Vinalhaven Seniors First To Start Trip

The seniors from Vinalhaven High School were the first group of youngsters from high schools in this area to start their annual excursion to New York City and Washington, D. C. The seniors arrived in Rockland aboard the Vinalhaven II at 9:20 a. m. Friday and left by bus later on in the morning for New York. The group is shown in front of the Rockland Port District terminal. In the foreground from left to right are: Charles Dyer, Arthur Phillips and Kenneth Conway. TOWN OF CAMDEN, HELIOFF AND KNIGHT IN CONTROVERSY OVER TITLE OF STEAMSHIP WHARF

The Board of Selectmen of the Town of Camden, after consultation with legal counsel, have named Morris Helioff of Camden and Sanford Knight of Rockport as the last known owners of the Eastern Steamship Wharf in Camden harbor. Town Manager Sterling Morris said Thursday.

Both Helioff and Knight were notified by letter, carried by a town constable, of the Monday night decision of the selectmen that the wharf and building on the premises are a hazard. The town manager explained that Helioff and Knight will be given to May 15 to either raze the property, located adjoining the Camden Shipbuilding Company, or to file an appeal in the courts.

If the wharf is not demolished at the end of this time, Morris continued, a special town meeting would be called to raise the necessary funds to handle the operation. He noted that town officials would then bring suit against Helioff and Knight in an effort to collect costs of the job.

The town manager estimated that the razing of the wharf and dredging in the inner harbor would cost about $8,000. He did not render an estimate as to the cost of razing the wharf alone. Morris pointed out that this dredging in the inner harbor would be above the operation which the Corps of Engineers plan to do in the harbor, starting this summer.

Helioff asserts that neither he nor Knight possess titles of ownership of the Eastern Steamship Wharf. He claims that he relinquished title to the property Aug. 23, 1955 to Sanford Knight of Rockport for the purpose of demolishing and removal of the wharf and building on the premises. Knight, in turn, turned the property over to the Town of Camden June 1, 1956 for an abatement of taxes.

The town manager has told Helioff that the town officials consider this transaction as "null and void" since the town records fail to show that neither the citizens of Camden, at town meeting, nor the selectmen at their regular sessions, have formally accepted the property.

Helioff further contends that the town wanted the property for a possible site of a Penobscot Bay ferry service terminal several years ago. He further claims that the Town of Camden has not billed either himself or Knight for taxes for the past four years and that the town has been receiving rent from several who have been using the property.

Town Manager Morris asserts that the town officials have neglected to bill Helioff and Knight for taxes due to an "oversight on their part" and that there is no record of receiving rental fee from people who Helioff contends were using the wharf.

The Eastern Steamship Wharf, rich in Penobscot Bay steamboat lore, was first owned by three Camden residents, Louis Taylor, James Sanford and Charles Sanford, according to the Knox County Register of Deeds office in Rockland, May 23, 1867.

The wharf, legally known as "Steamboat Privilege" on Eaton's Point, became the property of the newly organized Sanford Steamship Company June 4, 1875. Shortly after the turn of the century, April 5, 1902, to be exact, the Boston & Bangor Steamship Company of Boston received ownership of the property.

On June 19, 1912, the wharf became the property of the Eastern Steamship Wharf Corporation.

The firm used the wharf for almost a quarter of a century during the peak of steamship travel in this area and then sold it to George H. Thomas and Adin L. Hopkins of Camden April 16, 1936.

After remaining idle for several years, the Camden Shipbuilding & Marine Railway Company assumed ownership March 20, 1941 and used the wharf as a pattern loft and facilities for servicing yachts.

Helioff established his Regal Lobster Company plant on the wharf when the company moved off the property Sept. 1, 1952. Operation of the plant halted three years later when 18,000 pounds of lobster were either dumped into Camden harbor or died when the pumping equipment and piping on the property were destroyed when the building and a section of the wharf collapsed the morning of June 29, 1955. Helioff moved his firm to Rockland soon afterwards.

Legislature Provides That One Town Killing School District Bill Will Not Jeopardize Other Four

The legislative document designed to permit the towns of Warren, Thomaston, Cushing, St. George and Rockport to enter Administrative School District 5 with Rockland, Owls Head and South Thomaston is headed for passage in Legislature. The measure, in revised form, had its third reading in the House at Augusta Thursday.

The bill, introduced by Senator Carl Stipphen, has been in committee several weeks while a study of its provisions were made. Committee members were seeking a way in which all of the towns involved would not be jeopardized should one of the five vote the issue down. The following paragraph has been added to the original bill which permits the remaining towns, in event one or more vote out affiliation with District 5, to proceed.

"In the event that one or more of the administrative units named herein fails to approve any of the articles required to be voted upon by this act, The Maine School District Commission is authorized to accept new applications from the administrative units having voted to accept this act. The commission is further authorized to order the administrative unit having approved the act and School Administrative District No. 5 to vote on articles prepared by the commission in the same tenor as the articles heretofore set out in this act. Straw votes taken many weeks ago in all the five communities, at the request of the Maine School District Commission, resulted in favorable votes in all. One community produced a vote which was so close as to create doubt of the final outcome.

Preliminary figures on costs of the District with as many as eight schools are under study, but nothing concrete can be done until the issue goes to the people and the towns wishing to join are identified.

Pearl Essence Plant Under Construction

Pictured is the site of the new plant of Seapro Inc., at the Northend on land once a lime kiln site and more recently owned by the firm of F. J. O'Hara & Sons, Inc. The office building is completed and poles which will form the frame of the first building may be seen where they have been set on the perimeter of the structure.

A new industry is taking shape in the city. It is a small one and is in the field of fisheries and will make use of now idle waterfront land at the Northend.

Donald G. Wilson, formerly associated with another Maine firm which operates in the fisheries field, is the principal owner and manager of the new firm, Seapro, Inc.

The firm will manufacture pearl essence from herring scales and will use the whole fish in two or three allied processes which will produce other products which Mr. Wilson did not immediately identify. One of the products will be of a biochemical nature and entirely new to this area.

Eight or nine persons will be employed by Monday. When the plant is in full production it will employ approximately 15 local people.

The site is on the waterfront just north of the Rockland, Rockport Lime Company property on land formerly owned by F. J. O'Hara & Sons, Inc. The area is reached over a new road built from Front street and is one once used for lime kiln operations by the A. J. Bird family.

An office building has been constructed in the last few days and three other buildings are now under construction. They are of pole construction, so called, and sheathed with aluminum with concrete slab floors. One will be used as a steam plant and the others for the processing. Eventually, a larger plant will be built on a dock, which is to be constructed, and the two smaller buildings used for storage.

Mr. Wilson noted that the new firm is wholly Maine owned and operated.

Two other pearl essence plants operate in Maine, both being in the Eastport area with one having a purchasing depot in Rockland. Unlike Seapro, Inc., they use only the herring scales, and not the whole fish as Wilson plans.

BONNAR-VAWTER STRIKE CONTINUES AS LABOR AND MANAGEMENT SIT DOWN TO CONFERENCE TABLE

The strike at the printing plant of Bonnar-Vawter, Inc., continued through Friday to make a full week the crew had been out. A meeting of management and union officials scheduled for 2 p. m. Friday was moved up to 7:30 p. m. This edition went to press prior to the meeting with the result that decisions, if any, reached at the meeting were not available.

Alfred Schrenk, manager of the plant, said late Friday that applications for employment had been received during Thursday and Friday from upwards of 30 persons. He commented that several had been hired and assigned to work schedules.

The picket line in front of the plant continued late Friday as the workers held to their demand for a closed union shop and a five cent an hour raise now and another four cents in September. The company offers five cents effective Sept. 1 and will not entertain the closed shop proposal.

ARMY RESERVE UNIT MOVES FIRST OF MONTH TO AUGUSTA ARMORY; GARRETT RELINQUISHES COMMAND

General orders calling for the transfer of Company "B", 304th Infantry Regiment, 76th Division from Rockland to the Army Reserve Armory on Chapel street in Augusta were received Thursday by the commanding officer, Capt. Rex Garrett, effective April 15.

The unit, comprising six officers and 26 men, will hold a double drill Sunday and another one Thursday before the unit is moved May 1.

Out of the 26 enlisted men in the unit, 11 will be placed on the inactive list since they have indicated that they will be unable to attend drills in Augusta.

Capt. Garrett, who has headed the unit for 11 years, will be forced to relinquish command May 1 since Army Reserve regulations call for the commanding officers of units to live in the same city where the unit is located.

Company "B" has used the City Council chambers in the Municipal Building as their headquarters.

Frenchboro Bid For Ferry Service Receives Setback

The bill in Legislature which would have made it compulsory for the Penobscot Bay Ferry Service to serve Frenchboro on Long Island has been altered in its meaning.

Taken off the table in the House Thursday, it was changed to permit the establishing of the ferry service to the island which lies close to Swans Island, but not requiring the Maine Port Authority, parent board of the bay ferry service, to establish it.

The original proposal would have required MPA to touch at Frenchboro on its run between Swans Island and McKinley. The intended location of the ferry which is on the opposite side of the island from Frenchboro, would extend the run some 10 miles.

A 90 foot steel ferry is under construction for the service as are the terminals at Swans Island and McKinley on Mt. Desert.

Maine Port Authority manager, Edward Langlois, had previously noted that the service could be established to Frenchboro. He pointed out, however, that additional funds over the $2,500,000 allotted for the entire bay ferry service would have to be increased to pay for it.

The type of man who robs Peter to pay Paul usually causes both of them to suffer.

Owls Head Basketball Squad Tendered Banquet

The Owls Head Central School basketball team, which finished second in the Junior High School Bus Line League this year, were honored at a sports banquet Wednesday night at the school. The team, coached by Charles C. Wotton, lost one game during the regular season and were eliminated in the finals of the circuit tournament by the same team, the Camden Bus Liners.

Mike DiRenzo, physical education instructor and former basketball coach at Rockland High School, was the featured speaker. Ronald Cantara, who assumed the role of principal of the school last fall, also made a few remarks. Mr. Wotton was presented several gifts and the team received letters.

Morse, Waterville On Tiger Court Card For '59-'60

The basketball rivalry which existed between Morse High School of Bath and Rockland High for decades is to be resumed next year. The clashes between the Shipbuilders and Tigers were highlights of the season in both cities for, regardless of their records of the season to those dates, both teams went all out for a win when they met.

The series was cut off in 1952 for some reason long since forgotten.

Morse will play in Rockland the day after Christmas and will entertain the Tigers in Bath Feb. 5. Also, Waterville has been added to the schedule for next winter with a pair of games only days apart. Waterville will be here on Dec. 22 and the Tigers journey to the Kennebec County city just a week later, the 29th.

Athletic Director Larry Plummer said Thursday that the basketball schedule for next winter is nearly complete and will soon be released.

Its 20th anniversary was marked by the Sea Scout Ship Red Jacket Wednesday night at the General Berry Engine House when the bosun piped aboard the present ship's skipper, Oliver Curtis.

The ship, which was named for the famous clipper ship, Red Jacket, built by George Thomas in Rockland in 1833, registered 18 Scouts Wednesday for the year.

Over the past 20 years the ship has been fortunate in having two skippers. Capt. Thomas Sweeney and Joshua N. Southard, who have welded the unit into a strong organization, rich in the traditions and customs of the sea.

Many of the charter Scouts of the ship have become either leaders of the community or masters of their own ships. The first crew included: Skipper Thomas Sweeney, Dr. Donald E. Haskell and William Weed as mates; Miles A. Sawyer and William Bicknell as coxswains; Henry Moolian and Milton Roberts, assistant crew leaders.

Christy C. Adams and Russell Williamson, yeomen; Charles Weed radioman; Guido Fiore and Stuart Ames, stewards; Arthur Sullivan and Dudley Harvey, sail makers; Robert Smalley, signalman; Edward Williamson and Maynard Green, pharmacist mates; Roland Hayes, carpenter; and Paul Trohan and Douglas Cooper, machinist mates.

The members of the first ship committee were: Ralph P. Conant, Robert C. Gregory, Alston E. Smith, Alphonso F. Russell and Rev. Ernest O. Kenyon.

Their first big "Bridge of Honor" was held March 13, 1940 at the Thorndike Hotel in conjunction with Ladies Night of the Rockland Lions Club, the sponsor since 1939.

The Scouts received their first craft, a 22 foot metal lifeboat, Aug. 8, 1939. Other craft which they have owned have been a 25 foot lifeboat which a dragger recovered at sea during World War II; a 38 foot Coast Guard lifeboat, with a Dolphin engine, a whaleboat and a cruiser.

Recently the ship's crew completed a sloop which they hope to commission this summer.

Under Skipper Southard, the ship was the flagship of the New England flotilla during World War II due to the high rank which many of the Scouts had reached. Upon his retirement from the post as skipper, Mr. Southard was presented with the rank of rear commodore.

Under their new skipper, Oliver Curtis and Mate John Perry, the crew is working on a sailboat at their headquarters and finishing a ceiling on the second floor of the station house.

Mate Perry has been with the ship almost since its start and has several times declined the skipper's berth, preferring to hold the post of second in command and work with the Scouts closely in training programs.

The agents are: Agricultural, Gil Jaeger; home demonstration, Miss Gene M. West; and 4-H Club, Mrs. Loana S. Shibles.

Extension Association President Otto Irvine of Warren presided.

Other committee members present were: Ted Ross, Alma; Mrs. Lucinda Waterman, Camden; Clayton Howard, Thomaston; Mrs. Elizabeth Rice, Walpole; Mrs. Anne Pinkham, West Rockport; Henry Teague, Warren; Leroy Brown, North Nobleboro; Millard Clark, Damariscotta; E. P. Livingston, Waldoboro; and Herbert Alexander, Camden.

WORSHIP TOGETHER THIS WEEK

Going to worship services each week can be the best of the good things in life for your family to share. Worshiping together becomes so natural that without even trying, children find a pattern, a foundation, which will enrich their entire lives.

"Find the strength for your life . . . Worship together this week" is a statement that will be seen in all fields of national advertising in 1959. It is the theme for the Religion in American Life program, pointing up the need and value of regular worship as a family, in the house of the Lord.

The churches can well use all the help available through this lay organization. No amount of effort is too much, for such rewards.

Each generation must pass its faith to the next. The stress of modern living produces every day its quota of ugly proof that there has to be constant, unrelenting effort to pass on faith in greater measure.

What really makes a family? Is it the fact that Mother always has the meals on time? Is it Dad's perseverance in his work so that the mortgage is paid on time each month? Or, is it Junior's athletic prowess and Sis's fame with the fiddle? None of these things really makes a family, taken separately.

Together is the thing. It will elude you in these days if you aren't careful. Let interests be widely varied and the family will still be a family if it bows at the altar together.

notes of a poultryman

By Henry Teague

From time to time new records are set in the poultry industry. But not one of those records is any benefit to the poultry farmer.

For the past 10 years we have seen broilers soar above the billion mark well on the way to two billions. At the same time we have seen farm profits move in the opposite direction. There was a period a few years ago when a penny a bird was considered rock bottom—a refuge for the super-cautious farmer who did not dare gamble. Today, the farmer who is making a penny a bird is in the deluxe class—the top of the heap, so to speak. But that top is nothing to brag about. Considering the investment in buildings and equipment, the broiler raiser working for a penny a bird would be better off with a job in industry. As for the man who is struggling along on half a penny he just isn't making the grade.

Now, let's talk about egg production. Take it as your will, breeder or table egg flock. Which is the better off? That's a very good question that is being asked by a lot of poultrymen. Most of them feel that the man who is best off is the man who is out of the egg business and earning his daily bread, etc., in some other way.

We were talking about records. Market eggs hit an 18 year low last week and our good friend Bill Curtin known as the market-maker in Boston, reported in his weekly column in the Boston Herald that the outlook for this week was very poor.

Where does an 18 year low take us. Back about seven or eight months before Pearl Harbor. That was just about the last end

A remark often heard among poultrymen concerns going down the drain. Translated this means that the farmer making the remark finds himself losing ground with each poor market, ground that he now never expects to regain.

Right now many a farmer is hanging onto a flock of hens that should go to market. Ordinarily fowl prices have been at their best during this time of year. Not so this year. Fowl are almost an unwanted commodity. A few weeks ago it was difficult to move fowl at any price. At the present time it is possible to sell fowl but on a very poor market. Sales now mean heavy losses to the farmers. A few cents rise in the egg market right now could mean the difference between survival and bankruptcy to many a farmer in this region. It would not bring prosperity, but it would mean money for essentials such as food and clothing.

Yes, it's that bad for many a farm family in Maine at the present time. Table egg production will not move out of Maine this year or next. But it certainly will move out eventually unless there are market improvements that are now nowhere in sight.

New pressures are constantly developing in our Boston market. New egg production areas are being developed in the South and Mid-West, with Eastern markets as the goal for the best eggs. There are few independent farmers in these new setups. The production is controlled by feed companies by and large and each farmer is paid on a weekly basis.

Integration is slowly but definitely moving into Maine. How far it will go depends on how long Maine's independent farmers can stand up under these new pressures. I have talked with 20 or more egg farmers during the past two weeks and the majority of them are more interested in getting out of the egg business than continuing on.

Recently, many of us saw pictures in a national magazine of farmers who had received huge amounts of money from the federal government. There were no poultry farmers among them. There were no small or medium size farmers. These were not disaster payments.

Poultrymen in general have never been eager for government control and subsidies. In fact this type of setup would not be of much benefit to the family farmer.

There seems to be no clear answer to the problem except a reduction in the number of eggs being produced. Since no one has come up with an answer to this problem, the situation becomes more critical each year.

The fact is that as unit profits have become smaller, small poultrymen have been forced to enlarge or get out. This vicious circle, instead of being an answer is simply forcing more and more poultrymen to the wall. Apparently those who have gone in for automation will eventually be no better off. Of course there will always be eggs on the market but who will be producing them is a great big question.

Camden Garden Club Gives To Elm Tree Fund

The Camden Garden Club has contributed the sum of $500 to the Camden Elm Tree Council for use in its battle against invasion by Dutch Elm Disease.

Elmer Wadsworth, treasurer of the Council, will receive contributions from clubs and individuals to be used in elm tree care this summer. He reports that one third of the money contributed will be reserved for emergencies with the remainder expended on a general care program.

Mrs. William Budd, secretary of the Council, comments:

"We also plan to plant a few young trees in addition to sponsoring a tree planting program. The three set out last spring came through the winter beautifully, and we hope that groups or individuals will want to participate in the project this year as well. 'Plant a tree in memory of someone you love'—or for a youngster to grow on—or just because you want to make sure that future generations have trees to enjoy. Fine young trees can be obtained from our local nursery men or ordered through the secretary of the Elm Tree Council.

In addition to serving in an advisory capacity, the Council hopes this year to help private property owners with their elm tree work when feasible. The limited funds will be used on the trees most in need of care, the decision to be made by the tree expert examining them."

Lincoln Council of American Baptist Men will meet at the Baptist Church in Morrill for their monthly meeting. It is hoped that a good delegation from this church will attend.

Women Artists Traveling Exhibit Now At Museum

The Second Traveling Oil Exhibition by the National Association of Women Artists is being displayed in the north gallery of the Farnsworth Museum during the entire month of April. The exhibition has recently returned from Europe where it was shown in the American Gallery in Athens, Greece, and in various galleries throughout Belgium during the past summer. The 42 oil paintings have been carefully juried and represent the best in every type of modern and conservative art.

The National Association of Women Artists was organized over 65 years ago and it has grown to become an international known and honored group of artists who have exhibited not only throughout the United States but in many European art centers where the shows have been enthusiastically received.

The paintings represented do not adhere strictly to the conventional style of painting, but embrace all trends.

Among the artists represented may be seen Edith Lehman who has captured the quizzical look of the small colored girl in her painting of "Topsy"; Lily Shuff with her painting of the sophisticated young woman, Departing from the representation of the artist in which the brilliant colors so symbolic of the Christmas season. In landscapes our attention is called to "Quiet Harbor (Monhegan Island)" by Ruth Stevenson, whose highlights of the sunset are exceptionally well done. "Pawlett in Winter" by Beatrice Jackson portrays activities of a small hamlet in the hill country in winter time. "Korean Farmer" by Seena Doneson has captured the environment and life of this tiller of the soil. Other paintings such as "Elevated Station" by Helen Gerardo and "The Industrial Interior" by Sara Winston have portrayed in geometric pattern in interesting compositions.

Mrs. St. Clair To End 40 Year Phone Career

Richard Parshall of Augusta, traffic manager for the Telephone Company, presents Mrs. George St. Clair with a bracelet during a party Thursday afternoon which was given in her honor at the School Street building of the firm. Holding one of the 40 gifts which Mrs. St. Clair's fellow employees presented to her, is Mary Johnson, chief operator of the Rockland office.

An employee of the Belfast-Rockland District of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company who has seen service over the past 40 years will retire May 3 when the Rockland area converts to dial.

Mrs. George St. Clair of 72 Rankin Street, Rockland, affectionately called "Kitty" by her fellow operators, has worked in the School Street building of the company intermittently since September, 1918, until she had accrued a total of 25 years of continuous service. She leaves the active employment of the firm May 3 and will be retained on special assignment until August 23.

Mrs. St. Clair remembers that she first came to work for the phone company under Mabel Spear, the first chief operator for this area. The Telephone Company had just acquired the property from the Knox Telephone Company shortly before Mrs. St. Clair started her long career on the switchboard. In recalling the rapid growth of the exchange over the span of 40 years, Mrs. St. Clair noted that there were just six local and four toll positions on the switchboard in 1918 as compared to the present 10 local and 17 toll places on the board.

She was feted at a party Thursday afternoon by her fellow employees and presented with several gifts.

MRS. RICHARDSON 95 THURSDAY

Mrs. Caroline Richardson, 95 years of age on Thursday, poses for birthday picture and looks forward to birthday parties in the years ahead.

Mrs. Caroline Richardson observed her 95th birthday Thursday at the home of her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Lewis of Trails End, Ash Point.

Far from being the aged person physically her years might indicate, she was up and about and enjoyed every minute of the day as callers dropped in. At the party given in her honor in the evening by the family and neighbors, she was the center of attention. She proudly wore an orchid corsage presented by the family and delighted in showing callers her flowers, gifts and many cards received from a host of friends.

Impaired hearing is her only infirmity and she is as active about the home as many women two decades and more her junior. She is the widow of Frank L. Richardson who was head chef at the Thorndike Hotel for 35 years and has made her home with Mr. and Mrs. Lewis for many years.

Guests at the evening party were: Mrs. Rodney Weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Vesper Packard, Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis, Richard Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Cran, Dale Cran, Mr. and Mrs. Otis Lewis and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Piper.

Refreshments of birthday cake, ice cream, cookies and punch were served and the children each received candy filled baskets as favors.

The refreshment committee were Mrs. Josephine Moody, Mrs. Esther Lundon, Mrs. Esther Durkee and Mrs. Ruth Wooster.
