BIDS FOR NEW CAMDEN COMMUNITY HOSPITAL BUILDING AWARDED

Bids, accompanied by bid bonds for the construction of the new Camden Community Hospital building were opened at the offices of architect Stanley Merrill in Lewiston on Thursday of last week.

Bids ran in the gamut of from $425,645.00, submitted by Fred I. Merrill, Portland, to $478,494.17, made by a Camden firm. Altogether ten offers were received.

The Board of Trustees of the hospital met Thursday evening and accepted the low bid, as submitted by Fred I. Merrill of Portland. During the earlier part of the day the Building Committee of the hospital had also met with the architect and the low bidder and by making certain minor alterations in the building plans were able to have the cost of the building, as bid by Merrill, reduced to $402,000.00.

This puts cost of the new building practically within the estimated cost, an estimate that was made nine months ago. The above bid is for carrying out the detailed specifications of the building alone and does not include landscaping nor the additional furnishing or equipment that will be required for the new hospital.

Approximately $460,000.00 has been raised from all sources for the new Camden Community Hospital.

Edwards Moves To Editorial Post On Honolulu Paper

Edwin Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Edwards of Cedar Street, Rockland, has joined the editorial staff of the Star Bulletin, one of the two daily newspapers serving Honolulu.

An editorial in the Gazette upon his departure paid him a splendid tribute for the decade of service which saw the starting of the daily county paper and its steady growth. The editorial observed in its opening paragraphs:

"Aloha — It is hard to say goodbye to good friends, especially when they are setting forth on a journey which will take them to a new home more than 5000 miles away.

"Many, many friends join us, we know, in wishing Barbara and Eddie Edwards Godspeed, a pleasant journey and much happiness in the land of pineapples and hibiscus, as they set forth in the next few days for Hawaii."

Convict's Petition Denied By Court

An inmate of the Maine State Prison at Thomaston, who had asserted that he was kidnapped and transported across state lines by a deputy sheriff, was denied a writ of habeas corpus.

In a decision, dated January 28, Justice Harold C. Marden of Waterville, denied a writ of habeas corpus which Ralph W. Tuttle had submitted Tuesday morning during the vacation session of the October term of Knox Superior Court.

Tuttle claimed that he was illegally held by arresting officers at the time of his arrest, which placed a restraint on his liberties and freedom.

He further asserted that Deputy Sheriff Archie McAllister of Oxford County kidnapped and transported him illegally by force of arms September 22 from the Coos County House of Correction at West Stewartstown, N. H., to Maine to face a criminal charge.

Justice Marden's decision explained that Tuttle was informed of his rights as set forth in State statutes covering extradition procedures and was voluntarily transported across the State line. The decision further states that the courts of Maine had full jurisdiction in passing judgment on Tuttle in a criminal charge.

He was sentenced to a one to seven year term at the State Prison October 22 by the Oxford County Superior Court for cheating by false pretenses.

A man can't expect his ship to come in when the tide is out.

He also told the Council that the initial job of issuing certificates to hundreds of thousands of boat owners would put a staggering work load on the various states having their own laws and on the Coast Guard in those states which elect to leave administration of the Act in the hands of the Federal Government.

"For these reasons," he said, "I urged that all boats which now have valid numbers issued by the Coast Guard under the old system of numbering undocumented power-driven vessels over 16 feet in length, should be exempt from the provisions of the new Act.

"It was my contention that by exempting boats already having valid numbers, no new tax burden would be put on Maine fishermen who are now operating numbered vessels. In addition, the number of vessels which would have to be certified under the new Act would be substantially reduced, thus easing the burden of administration when the Act first goes into effect.

If the purpose of the Act is boating safety and not revenue, I can see no objection to such exemptions.

So this is how matters now stand. The Coast Guard has yet to issue its rules and regulations in final form, but it will have done so prior to April, 1960, when the Act goes into effect. Maine, on the other hand, has not decided whether to try for boating legislation of its own, or whether to let the Federal Government handle things their way on the navigable waters of the state.

"In all this confusion," Green concluded, "one thing remains crystal clear. Our boating problems, in Maine and elsewhere in the nation, have only just begun."

State School District Commission Still Undecided On Applications Of Five Towns To Join District 5

The Maine School District Commission has yet to reach a decision on the applications of five Knox County communities to join Administrative School District 5. The District is presently made up of Rockland, Owls Head and South Thomaston.

Seeking permission to enter are Rockport, Warren, Thomaston, Cushing and St. George.

The five communities have had their petitions to join before the Commission for two months or more and have yet to learn of the Commission's opinion on the matter.

Permission of the Commission is required, and then approval by Legislature to proceed to vote on the issue in the community applying. A vote in the District already formed then follows and is the final step which determines whether or not the community applying for admission is accepted to the District.

A meeting of the Commission, which was expected to bring an answer, was held Wednesday. On Thursday, it was learned that no decision had been reached and that another session was scheduled for next Tuesday.

The situation is becoming critical with the five towns waiting an answer to their petitions as the day beyond which private and special legislation cannot be entered in Legislature coming next Thursday.

There is the bare possibility that the action could be sent to Legislature under public laws, which would give the Commission and the towns only until the following Thursday, Feb. 12.

After that date, unanimous consent of Legislature must be obtained to enter a bill of any sort.

From all that can be determined, the Commission has given considerable study to the situation which has two more towns applying for admission to District 5 than are now in the District.

However, it is becoming obvious that the directors of District 5 indicate the towns which they wish to have approved by the Commission.

The directors of District 5 have kept a hands off position as a body and have not taken any vote or action; being well aware that the responsibility is not theirs.

Meanwhile, the District 5 officials are held up in planning a new high school and coping with countless allied problems until they know what they may expect for town participation and numbers of students.

The joining of towns in a school district was made possible through the Sinclair Act passed at Legislature two years ago. The Act provided considerable state aid in construction costs where districts were formed, and added state subsidies to make the plan attractive both financially and from an educational standpoint.

Communities not attaining the high curriculum standards set in the Act in a given period of time would be penalized in the way of state school subsidies as compared to those communities which met the standard.

Returns From Mothers' March Announced

Not all of the returns from Thursday's Mothers' March have been as yet received by Peter Sulides, chairman for Knox County. Rockland mothers collected a total of $803.93, while Thomaston mothers turned over to Sulides, collections made by them, amounting to $369.48.

Results from Rockport, Camden and South Thomaston will be announced by the county committee chairman as soon as received. In the meantime, Sulides expresses his personal appreciation and that of all the other workers in the cause to the mothers who gave their time and effort to further the good object of the drive.

Rockland Chamber Of Commerce Meets Monday

Next regular meeting of the Rockland Chamber of Commerce will be held at noon, Monday, at the Thordike Hotel.

Proposed agenda: (1) Report of previous meeting. (2) Treasurer's report. (3) Discussion of proposal for Membership Dinner. (4) Old business. (5) New business. Richard C. Leavitt, administrator of the Knox County General Hospital, will speak on the subject of the new addition to the hospital, about to be opened.

Election Cost Is High Per Vote Cast

City Clerk Gerald U. Margeson explained Thursday afternoon that the cost of the special city election Monday to fill the unexpired three year term of Henry S. Marsh on the City Council was about $720.

The results of the election saw Gerald Grant of 80 Rankin street win the Council seat by a wide margin over his three opponents, James Cousens, Ralph Stone and Gordon Watton.

With a total of 870 ballots cast in the election, the cost per vote is about 83 cents. This figure represents only about 18 per cent of the people in the city who are eligible to vote.

This total cost of $720, includes the salaries of the registration board, election officials and time for members of the highway department, who installed the voting booths in the seven wards. Also in this cost is the bill for printing of the ballots and the placing of notices in The Courier-Gazette.

Margeson noted that this was a good turnout for just a city election. He remembered that only about 200 people cast their ballots in an election about six years ago when there was no opposition offered for any of the positions under consideration.

trator of the Knox County General Hospital, will speak on the subject of the new addition to the hospital, about to be opened.

Sardine Packers Seek Expansion Of Quality Plan

Impressed with results obtained during the 1958 packing season, Maine sardine canners have asked Commissioner of Agriculture E. L. Newdick to expand their mandatory quality grading program.

If Newdick accepts the industry's recommendation, standard quarter size flat cans of sardines in mustard sauce and 12 ounce cans in oil will be included in this activity for the 1959 pack. He will render a decision after a public hearing which he will hold within the next few weeks.

At present only standard quarter size cans packed in oil are under the program which was promulgated into action by the Commissioner last April.

Meeting with the Sardine Industry Advisory Board today Newdick advised the group that he was in accord with the industry's request unless facts were presented at the hearing to change his thinking to the contrary.

He congratulated the packers on their co-operation in making the first year of operation of the program "such an outstanding success" and predicted that it would mean much to the economic advancement of the industry in the future.

Under the system, which was set up at the industry's request, every lot of sardines packed is graded for quality by experts at a specially equipped and manned laboratory at Bangor and certificates of grade are issued to the canners accordingly.

According to Newdick, records of his Inspection Division which administers the program indicated that the overall quality of the 1958 pack of approximately 200,000,000 cans was the highest in the history of the industry.

Quarter mustards represent about 12 per cent of the industry's production while the 12 ounce oils are a newly developed pack designed for the military, restaurant and institutional markets. These two items, with the quarter oils, total about 95 per cent of the industry's production.

The Maine canners made history with their program which was the first instance in the canned food business whereby an industry requested mandatory quality grading of their product. The 1957 Legislature passed laws to make this possible.

Members of the Advisory Board are: Chairman George C. Seybolt, Watertown, Mass.; Milroy Warren, Lubec; Mose Pike, Lubec; Lester Wass, Eastport; Samuel Zwecker, Port Clyde; Calvin Stinson, Jr., Prospect Harbor; and Edwin Witham, Rockland.

The minute a way is found to make men practice what they preach they'll stop preaching.

Confusion Over State-Federal Boating Laws Is Start Of Headaches Observes Green

Should outboard-powered boats and all but the largest fishing vessels, passenger craft and yachts be taxed and registered like land-bound motor vehicles?

Should such a taxation and registration system be administered by the Federal Government, or by the various states?

Should towns and municipalities be empowered to collect an excise tax from boat owners before the vessels can be registered by the state, as is the current practice with motor vehicles?

Should such income from boat owners be dedicated revenue, earmarked for harbor improvements, public landings, launching ramps, marinas and other projects which would be of direct benefit to those required to pay such a tax?

Should the State set up a division of government for the sole purpose of administering such a registration system, or should existing state agencies be expanded to handle the job? And will it also have to establish some sort of sea-going state police to check such registration and enforce boating safety laws?

These are some of the questions which, in the opinion of Sea and Shore Fisheries Commissioner Ronald W. Green, face Maine citizens as a result of the passage of the Federal Boating Act of 1958.

"Interest in the new Federal Boating Act," Commissioner Green said today, "has developed slowly in Maine." Reasons for this, he believes, are the technical wording of the Act, a lack of understanding on the part of the general public of the meaning of such terms as "documented" and "undocumented" vessels, and an initial failure to grasp the broad implications which the new law has for many thousands of boat owners.

"Originally," Green pointed out, "there was confusion as to the intent of Congress. For a time many people believed that the Act and its new numbering system would apply only to pleasure boats, and possibly only to those on inland lakes and streams. In fact, in its deliberations, Congress did not mention commercial fishing vessels.

"Nevertheless, the Act as passed does apply to all undocumented vessels powered by machinery with over 10 horsepower, operating on the navigable waters of the United States."

The Commissioner explained that the law applies equally to small outboards (as long as their motors are over 10 horsepower) and to commercial fishing boats. It applies to yachts and commercial vessels which now have valid numbers issued by the Coast Guard. It applies, in fact, to just about every type of craft, except the larger vessels and ships which have documents from the Bureau of Customs and which carry names on their bows instead of numbers.

According to the Act, such vessels will be required to carry numbers which conform to a new numbering system established by the Coast Guard. Individual states will be permitted to pass their own legislation regarding numbering, provided it is approved by Federal authorities, and they will then be able to set their own fees and establish their own administrative procedure. If states do not pass their own laws, then the Coast Guard will administer the provisions of the Act on navigable waters.

"It is spelled out in the Act," Commissioner Green noted, "that the purpose of this law is to promote boating safety. Thus, the fee suggested by the Coast Guard for registration of a vessel is intended to be purely nominal—just enough to cover the expense of keeping records and issuing new numbers.

"In recent weeks, however, considerable doubt has arisen as to just how 'nominal' such a fee will actually be. The cost of issuing millions of certificates of number, of filing applications, of compiling accident records, of conducting inspections and enforcing safety regulations is almost certain to be higher than anticipated."

To further complicate things, certain interested groups have entered the picture, the Commissioner went on. For example, sportsmen's groups have indicated they might favor a high enough fee so that revenue could be used to improve both coastal and inland boating facilities.

Then, the Maine Municipal Association, recognizing a possible tie-in with the Act, began to consider legislation which would establish a uniform boat tax, collectible by local communities which serve as the vessels' home ports. Many towns now tax boat owners, but the rates vary considerably. The Maine Municipal Association is interested in correcting such inequalities.

With this in mind, the Maine Municipal Association is considering a state law which would conform to the Federal Boating Act and which would also provide for standard excise taxes, based on the length of the vessels, collectible by local tax officials.

"Such a set up," Green said, "would probably be very much like that which now exists for motor vehicles."

Green continued: "The purpose of such a state law is obviously praise-worthy. It is intended to establish fairer taxation, and no one can argue with that. Unfortunately, however, like the Federal Act which also had a worthy purpose, this state law would create some king-sized headaches."

The Commissioner raised a number of points. "First of all," he said, "boat owners should get something for their tax money. I would favor making such income dedicated revenue. Where commercial fishing predominates, this money should be used to help develop the local fishing industry. And where yachting and pleasure boating predominates, this money should be used to develop such things as public landings, launching ramps and marinas."

In a decision, dated January 28, Justice Harold C. Marden of Waterville, denied a writ of habeas corpus which Ralph W. Tuttle had submitted Tuesday morning during the vacation session of the October term of Knox Superior Court.

Tuttle claimed that he was illegally held by arresting officers at the time of his arrest, which placed a restraint on his liberties and freedom.

He further asserted that Deputy Sheriff Archie McAllister of Oxford County kidnapped and transported him illegally by force of arms September 22 from the Coos County House of Correction at West Stewartstown, N. H., to Maine to face a criminal charge.

Justice Marden's decision explained that Tuttle was informed of his rights as set forth in State statutes covering extradition procedures and was voluntarily transported across the State line. The decision further states that the courts of Maine had full jurisdiction in passing judgment on Tuttle in a criminal charge.

He was sentenced to a one to seven year term at the State Prison October 22 by the Oxford County Superior Court for cheating by false pretenses.

A man can't expect his ship to come in when the tide is out.

He also told the Council that the initial job of issuing certificates to hundreds of thousands of boat owners would put a staggering work load on the various states having their own laws and on the Coast Guard in those states which elect to leave administration of the Act in the hands of the Federal Government.

"For these reasons," he said, "I urged that all boats which now have valid numbers issued by the Coast Guard under the old system of numbering undocumented power-driven vessels over 16 feet in length, should be exempt from the provisions of the new Act.

"It was my contention that by exempting boats already having valid numbers, no new tax burden would be put on Maine fishermen who are now operating numbered vessels. In addition, the number of vessels which would have to be certified under the new Act would be substantially reduced, thus easing the burden of administration when the Act first goes into effect.

If the purpose of the Act is boating safety and not revenue, I can see no objection to such exemptions.

So this is how matters now stand. The Coast Guard has yet to issue its rules and regulations in final form, but it will have done so prior to April, 1960, when the Act goes into effect. Maine, on the other hand, has not decided whether to try for boating legislation of its own, or whether to let the Federal Government handle things their way on the navigable waters of the state.

"In all this confusion," Green concluded, "one thing remains crystal clear. Our boating problems, in Maine and elsewhere in the nation, have only just begun."

Some of the former kindergartners and juniors have developed into leaders and help in the work of the center and with Vacation Bible School.

Since 1956, the Spanish-American Baptist Church has been meeting in the Bethel House Chapel in the Campbell Christian Center. Mr. Williams became pastor at South Chicago Neighborhood House, Chicago, Ill., in 1943, and its director in 1948. His major responsibility was working with boys, combating juvenile delinquency in America's second largest city. Through a program of recreation, craft work, and Christian teaching, Mr. Williams led some boys of that crowded city area into useful citizenship.

Ordained in 1940, Williams served as pastor of the First Baptist Church, LaRue, Ohio, before he began his work in Chicago. He was born in Huntington, Indiana. A graduate of Northern Baptist Theological Seminary he has done graduate work in the field of social science.

Semi-Pro League Shows No Upsets

The Wiscasset Five in the Knox-Lincoln Semi-Professional League increased their lead in the standings when they shaded third place Rockport Thursday night 79 to 76 at Rockport Elementary School. The visitors now have a three and one-half game lead over second place Waldoboro.

The game was deadlocked in the first half, 17 all at first quarter-time and 36 to 36 at half-time. Wiscasset jumped ahead to a 10 point spread in the third period. Rockport came up in the last eight minutes of play to almost overtake the league leaders with a 25 point surge.

Wiscasset took the hassle from the foul line with 21 out of 33 tries, while the Rockport Pirates could only turn in 12 out of 30 attempts from the charity stripe. Butch Farley led the Rockport attack with nine buckets and five free pegs for 23 points.

The standings are:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Wiscasset	12	3	.800
Waldoboro	7	5	.583
Rockport	7	7	.500

CONGRATULATIONS TO KINNEY-MELQUIST POST

The goose hung high Monday night at the home of Kinney-Melquist Post, A. L., in Tenants Harbor when the mortgage on the Legion Home was burned, with proper ceremonies. The Post has done a most praiseworthy work in raising the necessary funds to clear the home in ten busy years.

WELL DONE MR. GOVERNOR

Governor Clauson handled admirably the first critical situation confronting him in office. We refer to the controversy arising over the appointment of Parker F. Hennessy as Deputy Chief of the State Police.

It was a situation fraught with all the earmarks of bad trouble, but the governor refused to be stampeded. He acted firmly but fairly in securing all the facts in the case and shared his findings with the Executive Council.

Possibly the happiest angle of the whole affair was the fact that the all Republican Executive Council cast aside politics and promptly joined the Democratic governor in confirming the carefully investigated appointment. The Council, in the nature of things, must not be a rubber stamp, but on important matters such as this, how good it is to find Governor and Council working shoulder to shoulder in mutual faith and understanding.

ANOTHER TRADITION

Tradition is a hard thing to overcome. Here we have gone, over the years, and studied the science of weather prognosis and have developed an ability to make long-range forecasts, as well as day by day reports, of what may be expected in the line of weather. But no amount of information furnished by the taxpayers' money will take the place of the groundhog, at least as far as the old-timers are concerned.

They will stick their noses out of the door or window Monday. If the sun should shine they will renew orders with the fuel dealer, expecting another six weeks of cold weather. If the day is dark and gloomy, plans for Spring housecleaning will get underway and only the merchants of coal, wood and oil will be unhappy.

Such is the influence of tradition over science.

THOSE DELAYED UNEMPLOYMENT CHECKS

Persons from out-of-State who are entitled to unemployment checks, are experiencing great difficulty in getting their checks on schedule and much hardship has resulted in many cases.

There is never a question when the Rockland Unemployment Office is concerned, for these checks are always available promptly. The problem comes when persons have their checks due from another state. It is not a matter of willful refusal to pay, but rather of red tape and neglect in handling out-of-State claims from certain states. All states are not remiss in this matter and Maine is one of those whose Unemployment Service is above reproach.

It does seem regrettable that worthy and deserving persons are forced into very real hardships and even to seeking aid from the city authorities when the unemployment checks, designed to hold families together and keep them from going to municipalities for relief, are due but delayed for weeks in arrival.

But it was also the period of the Revolutionary War and the era when a young girl from Plympton, Massachusetts joined the army as a soldier, disguising herself as a man, and fooled the whole Continental Army—up to a point. Deborah Sampson was the talk of her generation. Some wanted to see her hung for her deception. Others declared her a kind of saint—among the bravest of New England's early women. ## Farmers Required To File Income Tax By Feb. 15

It's income tax time again for Maine farmers, points out Lewis E. Clark, Extension Service farm management specialist, University of Maine.

Clark says persons who received at least two thirds of their gross income from farming, and who did not file an estimate by Jan. 15, must file tax returns not later than Feb. 15. This is true provided the gross income exceeded $600.

Persons over 65 years of age need not file returns unless they had gross incomes in excess of $1,200 or unless self-employment net incomes exceeded $400.

The new "Farmers' Tax Guide" can be a help to Maine farmers struggling with their returns, says Clark. The Internal Revenue Service of the U. S. Treasury Department prepared the guide. Farmers and others who assist them with their returns may get copies of "Farmers' Tax Guide" from county offices of the Maine Extension Service.

Several changes have been made in the income tax regulations for farmers this year, explains Clark. They're explained in the tax guide. One change is the 20 per cent depreciation allowance in the year of purchase on the cost price of tangible personal property bought since 1957 and good for at least six years. Farmers who bought machinery in 1958 will benefit from this regulation.

Beginning with 1958, a net operating loss shall be carried back three years instead of two and may be carried forward five years, adds Clark. Casualty losses on property not compensated for by insurance in any amount are treated as ordinary loss deductions and are not offset against capital gains.

Farm, business, and investment properties are now interchangeable in case of involuntary conversion. For example, if the turnpike takes part of a farmer's farm real estate he can invest the proceeds in non-farm real estate without immediate tax liability.

Family farm corporations, if they meet certain qualifications, and most do, can now elect not to be taxed as a corporation. The income or losses from the business can be reported directly on the personal tax returns of stockholders. This, in effect, eliminates double taxation, explains the Extension specialist.

Potato Week To Stress Spuds Are Not Fattening

Maine's fourth annual Potato Week, February 8-14, will stress the fact that potatoes are not a "fattening" food, according to Gerald C. Dunn, Maine Department of Agriculture marketing specialist in charge of the program.

"More and more research proves conclusively that one medium size potato, cooked plain, furnishes only about 100 calories — nearly the same that is found in one fairly large apple, one large orange, one large banana or one-half a grapefruit," he explained.

The informational and promotional program is sponsored by the Department and the Maine Potato Commission. It will focus attention on Maine potatoes and Maine potato products, the state's second largest agricultural business.

"This year, we plan also to place emphasis on both the traditional round white potato and the new Russet Burbank variety (one of Maine's famous baking potatoes), and on the high quality of spuds packaged under the Blue, White and Red trademark," Dunn said.

"We expect to call a lot of attention to the so-called convenience items — frozen French fries, frozen baked, whole peeled white, potato puffs, patties, chips, etc., and particularly to the new Maine potato flakes now being processed at Hartland and Island Falls," he added.

PRESIDENT OF NEW ENGLAND EGG PRODUCERS ASSOCIATION SPEAKS THURSDAY BEFORE LOCAL EGGMEN

Charles Shelmut, newly elected president of the New England Egg Producers' Association, will address the members of the Independent Egg Producers' Association at a general meeting to be held Thursday evening, February 5, at the Warren Grange Hall.

A brief business meeting will be held at 8 p. m. followed by a talk by Shelmut on the plans and purposes of the New England Egg group.

Mr. Shelmut is assistant commissioner of agriculture for Massachusetts and also conducts a market egg producer enterprise at his farm in Northampton, Mass.

As this is the annual meeting, a new slate of officers will be presented by the nominating committee comprised of Henry Teague of Warren, Joseph Eckert of Union, and Irving Smith of Owls Head. The committee in charge of the meeting includes Carl Erickson of Warren, Charles Hudson of Rockport and Herbert Alexander of Rockport.

By Henry Teague

Every once in a while I get around to talking about poultry organizations. Like most other groups, it is hard to strike a balance that will keep things moving at a steady pace. This fall and winter there have been the fewest general meetings for poultrymen of any year during the last decade.

This situation came about through more or less natural causes. A few poultrymen have been willing to put both time and money into their organizations. They are the ones who have shown up at meetings when the weather has been cold and stormy and the traveling difficult. They are the ones who are keeping alive the organizations, but they are no longer interested in preparing programs monthly just for the sake of saying we had a meeting.

There have been a number of meetings during the past few months. The Independent Egg Producers' Association held a meeting and barbecue in August and the Poultry Improvement Association met in mid-fall.

The directors of the Independent Egg Producers have held a few meetings and now they are arranging for a general meeting to be held Thursday evening, February 5, probably at the Grange Hall in Warren. More details of this meeting are given in a separate story in this issue.

The Extension Association annual meeting in the fall has been followed by two meetings of the executive committee. The Department of Agriculture and the Extension Service conducted an egg grading school in November assisted by the Independent Egg Producers.

Perhaps I have missed a meeting or two, but one could not say that the situation is entirely dormant. Presumably there will be another meeting of the Poultry Improvement Association before too long. Gil Jaeger, county agent, has some plans that he will announce in due time.

I cannot think of any good reason why every poultryman should not belong to the three Associations mentioned. These groups all have purposes beyond entertainment and even though there are not so many meetings any more, it would seem well for poultrymen as well as other farmers to stand firmly behind their associations.

The two poultry groups are working organizations, each developed for good purposes which do not compete. For less than five dollars a year, a poultryman can keep in good standing as a member.

The time may be near at hand when poultrymen of Maine will be glad they are organized and ready to take part in a concerted movement to better the lot of all poultrymen in the Northeast and even countrywide. The rapidly changing pattern of the industry is certainly confusing and the future is clouded. We have seen the average price of eggs work downward for more than five years and this trend cannot continue much longer if we are to produce eggs at a profit.

Fowl has long since become a loss item and at times is almost unwanted on the market. The rise of the broiler industry has definitely put fowl in a sideline category and it does not look as though there is much chance for any change for the better.

A few years back we could go to our poultry meetings to hear speakers, have a lunch and pass the time of day with our fellow poultrymen. Prices were good and the only time we had to worry was when flock diseases were spreading.

Today your poultry organization has changed to the nature of a protective association and your dues are a form of insurance premium. To be effective we must have a strong membership working under the leadership of competent officers. If you feel that way, you will not hesitate to keep your dues paid up.

at an afternoon meeting of the Festival General Committee, Jan. 27, at the First National Bank of Belfast.

Elected general chairman of the committee was Norris Clements of Winterport. Co-chairmen of the '59 show will be Eric Johnson of Belfast and Donald Constable of Unity.

Named chairmen of special subcommittees were: Horace P. Bond, Bangor, publicity; Frank D. Reed, U. of M. Orono, 4-H club contest; Claude Clement, Belfast, entertainment; Foster Richards, Belfast, tickets; Robert McGowan, Winslow, finance.

J. Joseph Grady, Belfast, reception; Clayton Howard, Thomaston, Poultry Queen contest; Joseph Roberts, Unity, pit and serving;

RETOOLING POULTRY HOUSES

This is the second of three articles dealing with the things which must be done before we can satisfactorily act on a plan to automate our poultry houses.

The previous article was on insulation. We have some positive thoughts on proper insulation and do not believe in anything but the very best possible job.

Once we have insulated our houses, we have placed ourselves in a position to start controlling the environment in the house instead of having the environment control us. We have saved heat from the excess bird energy, litter fermentation, brooding and are now in a position to go ahead on.

Ventilating Poultry Houses

No doubt we all know why we want to ventilate our poultry houses. To keep the record clear, however, let's briefly go over some of the reasons.

A laying hen will give off about two-thirds of a pound of moisture each day; and, for good reasons we've trapped this moisture inside the house with our vapor barrier on the inside wall. Remember our two and one-half inch deep lake. Ammonia is one of the products produced from the high nitrogen-containing uric acid in poultry manure. When ammonia is allowed to build up in the poultry house, we can have serious outbreaks of ammonia blindness. Also, combined with water, ammonia produces ammonium hydroxide which may react unfavorably with the respiratory system. Ammonia is also known to be one of the factors responsible for a more rapid breakdown of albumen quality in eggs.

So far, we have pointed out the water and ammonia problems which can be controlled by proper ventilation. The severity of some diseases, especially respiratory, are known to be controlled by environmental conditions in the laying house. And we have the possibility of dehydrating chicks, fewer eggs and less efficient gains in hot temperatures.

Dust can irritate the respiratory tract, but too much moisture makes for wet slippery litter and is a major cause of dirty eggs. Higher concentrations of disease organisms in poorly ventilated buildings may be a cause of heavier infections with higher mortality and retarding of growth.

These problems are caused by poor ventilation. In winter, the problems multiply; in the summer they are not eliminated.

Just two more points this week. First, solutions to the ventilation problem seem to group themselves into three main headings: heat, air exchange, and management. We'll discuss these more next week.

Secondly, we should define what we mean by ventilation. How about this? Ventilation is a continuous controlled removal of stale air, replaced with fresh air, with the maintenance of proper temperatures.

We are dealing with birds that are living organisms and we feel that they need good air continually if they are going to do the best for us. We need to be able to control the ventilation process as our outside temperatures and winds are constantly changing. We have already amply expressed ourselves on the need to get rid of the dirty air and why we desire to maintain proper temperatures.

Our Thought For The Week
Insulation and Ventilation
A good start toward Automation.

Thank You For Inviting Me In

By Gene M. West,
Home Demonstration Agent

Twenty-five Home Management leaders and assistant leaders met at the Farnsworth Museum Wednesday to receive training on Accidents in Your Home from Jerry Kinney. Sixteen more were at the Nobleboro Grange Hall Thursday for the same subject. These 41 women will take this information back and hold meetings in their own groups. In this way, using volunteer leaders, as many as 500 could be reached as a result of these two training classes. Jerry Kinney may not have realized how far reaching the effects of her efforts might be.

All of the leaders expressed the feeling that it had been a very interesting meeting and that Jerry had done a nice job of teaching it. Volunteer leaders like her and others throughout the two counties deserve a rising vote of thanks for a good job well done.

Next week, the meeting on Let's Plan Three Meals a Day gets into full swing. The Night Owls were the first in the two counties to have this on their program back on Jan. 12. Now, however, February and March will find your Home Demonstration Agent spending most of her time doing these meetings throughout the two counties.

News of more leaders giving their time and energy comes to mind. Three or four leaders will be coming to Rockland for the next two Monday mornings to receive training for the Singer people. They will then train all of the clothing leaders in the county the last of April.

land Thursday evening. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Glenice Bickmore on Feb. 5.
