SOMERVILLE MOTHER HAS BABY DURING RIDE TO AUGUSTA

AUGUSTA (AP)—"You couldn't get anywhere...it was so icy I had a hard job walking," Ronald Mullins said Sunday.

His daughter, 7 and ¾ pound Dorothy Elizabeth, and her mother were in "fine condition" in the Augusta General Hospital as he discussed the baby's "nerve wracking" arrival.

Mullins and his wife—expecting their fourth child, started to drive from their Somerville home to the hospital about midnight. It took them an hour and a half to creep six miles over Route 105 toward Windsor. Then they got stuck.

Kenneth Allen of Windsor tried and failed to get his car moving. State Trooper Richard M. Bowley of Coopers Mills went to the Mullins rescue. He reached the Allen home but Mullins said the trooper had to "ditch his oar." Bowley called for help and also telephoned Mrs. Andrew Henderson, a nurse on the Veterans Administration staff who lives two miles from the Allen home, to come to his assistance.

When a State Highway Commission sanding crew reached the Allen home with the nurse, Mrs. Henderson said "I heard the baby's first wail as I entered the door" at 2:30.

Mrs. Allen and the trooper, a young father of two, had brought Dorothy Elizabeth into the world, Mullins said. Mrs. Henderson, who said she had not been involved in a baby case in 17 years, said that the trooper told her "no one ever looked any better" than she when she walked through the door.

Finally, at 6 a.m., with Mrs. Henderson and Bowley as escorts, father, mother and baby reached the Augusta hospital.

AUGUSTA (AP)—"You couldn't get anywhere...it was so icy I had a hard job walking," Ronald Mullins said Sunday.

His daughter, 7 and ¾ pound Dorothy Elizabeth, and her mother were in "fine condition" in the Augusta General Hospital as he discussed the baby's "nerve wracking" arrival.

Mullins and his wife—expecting their fourth child, started to drive from their Somerville home to the hospital about midnight. It took them an hour and a half to creep six miles over Route 105 toward Windsor. Then they got stuck.

Kenneth Allen of Windsor tried and failed to get his car moving. State Trooper Richard M. Bowley of Coopers Mills went to the Mullins rescue. He reached the Allen home but Mullins said the trooper had to "ditch his oar." Bowley called for help and also telephoned Mrs. Andrew Henderson, a nurse on the Veterans Administration staff who lives two miles from the Allen home, to come to his assistance.

When a State Highway Commission sanding crew reached the Allen home with the nurse, Mrs. Henderson said "I heard the baby's first wail as I entered the door" at 2:30.

Mrs. Allen and the trooper, a young father of two, had brought Dorothy Elizabeth into the world, Mullins said. Mrs. Henderson, who said she had not been involved in a baby case in 17 years, said that the trooper told her "no one ever looked any better" than she when she walked through the door.

Finally, at 6 a.m., with Mrs. Henderson and Bowley as escorts, father, mother and baby reached the Augusta hospital.

Blake cannot drive a car for six weeks nor take more than a one-hour trip in a car. He is allowed and encouraged to walk, however.
