend. Carranza was the only leader that refused to pay any attention to the conference and President Wilson has recognized him as the de facto ruler.

If we had had a firm, wise statesman in the White House and an able diplomat as Secretary of State the Mexican revolutions would have been ended more than two years ago; the Vera Cruz incident would not have occurred; the National Guard and the Regular Army would not now be mobilized on the border; the two sister republics would be living side by side in peace and amity.

A wise statesman with a firm and definite policy in the White House, and an able diplomat as Secretary of State, can bring order out of chaos in Mexico even at this late day. What we did for Cuba we can do for Mexico when we have statesmen in control who think straight and act right, and who don't confine their efforts to uttering platitudes and talking in a circle.

In handling the Mexican situation the Wilson administration has invariably "done those things it ought not to have done and left undone those things it ought to have done."

The President has reiterated and his mouthpieces have claimed repeatedly that he is entitled to the credit of "keeping us out of the European war," that many persons accept the statement as true. Neither the Allies nor the Central Powers want the United States to become involved in the conflict. That has been demonstrated time and time again by Germany and England's diplomatic handling of delicate situations that have arisen between their governments and ours caused by the administration's bungling. Nothing can involve us in that conflict unless we deliberately cease to maintain strict neutrality. Germany is interested in keeping us out of war on account of her interned ships, and munitions from this country that filter to her through the neutral nations that surround her, and Great Britain thinks we are of more benefit to her as a depot of supplies than we would be as an ally, using all of our munitions and food stuffs ourselves.

On two occasions the President nearly involved us with Germany. On both of those the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House and Senate, supported by the attitude of Senators and Representatives, and backed by public opinion of

The Penalty for a Good Reputation

When an article has been on the market for years and has given complete satisfaction when used in thousands of homes it creates for itself a valuable reputation, yet at the same time this good reputation has its penalty.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound enjoys a splendid reputation, for it has been used for three generations. Its fair name and high repute have created a demand for it, and to supply this demand at a greater profit imitations and substitutes are offered.

Purchasers who know the original cannot be fooled by any "just as good" offering and it is worth the effort of any one who wants a reliable cough syrup to insist upon the original and genuine Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, which has proven so valuable for the relief of coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough.

SOLD EVERYWHERE

the country checked the President in his headstrong course. The people have not forgotten the reason Mr. Bryan resigned as Secretary of State to become "Secretary of Statements." He resigned because he would not support the President's ultimatum to Germany; the ultimatum that was not sent, for after Mr. Bryan's resignation the note to Germany was made public and Bryan said it had been materially changed and was an entirely different and more moderate document than the one that had been submitted to him and had caused him to tender his resignation. The one he refused to sign he believed meant war. Mr. Bryan has never retracted his charge that a different note was sent to Germany than the one submitted to him.

The people have not forgotten that after a conference with the President on diplomatic complications of an acute nature between our Government and one of the European belligerents, distinguished members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee told Senators in the cloak rooms and even stated to newspaper men that the President had become very much excited during the conference and in a vehement manner had said in effect, "It might not be a bad thing for civilization and would hasten the end if the United States would enter the war on the side of the allies." The President was plainly told that neither Congress nor public opinion would support him in such an attitude. None of the Senators at that conference have retracted their statements of what the President said, other than a half-hearted explanation that did not explain, and neither the President, nor any one in authority for him, has denied it.

Early in his administration the President was "too proud to fight," even in defense of national honor; later he was looking for an opportunity to break into the war; today he claims to be entirely neutral; what his attitude will be tomorrow nobody knows.

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of It in Belfast But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed.

Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.

There can be no health where there is poisoned blood. Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble.

It is often the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

The Federal Farm Loan Hearing.

Open Letter to B. Walker McKee, in Reply to His Letter of Sept. 2.

B. Walker McKee, Fryeburg, Maine.

DEAR SIR: In answer to your letter of Sept. 2, I will say that I am only too glad to answer any fair question, and give my reason for it.

First: You ask if I am correctly quoted as saying at Augusta at the Federal Farm Loan hearing, "That the farmers of Maine are now operating home farms more than farming for business, except in Aroostook County, and are not fully ready for the benefits of the Rural Credits Act."

The sense of the statement at least is correct, and I supposed everybody knew that farming in New England had always been basically a home-building industry, in the past to a larger extent even than it is today, and I believe that we are particularly fitted for this kind of an industry. It is not the same in the West, in such States as Iowa, where one half the farmers are tenants, the owners living in town and operating their farms purely as a business. The Western farmer borrowing for business is a free borrower, the Maine farmer does not like to put a mortgage on his home.

Second: Will the Maine Farmer use this bank? I do not believe he will, for the reason that if he has the security that the Federal Bank requires, he can get money of a neighbor or at a local bank, and the co-operative features of forming Farm Loan Associations will not appeal to the Maine Farmer.

Rural Credit and Farm loans, sound good, but when you study the provisions of the act you will see that there is nothing in it for the Maine Farmer.

A farmer wishing to receive a loan must first form an association with at least nine other farmers who together must borrow not less than $20,000, no one receiving less than $100, or more than $10,000. They must advance 5 per cent of this loan in stock. The loan is placed on not more than one-half the value of the land, plus 20 per cent of the value of the insured improvements. The loan must be made for not less than 5 years or more than 40.

The interest must not exceed 6 per cent and is to be paid annually or semi-annually together with a part of the principal sufficient to cancel the debt at the close of the period.

Third: As to the prevailing rate of interest in Maine at the present on farm mortgages.

This question does not allow any difference of opinion as it can be readily ascertained. From the best information I can get about 25 per cent of the farm mortgages of Maine are held by banks, which are the mortgages that concern us. So far as I have been able to ascertain there is but one small bank in the State that holds a farm mortgage above 6 per cent. Mortgages, with such security as this act provides, are being taken by individual investors as low as 5 per cent.

Fourth: As to the attitude of the Grange on this question.

The National Grange has stood for a rural credit law mainly because of the needs of the West and South, where interest rates were high and money not easy to obtain.

The Legislative Committee of the National Grange opposed the present act, and it does not meet with their approval.

I can not see how my opinion as to the usefulness of the act can affect the Grange or the farmers. It is a law and if anybody can use it well and good, if not no one will be particularly harmed.

Knowing as I do that your letter is but a part of a determined and persistent effort continued for some years past, both through the public press and in other ways to bring discredit upon the officials of the Maine State Grange, you must understand that it is not my wish to enter into any further newspaper controversy.

Yours truly,

W. J. THOMPSON.

Washington Gossip.

The Sprees of Robin Redbreast in the South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18, 1916. Robin Redbreast, hero of the story books and well known model in the bird kingdom, has been charged with leading a dual life. In the North, a sober, industrious, home-loving father, the allegation is that he spends his winters in the South in riotous living. Even in Georgia, where State prohibition prevails, he is reported as having been seen drunk in public. On coming North, however, it is said he always reforms.

Asked for an opinion in the case of Cock Robin, Secretary Pearson of the National Association of Audubon Societies, recently in Washington and an authority on birds and their habits, said he had frequently seen robins in the South so intoxicated that they could scarcely flutter along the ground. This misdemeanor is reported to occur in the Southern States where grows the China tree, also known as the "Pride of India," or "Persian Lilac."

Robins sometimes eat the berries of this tree which, having absorbed rainwater, form an alcoholic liquid which intoxicates birds, causing them to lose control of themselves and fall to the ground. Thus, many birds are captured and eaten by the negroes of the South.

It is said that, during the Civil War, soldiers gathered China berries and distilled from them an alcoholic beverage, which became quite popular. The prohibition people are said to be looking into the tree's alleged properties.

The China tree, scientists say, is very common along the lower gulf coast country, where it grows very rapidly and is a popular shade tree. Its abundant lilac-colored flowers appear early in the spring and the leaves are retained late into autumn, followed by clusters of yellow berries.

Notwithstanding Robin Redbreast's occasional sprees, the Audubon Societies give him a good general reputation in an attractively illustrated little bulletin which they are sending out from their New York offices to anyone who will send them a two-cent stamp.

MORE MEN THAN WOMEN HAVE APPENDICITIS

Surgeons state men are slightly more subject to appendicitis than women. Belfast people should know that a few doses of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-ika, often relieves or prevents appendicitis. This mixture removes such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. THE INSTANT, easy action of Adler-ika is surprising. ## Democratic Inefficiency on the Frontier.

"You can just charge it to Democratic inefficiency," said W. L. Emory of Eastport, color sergeant of the 2nd Maine regiment attached to headquarters, who arrived in Bangor Sept. 8 on his way home. "Am I glad to get back? Well, say, this never before seemed so much like God's country as it does today, and I want to tell you that all the petty contrivances that are being used to keep men from getting their discharges from the 2nd Maine has so sickened most of them that they don't ever want to see the khaki again. Why, it is astonishing, but from the highest official down there has been the grossest inefficiency that I ever saw, and I campaigned in the Spanish war and was in Cuba, and I never saw anything like this. It's the limit."

Cured Her Two Little Girls.

Mrs. Ada Sanders, Cottontown, Tenn., writes: "We use Foley's Honey and Tar as our best and only cough remedy. It never fails to cure my two little girls when they have colds." Relieves hoarseness, tickling throat, bronchitis, hay fever, asthma, croup. Sold everywhere.

Horace Lane, Frankfort, showed a shorthorn herd of 17, all pure bred. He chose this breed because of being good for steers and beef. The cows also pay in cream, which goes to the Hood's creamery in Brooks. His cream test has been about 24 all summer. He separates at home and feeds out the skim milk to calves. He showed four pairs of steers and had a fine pen of calves whose condition sustained his belief in the breed. One heifer, eight months in the ground, one heifer and one milk, supplemented with bran. FOR PRESIDENT

Charles Evans Hughes

OF NEW YORK

FOR VICE PRESIDENT

Charles W. Fairbanks

OF INDIANA.

Knox county went Democratic, but the Rockland Opinion displayed only a very diminutive roster.

State Senators Martin F. Bartlett of Waterville, Leon F. Higgins of Brewer and Taber D. Bailey of Bangor are candidates for the presidency of the Senate. May the best man win.

"Maine has set the pace for the rest of the country in November," writes a Massachusetts subscriber. "I do not think you people had any idea how interested we who are now outside were in your September election. You did a good job."

The Portland Argus is trying to make the State committee chairman, Hon. W. R. Pattangall, the goat for the Democratic defeat, but that won't go down with those who know that able, and slippery, politician. Why not give the devil his due?

We did not realize how big a fool Joseph Daniels, the present Secretary of the Navy, is until we read his statement that the Republicans should have had a plurality of 50,000 in Maine, and because they did not the election has no significance.

"Johnson is a good Wilson Democrat," says the Brooklyn Eagle of our soon-to-be ex-U. S. Senator. Very true; and it is because of his yielding to the dictate of Wilson and voting against the interests of his constituents that he was defeated re-election.

The odds in the Wall Street betting on the Presidential election shifted today to 2 to 1 in favor of Charles E. Hughes. The Wilson backers, who were offering odds in favor of their candidate until the Maine election, have withdrawn all their offers, and Wilson money today was scarce. — Brooklyn Eagle, Sept. 13th.

Money talks.

The fact that the vote in Maine was the largest in the history of the State is gratifying evidence that unusual interest is taken in politics this year. When active interest in politics is general, the country's safe—Boston Globe.

Well, Maine is safe anyway. She's in out of the wet.

Hats off to the venerable Maine city of Biddeford, which has just observed its tercentenary, and to the Biddeford Journal for its full, comprehensively written and profusely illustrated report of the celebration. With last Saturday's regular issue was an eight page supplement, full of interest and of ancient and modern photographs—a valuable contribution to local history. The Portland Evening Express says: "We believe there is no other city or town in Maine or New England that can look back over 300 years of authentic history."

The September election seems to have given general satisfaction. The Democrats profess to regard the vote as assuring the re-election of President Wilson, and the Republicans are confident that Hughes will be elected in November. Maine is sending to Congress a solid delegation that will not vote against the agricultural, manufacturing and shipping interests of the State at the dictation of a Democratic caucus. There are other results which cause Republicans to rejoice, and the Democrats are welcome to all the crumbs of comfort they can pick up on the Maine battlefield.

"The hen is the bulwark of our civilization," said Gov. McCall in an address last week on the closing day of the Wakefield-Reading, Mass., fair. He then spoke briefly on the importance of the milk and poultry industries, deploring the fact that four-fifths of Massachusetts milk and eggs come from out of the State. Germany, he said, would long ago have been starved out had not Bismarck instituted governmental laws forcing the people to raise their own food products. In this connection a recent Dublin special says official returns show that the Irish egg trade is now amounting to an export of some $40,000,000 a year, which is a large increase over antebellum years, and that everything is being done to foster the industry.

"After all is said and done, the real reason why the Democrats lost the State or failed to make a closer finish is their refusal to accept a Progressive proposal for a fusion made in April."

This statement appeared in a Portland special to the Boston Globe; said to be made by a man who knows and to have been verified by Irving E. Vernon, chairman of the Progressive State Committee for three years, and an active supporter of the Democratic ticket in the campaign just closed, and by Halbert P. Gardner of Patten, Progressive National Committeeman. All that may be true, except that had the deal been made its promoters could not have delivered the goods. A large majority of the Progressives were Republicans, who were led into the movement by their admiration for Col. Roosevelt, and who could not be sold out by the self-seeking leaders who sought to use the new party for their personal advantage or to revenge themselves upon a party which had failed to recognize their demands for preferment or had honored them in the past beyond their deserts. The concluding statement in the Globe special; that had "the Progressives been tied up in a fusion, thousands who voted for Milliken Monday would have refused to follow Col. Roosevelt back to their former associates" is absurd, because the Progressives could not have been so tied up.

German activities in this country first took form in an army of paid agents, scattered all over the country, to advocate that country's cause, supplemented by the burning of munition factories, dynamiting bridges and placing infernal machines on ships, timed to explode in mid-ocean. To the September number of the Atlantic Monthly Frank Perry Old contributes an article, "Kultur in American Politics," in which is told at length the efforts of various organizations, and of German newspapers and other publications, to Germanize this country. As to the papers, and this is also true of the pamphlets and circulars, it is said: "Enjoying a fair degree of privacy because they are printed in a foreign language, German papers do not hesitate to use bad names, coarse slang and vile expressions in discussing the head of our 'so-called government.'" One of the objects of the German-American Alliance, which disclaims political activity, is the promotion of the study of the German language and literature in our public schools. A circular published in papers using the German language and emanating from New York, goes so far as to urge all Germans to speak German exclusively in the streets, stores, theaters, and all public buildings, to the end that German be forced upon the nation, at least as an auxiliary language. Americans would then soon learn German, the writers of the circular believe, in order to get German American business. But the chief end and aim of this propaganda is to mobilize the German vote, and they are urged to "forget former party ties and come out for our principles." These include an embargo on arms and munitions, a proclamation of warning to American citizens to keep off merchant vessels of the Allies, and non-intervention with Germany's submarine warfare, with approval of the sinking of the Lusitania on the ground that the speediest slaughter is often the most humane. We cannot, and do not, believe that all German-Americans can be influenced by such sentiments as these.

There was a large attendance at the Country Club last Sunday afternoon to listen to the last concert of the season. The program was furnished by Mrs. C. W. Wescott and Arthur Johnson, soloists, and Mrs. S. A. Parker, reader, and was most enjoyable. The following numbers were given: "A Song of Degrees," Mrs. Parker; tenor solo, "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," by Tate, Mr. Johnson; contralto solo, group of songs, "Old Plaid Shawl," Haynes, "Irish Love Song," Foote, "Dream," Bartlett, Mrs. Wescott; reading "An Irish Courtship," Mrs. Parker; solo, "Mother Macchree," Mr. Johnson; solo, "The Shoo-gy-Shoo," Grace Mayhew, Mrs. Wescott. Each number received hearty encores. The Club closed Sunday and will only serve meals by special order.

Mr. Ralph L. Flanders of Brookline, Mass., gave a delightful party, Sept. 13th at Bohemia on the South Shore in honor of her sister, Miss Anna Ayer, who had been her guest for a few days. Luncheon was served at 1:30, the daughters of the hostess, Misses Evelyn and Frances with their guest, Miss Lynch, assisting in serving. The tables were covered with artistic arrangements of nasturtiums in yellow shades, the place cards and not cups carrying out the same color scheme. Following the luncheon auction was played on the porch. The first prize a handsome etched glass flower basket, was won by Mrs. Ira M. Cobe; the second, a silver teacup shaped tea ball, by Mrs. William Kotman; and the consolation, a split bamboo and china jardiniere, by Mrs. Charles E. Rogers. During the afternoon Maria, the youngest daughter of the hostess, favored the guests with an exhibition of toe-dancing. She dances beautifully, is very graceful, and was especially winsome in her own interpretation of classic music. Other guests present were Mrs. Charles Bradbury, Mrs. Louis K. Hirsch, Mrs. G. Frank Harriman, Mrs. Joseph W. Blaisdel, Mrs. Austin W. Keating, Mrs. Edwin L. Kihre, Mrs. Frank C. Sargent, Mrs. Coes, Miss Ferrie, Mrs. Grace Baker, Mrs. Mary Pepper, Miss Anne M. Kittredge.

Political Points.

In three Congressional districts of New York—the Twenty-ninth, the Thirty-sixth and the Forty-third—there will be no Democratic nominee this year. This condition of affairs is a suggestive commentary on the braggadocio claim of Chairman McCormick that New York is to go Democratic this fall. A party which is making a winning fight is on the offensive at every point on the field of battle.

When the Democratic Congress adjourned it counted a session of 245 days, including Sundays and holidays. There have been longer sessions. When an account of stock was taken it was found that the total of appropriations, fully made or authorized, was close to two Billion Dollars. There never was a Congress that approached this figure. For every day of the session, Sundays and all, the average amount of money voted away was more than Eight Million Dollars.

"In the midst of the big war, by which its own territory was invaded, France was able to turn out in the past year silk and goods to the amount of $5,715,000, to satisfy the extraordinary demand of this market. A year ago the mills of Lyons, etc., were able to turn out only $3,332,000," says an article in the New York Journal of Commerce. And yet our Democratic friends are assuring us that the nations at war are prostrated industrially, and we will have nothing to fear after the war from our near-free tariff. Germany alone has $1,500,000,000 worth of surplus products to dump on this market as soon as peace is declared. England is increasing her grip on the American market every month. The official figures show it.

The alarm at 3 p. m. Sunday was for a fire in the Chester Larrabee house on Swan Lake avenue. The fire caught around the chimney on the roof and the whole roof was destroyed. The engine company and hose company No. 1 responded and were able to do very effective work, saving the house below the roof. The interior was damaged by smoke and water. The loss is said to be covered by insurance. It is a cottage house, in which Mr. and Mrs. Larrabee, who were recently married, were living. They are now with Mr. Larrabee's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Valorus D. Larrabee, on Swan Lake avenue. Percy E. Each received a handsome silver loving cup, suitably engraved. The second prizes were won by Miss Esther Vance of Hamilton, N. This is the second cup won by Miss Flanders this season, the other given by the Northport Inn baseball team dance for the most graceful dancing.

Twenty years of joyful song,
Twenty years of joyful song,
Twenty years with our conductor,
Twenty years with purpose clear,
Twenty years of toil and pleasure,
Twenty years with truth and cheer.
Twenty years of happy memories,
Twenty years some sad and gloomy,
Twenty years of earnest effort,
Twenty years new hopes arise,
Twenty years of wondrous artists,
Twenty years of chorus loyal,

HYGIENE OF OLD AGE.

At the recent annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic the surgeon general of the great association of veterans offered some general advice in regard to the health of men who have reached 70 or more. He gave three simple rules for the preservation of a good physical condition as old age comes on. They are: Avoid excessive use of food, excessive use of stimulants and excessive active or violent exercise. These safeguards are widely applicable, and are so terse that they are easily remembered. The statistics of the Grand Army are carefully kept, and form a valuable criterion on this subject. At the beginning of 1915 the membership was 159,863. Deaths during the year numbered 11,856, a little over 7 per cent. In the general pension list the deaths are more than 100 a day, but the pensioners include soldiers, widows, and survivors of all the wars of the United States. Only a few are left who served in the Mexican war that ended in 1848. Eight or ten soldiers of the revolutionary war and the war of 1812 lived to be more than 100 years old, and possibly thirty or forty who were in the civil war will live to be centenarians. It is probable that the rate of mortality among the veterans is higher than the general average. They went through a trying ordeal in camps and bivouacs, as well as in battle. On occasion they made long marches, slept on the roads and in fields and at times rations were scant. The deaths from disease outnumbered those from bullets. Of 2,500,000 men who were enlisted in the Union forces. At the latest report the membership of the Grand Army had declined to 149,074. It embraces nearly all survivors who were in the service of the United States between 1861 and 1865. The surgeon general gives good counsel on the best way to maintain good health to men of three-score and ten. His recommendations are valuable to men of any age. Avoird of any kind, is the tenor of his advice. The best rules of hygiene are not complicated. If all individuals observed their health reports would quickly take a more favorable turn. The injunction not to use food excessively is the one most needed. Conservation of the vital forces is evidently the best method of living long and comfortably. To say that is a truism, but it is not one of the self-evident facts that require no repetition.

Many important battles have occurred in which the combatants were fewer than the deaths in the Grand Army last year.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Stop the First Cold.

A cold does not get well of itself. The process of wearing out a cold wears you out, and your cough becomes serious if neglected. Hacking coughs drain the energy and sap the vitality. Young and old can testify to the effectiveness of Dr. King's New Discovery for coughs and colds. Buy a bottle today at your Druggist, 50c.

IMPORTANT WEST INDIAN PORT.

The Island of St. Thomas, which in the days of sail vessels was a natural ship centre in the West Indies and between North and South America, has the largest, safest and most accessible natural harbor in that section of the globe. This island, which has been under Danish rule since 1671, is a coaling station, and the inhabitants are composed mostly of descendants of negro slaves, many of whom are employed in the cultivation of sugar cane. St. Thomas, it is expected, will profit greatly by the Panama Canal, as the distance from Europe via that island to the canal is shorter than that via any other port in the West Indies. The island is also fortunate in being located about mid-way between the principal European and West American ports. New harbor works to take advantage of the trade via the canal were begun in 1913 and completed a year ago at an outlay of $2,000,000.

The depth of water at the entrance to the harbor has been increased to 31 feet and a wharf has been constructed about 2,200 feet long with a depth of over 31 feet alongside. All modern appliances for bunkering steamers are installed. A large stock of American and British coal is kept on hand. St. Thomas is also practically a free port as no harbor or light dues are demanded, while stores and provisions can be procured at cheap rates. A large stock of oil fuel for use in steamers is also constantly kept on hand.

Could Not Do Her Cooking.

Mrs. F. E. Hartmeister, Cook, Mo., writes: "I was affected with kidney trouble for two years. I got so bad this summer I could hardly do my cooking. I got Foley Kidney Pills and I feel like a new person." Too many women neglect symptoms of kidney derangement, weak back, swollen ankles and joints, aches, pains and rheumatism. Sold every where.

NOTABLE SPEAKING TOUR.

Mr. Hughes Traveled 14,000 Miles in 39 Days and Made 141 Speeches.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13. Chas. E. Hughes ended his first presidential campaign trip here Tuesday. He reached the city at an early hour, went to a hotel, and later will depart for his summer home at Bridgehampton. The trip was one of the longest, in time and mileage, ever taken by a presidential nominee. Mr. Hughes left here on the night of Aug. 5th and traveled 39 days. His itinerary took him from Portland, Maine, to San Diego, Cal., from Canada to within sight of the Mexican border. He visited 25 States, spoke at all the chief centers of population in the country, exclusive of the south, and traveled 10,494 miles by railroad. In addition he averaged more than 400 miles a week by motor or about 2,500 miles, making the total mileage of his trip approximately 14,000 miles.

His trip was made over 15 railroad systems. Since his departure from New York, Mr. Hughes has undergone almost every sort of experience that usually befalls a candidate and many out of the ordinary. He donned a miner's toga at Butte and went 3,000 feet down into the earth, climbed mountains more than 12,000 feet high and attended State and county fairs and a national exposition. He made 141 speeches and was photographed thousands of times.

Mr. Hughes reached New York in good health and spirits. He will rest four days at Bridgehampton and then will start on a trip that will last, with only one break of two days, until election day.

War, Wool, Wilson, and Wyoming.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18, 1916. Wars will be waged. Warriors want warm winter wear. Wilson will free wool. Wyoming wonders why. Having rid our system of that aliteration, let's talk the matter over.

Prior to the outbreak of the European war we were not exporters of wool wearing apparel to any appreciable extent. Our mills had all they could do to supply our own needs. We sold in foreign markets not more than $4,500,000 worth a year. From the outbreak of the war, Aug. 1, 1914, to June 30, 1916, we exported wool wearing apparel to the value of $270,000,000—a pretty good indication, is it not, that wool is a prime requisite in war time? There is a certain kind of "cold feet" that makes a man "too proud to fight," but the physically cold feet render even a brave man incapable of efficient fighting. Wool socks warm the latter; hellefire fuses the former. Wool blankets warm the soldier; hot air warms the politician.

Wool was exported to the United States in 1914 worth $2,216,000. In 1915 we exported 385,000 pounds. In 1916 we exported 1,588,000 pounds, worth $2,216,000. In 1916, a little over half as much, but the price doubled. The tariff board estimated that in 1910 our wool manufacturers used 500,000,000 pounds of raw wool of all kinds annually. The production of the United States at that time was in the neighborhood of 325,000,000 pounds, coming under the head of classes 1 and 2. In that year Wyoming topped the list of sheep-raising States and was second in the production of wool, with 36,000,000 pounds of washed and unwashed wool, equal to 11,500,000 pounds of the scoured. Montana had the edge on Wyoming in wool production, by very little.

The stock argument of the Democrats was that free wool meant cheaper clothing, because it meant cheaper wool with which to make it. When the Wilson-Underwood free wool measure passed the House in May, 1913, the certainty of free wool caused the price to drop. When there is a threat of free wool buyers decline to buy except for immediate needs, unless they can buy at a price which will not involve a loss. They depend on their surplus stocks to carry them through until free wool is a certainty. They buy on a free trade basis or not at all. The manufacturers had made up their samples for the fall and winter of 1913 and the spring and summer of 1914 very largely on the basis of the wool then available, so, having cut down their purchase of American wools when free trade was threatened, when the 1914 clip came in they found themselves buying in competition with each other, and strange as it might otherwise seem, the price of American wool went up. The war came on and for some time an embargo was laid on Australian wool, and the price continued up. The Democratic party, having declared that free wool meant cheaper wool, then turned around and bragged that their tariff law had raised the price of wool. What inconsistency.

During the fiscal year 1913, under the public law, we imported 84,000,000 pounds of wool classes 1 and 2, which paid us nearly $10,000,000 of revenue. We imported 146,000,000 pounds in 1914, under Democratic law, seven months of free wool 242,000,000 pounds in 1915, and 426,000,000 pounds in 1916. An insignificant duty was realized from this wool, because angora goat hair was retained on the dutiable list, thanks to Congressman Garner, of Texas, an angora wool producing State, who was a framer of the bill. Altogether we have lost considerably over $100,000,000 in revenue from wool alone, and the consumer got no benefit, but he paid more internal taxes. Wyoming is going Republican because it wants a return to the protective policy. Wyoming knows that competition from Australia will be strong after the war and she knows wool prices have been high because of the war. Wyoming believes it is a wiser measure of military preparedness to encourage the production of wool in America than it is to run a government-owned nitrate plants. Wyoming "watchfully waits" for a wallow at Woodrow. Let all wool States do likewise.

September Fashion Notes.

One Piece Dresses in Serge, Silk and Evening Tissues for Street and Social Wear. Wool Sport Stockings. Newest Hats and Garnitures. Ecclesiastical Silks.

[Correspondence of The Journal.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 18, 1916. The stores are showing a full line of all that is new in fabrics, and as models galore are to be had in all the latest types of costumes, people who have the money are wisely investing before prices soar higher, as they are scheduled to do.

Ecclesiastical Silks.

The newly imported silks that France has sent over, notwithstanding the handicap of war conditions, can only be described by superlative adjectives; "magnificent" and "gorgeous" are two that seem adequate to characterize the showing in the higher grade pieces. Gold and silver, with colorings of every hue from moonlight blue to the deepest and richest tones. Fine jardiniere floral stripes, old time pompadours, and single flower and leaf designs of mammoth proportions, are some of the things to be noted in the new showing. These will make gorgeous evening wraps, or rich linings for mantles of fur, and will be employed for evening and reception frocks, usually in combination with lighter plain materials. Metal taconne or brocade is woven combined with figured silk. For instance, there will be single flowers of the metal joined by festoons of flowers in the silk brocade. A large maple leaf of silver is one of the notable patterns of this sort. Orchid in the reddish hue of that flower is a favorite tone, its richness enhanced by a striped design in silver brocade. Bayadere stripes will continue modish. Clair-de-lune satin has cloud designs developed in silver, and other patterns suggest Gothic arches of cathedrals or the stained glass of cathedral windows.

Blocked and plaided silks of rich but subdued colorings are to be used for blouse and for day wear gowns combined with woolen fabrics.

Velvets Prominent.

Velvets are prominent as always when fall dominates the mode, as it does at present. Light weight velvets, both in corded and plain weaves, will be very much worn.

A Charming Model.

A charming model in one of the new "Betty Wales" social dresses is of panne velvet combined with white silk net. In turquoise velvet it is especially pretty. The net skirt is finished with a sleeveless over-bloss of the same material girdled with silver ribbon, and showing the net in sleeve and bodice finishes. Designed and made here in New York these Betty Wales dresses have captured the girls all over the country as completely as did the heroine of the popular stories for whom they are named. Their smartness of style and beauty of coloring appeals to the girls, while mothers like the quality of the materials used in serge, silk or evening frocks, and appreciate their fineness of finish and modest price.

New Hats.

Velvet hats are displayed attractively in both large and small shapes, many of the best models built on small, brimless turban frames, with either high puffed velvet emplacements surrounding the crown, or with crowns on the "tam" order, draped and posed in ways that greatly increase the height of the hat. Jet pins, bands, and other ornaments are placed directly at the front of the hat, and there is a decided vogue for ostrich used in the narrow bands and small tips, particularly for gray feathers on black hats. Silk beaver in black, especially makes some of the smartest blocked hats exhibited at the fashionable stores. Stockings of wool are shown for sports and will be appropriate for skating, which will doubtless be even more popular next winter than last.

GENERAL JOFFE ON GERMANY'S WAR POLICY.

"We have kept a very accurate record in two parallel columns of our losses and the German reports of those same losses. To illustrate the point, the other day we lost at Soissons, as the result of an unimportant engagement, some sixteen or eighteen men and one or two guns, and north of Soissons a few prisoners were taken and a few metres of trench. The Germans in their official communiqués reported this in the minutest detail and with great precision, their official published record agreeing exactly with ours, as it always does on minor details and engagements. But on that same day they reported 1000 prisoners taken near Verdun. What actually happened at Verdun was that we threw out as a sort of observation post a salient forming an angle in advance of the main line, consisting of 800 men and a few guns, with the order that this salient should retire to the main line as soon as it was hard pressed. The men soon were hard pressed and did retire, losing twenty-six men and three guns. The German report of this was that they had beaten back the French line at that point and taken 1000 prisoners. The result of these exaggerations since the beginning of the war shows a grand total of men taken and killed amounting to more than the number of men that France has equipped. I liken this sort of thing to a panorama where there are a few sticks, stones, dried leaves and bits of grass in the foreground which are real, but the main scene, which is calculated to deceive, is a pure make-up.

"This has been Germany's policy since the beginning, and some day the German people will realize how they have been fooled."—September Atlantic.

How She Was Relieved from Pain by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taunton, Mass.—"I had pains in both sides and when my periods came I had to stay at home from work and suffer a long time. One day a woman came to our house and asked my mother why I was suffering. Mother told her that I suffered every month and she said, 'Why don't you buy a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' My mother bought it and the next month I was so well that I worked all the month without staying at home a day. I am in good health now and have told lots of girls about it."—Miss CLARICE MORIN, 22 Russell Street, Taunton, Mass.

plant from the soil today with the ages of time required for the decomposition of the ancient stone to form our fertile soil. Because of the rapidity of modern activities and the magnitude of the disaster in case of a false move, it is far more important to establish correct principles and move in the right direction than ever before. Locke could teach that the mind was an empty tablet in his slow going age without the exceedingly disastrous results falling to the lot of an empty head in these days. If we would aspire to a higher state of human society, we must be as familiar with the development of social life as we are with the development of a field of corn from the embryo of the seed planted.

We watch the growth of animal and vegetable tissue in all stages of development, and even dissect the human body to see how wonderfully it is made. But we seem to be about the only means thus far invented for dissecting human society. In the progress of mankind we have had slavery and aristocracy and despotism.

Church despotism culminated in a Roman Pope to become the conscience of the people. Civil despotism culminated in a German Kaiser to think and act for a German people. No man aside from the Roman Pope ever dominated so many minds as the present German Emperor.

In the early stages of development despotism government seems the only available form. Democratic ideas usually keep pace with intelligence. An intelligent people should learn to settle their disputes by intellectual force rather than by brute force. Society can move harmoniously only by being subjected to the same systematic methods which prevail in other departments of science.

A new feature in the September number of "The Writer," the Boston magazine for literary workers, is a department on "Advertisement Writing," in which practical instruction in the art of advertisement writing is given by a competent expert. Arthur Emberton continues his series of helpful articles on "Preparation for Proofreading," and Thomas Littlefield Marble writes on "The Dramatic Value of Music and Light." Under the heading, "The Manuscript Market," the present special manuscript needs of a large number of periodicals are set forth, this information being obtained directly from the editors. The publication of "The Writer's Directory of Periodicals," with information about the manuscript requirements of the various publications, is continued, and announcement is made of a number of prize offers for manuscripts. No one who is writing for publication can afford to be without this remarkable sketch to appeal to all who are interested in literary matters. The price of the magazine is ten cents a copy, or one dollar a year, and the address is: P. O. Box 1905, Boston, Mass.

"The war has produced many great generals, but only one Joffre. Joffre is like a force of nature," commented a well-known Englishman. In the September Atlantic there is a word portrait which fully explains this remark: a sketch to the life, done by an author who, for obvious reasons, must remain anonymous. This article is followed by a masterly essay by Viscount Bryce, "War and Human Progress," whereby the former Ambassador's friends may know that his line optimism has survived the terrible stress of the past two years. Another essay, "Drift," by R. K. Hack of the Harvard Classical faculty, follows as high a purpose, though sounding a strident note of rebellion against the enslaving of mankind by Science. Havelock Ellis, with his incisive investigation, "The Mind of Woman," continues the vexed discussion which was opened so brilliantly by W. L. George. In "The Vein of Dr. Samuel M. Crothers," "A Literary Clinic," brimming over as it is with good-natured satire of one of our most recent cultural effluences. There have been attempts untold to reconcile Christianity with Hellenism; but in the opinion of the Atlantic, the best effort has been so successful as "Golgatha and the Acropolis," by Elizabeth Dudley—an account of the intimate personal experience of a person who was wrested from theories by the teachings of life itself. The Atlantic's department of the Great War contains among other distinguished features, a notable summing-up of the events of the second year of fighting by J. B. W. Gardiner, a former officer of the U. S. Army whose analysis of strategy are at once penetrating and comprehensible to the lay reader. "Brusiloff, Man and General," is a detailed character sketch of the striking figure of the great allied offensive, written by Charles Johnston, the General's brother-in-law; Lewis R. Freeman has given of his best in "Men of the Tara," an amazing narrative of adventure. The fiction of the September Atlantic ("Mara" by Elsie Hasse Andrae and "Little Selves," by Mary Lerner), is concerned with two widely separated strains of our foreign-born Americans.

FOLEY KIDNEY PILLS FOR BACKACHE KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Nepotism at the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Sept. 18, 1916. Not only have "deserving Democrats" been given fat government jobs wherever possible by the Wilson Administration, but the "Poor Relations" of Democratic Cabinet officers, Senators and Representatives have also been well taken care of.

Nepotism is rife in the Government service and at the Capital.

Never before in the history of this country has nepotism been so rampant as under Mr. Wilson's administration.

To begin with the Cabinet. When Wm. J. Bryan was secretary of State he had his son appointed to a position in the Department of Justice and his son-in-law to a position in the Treasury Department. Secretary McAdoo, son-in-law of President Wilson, put one of his sons in the Department of Justice and one in the Department of Commerce. Secretary Daniels got a place for his brother in the Department of Justice. Former First Assistant Postmaster General Daniel C. Roper, who recently resigned to assist in the Wilson Campaign, at one time had three members of his family on the pay rolls. Secretary Redfield, appointed U. Grant Smith, his private secretary. Smith had one son on the pay roll as a House page, and his son-in-law is a special agent of the Department of Commerce.

In the House of Representatives Speaker Clark's son is the parliamentary clerk at $4,000 per annum. He is not yet thirty and was given this job by the Democratic House majority before he had finished his law studies.

Numerous Democratic Senators have taken good care of their "poor kin" with fat jobs on the Government pay roll. Senator Overman of North Carolina has his son in a $2,500 position and a daughter holds a $1,400 job. A brother-in-law of Senator Kern of Indiana has a good place in the Senate document room. The wife and brother of Senator Gore of Oklahoma, are on the Senate pay roll. Senator Martin of Virginia has a brother as assistant clerk to his committee. Senator Vardaman of Mississippi has his son as assistant clerk to his committee. Senator Chamberlain of Oregon has his son as messenger in his committee. The son-in-law of Senator Lane of Oregon acts as his father-in-law's private secretary. The son of Senator Tillman of South Carolina is the clerk in his father's committee. Another son is on the Alaska Railroad Commission. Senator Thompson of Kansas has his son on the pay roll. A cousin of Senator Saulsbury of Delaware was given a good job on the Trade Commission. Senator O'Gorman of New York landed the job of Collector of the Port of New York for his son-in-law, Dudley Field Malone. The nephew of Senator Robinson is a senate doorkeeper.

The most glaring examples of nepotism are found in the House, and more "poor relations" have been taken care of in the House than in the Senate, simply because there are more Representatives than there are Senators. Take Illinois for example. Tavenner's sister-in-law is his stenographer. Stone's brother is a clerk in the House document room. Sabbath's nephew is also in the document room. Indiana Democrats have not overlooked appointing members of their families to good places. Gray's sister is his secretary, Cullop's stepson is his secretary, Morrison's son is his secretary.

Representative Pou of North Carolina, for a time had his son on the pay roll as the clerk of the Committee on Claims, drawing $1600 per annum. Young Pou at this time was a student in the University of North Carolina. Representative Johnson of South Carolina, got one of his sons in the Postoffice Department, and another a House job. A nephew was made clerk to a House committee and the representative's campaign manager was made a Capital policeman. Representative Finley, of South Carolina, has his son as his secretary and another son is a clerk on the House roll. Representative Aiken, of South Carolina, got one of his sons in the Postoffice Department, and another a House job. A nephew was made clerk to a House committee and the representative's campaign manager was made a Capital policeman.

Representative Clark of Florida, has two relatives on his committee and got a door keeper's job for his brother. The son of Representative Padgett is the assistant clerk of his father's committee. The son of Representative Burnett is clerk of his father's committee. The son of Representative Carlin though a student in Georgetown University, is a clerk in the House Judiciary Committee. A nephew of Representative Shackelford is clerk to the Committee on Roads. Representative Lloyd of Missouri, has a brother in his committee on Accounts, and his brother-in-law is an assistant doorkeeper in the House. At one time Lloyd had five members of his family on the pay roll. Representative Watkins, has his son as clerk to a committee. Representative Candler has his son-in-law as his secretary. Representative Alexander of Missouri, has his son as his secretary. Representative Houston of Texas, the son of Representative Sparkman is clerk to his father's committee, and the brother of Representative Fields is his secretary. The father of Representative Barkley is one of the House doorkeepers. This list might be extended at great length for there are scores of "poor relations" of Representatives and Senators, drawing good salaries or government pay rolls. On August 14th the Chicago Daily Tribune published a partial list of the examples of nepotism described in this story. No denial has ever been made of the Tribune's charges regarding the fat government jobs that have been given to "poor relations" of the Democratic Congressional members for the simple reason that it is not possible to make denial.

SKIPPERS WIFE AT HELM.

And With the Daughter, assists in Getting the Leaking Schooner Herman F. Kimball into Port.

PORTLAND, Sept. 13. Courage and the ability of Mrs. Frank Thurston to sail a coastwise vessel undoubtedly saved the small two-masted schooner, Herman F. Kimball which was towed into this port this morning by the power boat of the Cape Elizabeth Coast Guard Station. While Mrs. Thurston's husband, who is the captain of the Kimball, and the two members of his crew were busy keeping the schooner from sinking by bailing the water from the hold Mrs. Thurston remained at the wheel, kept the schooner on her course for Portland and at times helped her husband and the members of the crew. Mrs. Thurston was assisted in her part of the work by her daughter, Madeline, who is only 14 years of age and who did not hesitate to lend a hand in the work of bailing and sailing the old freighted deep with a cargo of phosphate the Kimball sailed from Boston yesterday and was bound to Searspoint. The first intimation the captain and his crew had that the vessel was leaking was early last night when off Boon Island. The vessel commenced to settle and the pumps became absolutely useless as they quickly became choked with the phosphate and the greater part of the water was in that part of the vessel separated from the main hold by a bulkhead. It was necessary for Capt. Thurston, his son, James Thurston and Bert Wescott to go below in to the hold and it was slow and tiresome work bailing out the water with ordinary water buckets.

Throughout the greater part of the night the captain and his crew were kept at their task as there was grave danger of the water reaching the forward part of the vessel and causing her to sink or to at least destroy the valuable cargo of phosphate.

While the men bailed Mrs. Thurston stood by the wheel and sailed her husband's vessel and her young daughter remained on deck doing her bit towards getting the vessel safely into port.

About 4 this morning two fishermen were hailed off the Cape and they went ashore to the Cape Elizabeth Coast Guard Station and notified Captain Dyer and his crew of the plight of those on board the Kimball. At 5:30 the Coast Guard crew boarded the leaking schooner off the Cape and finally towed her to this port, the men from the coast guard station relieving Captain Thurston and his men from their work in bailing the vessel.

When the schooner arrived in the harbor she was deep in the water and her decks were nearly awash. The towboat Sebago was summoned and with the aid of pumps the greater part of the water was removed from the Kimball's hold. However, the Coast Guard crew stood by the vessel throughout the forenoon and assisted in bailing out water in an effort to locate the leak. Repairs will be made on the schooner here before she resumes her voyage to Searspoint.

Mrs. Thurston does not consider her work of last night out of the ordinary and the men on board point proudly to the fact that she is a splendid skipper and capable of sailing a vessel as well as any man on the coast.

The Kimball is a vessel of 125 gross tons, 34.6 feet in length, 25.5 feet beam, 7.1 feet depth and was built at Boothbay in 1888. She sails from Boston. Captain Thurston is a native of Rockport, Me.

THE SECOND MAINE REUNION.

The fifth annual reunion of the Second Maine Regiment association was held in Bangor, Wednesday, Sept. 20th. None of the field and staff officers of the 2nd Maine, which was the first regiment to leave the State for the front in 1861, and which fought in some of the bloodiest engagements of the war, are now living. Of the commissioned officers, the five who are now alive are Capt. Garnsey, Gen. A. B. Farnham, Bangor; Lieut. Horatio Staples, Portland; Lieut. Frank S. Trickey, Lieut. S. Dean Benson, Bangor. When this regiment marched from Bangor on its way to the front May 14, 1861, it was about 1,000 strong and was in command of Col. Charles D. Jameson. Charles W. Roberts was lieutenant colonel, and George Varney was major. Sickness had broken out among the members of the First Maine of Portland, and the Bangor men, sound and healthy, were the first to represent Maine on the battlefield. They were the first men from Maine to enter the State of Virginia. The battles in which they participated were First Bull Run, Siege of Yorktown, Malvern Hill, Hanover Court House, Grimes Mill, Second Bull Run, Peninsular Campaign, Antietam, Fredericksburg and Chancellorsville. That the regiment saw real fighting is quite evident from the fact that of the 1,000 men who left Bangor, only 275 returned in 1863. The Second Maine was a two years regiment and when it disbanded at the end of its enlistment period headquarters of the rank and file went back, and from this number of hardened campaigners no less than 40 officers were furnished for regiments that were later organized. Gen. Farnham in this way became lieutenant colonel of the Sixteenth Maine.

The military descendant of the Second Maine of the Civil war, the Second Maine National Guard regiment of today, was the first and only regiment from Maine to go on border duty in Texas in the year of grace, 1916. And if action comes, they will fulfill the proud traditions of the regiment of Civil war days.

It is learned from an authoritative source that the new hotel proposition for Islesboro is an assured fact, that over $150,000 has already been raised by subscription with which to build it, and that the architect, E. C. Evans of Philadelphia, is already at work upon the plans. The house will be built on the site of the Islesboro Inn, which was destroyed by fire about a year ago, and will contain some 60 to 65 rooms and baths, commodious living rooms, lounges, dining rooms, etc.

The new house will be ready for the 1917 business, and David H. Smith, manager of the old Inn, will manage the new one.

Dark Harbor Golf Links.

The new golf links at Dark Harbor have been greatly enjoyed this summer. In perfecting the 18 hole course a period of three years has been consumed and many thousands of dollars have been expended upon it. The new club house has been furnished under the direction and supervision of Miss Miriam Sears of Boston and her father, Richard D. Sears has been quite as energetic in perfecting the course. Delightful teas and other affairs have been materialized at the golf club during the season.

He has over 40 medals and about the same number of cups. He organized the Rifle Club in the Brookline High school and won from every High school or academy in the country. Upon going to Harvard the second year he became president and manager of the Rifle Club there. During the years 1911-12-13 he drilled, among others, Mr. Vincent Astor for one year. During those three years Harvard won from all the colleges in rifle shooting, which has never occurred before or since, and all the boys of the Rifle club received letters for their sweaters. After his return from the border he will go into partnership with Mr. Lindsey B. Shell for the practice of law in Boston. Since The Republican Journal was issued it has been taken by his great-grandfather, grandfather, and is now taken by his grandmother, Mrs. Nathan P.
