Fish and Game Elects Washington Man

UNION—The Knox County Fish and Game Association named Fred Ludwig of Washington its new president at the annual meeting Thursday evening at the Odd Fellows Hall. He succeeds retiring president Leroy Miller of Owls Head.

Other officers named were: Marshall Burk of Rockland, vice president; Ralph Brackett of Rockland, treasurer; Francis Orne of Rockland, secretary; Robert Davis of Rockland and Linwood Hilt of Union, directors for four years; Ernest Crie of Rockland, director for two years; and Merrill Thomas of Rockland, director for one year.

Ernest Gray of Rockland was again named caretaker of the Lodge, and he will take up residence there on May 1, which is the date when a work party is scheduled to get the Lodge and grounds in readiness for the season.

Plans were made for a Wardens' Night, scheduled for May 19 at the Lodge; Ernest Crie of Rockland was appointed the chairman of a committee to choose boys to be sent to the Conservation Camp at Ellsworth this summer; Fred Black reported on the stocking program; and Ralph Brackett reported that the association now has 359 paid adult members and 15 junior members. A turkey supper preceded the meeting, which was served by the Rebekah Lodge.

SAD 5 Directors To Outline Proposal For New District High School At Session With Municipal Officers

The board of directors of School Administrative District Five will reveal the size of the district's proposed new high school at an informal meeting with Councilmen and Selectmen from the member municipalities, at 7:30 p. m., Wednesday, in the North School.

Superintendent of Schools Bruce Kinney said Friday that the Rockland City Council and the Boards of Selectmen from Owls Head and South Thomaston will be told at the session on whether the new plant will house a three year or four year high school. Architect's drawings and detailed plans for the new building will be available at the session for examination by the municipal heads.

Detailed reports concerning both alternatives have been studied by the directors for some time. A three year high school would mean a six-three-three plan for the district's school system. The other possibly would have a conventional four year school, similar to the present setup at Rockland High School.

District directors have held several general sessions and many committee meetings with architect Elwin Tabbutt of the firm of Bunker and Savage of Augusta. Preliminary plans were revised a number of times to bring the costs within the maximum goal set by the directors following early studies.

At the special session of the Maine Legislature an act was passed giving District Five the right to take land to obtain clear title to several lots in the proposed site on Broadway and Cedar Streets. The Sinclair Act was not specific in this respect so the district asked Rep. John Knight to sponsor such a bill.

The municipal officers are expected to hear a report on meetings with the Bond Council, which up to this point, has not committed itself to selling bonds for any district in the State. Acts were passed by the Legislature in special session which reaffirmed the Sinclair Act and stated that districts already set up were legal entities.

Officer, Fireman, Teenager And Sports Car Driver To Compete In Miniature Road-E-O

Publicity Chairman Hal Look of the Rockland Jaycees released the names of the drivers for the upcoming small car demonstration "Road-E-O" to be held at the Rockland Community Building Saturday evening in combine with a "Ma-Carb-Os" Record Hop. The safety affair represents a National "first" and is dedicated to public explanation of the goals of the tenth annual Road-E-O to be held at the Public Landing on May 7.

A local fireman, policeman, a teenage "Ma-Carb-Os", and a Washington sports car enthusiast will compete. Representing the Rockland Fire Department, which like the Police Department, incidentally, underwent competitive written examinations to produce a contestant, is Walter Dyer of 10 Brick Street. Walter is 29 years old, married, the father of two children. Dyer has been with the Fire Department for five years and has 11 years of driving experience.

Franklin Nash, of the Rockland Police Department, has nearly five years of police experience; he lives at 12 Maverick Street, is married, is 27 years of age, has two children also, and has been driving for eleven years.

Teenager Freeman Carter is a high school freshman and is 16 next month. Carter is single, very active in church activities at Littlefield Memorial Baptist Church, a patrol leader and First Class Scout of Troop 243. Freeman is "Ma-Carb-Os" representative in the skill driving miniature course.

A non-competitive for prizes but fourth driver will be Nelson Huntsman of Washington. Huntsman is 40 years of age, married with four children, and is chief of Manual Arts Therapy at the Veterans' Hospital in Togus for the Veterans Administration. Huntsman disqualified himself from a prize since he is a Saab owner and the Saab is the chosen small car for the event. Huntsman is also a semi-professional driver having won rallies and competed in Gym-Khana events throughout Maine. He will represent Washington car dealer and sports car champion driver, Clyde Billings, who is furnishing the Saab for the skill driving demonstration "Road-E-O".

Air Reservists Promoted

UNION—Two members of Flight E of the 9288th Squadron, Air Force Reserve, were recognized for recent promotions at a meeting, Thursday night, at Union. At right is Arnold Bryant of Union who was promoted from captain to major on April 2 and with him is Richard Knight of 87 Pearl Street, Camden, who was promoted to first lieutenant on March 15. The flight meets at the Thompson Memorial Building.

Scout District Wins Awards In Area Competition

At the big meeting of Operating Committees of Pine Tree Council, Boy Scouts of America, held at Bowdoin College on Thursday evening the Down East District won two top positions in a competition among the seven districts of the Council. The contest is based on the Ten Tests of Scouting.

Down East was the only district to receive two figures for the totem pole which each is trying to build up. These were for its achievement in total advancements and the number of troops with at least 40 percent first class scouts, and for the total of troops, packs, and posts achieving the standard for outdoor activities and camping.

The award is for the end of the first quarter of a year-long competition. Down East District covers the coastal region from Freeport to Camden. Officers of the District are Harry Spanier, executive, of Camden; Arthur Frieder, commissioner, of Friendship; and Rev. William Robbins, chairman, of Rockland.

OWLS HEAD—Mr. and Mrs. George Sleeper attended the dog show at West Orange, N. J., last Saturday, and their Norwegian Elkhound "Champion Valley Hills Peder" won the Best of Breed award over others entered in a special class. The show was put on by the Twin Brooks Kennel Club.

The dog, known as "Champ", had previously won several awards in shows throughout the Eastern States area—in Connecticut, Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, and New Jersey. He is from the kennels of Dr. and Mrs. Henry von Dellen who are summer visitors at Crescent Beach Inn each year.

Champ won his honors last Saturday over a field of five other champions. The Norwegian Elkhound goes back to the time of the Vikings and is said to be one of the few breeds in the world whose strain has been kept pure down through the centuries.

QUESTION OF ATTENDANCE AT BIG COASTAL BALL GAMES IS FAVORITE ARGUMENT OF FANS

By Bob Mayo

The subject of big crowds at Knox County baseball games of the past was brought up recently and not a few have voiced the opinion that the published reports of crowds of two and three thousand were grossly exaggerated.

Crowds of this size were reported on two occasions—in 1896 on Labor Day when Sockalexis made his final Rockland appearance, and in the mid-twenties when Rockland High and Thomaston High, both with powerful teams, played off for the Knox-Lincoln League pennant at Camden. Both times the newspapers of the day reported crowds of three thousand in attendance.

Looking back, it seems highly unlikely that a crowd of three thousand, or even two, could have been accommodated at the old Broadway grounds of the Nineties since it was on the hill behind the present Humpty-Dumpty and seems today ridiculously small; also there would seem to be no way of counting such a crowd since Broadway bordered the field and there was no fence on that side so that all who passed could stop and get a free view.

There is no doubt that a huge crowd watched the 1924 play-off between Rockland and Thomaston at Camden, but here again it would seem impossible to get an accurate count, since there was no fence and an army of ticket sellers would have been necessary to outwit the dead-ends who could view proceedings from points of vantage on the slopes beyond the outfield.

The most recent, and probably last, large crowd to view a ball game in Knox County turned out in 1949 at Thomaston for the play-off game between the Clippers and Rockland Rockets for the Twilight League flag. It is a known fact that 1100 tickets were sold a half hour before the game began, for the simple reason that the Clipper management had only that number to sell. How many came in after will never be known but a crowd of 1500 would seem not too an excessive guess. The crowd completely surrounded the field and numbers of small fry hung from trees behind the outfield fences.

It is hard to see how many more people could have been packed around the ball field that day and have been able to view proceedings at all. Thus, using the known attendance that day as a yardstick, it would seem that the figure of three thousand applied to previous crowds was excessive and only a guess on the part of the writers of the era. It seems probable that the stature of crowds, as well as that of old time ball players, increases in memory with the passage of time.

HIT AND RUN . . . a State paper spelled it Carlton, but it was Charlton "Chub" Ryder, ex Camden High sports great who posted a hole in one Sunday at the Brunswick golf tournament—it was the first ever made at the 46 year old event . . . Helen Doherty, Rockland's version of Babe Didrickson Zaharias, back from the winter ski trail and set for the golfing wars . . . the spring issue of the Maine Inland Fisheries and Game Department's "Maine Fish & Game" off the press and ready—it may be obtained by simply writing to the Department—featured is fishing and has a news letter to the editor department that is interesting . . . and, speaking of fishing, the ice is out of Chickawaukie, Salt Pond, Forest Lake, Hastings, Ross and Peters Ponds in the Knox-Lincoln area which should mean a good weekend for fishing.

The Knox County Fish and Game is slightly over $1,000 to the good for the year, according to their annual report . . . special to Red Sox fans—the New York Times is picking your boys to finish eighth, so start saying "Wait until next year!" . . . and the San Francisco Giants displaying good early foot as expected . . . class trips are blocking baseball activity generally, with only the Rockland Tigers slated for action this week . . . the query in this column as to why schools did not have JV baseball brought a quick answer from one of the Rockland coaches—

Quote—Hire another coach and build another baseball field and we will have it—Unquote . . . Question of the week—Will they hold a banquet for the Rockland High School Championship Debating team the way they did for the basketball team, which was not a State Champion? . . . Richard "Chuck" Roberts, Rockland High sports great of the early 50's hitting the front page regularly as a reporter for the Portland paper—he will be one of the great ones in time . . . it is now 47 years since Louis Sockalexis went to the Happy Hunting Grounds, but Knox County old timers will still tell you that he was the greatest baseball player ever to appear here—the big Redskin went from the old Knox League where he played with Warren, to the old Cleveland Spiders, later renamed the Indians because of him . . . the most recent big leaguer to be who appeared here was Ted Lepcio who went from the old Augusta Millionaires to the Red Sox—he played several games both in Rockland and Thomaston with the Capital City crew, as did the late Harry Agganis.

ONLY YESTERDAY DEPARTMENT . . . April, 1944 . . . An epidemic of scarlet fever swept the area, closing county schools and slowing up baseball practice. However the Knox-Lincoln League started on schedule and Thomaston eventually won the pennant.

A feature of the early season was the base stealing of the Rockland High Tigers. They stole 37 bases in the first three league games, led by the Mercury footed Freddy Allen who stole seven in a game with Lincoln Academy and 15 in three games.

The Rockland starters were: F. S. Allen, ss; Flint, c; Holden, 1b; F. E. Allen, p; McLellan, lf; Gerrish, 3b; Kelsey, rf; McRae, cf; Webber, 2b.

For Thomaston it was Kelley, p; Spaulding, 3b; Lynch, cf; Neal, rf; Pierpont, c; Sullivan, lf; Thorndike, 2b; Beattie, ss; Miller, 1b.

Camden fielded Williams, ss; Burkett, p; Hodson, c; Bryant, 3b; True, rf; Leonard, lf; Knight, cf; Wadsworth, 2b; Grindle, 1b.

EDITORIAL

THINGS ARE LOOKING UP ALONG THE SHORE

Just been wondering what the spring has in store for the people of the Coastal Area. Many groups have been stirring the bubbling pots all winter to bring them to a boil and it is about time for something to take place.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken a fresh start and we look for results as the new management gets its feet on the ground. Public support is necessary from all the business and the professions to make it a success.

Alfred Black's notice of a coming second cement plant brought hope of a new industry at Christmas time. We are with him strongly in his efforts to establish such a plant in Glen Cove and by doing so create a new deep water port. We know he is hard at work on the project and feel that time will bring results.

The directors of School Administrative District 5 have been burning the midnight oil in an effort to complete plans for the District's new high school. This project may be revealed in a matter of a week or two with the cost a bit lower than many believe might be the price.

Up in Union, the officers of Union Fair are announcing the first Blueberry Festival and from what we have heard it will be outstanding.

The Maine Seafoods Festival staff is laying plans for the big show the first weekend in August and from what is coming out of their meetings the event will have a new face and new features aplenty this year.

In Warren, citizens are striving to solve their pressing problem of housing for their growing high school population. Their situation is similar to that being experienced by Thomaston citizens. We feel that somewhere along the line in 1960 the towns may find the solution to the problem which has plagued them, especially Thomaston, for years. It is something to which they should give their complete attention for the sake of the youngsters.

The poultry situation looks a little brighter than it did a few months ago and may even improve with the passing months. Right now, egg prices are at a higher level than usual at this time of the year. This brings joy to the egg producers, but still leaves the people raising broilers in a bind from which they may be freed before long.

There is talk of a revival of summer theatre in Camden this year. Our best wishes to the producers who have picked "The Prettiest Town in Maine" for their venture.

Waldoboro is looking up with Sylvania adding to their already extensive plant while Thomaston feels good over the expansion at Dragon Cement Company.

The Rockland Citizens Committee, although silent for several weeks, has been at work on plans for added parking space and better traffic routes in Rockland. They have been making good progress and their plans, those of the City, the Planning Board, the State Highway Commission and the Chamber of Commerce may merge into a concerted effort which will benefit everyone, businessman and shopper alike.

The new Penobscot Bay Ferry Service is doing a steady business and its bright, new boats bring promise of added summer business for the islands.

The sardine factories will be humming in a matter of weeks and the commercial fisheries operations will be increasing as 40 Fathom meets with marked success with its new products. The number of lobstermen on the bay is increasing daily with good weather and that phase of fisheries will soon be booming.

After all, the Coast is not as dead as some claim it to be. It's just a matter of setting all the projects down in one place where they can be added up. Besides, we wouldn't want to live anywhere else—and we have a suspicion that you feel pretty much the same way.

Gardeners Aroused With Arrival Of Little Sunshine

A Yankee is noted for thriftiness and the ability to be prepared for any of the emergencies which face them in a climate such as this. In Rockland this week, during these summery springlike days, the urge to garden has caused people to rush up and down Main Street, their arms loaded with garden tools, shrubs, flower bulbs and vegetables and grass seed, which they had purchased in the stores. Of course the Yankee trading instinct in the storekeepers have made them place attractive displays in the windows of their stores to entice the public.

All over town families are working on their lawns, in their flower beds and are putting the first vegetable seeds in the ground. They not only like the satisfaction of raising their own fresh fruits and vegetables, they like the beauty that they, themselves can bring to their grounds.

In the old days, when the cold winter months made it impossible to obtain food except through hard work and preparations for winter, families worked together and stored up winter supplies which they had raised on their land during the summer. In the present day, we may go to the stores and buy fresh fruits and vegetables all year round, but the natives still have this inbred desire to make the same preparations as their ancestors did. So now, every spring, can be seen this same rush to the stores for supplies to make gardens for food and visual beauty.

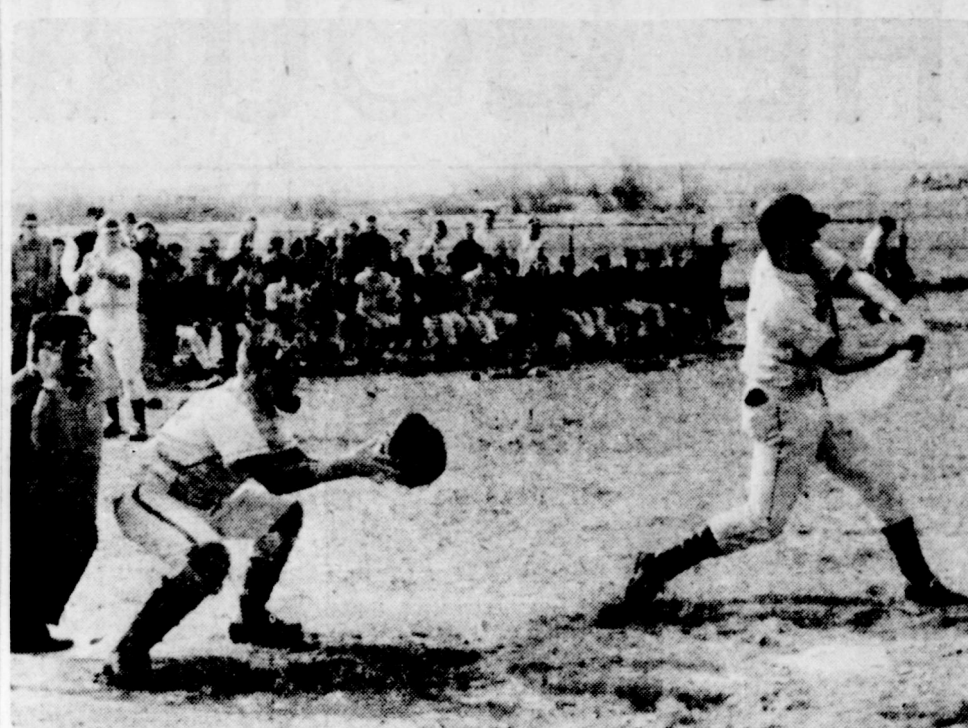

The man who always does his best work is a success whether the world thinks so or not.

Waterville Whips Rockland Tigers 7-0

A Rockland slugger fans the breeze, Thursday afternoon, in the opening game of the Rockland schedule which was dropped to Waterville High 7 to 0. The Tigers were able to collect only two hits in the Kennebec Valley League contest.

The Waterville Panthers shut out Rockland's Tigers 7-0 Thursday at South Field behind the two-hit pitching of rangy Bruce Robbins whose fast ball was nipping the corners all afternoon. He fanned 11, a figure that was matched by Rockland's "Ace" Hill but the latter was the victim of bunched hits and somewhat erratic support.

Waterville actually won it in the second. Dana Bolduc opened with a single through the middle and went to second when it was bobbled in the outfield; Dick Joseph split the outfielders with a long double to score Bolduc. It was the only extra base hit of the game. Bob Ferris then drove a wicked smash off the knee of third baseman Charlie Finley to chase Joseph home. Hill tightened to avert further scoring but the damage was done.

Waterville scored two in the fourth and seventh and one in the fifth while the only two Rockland hits, by Jim Shaffer in the second and Billy Jackson in the seventh, were wasted. Considering the chilly day, it was a fairly well played game for an opener. Rockland plays next at Camden on Tuesday.

Score:
Waterville 020 210 0-7 9 2
Rockland 000 000 0-0 2 5
Robbins and Ingham; Hill and Pine.

CAMDEN YMCA
County League

Though but four men bowled for each team, Camden A & P, skippered by Bill Chapin, pulled one of the upsets of the Knox County League season by blanking the high-average Coast Guard 5 to 0 in this week's match at the Camden YMCA. Frank Claes knocked out a nifty 540 series on the side in leading the A & P and was ably backed by Bill Chapin's 515. The Coast Guard boys had an off night, but it won't happen often.

In the other match, Central Maine Power gained a moral victory by taking a point from the hot-bowling Rockland Commuters. Eugley, a new bowler for Central Maine, got off to a rousing start with a 172, 176, 178 series for 536, best series of the match and just ahead of Vinal's fine 534. Wallace's 207 earned him entry into the 299 Club and was high game for the night.

Standings:

| Team                | Won | Lost |

Y Men's League

Capt. Roland Marriner's Rangers, without the presence of Capt. Marriner, went wild in this week's Men's League ten pin bowling at the Camden Y, downing True Spear's Senators 4 to 1 and knocking out a terrific 882 team game in the process. Not an alley record, this is one of the best team game efforts of the season. Scores included: Herrick, 167; Passmore, 153; Blaisdell, 164; Milliken, 199; and Chupervich, 199. Their team total of 2368 for the match enabled them to go into a tie with Bob Downing's Red Sox who were spilled by the Bruins 3 to 2. In other matches, Jim Weare's Giants had a rugged time with Henry Williams' Indians, but managed to eke out a 3 to 2 victory. The Cubs found a team they could lick and took the Braves 4 to 1, being sparked by Bob Monroe's fine 504.

The night's hottest bowler was Joe Chupervich with a gaudy 216 for his second game and a 563 series, both highs for the evening.

MORE COLORFUL SIGHTS AND STRANGE CUSTOMS GREET HAHNS IN VISIT TO BANGKOK, THAILAND

A criver voyage to evoti Bangkok, Thailand and the sights to be seen in that Oriental city are described by Mrs. Byron Hahn of Thomaston as she writes from a world tour.

On Way To Bangkok

Dear Friends:
We are at the western end of the time belt so the sun didn't come up until 7 this morning. It popped out of the sea and shot up into the sky. All day we sailed northwest along the western side of that big point of land which holds Laos, Vietnam, Cambodia and Thailand.

In the evening huge clouds came up. We hoped for a downpour but the captain said he hoped not as we were going through some tricky island groups and good visibility was needed. It didn't rain and the sun came up red-hot. We could see many islands off the coast of Thailand. At one, Kohsi Chang, we anchored about two miles out to pick up 350 tons of tapioca. Immigration and customs came aboard, bringing letters from Bangkok.

After lunch, Mr. and Mrs. Parker and three of us ladies went ashore to see where tapioca came from. The company launch would take us. It was a good-sized native boat with a sturdy-sounding engine. The water was rather rough and it was tricky getting in and it was tricky keeping our seats. The bare-footed pirate who was in charge started it hell-bent for election. We bobbed along, hitting the top of the waves. It was an exciting ride. Landing was exciting too as there was quite a jump from a bobbing boat to the step of a stone pier.

All along the waterfront, houses were built on stilts right into the bay. We walked up the pier, at the end of which were shallow steps of stone which went up and up and up. On either side of this narrow highway were shops and eating places. There were jars and trays of exotic-looking food; pickled and salted and dried and fried; sweets that I couldn't figure out—all covered with flies. Babies were sitting on floors and counters. Each store was one foot higher than the one below, open at the front. We went in one store to see pretty cotton material from Bangkok but it was two dollars a yard, so all we got were paper parasols, as we needed them.

We went up quite a way to a path which led to a little pagoda, which was covered with carved dragons, all painted in bright colors. A man came along and took us in. He took off his sandals and pointed to ours. I hated to take mine off as I didn't think I'd ever get them on again. We went in and someone said "Sit". There wasn't a chair except where two Buddhist monks in saffron robes were sitting, Turkish-fashion, so we dropped onto the floor. One of the monks put cigarettes on a low table and nodded at us. We didn't take any but they did and sat there smoking. Then they sent the man who brought us in after water. He came back with beer bottles filled with water—cool, clear water. We were so thirsty but didn't dare drink any.

Mary asked the monks if they were married. It took time to get that across but finally they shook their heads. Then she asked the man if he were married. He nodded. How many children? He couldn't tell us. He pointed at Harry and then at us four women. "Baba?" he asked. Whether he thought we were Harry's children or wives I don't know. Then the three laughed and we laughed and laughed and laughed. I doubt if the walls of that old pagoda ever had echoed to such hearty laughter.

It was cool in there, sitting on a lovely tile floor, covered with straw matting. So we sat and tried to talk. Then Mary and I took pictures. The surprise was a neon light over the altar. We did get our shoes on as we were cool and rested when we left. I have a soft spot in my heart for those sweet young monks trying to be hospitable to those queer-acting foreigners.

The driver pointed with pride to a large hospital, run by the Seventh Day Adventists. In the same neighborhood we noticed all the second floor windows were barred. Mrs. Moss said "Why?" The guide said, "robbery".

There weren't so many bicycles as in Saigon but most of them had motors. The rickshaws were fastened behind the tricycle which had a motor and were called samlohrs. In Saigon, where the rickshaw is in front of the tricycle propelled by man power, one feels he is being thrown as a victim to the traffic.

At last we came to the walls of the Royal Palace and enter. We know just how Daniel felt in the fiery furnace. But sizzling as we are, we're lost in wonder at that vast collection of palaces, pagodas, huge statues of kings, dragons, giants and demons. It is beyond description: the clear strong colors, the flashing bits of China and glass, the gold leaf, the ancient Chinese tiles which covered some of the buildings, the mosaic, the long corridors with murals of the Ramayana Epic, the tinkling of small discs of brass around the roof of the pagoda and the gilded snakes which rise from it. This is the Wat Phra Keo.

The flowering shrubs and trees around, I didn't know but they were lovely. I picked up a rock for Annabel. The whole island was one big rock and there were many quarries.

Coming down again we noticed the homes and people. The houses all were open in front and had nothing much in them but people. The floors were silvery-gray and polished beautifully. One thing every home had was a cradle—a loose canvas tacked on a square frame and hung from the ceiling. In every one was a tiny baby, sound asleep. Three-year-olds were carrying one-year-olds on their hips. There were many mangy dogs and cats and beautiful hens and roosters. We saw tan-colored squirrels in cages.

When we came back to the pier, the little boys were swimming. In a boat a boy of about three was shovelling salt into 25 or 30 pound pails which were then carried up the steps by a small girl of five or six. Men just sat there and paid no attention. When the little girls saw us they just giggled and giggled. We probably looked very strange to them.

A fisherman came in with a beautiful large shell which I'd liked to have had if I'd had any ticals.

Joe went up the steps for about a mile and came to the town market where he saw many things he'd never seen before. We got so interested in so many things, we forgot all about tapioca.

We gathered at the pier and had a lovely, bouncy ride back to the Rover. Tapioca was still being loaded. It looked like 50 pound sacks of flour which sifted over everything. It covered the deck, the hold, the men. Occasionally a man would snatch off his turban, shake it, slap it over his head and body, wipe his face, then shake the cloth again, fold it and put it on his head. Those were the hardest-working men we'd had on the whole trip. They came right along to Bangkok with us. They received seven cents a day.

We sailed up the Chao Phya River (which means Mother of Life) and docked at 7:30 a. m. There were hundreds of small boats with high, wide prows. Often the man just lies back and takes a nap on that prow. Around these parts, if nothing is going on people just sleep where ever they are.

All the way up the river were fish weirs and little houses with a boat in front. Many boats had outboard motors. Every group of homes had a temple with snakes rising from the roofs.

Vessels from many lands were coming and going. The Thai Navy was anchored along one side of the river. Sparks says they never go to sea and have been anchored so long that the chains are rusty and break loose when a big ship goes by.

We are told that we will only have one day here with no chance of getting to Ankor Wat. We started right out for the Oriental Hotel to see about tours. There is nothing until 1:30. So we walk down New Road, looking at gems, silverware and silks. Most of the people here wear western style clothes.

After a delicious lunch at the hotel ($1.50), we start on our tour in the scorching heat. We pass Bangkok University and go along a street of open shops where they weave rattan chairs and make huge water jars. On either side of the road are slimy canals. In one part of town the women wear sarongs but also there were pert little misses in western attire.

We had to stop for a train at a crossing, the first train I'd seen since leaving California. There is a splendid railroad terminal so this must be a railroad center.

or Pagoda of the Emerald Buddha which is carved from a block of jade. It is enshrined high up on a very rich altar just now in summer dress. One of the figures is solid gold, the others are hollow gold. I have read that this Buddha which is more than 600 years old, was taken from Laos and that the Laotians are now claiming it.

On the walls are more paintings of the life of Buddha. There is an array of gifts, like grandfather clocks, silver, old furniture, etc.

We went into the throne room with its golden throne, its magnificent draperies and the nether white and gold umbrella. Surprise there too; electric fans and neon lights.

We stopped to admire the ancient Bo and Ming trees. By now we had to have a drink. I would have taken water from a roadside ditch or gone in all over. However there was a little hole in the wall where we got Coca-Cola. It doesn't taste like ours but it was wet and saved our lives.

We returned to the hotel where we hired a launch with an awning and a most distinctive looking operator. His head was small and well-shaped and he held it like a king. He must have been descended from those ancient Khmers who originally came from India. He slipped off his sandals, put his bare feet up on the seat with his knees under his chin, took the wheel with a flourish and we were off, up the river. We saw where the floating market is and people bringing in fruit and vegetables. We passed the walls of the Royal Palace and the Wat Arun or Temple of the Dawn whose tower is 243 feet high.

We turned into a klong or canal where we really saw the native life. Houses were built into the water with a narrow boat at every doorstep. Everyone was washing clothes or dishes or themselves or their babies in the canal. Tiny children were swimming like fish. The water looked like mud but all came out looking very clean.

Every boy seemed to own a small kite.

I felt like Elizabeth II on a tour. The whole two hours we were waving. Even babies and old men waved, all smiles. We could see the tall pointed roofs of pagodas with traditional gilded serpents everywhere. We got off to see the royal barges. On one I counted places for 24 rowers on each side. Two had platforms in the middle. They were very long with most ornate prows—the seven headed serpent, dragons and queer beasts. The canal got very narrow but finally we came out on the river again. We passed the Royal Palace at sunset. The whole thing was tinged with pink and looked like fairyland.

Back at the hotel we had a quick lunch, Byron went back to the ship. Mrs. Moss and I went to see the Siamese dancing. Such expressive hands! The fingers curled back almost to the wrist. The costumes were fabulous, heavy silk encrusted with gems. Men's parts were taken by girls. The native music, singing and speaking were mostly done by the orchestra at the side of the theatre. I cannot forget the princes on horseback. They just looked a pastebord horse to their hips and glided around with a dancing step like a tiny gallop.

It was hot and close and long—no intermission. I wouldn't have missed it for a million dollars. Neither would I have gone the next night for a million dollars.

Our taxi driver waited and took us back to the ship. When we got there the word was that we'd be there until two the next day.

The next morning Mrs. Moss dashed out to go to the floating market, which wasn't, as it was Priests' Day. Her guide took her shopping and to lunch, then brought her back to the ship at two. By that time, sailing had been postponed to midnight. Herman was waiting. She asked Mary P. and me to go back with her. We did and looked over the silversmiths and gem and textile merchants. We made some purchases; then went to the "thieves market". It seemed quite respectable but we hung onto our bags. The driver told us not to buy anything for more than half-price.

We decided to come to the ship, after visiting the snake farm where vaccine is made from the snake's venom. We saw a beautiful king cobra and many others.

We went to the Siamese boxing matches in the evening. We had been hearing about these since we left New York. This is something seen nowhere else in the world. It begins with kneeling at a post outside the ring, praying, pounding the post and then the head, going into the ring, kneeling with the forehead on the floor, doing some pounding with the boxing gloves, sitting back on the heels, scooping with the arms to one side and then to the other, then in front, as if gathering in all the blessings that Buddha would bestow, jumping up, dancing to one side, pointing the toes at hip height—then to the other side and to the front. Now the contestants are brought to the center and introduced. They lay their gloves together, bow their heads and bend forward for a minute; then separate and begin dancing, kicking, biting, punching. Often one kicks right over the opponent's head, sometimes in the stomach, or face or under the chin, with an occasional rapid series of punches. They are like lightning. Only two sets survived the five rounds. I'm glad I saw it but wouldn't go again.

On the way home we stopped at Mariners' Club (for seafaring people). We decided we were as seafaring as any. It has a fine swimming pool. Mac, one of the engineers, had a swim and inveigled us to go to the famous or infamous Mosquito Bar next door. He said we should see what kind of entertainment was offered sailors coming in from long voyages. We had a soda and watched. Such wiggly dancing I never saw! Very young girls in skin-tight dresses, slit to the knees; some very beautiful, some very plain, but all very popular. Mac pulled me up and insisted that I dance which I did for a few minutes but it was too fast and furious for me. The music was "Que Sera, Sera". We soon left and got into samlohrs to return to the ship. Mrs. Moss and I in one; the Parkers in another. We started first. Soon we heard a "whoop" as the others passed us. Our driver put on more speed and pulled ahead. The others crept up. We spun around a corner on two wheels and dashed up to the gangplank just ahead of them.

As we came along men were sweeping the streets and they (the streets) looked very clean. One of our guides told us that Thailand has everything; gold, gems, lumber, oil, ivory, and especially rice. The people are well off but how they can be I do not know as Ken tells me the laborers earn 50c a day. He was sad because there were only three white elephants left.

We are now 15 hours ahead of home time.

Our airmail cost 6 ticals or bahts (30c). No foreign conqueror has taken off the wealth of Thailand. Tribute was paid to the Khmer kings of Cambodia for a time. Later the Burmese sacked the city which was then the capital. Since then they have kept their independence; never any foreign occupation, except a few Japanese troops in World War II. It is ruled by a king and able people who have come to power. They now have a constitution which came into force in 1932 of which they are very proud.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL

ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a source of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

| Day       | Book        | Chapter | Verses |
|-----------|-------------|---------|--------|
| Sunday    | Psalm       | 15      | 1-5    |
| Monday    | Hebrews     | 2       | 13-15  |
| Tuesday   | Mark        | 7       | 14-23  |
| Wednesday | John        | 14      | 1-14   |
| Thursday  | John        | 8       | 12-24  |
| Friday    | Philippians | 1       | 4-11   |
| Saturday  | John        | 16      | 25-33  |

Pretty as a picture, isn't she? She looks "downright" angelic. Yet, five minutes from now, she may be a little bundle of fury!

Children change faster than the wind. They haven't learned to hide their feelings. But while grown-ups may present a better camouflage to the world, there are few of us without inner conflicts. And these conflicts can be serious.

It would be a lonely world if we had to keep all our problems to ourselves. We don't. God never intended that we should have to solve all our difficulties single-handed. Remember, He established His Church on earth for us. In that Church we will find understanding fellowship, and the faith to work out our own destinies.

Take your problems to Church. Pray that you will find a solution to them. Talk them over with your minister. And what seems a maze today may become a straight road tomorrow.

New Booklet On Sheep Raising Now Available

ORONO—"Success with Sheep" is the title of a brand new bulletin from the Cooperative Extension Service of the University of Maine. The 24-page publication covers management, feeding, breeding, and marketing of sheep.

John C. Goater, Extension livestock specialist of the University of Maine, wrote the bulletin. It features 39 photographs of various aspects of "Success with Sheep".

Copies of Bulletin 490, "Success with Sheep", may be obtained from county offices of the Maine Extension Service. They may also be secured by writing to the Cooperative Extension Services, Winslow Hall, University of Maine, Orono.

Goater explains in the introduction to the bulletin that Maine has many real advantages for raising sheep. Among these are a very satisfactory climate, an abundance of grassland, and nearness to the nation's best lamb and wool markets.

Goater estimates that there are about 46,000 sheep in Maine. He writes, "There is every reason to believe that it is entirely economically feasible to triple this number within the next 10 years. Sheep raising has paid farmers well for many years and with proper feeding, care, management, and marketing, the sheep business should continue to pay well in Maine."

Seven keys to success with sheep are given. To be successful a sheepman must show a real liking and understanding for sheep. He must grow into the business instead of starting on too large a scale. He must per-

By Henry Teague

As most of us expected eggs have taken a drop after the Lenten period. It is hard to understand why much of any drop was necessary, because of the scarcity of eggs, but it seems to be an established custom to put the price down this time of year.

Harry Whelden of Orono, state extension poultry specialist has sent me some interesting material this week concerning the building problems in the south. It is easy to see that we can learn quite a lot from their experiences concerning the proper engineering of buildings to stand high winds and in this part of the country the heavy snows.

The South brags about their cheap housing cost and then when it blows or falls down, FHA comes in with disaster loans at low interest rate. This hardly seems like good management of government money. Why not build them right to start with? They need to redefine "disaster". It hardly seems logical to classify a loss of an inadequately built house when the wind blows it down.

A spokesman of the FHA administration office at Atlanta said last week that 90 applications for low interest FHA loans have been received from 10 of the 15 counties declared in the disaster area created by early March snow and ice storms. It is reported that a keg of nails extra in the buildings of one Georgia farmer would have been worth $10,000. Down went his two houses containing 10,000 hens.

A survey of the area shows: First, buildings that were built according to good standard design practices suffered no damage. Second, the largest single cause of failure was inadequate nailing. In building after building, there was clear evidence that nails pulling out—rather than timbers breaking—was the cause of failure.

Third, the most common failure point was in the rafter ties or braces used in an A-type roof to keep the building from spreading. This was true in buildings with conventional rafters, and also in many of the buildings which used trusses or trussed rafters to give clear-span support to buildings about 30 feet wide.

How can farmers guard against damage from heavy snow?

1. Whenever possible, use an engineered building plan which is designed for conditions of the region. Follow the plan carefully both as to size of lumber and number of nails. Where number of nails is not shown, follow the practice of good carpenters of the area.

2. When you do not have a plan, or when modifying a plan to suit your purposes, watch particularly the rafter ties in an A-roof building. The lower the pitch, the greater the strain on the rafter.

Keep in mind that for average buildings the pull on the rafter ties is two to three times the weight of the load on the roof. If you space the rafter ties 12 to 16 feet apart, it is almost impossible to get enough nails in each tie to carry the load.

3. For trussed roof construction on buildings about 30 feet wide, nailed trusses should usually be no more than four feet apart.

Poultrymen of the area who have any doubt as to the ability of their houses to stand during periods of high wind and heavy snows will do well to check before another winter comes.

County Agent's Corner

By Gilbert Jaeger, County Agent

Dear Farmer:

Last week's Dairy Project Leaders meeting was quite successful although we had a rather small turnout. A good discussion was held on what the Cooperative Extension Service should have for the Knox-Lincoln County program. Plans for the regular monthly dairy meetings were then worked out. After speakers have been contacted, we will let you know the details.

The basic point for this article is: if you will help plan, your Extension program will be your program, not ours.

This is true regardless of the line of work. On Tuesday night, we will hold a program planning for sheep-growers. I hope they turn out to help discuss their needs and plan their program.

On Wednesday, Mardis Warner, Extension engineer, and I will be making calls. We have a day's work lined up, but if anyone needs help, let us know, and we'll see what we can do.

Spring work is underway on many farms. It won't be long before silaging and haying season. How many farms will I visit and hear of this year which have their forage harvesting equipment break down the first day—and then become a week late or lose the advantage of some early good weather? One such farm would be one too many, but I'll probably hear of 10! Let's replace worn parts now, take the equipment for a dry run if necessary.

Sincerely,
Gil Jaeger, County Agent

MIXTURE OF POULTRY SCIENCE AND JOURNALISM TURNS INTO UNUSUAL MAJOR AT UNIVERSITY

ORONO—Studying both poultry science and journalism?

An unusual combination of studies, you say? Not so, or at least not as far as the University of Maine's progressive program in poultry science is concerned.

"There's no such thing as a four year, set curricular in our department," according to Prof. J. Robert Smyth, well-known head of the State University's department of poultry science.

"Our program is designed to fit the student's needs," he continued, citing the case of a poultry science student who is taking all the journalism courses he can in order to pursue a career in writing about the poultry industry.

Prof. Smyth, who has taught poultry courses to Maine students for 13 years, defined his department's goals in this way: "We can pretty much divide our students into two groups. We have students who want to enter industry—most of whom go into production supervision work. The largest percentage of these students go to positions with feed companies, poultry processing firms, equipment manufacturers and drug companies."

"Our second group is made up of boys who want to continue their education by going into graduate study. This number is a growing one, incidentally, because the demand for the poultry science student who has obtained an advanced degree is just enormous. There are many jobs that are going begging in research and teaching."

"In addition, several take the so-called educational jobs—as high school teachers, or as county agents or poultry specialists with the Agricultural Extension Service."

"In view of the fact that students go into these different fields of work, we try to give them a good general background. Then we try to pattern the rest of our program to suit each individual's needs," Prof. Smyth said.

The high school student who enters the University of Maine with the intention of majoring in poultry science is enrolled in the College of Agriculture. During his freshman year, he is required to study courses in the basic sciences, English, mathematics (if needed), the agricultural sciences and physical education.

Near the end of his freshman year, he is asked to sit down with Prof. Smyth and the two plan the student's program of courses for the sophomore, junior, and senior years.

During this period, the poultry science student is required to take five courses in his major field. These include two courses in poultry technology, and one each in poultry nutrition, poultry genetics, and avian physiology.

In addition, the department offers problem courses in which a student can carry out an experiment in any field of poultry science study.

"This work is intended primarily for the seniors and it enables them to develop a particular interest. We're putting a lot of faith in this sort of course work these days," Prof. Smyth commented.

The required courses in poultry science constitute only about 14 percent of the total number of course hours required of the University of Maine student in four years.

People are anxious to tell you how—but few offer to help.
