Pocahontas Crewman Accidentally Drowned

Coast Guardsmen and Rockland police are shown dragging the harbor bottom between the Coast Guard base and the O'Hara dock Thursday morning. The body of Percy Henderson was found by Coast Guardsmen using a small landing craft at a position about under the O'Hara ice chute shown in the background at the dock's edge.

Percy Henderson, 37, of Brooklyn, a deckhand aboard the scallop dragger Pocahontas, was drowned in Rockland harbor off the O'Hara docks sometime Wednesday evening.

Dr. Hugo Hochschild of Thomaston, Knox County medical examiner, who viewed the body at the Coast Guard Base at 12:45 p. m. Thursday set the hour of death as approximately 14 hours previously—or about 10:45 p. m. Wednesday.

A fellow crewman aboard the dragger related that Henderson was last seen by him at 6 p. m. Wednesday. At that time, he was talking with the Pocahontas' master, Capt. Maynard Lammi of Rockport, on the deck of the dragger Wawenock.

The Pocahontas was lying outboard of the trawler Wawenock on the eastern side of the F. J. O'Hara and Sons dock on Tillson Avenue at the time. The Wawenock, captained by Robert Anderson of Thomaston, sailed for the fishing banks early Thursday. Both vessels are owned by Harvey Gamage, South Bristol shipyard owner.

The Pocahontas had been in port some four or five weeks undergoing engine repairs and the crew was preparing to take her to sea when the accident occurred, according to the crew members.

A search for Henderson was underway in the city as early as 5 a. m. with crew members checking locations where he might have gone away possibly making his way ashore unseen by others.

The Coast Guard was asked for aid in dragging the harbor bottom off the docks about 10:30 a. m. Police and firemen joined the dragging operations which resulted in the finding of Henderson's body in a position opposite the ice chute where draggers take aboard ice before leaving for the banks.

The Coast Guard used its 40 foot picket boat and an LCP from a 65 foot light station supply boat from Portland which happened to be at the base at the time. Police used a skiff obtained from Snow Marine Basin which was owned by Richard Esponette. The dory was manned by patrolmen Frank Nash and Albert Smith. Boatswain Mate Edward Brown was in charge of the Coast Guard's 40 footer.

The crew of the LCP brought up Henderson's body a short time after joining the search. He was moved to the garage of the Coast Guard Base which adjoins the O'Hara docks to wait inspection by the medical examiner.

Henderson had been working on fishing boats out of Rockland the past two or three years, alternating between the Rhode Island, the Wawenock and the Pocahontas.

The body was removed to the Burpee Funeral Home where an autopsy was performed at 10 a. m. Friday by Dr. Irving I. Goodoff, Waterville pathologist. The post mortem examination was made at the request of County Attorney Curtis Payson. Dr. Hugo Hochschild of Thomaston, county medical examiner, rendered a verdict of accidental drowning.

Representatives of the Jordan Funeral Home in Ellsworth were to remove the body to Ellsworth Friday afternoon for later funeral services in Brooklyn.

ROCKLAND MAGAZINE DISTRIBUTOR DEFENDANT IN $25,000 LEGAL ACTION INVOLVING CONFIDENTIAL

The owner of the State News Company in Rockland, Sidney I. Segal, was served a writ Dec. 16, 1957, to appear in the February term of Knox Superior Court to face a libel suit based on a story that was printed in Confidential magazine, one of the publications that he distributes in this area.

The writ, which was made public Thursday by Knox County Clerk of Courts Miss Pearl E. Borgerson, calls for the attachment of Segal's property to the amount of $25,000 pending the outcome of the trial.

The litigation was issued by George Gainford of New York City, the manager of boxer Sugar Ray Robinson, through his attorney in Lewiston, Louis Scolnik.

The writ stated that an article entitled "The Fight Sugar Ray Won On A Fix" on pages 20, 21, 52 and 54 of the March, 1956, issue of Confidential magazine was "malicious, defamatory and libelous to the plaintiff. The writer, Harry McCarthy wrote the story Jan. 7, 1956, according to the writ.

Gainford asserted that the article hindered his income since it prevented Robinson from securing boxing matches after the story appeared in print.

The writ was the fourth one issued to distributors of the magazine in Maine, the other three being in Androscoggin, Cumberland and Penobscot counties. Six more writs are expected to be served to distributors around the State in a very short time.

It was reported that Charles Cohen of Portland will represent all the dealers in the various terms of Superior Court in Maine.

Segal, however, declined to mention whether the dealers or the Harrison Publishing Company of New York City, the publishers of Confidential magazine, will pay for the defense.

Segal operates a general wholesale magazine, newspaper and book distribution firm, servicing the retailers of the area. He receives his stocks from distributors allied with the publishers.

Camden and Owls Head Marches Exceed Quotas

Two other communities in Knox County conducted a Mother's March on Pello this week, both of whom exceeded last year's collections.

On Wednesday night, about 22 ladies collected $148.14 in Owls Head, to become the first community in this area to exceed its goal of 1957, according to Mrs. Evelyn Ross, town committee head.

Refreshments were served at the Central School by Mrs. Mary Dyer and Mrs. Irene Moore.

On Thursday night, the Mother's March in Camden collected about $814, with several collections yet outstanding. Mrs. Robert Downing, the town's police chairman, announced Friday afternoon.

This figure also represents a higher amount than was collected in 1957.

Refreshments were served at the town office, which served as the drive headquarters, by the Camden Dandelions, headed by Mrs. Gustaz Jensen.

The collection in Rockland and Thomaston Tuesday night had resulted in about $1,316 toward the polo drive.

All local offices of the Maine Employment Security Commission now have applications for some highly classified jobs in the State Service. Among them is a newly created position as Executive Secretary to the Committee on Aging with a salary range from $82 to $102 per week. Application for this position must be filed with the State Department of Personnel on or before Feb. 14, 1958.

Also needed to fill immediate and future vacancies are Construction Inspectors I, salary range $98 to $122 per week and Construction Inspectors II with salary range of $112 to $139 per week. Applications on these positions will be accepted until further notice.

An Assistant Superintendent for a Women's Reformatory, salary range $94 to $117 per week is needed and applications are also available for the position of Informational Representative to fill an existing vacancy and to provide eligibles for future vacancies in various State Departments.

The salary range is $90 to $112 per week and applications for both of the above named jobs must be filed on or before Feb. 6, 1958.

On all of these jobs, legislation has been passed which will effect a pay range increase approximating 4% on July 1, 1958.

Legion Requests Remembrance of Four Chaplains

The Knox County Council of the American Legion calls attention to the first Sunday in February which has been designated as "Four Chaplains Memorial Day". County Commander Sidney Segal comments that next Sunday is the anniversary of the sinking of the troopship Dorchester in the North Atlantic at the height of World War II.

He calls attention to the sacrifice made by the four clergymen of the Catholic, Protestant and Jewish faiths in giving their life jackets to other men that they might live as the transport sank.

He asks that clergymen make mention of the sacrifice of the four chaplains during their services Sunday.

Cement Strike Cut Railroad Income In '57

Net income of $20,995 over and above its fixed charges, provision for contingent interest, and tax accruals was earned by the Maine Central Railroad Company for the year 1957 as compared with $1,367,312 earned in 1956, a decrease of $446,417, it is shown in its annual financial statement made public today.

E. Spencer Miller, president of the road, pointed out the decreased earnings were a result of a decline in business activity in the State of Maine and the nation as a whole, which was reflected by a 1.5 per cent decrease in operating revenues amounting to $416,632 from 1956. In addition railway operating expenses increased almost 3 per cent or $24,893 due to increased costs for wages and materials.

Freight revenue in 1957 totaled $24,232,096, a decrease of $257,942 from that of 1956.

Passenger revenue showed a decrease of $83,182. Ratio of operating expenses to operating revenues was 80.87 as compared with 77.36 in 1956.

Miller pointed out that loss of cement traffic during the strike at Thomaston and a drop in paper and paper products shipments due to curtailment in mill production partly because of low water last summer, accounted in large part for the lower traffic volume and less favorable earnings.

Republicans Shift Convention Date

The Republican State Committee has announced a change in dates of the state convention. The convention will be held at Portland Wednesday and Thursday, June 25 and 26.

The State Committee voted at a meeting Jan. 22 to hold the convention June 26 and 27. These dates conflicted with the scheduled American Legion convention. Committee members were polled by telephone and the new dates resulted.

The 1958 Republican convention will mark the first occasion of a party convention following the state primaries.

Robert J. Knight of Westbrook is chairman of the convention committee. Members include Mrs. Agnes C. Eradley, Rumford; Charles F. Cummings, Bath; Miss Lillian F. Cleaves, Saco; Mrs. Ellen E. Thomas, Anson; and Mrs. Ellena Sewall of Bath.

Survey Shows 1957 One Of Best Years For N. E. Business

New England in 1957 enjoyed a good year overall. A year-end survey of all segments of the region's economy by the New England Council's monthly business news magazine, The New Englander, indicates that many records were set, although some minus signs showed up.

The business review looks for 1958 as a year of readjustment and fence-mending followed by an upturn in the second half.

The past year was brightest in its early and middle months, then slipped into the same pattern of adjustment experienced by the nation as defense cutbacks curtailed production.

According to the NEC's publication total personal income in New England was $21.5 billion. Savings also increased, approximately $500 million. The region's tremendous resources in bank, insurance company and investment trust assets climbed to a new record level of $47.9 billion.

Employment in New England was at a high plateau and in November was just a shade under the previous year's record level. Industrial expansion continued throughout the six state area with 700 new plants and major expansions tabulated, resulting in 22,000 new jobs.

Shipbuilding enjoyed its biggest peacetime year. Utilities also set new records, the Council reported. The New England electronics industry increased eight per cent in 1957, with plastics up nearly as much. Metal-working firms were in a period of transition along with the textile industry which continued to feel the effects of a flood of imports.

All segments of transportation, with the exception of railroads, enjoyed good business during 1957. Vacation travel set a new record in New England. The comparatively new atomic energy field was building and getting ready for big years ahead.

Despite the economic readjustment during the second half of 1957, the New England Council foresees 1958 as a good year overall with the optimism backed by a growing population, high income rate, heavy volume of defense spending, expansion plans of business, and high level of consumer buying.

Barring a national emergency, a business upturn is expected to start by mid-year and continue through the rest of the year.

Mrs. Fred M. Knight roasted a lamb shoulder Thursday evening and set it on the rear porch of her Gay street home to cool. Later, glancing from a window, she saw the roaster cover mid-lawn and investigation disclosed her roaster and roaster was missing along with a basket filled with soda pop bottles, much too much weight for a child to carry. Mrs. Knight appreciates the compliment to her cooking but assures the thief that no roasts will be cooled on the porch in the future so he need not call again.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

If I had my life to live again, I would have made a rule to read some poetry and listen to some music at least once a week. The loss of these tastes is a loss of happiness—Charles Darwin.

VAIN REGRETS

Have naught to do with yesterday, As on life's current glides; Leave them to take their backward ways As eddies to the tides.

Do for the present what you can, Keep coming good in view; What's done 'tis profitless to scan, What may be 'tis yours to do.

What use to creak o'er errors flown— In dark despair to rest? The way for past bad to atone Is — do your future best.

From memory of a dark career Urge your repentant pace; Turn not your head to see or hear, But onward bend your face.

Heed not the raging of the blast Along the course you've sped; Thank God the ills are with the past, The good to do ahead.

B. P. Shillaber.

THE WEATHER

As of Friday afternoon the same pleasant mildness continues and shortly after noon the sun put in an appearance after a protracted absence. We can well remember the day of ice cutting and storing on the Chickawauke Lake. Pond it always used to be, when the ice cutting firms would be getting nervous as February arrived with no ice in evidence on the big lake. A fortnight later with the ice cover only a few inches thick, ice cutting operations would have to start and the ice cutting fraternity would lose their shirts to resort to a colloquialism.

A Bad Night For The City Of Bangor Is Recalled By Captain Scott

Deer Isle, Maine
January 26, 1958
Dear Steamboat Editor:

In one of the letters I received recently the writer stated how obvious it was that the City of Bangor was my favorite of all the side wheelers of the Eastern fleet. I also considered her the most beautiful as far as her lines were concerned up to the time she was burned in 1914. For some unforseen reason the course of reconstruction straightened her out and erased the original sheer of her hull. I have heard many discussions, and reasons, which were possibilities for this. One was that the ends of her cradle sagged a bit from her weight and after her super-structure was completed new it held her rigid. The difference in her sheer was noticeable to me, and I also want to say that I did not care for her walking beam house that was lengthened by adding the four staterooms, two for the officers, one for the 2nd officer and one for one quarter-master. Later an upper berth was added to one room to accommodate both quartermasters.

Our old friend Frederick Waltz of Portland reminds me in a letter I received from him this week, that our Steamboat column in The Courier-Gazette had printed many of the events of the City of Bangor's career, but we had thus far failed to mention one more important event of her career. I looked up my records and discovered he was right. This event occurred on June 8, 1906 at 12.02 of that morning about 20 miles off Portland, 25 miles east of Cape Elizabeth and 15 miles from Seguin, due to heavy fog conditions. The steamer City of Rockland under Capt. Roix left Boston at 5 p. m. for Rockland with 209 passengers. The City of Bangor which alternated with her on the Bangor Line left Rockland at 8 p. m. in command of Capt. Ezra Curtis. A few minutes before midnight, Capt. Roix heard the City of Bangor's whistle and believed her to be about three fourths of a mile away, and saw the City of Bangor when about a half a mile away, then the fog shut down again.

While the City of Bangor was making her way slowly into Portland the steamer Calvin Austin which was enroute from St. John followed her and took her freight and passengers to Boston. Late that afternoon, after temporary repairs had been made, the City of Bangor was allowed to proceed to Boston light, and was there placed on McKie's railway in East Boston where they worked around the clock and had her back on the run after losing only one trip. This collision made a change in the routes to be taken by the steamers of the Bangor Line. As this was those days before wireless the only way that ships could keep track of each other in foggy weather was by whistle or sight, therefore the company, for safety's sake, made it a rule that the east bound steamers would follow the shore and pass inside of Monhegan, and the west bound would go outside direct from Mon-

He swung his ship away from the direction of the City of Bangor. When he next heard her whistle she was close aboard. He swung his wheel hard apart and the jingler in the engine room sent its echoes to the remote corners of her stately beam house as it signaled full speed ahead hoping to avoid the impact of an imminent collision. It was too late, but had he not have been going full speed ahead the impact of the collision which struck the City of Rockland just aft of her Paddle-box, would have sunk her. The City of Bangor's bow cut into the City of Rockland and tore away about 40 feet including five staterooms, four of which were not occupied and the other was occupied by two ladies who fortunately were not injured.

The stem of the City of Bangor was smashed to a point just below the water line and she was leaking so badly the mate Thomas Birmingham, in water up to his waist, checked this leak some what with mattresses. It was necessary to put into Portland for safety and temporary repairs. The City of Rockland stayed by her for three and one half hours though more or less crippled herself, until satisfied that the City of Bangor was in no immediate danger. After discovering that the City of Rockland's hull was not damaged she continued her run to Rockland, arriving at 9 o'clock a. m., five and one half hours later than usual. She continued on to Bangor where temporary repairs were made before leaving again for Boston.

GRANGE NEWS OF KNOX-LINCOLN COUNTIES

Poultry Industry Furor Over Crackdown On Custom Feeds Subsides As Regulations Eased

A state statute which became effective with the first of the year threw the grain business of the state into a furor a week ago Friday, but it is straightened out now.

A Department of Agriculture regulation forbade the shipping into Maine of custom compounded feed for livestock and poultry unless it was registered.

Importation of feeds containing antibiotics and other drugs are a normal thing as all such mixes are registered with the state, and tags bearing the formula are attached to each bag or shipment.

The restriction by the inspection division came on custom made mixes which might be ordered by a poultry grower, a feed company, a service man or veterinarian to treat a certain flock for a specific condition. In short, it amounted to a drug prescription for animal use.

Such orders are commonplace and feed companies have in the past mixed the prescription as directed and tagged it with the name of the farmer ordering it. As a rule, no formula was tagged to the bag. With one, or possibly two, exceptions such prescriptions were mixed in plants outside of Maine. Feed companies found that the strict interpretation of the new regulations required registration of each and every new feed mix containing drugs. The registration fee was $20. Samples of the mix had to be forwarded for analysis by state chemists.

Under the law, each special order was considered a new brand or mix and subject to registration and inspection.

The result was that hurried arrangements were made to compound custom prescription orders for feeds in a small mill operating within the state. Such orders are seldom for but a few bags.

A conference at Augusta Tuesday between Department of Agriculture officials and representatives of grain companies straightened out the situation to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Clayton Osgood, chief of the inspection division of the Department of Agriculture, explained Thursday that the step was taken to control the compounding of custom mixes; principally to protect the farmer.

Also, he said, the regulation gave the state an opportunity to determine what drugs were being administered to poultry and livestock and to watch the results.

What his department sought, Osgood said, was to inform the farmer of the contents of the mix ordered for him—the specific use for which it was intended and a warning against feeding to poultry or livestock other than that for which it was intended.

Now, as a result of the Tuesday conference, custom mixes may be shipped in from out of state under certain arrangements. In addition to the regular formula tag, the bag must bear a second tag which identifies the buyer and spells out the use for which it is intended and a warning that it is for one use only and should not be used as a feed for other birds or animals.

Osgood explained that a feed containing a special drug, or an added quantity of one of the components of the usual feed, and intended for a broiler flock, could, if fed to a layer flock, possibly create a condition which might cut egg production and result in a financial loss to the farmer.

The $20 registration fee is not now required for prescription feeds, but strict regulations regarding the tagging and stating of formulas exist by agreement of state and feed dealers alike.

SCHUYLER HAWES, RALPH PEARSE FARMS TOP GREEN PASTURES

Schuyler Hawes, left, and William Pearse discuss judging carried out recently in the Green Pastures in Winter Contest. Farms operated by the pair were judged winners in Knox County.

The Schuyler Hawes and Son farm in Union topped the County's Green Pastures in Winter Contest, according to County Agent Gil Jaeger. In second place was the Ralph Pearse and Sons Farm in Hope.

Other farms scored in the county area were the Eben Haggett farm in Damariscotta Mills; Herbert Hawes farm, Union; Frank Calderwood, Union; Mason Johnson, Rockland; and Leon Johnston, Jefferson.

A judging school was held at the Herbert Hawes farm. Judges were farmers from the county.

A cutting date of June 10 was set as the day when all farmers harvesting forage crops should be at work putting up hay or grass silage. Although cutting should not start later, it could start earlier.

The purpose of the project is to teach farmers to evaluate their own winter feeding program, by figuring out the actual amounts of hay equivalent fed per one hundred pounds of cow body weight; the efficiency of farm operations, the amount of milk produced from grain, and other factors showing feed efficiency.

The county agent pointed out that the Hawes farm averaged two acres per 1200 pounds cow unit, and the Pearse farm averaged 1.8 acres per 1200 pounds cow unit. Labor efficiency on most of the farms scored rated at least toward 200,000 pounds of 4 per cent fat corrected milk.

Any farmer interested in learning how to score his own farm should contact the county agent who will be glad to be of assistance.

By Henry Teague

Models in poultry science to be changing almost as often as changes are made in automobiles. A breed or strain that may be in high favor today may be just a memory to most poultrymen a short time hence. Ten years ago a flock that averaged 290 eggs was considered O.K. and now 250 egg birds are common talk.

Even though a bird may be advertised as a 250 egg producer, these promises do not always seem to hold up under average farm conditions. But, if the breeder is giving real facts in his advertisements, there will certainly be some flocks come close to the 250 egg mark. Records on other farms will be cut down by such things as disease, accident, insufficient equipment, lack of ventilation and other causes.

But the average rate of production on efficient farms has certainly increased over the past decade and it looks as though the end is not in sight.

There is no question but that a pound of broiler meat can be produced on less feed today than ever before. Improved stock advances in nutrition and better medical protection are working together to make broiler raising enterprises one of the most efficient food producing systems in the country.

Every once in a while there is news of break throughs in one or another branches of the industry that is little short of startling. For quite a while now there has been general knowledge among egg producers that light plays an important part both in the growing of pullets and rate of lay. It has become common practice to light the birds from the middle of August until the middle of May giving them a constant day of from 13 to 14 hours. The amount of light needed is standard too with warnings given out that bulbs must always be kept clean and promptly replaced.

Some time ago there were articles about experiments with flashes of high powered light for brief periods which apparently gave the same gland stimulation as constant lights. This system has not seemed to catch on.

In this week's issue of a national farm magazine appears a story of a radical new system of lighting that preliminary tests have shown increase the rate of lay as much as four or five dozen eggs a year per hen.

The system calls for raising the pullets with a constant day of six hours of light. When the birds start laying, the light day is increased 18 minutes a week throughout the laying year.

If this system is used, all windows must be covered and a fan ventilation system set up with intakes baffled to keep out light and drafts. A generator would be practically a necessity to insure the success of this system. The cost of change-over would not be out of reach for most poultrymen, but it would involve a considerable amount, chiefly for fan equipment.

What is the reaction of the average poultryman to this news. The first thought is exciting. But we already have about all the eggs our marketing systems seem to be able to handle. Would an overall increase in egg production to more net revenue for the farmer? The downward trend in eggs is forcing many small farmers out of business. Others are driven to expand because of the decreased profit per unit. If this new plan is proved successful in the on farm tests, many farmers may be forced to change over their operations to get this increased production.

The six hour plan for raising pullets sound interesting. The farmer who is willing to work nights as well as days, could care for his laying flock during the day and his growing stock at night. He could pick any six hours in the 24 that suited him best.

Most farmers have a daily routine which can be changed some on occasion but with a pen dark 18 hours out of the 24, work could only be done with the birds during the six hour period which might tie a farmer a little tighter to his farm.

On the other hand industrial workers with knowledge of poultry raising, could raise flocks of started pullets during the evening hours. And the started pullet idea is increasing in favor each year.

So this new system may be a great benefit or on the other hand it may be another great headache for the egg producer.

At least the man who agrees with you in all things gets credit for having good judgement.

Malcolm Joy New President of K-L Sheepgrowers

Malcolm Joy, of Camden, was elected president of the Knox-Lincoln County Sheepgrowers' Association at the group's annual meeting held in North Nobleboro Thursday evening.

Mr. Joy succeeds Chesley Cripps of Camden. Other officers elected were: Hudson Vannah, Nobleboro, vice president; E. P. Livingston, Waldoboro, secretary-treasurer; and directors, Chesley Cripps, Camden, Gilbert Bryant, Camden and Al Roberts, Friendship.

County Agent Gil Jaeger spoke on future plans of the group; and Extension Livestock Specialist Jack Goater discussed the results of the Penobscot County Lamb Pools held this year. Mr. Goater noted that the average price received by farmers was $22.02 for 91 pound average lambs in good condition against $12.89 for lambs underweight with no finish.

Jerome Emerson of Penobscot County discussed the methods used in these pools. Professor of Livestock Bruce Poulton from the University of Maine discussed the need for efficiency in farm operations.

Extension Economist Allan Manchester gave the agricultural outlook for various agricultural products, and noted the apparently good prospects for lamb and wool production in the state. He thought the numbers of sheep in the state would triple within 10 years.

About 75 sheepgrowers attended the meeting.

A & P Supports Maine Corn Packers

In response to an urgent request by Maine's sweet corn canning industry, A&P Food Stores are conducting an aggressive sales campaign to help reduce the heavy surplus of the commodity.

The firm's newspaper ads and radio and television commercials will highlight low prices now in effect. Store window signs and displays will feature the product.

Company representatives recently pledged full cooperation with the canners at a special meeting at which the Governors and agriculture leaders of Maine, Vermont and New Hampshire stressed the need for all-out support by retailers.

The heavy supply of fancy cream style canned corn now in New England warehouses has posed a problem for the industry. If the surplus is not substantially reduced, some canning plants may be forced to shut down this coming season.

Special multiple can prices and full case prices are being offered by A&P, representing attractive savings to consumers.

District cooperators who plan to construct drainage ditches, ponds and other type of structures should decide early in the season just what they plan to do. By making an early decision it gives the District personnel sufficient time for layouts, designs, etc., if needed. Farm ponds with dams, especially, take considerable time and need to be planned well ahead of construction time.

The farm pond constructed last summer on the Henry Laukka farm, Union, has been completely filled with water for some time. Henry did a fine job of making the forms for the concrete spillway, seeding, liming, fertilizing, grading and so on. It is anticipated that the pond will be stocked with trout which in turn will afford another source of food. The pond was designed and constructed under the supervision of the Knox-Lincoln Soil Conservation District personnel.

A Dessert For February

February has its own round of holidays, and because of one of them, George Washington's Birthday, we also celebrate National Cherry Week. So as a salute to the month of February, today's recipe features a delectable dessert that is appropriately served with a cherry sauce.

Simple to make, this torte combines whole wheat flakes, nut-meats and finely cut figs—you may substitute dates if you wish. As another special feature, serve it elegantly with Coffee Cappuccino. To make this coffee, mix one-third cup espresso brew with one-third cup hot milk and one-third cup whipped cream. The whipped cream will float to the top and you may garnish with a dash of ground cinnamon, or slip in a cinnamon stick.

Fig-Nut Torte

¼ cup sifted flour
¼ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1½ cups Pep (whole wheat flakes)
¼ cup chopped nutmeats
1 cup finely cut figs
2 eggs, separated
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Crush Pep into fine crumbs; mix with sifted dry ingredients. Stir in nutmeats and figs. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored; beat in sugar. Stir into flour mixture. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Fold into batter. Spread in greased 8x8 inch pan. Bake in slow oven (325° F.) about 25 minutes. Cut into squares and serve with whipped cream or cherry sauce. Yield: 9 servings. Note: Dates may be substituted for figs if desired.

MAJESTY

Beyond the timber line rises sheer rock, towering above the clouds themselves. Looking at this great giant of nature we marvel at God's creations . . . and are aware of the comparative insignificance of man.

Yet, man is far from insignificant, save in physical size. For God, after all, made man in His image. And He gave man a brain, and a soul, with a sense of right and wrong. He gave him character and responsibility.

It is man who can progress to heights far greater than this mountain. But he needs help to do it—God's help, through the help of the Church.

You weren't meant to stand alone in this world. Remember that . . . and go to Church this Sunday.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor in the building of a character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For the sake of his community and nation. (3) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and financial support. Plan to go to Bible study.

Karnival Kandymakers Use Firemen's Kitchen

The Kippy Carnival midway was well supplied with candied apples Friday due to the efforts of a group of youngsters who spent three evenings this week making the delicacies in the kitchen of the fire station. A delicious mixture of white corn syrup, butter, sugar, bright red vegetable coloring and cinnamon was used to make the confection in which the Macintosh apples were dipped. Wooden dowels were cut to make the sticks, and when the job was done, the teen-age candy makers had 1150 confections on hand. Displaying their wares are, from the left, Laura Joki, Nancy Cross and Leatrice Conway.

Some Unemployed Not Applying For Insurance Due

Commissioner Joseph E. A. Cote, Labor Representative on the Maine Employment Security Commission, said yesterday that many workers are now becoming unemployed for the first time. In spite of the present high unemployment in the State, he believed many of those entitled to draw unemployment insurance were not applying. In some instances, this may be because these people wish to save their credits, or possibly many are confusing unemployment insurance with charity and are not aware that unemployment insurance is an earned right. Commissioner Cote also feels that some do not know of the requirements needed and do not understand just what to do to make application for the unemployment insurance to which they may be entitled. Therefore, the Commissioner would like to point out certain facts which he feels will be helpful to workers—particularly those who are entitled to file unemployment claims for the first time.

Any worker is entitled to apply for unemployment insurance but everyone is not eligible to draw benefits as there are certain basic and fundamental requirements which must be met. The Maine Employment Security Law requires that a worker must have been employed in "covered" employment during his "base period" and earned at least $300 in such employment. A covered employer is any employing unit that employs four or more employees for some part of 20 different weeks in a calendar year. The claimant's "base period" is that calendar year which precedes the "benefit year" during which the claim is filed. The "benefit year" runs from April 1 in one year to March 31 the following year.

A worker who becomes unemployed should, either in person or by mail, notify his nearest State Employment Office promptly of his desire to file a claim. Workers should register for work with the employment office covering the area in which they live, and they must be able and available for full-time work at their customary occupation or at such other work as shows them to be fitted and qualified. The Law requires that a one week waiting period be served in each benefit year. The waiting period is not payable. The claimant's weekly benefit is based upon the amount which he has earned in his base period. The minimum payment is $7 per week and ranges to a maximum of $33 per week. A qualified worker may draw the amount to which he is entitled during a benefit year when totally or partially unemployed and for as long as he has credits available. These benefits are not to be confused with any payments made to Old Age and Survivors Insurance. In Maine, workers themselves do not pay directly for this insurance. They collect the benefits, if qualified, but their employers pay for this insurance.

Unemployment Insurance is designed to provide funds which will help the unemployed worker to secure some of the necessities of life during the period he is not receiving a pay check", said Commissioner Cote. He further pointed out—"workers, unemployed through no fault of their own, have been paid several million dollars in Unemployment Insurance benefits and these benefits have helped to provide clothing, food, fuel, electricity, and other necessities of life."

Commissioner Cote is urging all workers, who are now unemployed, to visit the nearest State Employment Office so that a determination may be made as to whether or not they are entitled to draw unemployment insurance at this time.

Stairs Free Of Clutter Prevent Serious Falls

Keeping stairs and steps free of clutter and in good repair can go a long way toward preventing serious falls.

Clutter on stairways and disrepair are two of the leading reasons for falls, says Mrs. Pauline E. Lush, Extension Service home management specialist, University of Maine.

To prevent using the stairs as handy storage places for articles to be carried up or down, provide a handier and safer place for brooms, mops, wastebaskets, stacks of magazines, overcoats and children's toys. Then no one will be tempted to use the stairs for storage.

In addition to having a clear walkway the full length of each tread, Mrs. Lush recommends being sure stairways are solid under foot—no loose boards, no protruding nails, no shaky handrails, no worn carpets or rubber treads. Replace all faulty items rather than patching.

It pays to have the full length of the stairway well lighted. This means good daylight and three-way light switches at both top and bottom of the stairs.

Hand rails are a must, points out Mrs. Lush. They're called for on both sides of open stairs and on at least one side of closed stairways. Also, never place a loose rug at the top or bottom of a stairway. It could be disastrous.

Maine factory workers get their money's worth in food. Back in 1929, an hour's wage in the average factory would buy just under 6-1/2 loaves of bread. Now it will buy 11 loaves. Then, an hour's wage would have bought 18 ounces of beefsteak. Today it buys about 34 ounces.

Why do folks go to Florida in a winter like this? Surely a very mild season with plenty of rain, guess everyone must have plenty of water. Thirty-eight years ago we had no snow until January 23rd. Then it came, one big storm right after another, blocked everything so that woods work was at a stand still. Men folks couldn't cut or haul and it lasted until March 13th, when came a terrible rain. I can remember it well as I was sick for several weeks with pneumonia and childbed. There is plenty of time for a very cold snowy winter yet. When a child I have heard the old folks say "a mild winter might mean six weeks sledding in July."

The Polio Clinic for pre-school children up to 20 years which was to have been held Feb. 13 has been postponed to a later date.

A large crowd met Wednesday evening at the Methodist Church when Frank Merrill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Merrill of Rockland spoke of his trip to Europe when he attended the Boy Scout Jubilee. Boy Scouts from all over the world went and while there they met Lady Agnes Baden Powell, who with her husband, were the first leaders of Scouting in Europe. Mr. Merrill showed slides of them meeting her and many more of his trip. Also many souvenirs were on display from all different places where he had visited. Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Brownies and Cub Scouts and their leaders all in uniform all marched in at the church. The Youth Fellowship boys acted as servers and the Fellowship girls served refreshments furnished by the members of the WSCS. Marion Upham thanked Merrill for his fine talk and pictures and a gift was presented to show their appreciation. During the refreshment hour the fuse blew and candles were lighted. During this time songs were sung by the children.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:

An appeal is made to all clubs, fraternal, social, religious or other organizations to cooperate in establishing a central file of Coming Events available to all interested parties.

The undersigned recently made an attempt to ascertain commitment dates of Rockland organizations in order to schedule a three-act play, not in conflict with other special events.

The Chamber of Commerce, The Courier-Gazette, the Community Building, the superintendent of Schools and the High School were consulted.

Nothing apparently having been scheduled at this time, the Knox Theater Guild will present, "Pure as the Driven Snow", a melodrama, at the Community Building on Wednesday and Thursday, March 19 and 20 at 8:15 p. m.

This production is the local contribution of the Knox Theater Guild to the wading pool project of the Citizens Recreation Committee in support of the State-wide Community Achievement Program of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs in conjunction with the Maine Department of Economic Development.

As this is for the benefit of the children of our community, it is hoped that the cooperation of Rockland organizations will be given freely and the dates of March 19 and 20 will be left open for this cause.

June R. Champlin, Jr., General Chairman of the Production "Pure as the Driven Snow."
