The Summer of Enrichment is Now

by Esther J. Perne

Music, art, film, theater, architecture, the written word: the opportunities in this region are immense, overwhelming and oh so rewarding.

Add nature – all of the collaborations, the plein air painting and photography workshops, the art walks, the outdoor sculpture gardens, the arts and crafts that youth camps foster and the music under the pines or the stars and so often near water.

Add fests and festivals and fairs and social gatherings large and small and libraries large and small and invariably there is music in the background or art on the walls, there is an artistry to the exhibits and booths and displays, and there is a scenic arrival route or setting.

Add landscaping, that form of creativity that is an art form in itself.

Add community, that great intangible that approves, endorses, attends the various branches of creative activity. And add history, legacy, tradition – those threads of inheritance that are strong in the arts and architecture of Maine.

Each week the wealth multiplies, and so does the awareness of how much is available, how crowded the calendar. With the season nearing the halfway mark of vacation-time events, some incredible, memorable events have already taken places – plays, the Maine International Film Festival, arts shows, concerts, history walks, nature programs... Other highlights await. What will they be?

Among museums and galleries, The Colby College Museum of Art in Waterville is a stand-out for offering one of the best exhibit outings in the area. New in July, the Bernard Langlais Retrospective is impressive in itself with its more than 120 sculptures and reliefs, oil paintings on panel and canvas and works on paper, but even more impressive in the context of the new Bernard Langlais Art Trail connecting more than 50 institutions across Maine – or in the context that the Langlais exhibit leads to many more exhibits throughout the Colby museum.

Among museums and galleries, the L.C. Bates Museum in Hinckley is a standout for steadfastness in weekly family art and nature programs and for its summer art exhibit of local artists exploring Maine’s natural environment in “Northern Skies: Clear Light.”

Well established in area art activities is the Gardiner Artwalk that takes place in the studios and shops of historic downtown Water Street. On Friday, August 1, (5:30-8 pm) this free event will include more than twenty visual artists and several group shows as well as children’s activities, art demonstrations and a strolling musician.

Brand new in area art activities is the First Annual Creative Living Arts Parade in Skowhegan’s Coburn Park on Saturday, July 27 (4 pm).

Can A Lady Be A Farmer?

Listen up Dads, Moms and other caregivers! There's an even better reason than usual to take the family to Open Farm Day on Sunday, July 27. It's called daughters, granddaughters, nieces, the neighbors' girls... Here in Maine there's a perceptible back-to-farming movement. The statistics are small: according to the United States Department of Agriculture, there are 8,173 farms in Maine, up from 7,196 in 2002. But the visibility is large: youth are "on fire" about farming, young farmers with visions and enthusiasm – and smiles - are ever more present in the farmers' markets, answering questions, taking orders, glad to be dealing with the public and happy to be heading back to the fields and the barns.

More important among these youth, and this is where Sunday, July 27 comes in, there is also a perceptible forward-to-farming movement in Maine for women. The statistics are small: 29% of farmers in Maine are women, up from 24% in 2007. But the anecdotal evidence is large: women are running farms; often the summer interns are young ladies, here for the season to learn about farming before continuing unrelated studies and careers; among couples, instead of "the farmer takes a wife," it may be the farmer is the wife.

So why go to Open Farm Day on July 27 (or Maine Farm Days on August 20 and 21 at Misty Meadows Farm in Clinton)? Go for fun, for nostalgia, for curiosity, for a free family day, and go to add farming to a daughter's dreams.

- Conservation Too -

While “eating local” has become all the rage, there remain reasons to do so besides it is simply popular. As Maine’s farms are increasing in numbers rather than disappearing, “eating local” and buying food from local sources is the best way to support those new farmers.

Today you can’t watch a news program or read a newspaper without an article praising the benefits of local foods. This year Open Farm Day is on Sunday, July 27th. It is an opportunity to visit one or more many farms statewide that are open to the public. Of over 85 farms that will be open, about 8 are located in Kennebec County. There are also a number in the surrounding counties. For those using the internet, check www.GetRealMaine.com and search for the “Agritourism” sites. They list all the farms planning to be open to the public on the 27th. If you don’t visit a farm on that Sunday you can certainly take advantage of the multiple farmers’ markets and farm stands scattered around the county. If most of your food shopping is only in the larger grocery stores, check out which products are actually produced right here in Maine. Many of the stores now identify “locally grown” products from fruits and vegetables to local craft beers and wines. There are many enjoyable ways to support the effort to “eat local.”

Eating Local

by Dale Finseth

The primary arguments made in favor eating locally are fresher food, food safety and knowing where your food comes from. Depending upon how that food is produced and transported, it may also have a smaller carbon footprint. Perhaps the best reason is the fact that you can actually talk to the person who had a hand [literally] in the production of that food you purchase, bring home and consume. ...and when was the last time you had a chance to talk to the person who picked or produced that chicken nugget you had for lunch. Though perhaps you may know the person who drove the delivery truck.

A local orchard operator talks about how many gallons of gasoline it takes to get a bushel of California apples to your store instead of the ones from her orchard. The food on our dinner plate has traveled an average of 1,800 miles in order to finally get to our plate. That’s a lot of hydrocarbons used to get our food to the table. The carbon footprint generated is not usually figured into the price. It seems inconsistent that our food must travel such a distance to get to us when we may be able to purchase it from our neighbor and know exactly how it got to our plate.

Here in Maine the winter has usually been a hard time to “eat local.” Naturally the summer months provide more choices. Take advantage. More and more, even the winter months offer more; with more local farmers using greenhouses, we have more local choices throughout the year. You need to plan your menus around what is available not what you may be craving at the moment. Having watermelon in November is not usually a realistic option.

It doesn’t mean a total ban on your favorites. Even the Romans were willing to pay the price for something they called “ice cream.” Just rethink some of your choices and give preference to foods that were grown or produced within 100 miles. There are far more choices than you may realize.

A Tribute to Young Samantha Smith

Nearly 30 years ago a Manchester, Maine elementary student wrote a letter to Russian Premier, Yuri Andropov. Remember? The young Samantha Smith made news in Maine and literally around the world. Samantha is a child I will never forget. She was a child then – and will forever remain a child. Three years after the letter was sent both Samantha and her father were killed in a plane crash. Yes, this young heroine will remain a child forever.

But think of the event as it took place. Stories from the time that relate news of the discontent and obvious destruction of the environment around the world was absorbed by Samantha and, although many may have felt that little could be done about the chaos, this vibrant young lady thought differently. She wrote the letter and perhaps felt that was the best she could do.

When later a two page letter arrived in the morning mail for Samantha her life took a serious swerve. People near and far were amazed that a girl, a pre-teenage girl, had received a message from a VIP in Russia. Beyond what took place following that correspondence, Samantha proved, that any idea that has personal merit is reason enough to pursue.

There are so many lessons to be garnered from that simple act of writing a letter. Never overlook a child's determination; nothing ventured, nothing gained; believe in yourself; people may be in high places, but they are still human and how they react to any situation should not be presupposed – and the ideas go on and on. I wonder how many hundreds more young people may have taken an equally bold step – but never experienced similar results. They did not receive the accolades that Samantha did but they should be honored by those who knew of the undertaking!

Before I left for two years in the Peace Corps I, like hundreds of others, sent a note to Samantha's mother Jane Smith with whom I had worked at the Maine

Department of Human Services. The very first letter that reached me in my Belize home was from Jane Smith.

The Samantha Smith Foundation was established to foster friendships around the world specifically aimed at young people but with the additional intent to encourage and educate everyone for a peaceful world. When my third grandchild, a beautiful 13-year-old girl, seemed ready for the wider world, I suggested she join a group of other girls flying off to Artec Summer Camp on the Black Sea. Her parents agreed and Kristin remembers a great deal from the experience even today.

If you have children or grandchildren, Samantha's story might impress them. A stop in front of the Maine State Museum would further impress them if they saw the life-size bronze statue of a smiling young Samantha with outstretched hand, releasing a dove, the international peace symbol. A Maine bear cub depicting forest creatures rests comfortably at Samantha's feet! Beautiful and beautifully symbolic, the statue honors one of Maine's youngest heroines.

Impetuous Love, Fickle Fate, and Tragic Consequences in TAM's Romeo and Juliet

Season 45 at Theater at Monmouth continues with William Shakespeare's classic tale of star-crossed lovers, Romeo and Juliet, opening Friday, July 25 at 7:30 p.m. Often called the world's greatest love story, Romeo and Juliet is the tragic tale of the irreconcilable differences of two powerful families, the young love between their children, and the fateful consequences of acting without thinking.

"Our focus is on the central images of the play—the tension between day and night, light and dark. While we know that the daylight world is more powerful than young love of night, we are still drawn into the power of possibility," says Producing Artistic Director and director Dawn McAndrews. For McAndrews, the idea of actions having consequences is important. "Perhaps Shakespeare is warning us to speak up and accept responsibility for our actions—before it's too late."

Written in the late 1590s, Romeo and Juliet has been an audience favorite for more than 400 years. Thwarted by fate at every turn through missed chances, bad advice, and poor timing, they will do anything to remain true to their beloved. With the families united over the sacrifice of their children, Romeo and Juliet is a haunting reminder of the power of love and the tragedy of indifference. The play has inspired countless adaptations since its first production including Leonard Bernstein's West Side Story and Baz Luhrmann's 1996 film Romeo + Juliet starring Leonardo DiCaprio and Claire Danes.

—The Luckiest Boy—

It could have been a dream—but no, the FAGPFI did actually happen. The proof is with the 20 or so village kids, and a few adults, who got an airplane ride that day some 34 years ago.

The January day in 1980 was picture perfect with a typical bright sun hanging low in the crisp blue sky. The temps were barely out of the single numbers and the wind was light out of the north that morning when Ralph and I proposed instituting the Fly-In on Great Pond. We loved the idea and rambled on about how it would be a great day and that it would happen annually, maybe even become a well-known winter event. The usual weekend routine had been to ice fish out in the cove just outside the stream leading into the village. The ice fishing had always included socializing, usually picnicking and often a bonfire. The plan this day was to include all the above, plus a first time feature of giving rides in our little airplanes to anyone who cared to go up and see what the village looked like from a thousand or two feet. The black ice was in perfect shape for such an event as no snow had fallen recently to hinder the planes. The lake was one giant runway.

Ralph was the more experienced pilot and his plane, a Lake Amphibian with retractable wheels, could carry 3 passengers each trip. My license was new and the newly acquired 1959 Cessna 150 only had one extra seat, though in practice we did stuff two little kids in it occasionally. The long-shot idea occurred to call our old friend Hunt Dowse over in New Hampshire, another fairly new pilot who had acquired a 1952 Cessna 120 tail dragger, also with one extra seat. Hunt was game and within two hours he buzzed overhead Great Pond and skidded to a halt near our new ice runway headquarters, just north of Dave Webster's Great Pond Marina. Ralph's parents camp, known to us as Loon Lodge included a big old dock and boathouse. By the time Hunt slid in we had a nice bonfire going on the ice about 100 feet out from the boathouse, using old rotten docks as fuel. Word spread around town and kids were beginning to show up, so we turned the fire and hot dog cooking duties over to several parents that came with the kids. We fashioned a "windsock" out in the middle of the cove by driving an ice chisel down into the ice a foot or so, then hung a pillow case over it to act

The First (and last) Annual Great Pond Fly-In

by Rod Johnson

Included here are photos of the three planes and pilots as well as attendee Fred Saxton who tended the bonfire and cooked hot dogs for all that showed up. The planes and pilots from left to right are: Rod Johnson flying a 1959 Cessna 150, Hunt Dowse flying a 1952 Cessna 120 tail dragger and Ralph Pope flying the Lake Buccaneer, also often called a flying boat as the wheels retract and it can land on water.

The photos were rescued from old slides taken by Bill Pulsifer as a flag. Landing directly into the wind was important as the planes skidded sideways on any cross-wind attempts.

It didn't take long to load up some anxious kids and get to it. It seemed like more kids showed up than lived in town. The line formed and the three little airplanes made take-offs and landings for about 3 hours. As the sun went lower and the temps were falling back into the single numbers, Ralph hollered "UNCLE" over the radio, saying that one of the kids in his plane was on his fourth go-around! We called a halt to the rides, chiseled some tie-downs into the ice and put the planes to bed. What a day it was, and still remembered fondly by the pilots. I'd be interested to know who remembers being one of the kids that got a plane ride that day. THE END

— Take It Outside —

Take to the Hills

by Pete Kallin

Last week, we explored the bogs and wetlands a bit. This week we took to the hills. On Saturday, I and about 18 others joined BRCA President Mel Croft for a “geology hike” on The Mountain. As we meandered slowly up the trail, Mel kept picking up rocks and explaining how they formed and where as indicated by the size and types of crystals in the rocks. When we reached the Long Pond overlook, we spent an hour or so discussing the past 200 million years of geological history and how the lakes and current landscape were formed. The group included a couple of geological “ringers” including an emeritus professor and many probing questions were asked. I think everyone learned a great deal and the perfect hiking weather made for a really enjoyable experience.

The next day, I and about 8 others joined BRCA volunteers, Warren Balgooyen and Jodie Mosher-Towle, on an interpretive nature hike on French Mountain. We talked about various plants, animals, and ecological communities along the trail. We talked about how various pioneering and successional plants turned the barren rock and sterile lakes left after the last ice age into the vibrant, diverse landscape we enjoy today. We watched the turkey vultures soaring just over our heads and even got to nibble a few edible plants including wintergreen, Indian cucumber, raspberries, and blueberries. Again, everyone was enthusiastic about how much they learned on the hike and many questions were answered.

Meanwhile, back on Long Pond Dick Greenan and his grandkids fished from the dock and caught fish from the dock in the morning and had a great time hiking French Mountain in the afternoon.

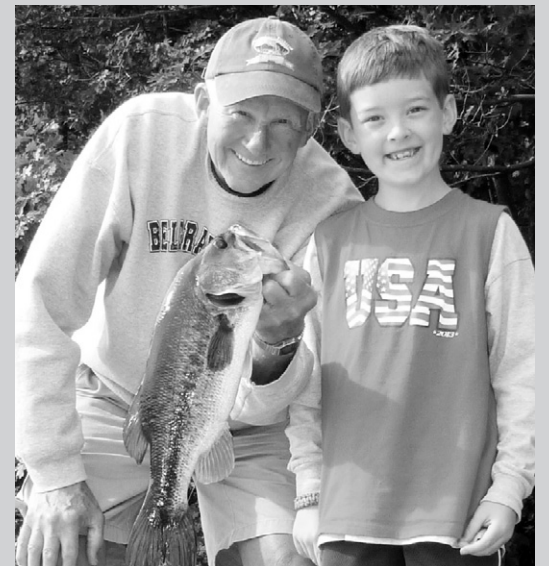

I encourage everyone to get out on one of the nearby hiking trails or paddle one of our lakes. On Saturday July 26th Robyn LeGrand will be leading a paddling expedition on upper Long Pond. Canoes and kayaks welcome. Bring the whole family. Call the BRCA at 495-6039 to register.

Mid-Maine's Largest Festival Revisits Its Roots

Taste on Main Street

The Taste of Waterville will revisit its roots on Wednesday, August 6th, when it returns a portion of the annual event to its original format again this August.

Mid-Maine Chamber of Commerce, which coordinates the Taste of Waterville, announced Monday that tickets are now available for the portion of the event that organizers are calling "the Sit-Down," referring to the four course elegant dining option planned for its attendees.

Heritage House Restaurant of Skowhegan and T&B's Celebration Centers of Waterville and Skowhegan are currently confirmed to participate. Their featured menus for the evening of the Taste, along with ticket information, are available at www.tasteofwaterville.com.

The Taste has been held in downtown Waterville each year since its inception in 1992. In its early years, tables lined Main Street and participating restaurants served full evening meals to ticket holders. In recent years, the Taste has grown into mid-Maine's largest outdoor festival, becoming a day-long family event which features a variety of entertainers and vendors with free admission.

The decision to add the more formal character of the Taste's early years back into the event was made last year by the Mid-Maine Chamber's committee responsible for planning the Taste, which is headed up again this year by downtown business owner Jeff Corey of Day's Jewelers. Corey helped launch the event in 1992.

"The Taste will be the best of both worlds once again," Corey said. "By adding a third food venue to the event again this year, we are planning an event that truly has something for everyone."

Christian Savage of the Mid-Maine Chamber said the organization's goal in organizing the Taste is to highlight the area and its businesses.

"Each year, the Taste brings throngs of locals and tourists alike to downtown Waterville," Savage said. "We want to showcase our area, along with its businesses and organizations, and this event is one way the Chamber is able to do so on such a large scale."

This year's Taste will also feature headlining band The School Street Band in the Beer Garden, which is free to enter for adults 21 years and older, and a wide variety of other entertainment scheduled throughout the day. Children's activities and non-food vendors broaden the event's family appeal.

The Sit-Down will be the only part of the Taste requiring a ticket, which must be purchased in advance at participating restaurants or by contacting Mid-Maine Chamber of Commerce. ### Emphasis On Enjoyment for Piano Students

When Dianne Gorman (Mrs. G.) teaches piano, enjoyment for her students is her goal for all ages, from Kindergarten right up to Senior Citizens.

Mrs. G. started as an itinerant instructor going from home to home in 1992. After finding the right piano, she began offering lessons in her home in North Whitefield. Students came from Gardiner, Dresden, Whitefield, Pittston and Augusta. Today, "Mrs. G" teaches piano from her cottage on the lovely Belgrade Stream and her students come from many surrounding towns.

Part of Mrs. G.'s teaching program are the formal piano recitals that she organizes for special occasions. For years, every Father's Day she held a large recital which was open to the public. Likewise, in February a Patriotic Piano Concert was held at the Veterans Home in Augusta. At Christmastime, carols were played at various nursing homes. Recitals have also been held at the Blaine House in Augusta, at Kent's Hill and in some of the students' homes.

Although Mrs. G. teaches all levels, she likes to specialize in beginners and young children, employing teaching skills learned as a Kindergarten teacher in an earlier career. A number of these beginners are adults who have had learning to play the piano on their "Bucket List!"

Corey Perne and Mrs. G.

Others are adults who have regretted ending lessons too soon and have decided to take a refresher course just for fun.

Whatever the ages or reasons, Mrs. G. offers a fun-filled lesson in which students leave with a smile on their face, a song in their heart, and a real readiness to return the next week.

New students are being accepted at this time and anyone interested is encouraged to contact Mrs. G. at 495-3222 or at gorman3366@roadrunner.com or on her Business Facebook Page.
