Tavern House and Farm on Lease

for one or more years.

TO be let and entered upon immediately, that noted Tavern stand in Robbinston, near the old Mills, consisting of a convenient House, Barn, &c. and from five to fifty acres of land. For several years past improved for that purpose by Mr. John Bracket, who has removed one mile to a larger new house built by himself the last year. It is believed not to be a better situation but because the increase of business required more accommodation. The peculiar advantages of this situation, and the success of the late occupant will naturally attract the attention of any person disposed to engage in the employment of an Inn-keeper and Trader. Necessary repairs will be made. For terms apply to Col. BENJ. KING, Eastport, or Col. THOMAS VONZ, Jr. Robbinston.

BILIOUS PILLS

OR DEOBSTRUENT PHYSIC

FOR the time these Pills have been offered to the public the sale of them has exceeded the most sanguine expectations of the proprietor, which may be fairly considered an acknowledgment of their many virtues.

They are very justly esteemed for their mild and safe operation as a cathartic in all cases where one is necessary—they are a safe and sovereign remedy in all bilious fevers, pains in the head, stomach and bowels, indigestion, loss of appetite, dizziness, worms and bilious cholera—they are likewise an antidote against infectious diseases, removing obstructions of every kind by dissolving and discharging the morbid matter, helping digestion, restoring a lost appetite—a sure relief for costive habits. They are so accommodated to all seasons and hours, that they may be taken in summer or winter, at any time of the day, without regard to diet or hindrance of business. Their operation is so gentle and effectual, that by experience they are found to excel any other physic heretofore offered to the public.

It will be proper here to notice, those only are genuine which are covered with a check-plate, with the design of the Good Samaritan, and the agent's name thereon.

Colombians to 82 guns and 478 men.—The loss is reported to be 161 killed and 21 wounded on the part of the Colombians, and 83 killed and 49 wounded on the part of the Spaniards. It is also said that Com. Daniels was killed.—We anxiously wait further intelligence on this interesting subject.—N. Y. pap.

Latest from Europe.

London advices to the 22d April, and from the Seat of War to the 17th have been received via New-York.—According to the accounts, the French army had taken, beside Vitoria and Bilboa, the post of Guiliana; and were in full march. But a division sent against St. Sebastian (so renowned for its vigorous defence in the peninsula war) had been opposed by the garrison, and repulsed, with the loss of 500 or 600 killed and wounded according to some accounts, but according to the French official reports, of about 20 only; and that the army had marched on, leaving the division to invest it. The column also, which was advancing through Navarre, had found a hostile garrison in Pampeluna, which was also invested.—Reports state, that the French met with another repulse here, but we have not seen any particulars of it; and it appeared certain, that the main body of the column had passed the place on its march to Tedula. The passage of the Western Pyrenees had been effected without loss; and the French accounts added, that their army was cordially received by the Spanish people, and by the Clergy with benedictions. We have yet to learn the Spanish accounts of these events. The last advices stated, that their army was to halt on the left bank of the Ebro, until the army of the Eastern Pyrenees, and of Reserve, under Marshal Moncey, and the heavy trains of artillery, should have passed the mountains, and have arrived in line; that they would commence their march about the 21st April; and that the whole army would probably not pass the Ebro until the first of May. Things remained very tranquil in France; and there were no signs of any defection in the army.

We have but few accounts from Spain; but those, as usual, continued to give accounts of brilliant successes of the Constitutional troops over the royalists bands, in various provinces. The preparations for defence were said to be unabated.

Of Portugal.—The insurrection of the Count d'AMARANTHE, in the northern provinces of Portugal, had, according to accounts, received a signal defeat at Anarante. Its leader had fled towards Spain, and was closely pursued. The French Government had officially announced, that it had no designs against Portugal; and expressed its regret at the unnecessary departure of the Portuguese Minister from Paris.

It is still thought, that in no event will Great Britain be driven from the neutral stand she has taken.—Centinel.

ENGLAND.

In the British Parliament, April 14, the promised statements were made relative to the diplomatic proceedings with the Foreign Powers. After giving a history of the negotiations, and the unavailing attempts to preserve peace, Mr. Canning communicated a copy of his last despatch to be communicated to the French government. This despatch states—

That England does not expect France to establish a military occupation of Spain, nor to force the King to any measures derogatory to his crown, or to his existing relations with other Powers.

That she expects the dominions of Portugal will be respected.

That she expects no attempt will be made by France to bring under her dominion, any of the American Provinces which have thrown off their allegiance to Spain.

That a frank explanation upon these points was necessary, in order that England might maintain a strict neutrality.

Mr. Canning then stated, that assurances had been received that no intention had existed in France of attacking Portugal.

He further stated, that no hope had ever been held out to Spain, that England would pursue any other course than a strict neutrality, which she was still resolved upon.—He concluded by expressing a hope that Spain would come off triumphant.

London, April 21.—Extract of a letter from Paris, dated Saturday evening.—"The French frigate La Guerriere has been taken almost in sight of Brest, by two armed vessels bearing Spanish colors, one of which was a brig carrying 15 or 20 guns. The frigate was peppered in high style. You may rely upon the truth of this."

The Duke d'Angouleme is said to have made a narrow escape from death before St. Sebastian.

The French Government, it is stated, acting on the principle that France is not at war with the Spanish sovereign and nation, but only with a faction, will not grant any letters of marque, nor permit any privateers to be fitted out.

The French Police at Paris had seized all walking sticks containing swords, daggers, &c. and forbid the sale of them.

All the Constitutional Spaniards in France are ordered to leave the Kingdom.

A private letter states, that Sir Charles Stuart the British Minister at Paris, has had high words with Monsieur Chateaubriand, and it was rumored that the English minister had demanded his passports.

The French troops, on entering Spain, took with them nine days provision: each soldier carried his own share, and the troops loudly complained of this burden.

Flying columns of guerrillas move about between the Pyrenees and the Ebro. They hover round the French, harass them and drive them nothing to eat.

It is stated by a respectable gentleman from Cadiz that the most determined spirit prevailed and the most rancorous hostility towards the French name and nation. Not the most distant idea was harboured of submission—all ranks united in the most determined resolution to resist to the last extremity. The Contrabandistas or smugglers amounting to 50,000 men, all well mounted and armed, are as unanimous as the rest; they are men of great courage and intrepidity. —Bont. Ga.

SPEC OF PERSONAL WAR.

A personal altercation occurred in the House of Commons on the 17th, between Mr. Canning and Mr. Brugham, the Catholic Question being under discussion. In the course of debate, Mr. B. accused the former of 'monstrous truckling for the purpose of obtaining office.' To which Mr. C. replied, 'I rise to say that that is false.' Mr. C. was called on by the Speaker to retract his remarks, but he declared that no earthly consideration would induce him to retract the sentiment. The House and the Chancellor of the Exchequer were also appealed to by the Speaker, who both decided that he ought to recall his observation. After some further discussion, Mr. Bankes moved that they be taken into custody by the Sergeant at Arms, and held until the House could be satisfied that no other steps would be taken by them on account of what had passed. After further debate, Sir R. Wilson observed, that Mr. B's remarks were not intended as personal, but originated in a political feeling. Mr. Canning expressed himself satisfied with the explanation, and Mr. Bankes withdrew his motion. The question was then called for, and after several divisions took place, and a motion for adjourning the debate was lost—it was disposed of by a motion for adjourning being carried by a majority of 202.—ib.

Defeat of the Army of the Faith in Valencia.

MADRID, April 4. [Official article].—The following despatch has just been received from the Political Chief of Valencia:—

Valencia, April 2, 1823.

'Amidst the shouts of joy which resound from every quarter of the city. I have the satisfaction to announce to your Excellency, that we may now consider ourselves as entirely freed from the faction by which we were threatened. The gallant Colonel D. Antonio Bazan, while on his march from Castellon to Valencia, encountered between Murviedro and Almenara the rebels assembled to the number of 5000 men, with three pieces of artillery, and ranged in order of battle, with the avowed intention of disputing the passage. The Colonel had only 1000 men under his command, but all of tried valor. In less than ten minutes he gained a complete victory—a victory, perhaps unparalleled in the course of the eventful struggle which Spain is now making for the defence of her liberties. The result of this memorable day has been 800 of the enemy's force killed, and 200 taken prisoners, with 1000 muskets, and eight ammunition wagons. But perhaps the greatest advantage which we shall derive from this victory, is, that the remnants of the faction are struck with panic and dispersed in all directions.

This affair took place at nine in the morning, and at eight this evening this victorious column arrived here, and assembled around the stone of the Constitution, where it raised its songs of triumph.

(Signed) J. ABASCAL.

Madrid, April 5.—This place continues tranquil, but many families are repairing to Seville and Andalusia. The latest account from the King mentions his arrival at Anadof, where he was well received.

[By the Albert. Capt. SHACKFORD, from Boston, we received the Boston Daily Advertiser of the 27th. It furnishes nothing from Europe in addition to that received from New-York.

A London paper states, that the Countess of Lopera (Ex-Queen of Naples,) had applied to the Court of Vienna for permission of her two sons to go to America to their uncle, Joseph Bonaparte, which was granted her, on condition that they never return to the Austrian dominions.

Piratical Movements.—An intelligent passenger in the Catharine informs us, that a few days before he sailed, a schooner of 18 guns, and 150 men was ready to sail from Havana on a cruise. She was obviously intended as a respectable pirate. At the Regala, some scoundrels even boasted that as Com. Porter would be looking out for them, and probably hang them at the yard arm, they would not spare any American who fell into their hands.

Charleston Gazette.

Late Paris papers received at the National Gazette office, announce that the American novels, The Spy, and The Pioneers, have both been translated into French and published in Paris. "Mr. Cooper," says the Journal des Debats, "to whom we owe these two productions, is an American; it appears that, like Walter Scott, he employs the form of the novel, to exhibit the manners and situation of his country at different epochs. The success of The Spy, make us anticipate with confidence that of The Pioneers.

Elias Thomas, of Portland, has been nominated by the Governor, Commissioner of the Treasury, in the room of Joseph C. Boyd, Esq.

AN EDITOR PROMOTED.

The Editor of the Schoharie Republican, thus announces an event which may prove the commencement of a long and brilliant military career. Napoleon Bonaparte was once a corporal.

"Captain John Littabrant, of the Militia has appointed Lemuel Cathbert, Editor of this paper, as one of his corporals.—Bless me! How we editors swim!" N. Y. Statesman.

An odd company.—The Isles of Shoals, situated opposite the mouth of Piscataqua river, about 9 miles from Portsmouth, (N. H.) eight in number, contain about 100 inhabitants, who live entirely on fishing. They have neither minister, teachers, schools, nor magistrates;—"they take no interest in public affairs, hold no public meetings, choose no officers, do not appeal to the laws of the state, nor acknowledge their obligation to obey them."

St. Andrews, May 27. Melancholy.—Yesterday, as a boat belonging to the Barque Marian, was sailing from hence to Digadegaush, she unfortunately upset in a squall off the Sand Reef opposite the Middle Ground. By this lamentable catastrophe four persons out of five on board, were drowned, viz: Captain McCulloch of the Marian, Mr. Hugh Rice, Mr. John Wilson, and a Sailor, whose name we have not heard.—Mr. James Finlay was fortunately rescued from a watery grave by a boat from the shore. Captain McCulloch, and Messrs. Rice & Wilson, have left large families to lament their untimely fate.

The bodies of Captain McCulloch, Hugh Rice, and the sailor, have been found this morning.

A duel was lately fought at Nashville, between John H. Lewis, Esq. attorney at law, of Huntsville, and Eldridge B. Robertson, Esq. of Giles county. The parties had for some days previous been at an active war to print—the contents of the bulletins, were as usual on such occasions. In view of the Court House, the county court in session, the belligerents met by accident it is said, and coming within ten or twelve feet of each other—the pistol of Robertson snapped and the ball of Lewis entered the side of Robertson a little above the hip, ranging downwards, wounding him, the report is, severely but not dangerously. Lewis was on the spot taken into custody by the sheriff, and has since been recognized to appear and answer to the law.

The U. S. frigate Congress Captain Biddle, sailed from Hampton Roads last Saturday morning for the Delaware.—She will there take on board Hugh Nelson, Esq. Minister to Spain, and Cesar A. Rondey, Esq. Minister to Buenos Ayres. It is understood that Mr. R.'s family will accompany him.

MARRIED, In Cooper, Mr. George W. Blake, to Miss Jane Foster.

DIED, In this town, Mr. Andrew Curry, aged 56 years. For the last two years he was afflicted with the Dropsy, which he bore with that christian fortitude and resignation seldom witnessed. He was a kind husband, tender parent, and a warm and affectionate friend. To the child of adversity his heart and house were always open. In a word he was honest and magnanimous. As he lived, so he died, a believer in the Saviour of all men, whose precepts he endeavored to follow, and has left the world an example worthy of imitation.—Communicated.

SPRING.

Translation of one of Horace's Odes—Diff-gu-rin-er, &c.

The cheerless glare of snow is past,
And rising verdure smiles around:
The spreading trees rejoice at last
With foliage crown'd.

Again the Earth renews her youth,
More sweetly shines the genial sky,
And purest streams, whose murmurs soothe,
Flow gently by.

The nymphs and graces o'er the mead,
Can venture now in light attire,
To join the frile dance, or lead
The warbling choir.

Yet joys immortal are not here:
'Tis but the season's transient bloom,
We too shall fade; the changeful year
Forbodes our doom.

Now yields the cold to zephyrs reign;
The lovely Spring will also fly,
And Summer burn the russet plain,
But soon to die.

When Autumn, to poor mortals kind,
Strews with his annual fruits the grounds;
When dreary Winter, close behind,
Completes the round.

Yet still the circling moons pursue
The rapid course which late they ran,
The youth of nature to renew:
But hapless man!

When we shall lie, as soon we must,
Where all the good and great are laid,
Our glory turns to mould'ring dust,
And empty shade.

Who knows how soon the gods decree,
To close the joys that now invite?
To-day is ours; but shall we see
To-morrow's light?

Spring.—"Of all the seasons, Spring is the most delightful. Nature is, as it were, then beginning to receive existence. The howling storms of desolate winter are gone and forgotten! The mild serenity of the morning, the gradual advances of vegetation, and the changing appearance of the whole face of things, accompanied by the harmonious confusion of the singing of birds heard on every side, convey to the transported imagination, a pleasure which the mind can scarcely conceive. Not only birds and animals, but even inanimate creation, seem to rejoice in something like that universal joy expressed on the appearance of the first spring, when 'the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy.' The music of the groves—the roaring of the tempest—the striking colors of the living landscape—the immense circle of heaven—the boundless extent of ocean—comprehend all that is great, sublime, glorious or magnificent; and sink into the soul with irresistible power."

An Exception.—The common style in which a husband addresses his wife, is, that she has left his bed and board, &c.; but one in a Chilliote paper states a much stronger ground of complaint—that his wife has absconded, and taken his best bed away!

An Irishman being in a march at the head of a company, a dog ran at him with open mouth to make a snap; the Irishman having a fixed bayonet, ran it down his throat, and killed him. The owner coming up, made a great cry at his dog being killed, and demanded of the Irishman why he could not as well have struck him with the butt end of his musket? "So I would," he answered, if he had run as me with his tail-end foremost!

Female Beauty.

Napoleon, in his Memoirs, states, that while in the army of Italy, being much fascinated with a handsome lady, the wife of one of the French Deputies who accompanied him—that she might be able to form some idea of a battle, he ordered an attack on the advanced post of the enemy, although in the event of its being successful, as it was, it could in no wise prove advantageous. That the attack succeeded, but several lives were lost—and he never ceased to regret the affair. This is another proof how mischievous beauty—and all sorts of topics of consolation to those who, without its charms, cannot aspire to its power, and dwell not in its dangers.

Napoleon lived to see this lady dismantled of her beauty, and reduced to extreme indigence—who with great difficulty, and after many repulses, obtained access to his presence. He generously relieved her wants, and expressed his surprise at her friendless situation; but required not the sagacity of Napoleon to know, that power decays with beauty, and obscurity involves the poor.

Charleston Courier.

Useful Invention.

A machine for removing the sick has been invented by Mr. John C. Jenkes of this town, which, where it has been in operation, is pronounced to be of great utility. A person confined to his bed, may by this machine be raised with perfect ease to himself and with little effort or labor on the part of the attendants, to such a height and for such a time, to give an opportunity for making the bed and for changing the linen; and in warm weather the patient may be raised and kept at a distance from the bed. The motion is so regular and easy, that it is stated a person asleep may be raised without being awakened. A committee of the Association of Mechanics and Manufacturers of this town, having examined the machine, made a favorable report respecting it; and by the recommendation of that committee, the Association have ordered one to be procured for the use of the members.

It owes its origin to the confinement of the inventor by a fractured limb, during which he taxed his ingenuity to obtain some relief from the excruciating pain which he suffered when removed in the ordinary manner, and produced this machine, which is admirably calculated to alleviate the distresses of a sick bed, and to diminish the burthen of the attendant.—Providence Paper.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser, 1817. A SHORT ESSAY ON "DINING OUT."

On which side is the obligation?—Is the favor done to him, who accepts the invitation, or to him who gives it?

If the dinner is good, the company well assorted, and the lady of the house, and her husband, happen to be in good humor, have good sense enough to make themselves a part of the company, and to appear as unconcerned as their guests, dining out is a very pretty operation;—provided, a man happens to be free from dyspepsia, and has philosophy or benevolence, or politeness enough, to take with him only such of his qualities, as will permit those around him to be agreeable—to themselves.

In such a case the obligation is mutual. The host has the honour and satisfaction of showing a good front in his domestic structure;—and of making some of his fellow-men as happy as may be, from social intercourse, and lays a foundation for some good dinners abroad, provided, the dinner he gives, was not in payment of former debts.

It is not to be denied that dining-out is sometimes a painful operation. When the gentleman or lady, disclose by their words, looks, blushes, colorings, confusion, whispers to the servants, or outright scoldings, that matters are not going on fashionably;—and when, to relieve their own embarrassment, they embarrass all the company by fixing attention on that which they, themselves, should seem to see,—and, to show how much better bred, and instructed they are, than what is passing might seem to indicate, they tell their friends, what a miserable cook they happen to have, and how new and raw their servants are, and how much better, and prettier, things should be, than they appear to be.—Dining out, is not the most agreeable thing in the world; and the guests feel that it is hard work of mind and body, to be genteel; unless they are malicious enough to enjoy the confusion, and to be pleased at having a good story to carry home.

The whole business of practical philosophy, as to the animal of man, is to feed him, and keep him warm. Chemistry—botany—in short the whole circle of art and science is directed to these objects. But what a prodigious difference is there between that sort of feeding, and warming, which is simply enough, and that which superfluous wealth and educated luxury, have made necessary!

When a man is invited to dine out (which is a very different matter from going to take pot luck) he should think seriously of the proposition. He should bear in mind how many of the best efforts of skill and industry are to be put in action for his accommodation: If he accepts, he ought to go, at all events. He should remember, that—the children are to be distributed among their relations, or shut up in some remote apartment, so that the increased noise, and crying, from confinement, may be suspected to proceed from neighbouring families.—The fore-stallers in the market are all to be engaged, and indirectly bribed, three days, at least, before hand. Servants, who have diplomas in the science of "putting on," and "taking off," must promise on their honour, to attend. The consultations, the borrowings, hirings, using, wasting, fretting, scolding, waxing, heating, cooling, it would be highly indecorous to describe.

But Oh! misery! misery!—An hour before the fruition of these delightful tails, after every thing is actually in the pots, the pans, before the fire, and in the oven, one third, or one half, of the expected word, without the least regard to natural justice, or to the effect of promises and obligations, (according to Dr. Paley's approved theory) that they cannot come!—The table is laid; the culinary processes founded on a genteel, and scientific scale of ordinances, and suitabilities, must go on. The absence of a part would mar the beauty of the whole! and yet such a table and so much dinner, for so small a company!—It is too late to ask any body else!—The scene is too painful for human sensibility!—I have tried, Mr. Hale, to recollect something in Greek, Latin, French, or even English, in the nature of a quotation, to express my feelings; but nothing occurs to me; and as I am going to dine out, I have no time to look over the poets.

As "dining out" seems to be the principal business of this life; the object for which we toil; the great theatre, on which we hope our children will advantageously shew the accomplishments and excellencies of their persons and intellect, permit me to suggest some rules as ancient as the suppers of Lucullus; and which were undoubtedly known to the Roman Emperor, who died of eating lampreys.

1. From the moment one is invited to dine he should decide whether he will go or not;—he should answer immediately, and unequivocally, and should act according to his answer. It is the very excess of ill-breeding to say, I will come if I can. For the same preparation, and appropriation of time, must be made, as if the answer was affirmative. And the man who gives the invitation may lose the chance of dining out himself.

2. When the company is assembled in the drawing room, there is sometimes an awkwardness, an embarrassment, which it is very disagreeable to feel, or to see.—The object of dining out being to escape beyond the latitudes of nature as much as possible, and to be as artificial as possible, the remedy for this evil is, not to think of one's-self. Every man should let himself alone, entirely, and think only of the wishes, wants, feelings of those around him.—In short he must feel that his associates are dining out,—and not, that he is dining out.

3. At table it is very ill-bred to refuse any thing that is offered. The true fact of a dining out gentleman is to show his capacity. But he must do honour, to the rate displayed in the original selection of the articles; to the manner in which they are served; to the cordial solicitations of his host and hostess, that he would "try" this, which came through such a medium, and that which their cook is allowed to excel in.

To retire before the end of the fifth hour, is proof that the scene is new and that one is not used to dining out.—Not to grow dull, and stupid, and yawn, before the end of the fourth hour, is to shew, that one has not a good taste, and has not done honour to the occasion.

5. Not to feel, next morning, that one's head is as big as two heads, is an admission that one has not eaten two dinners, at once, as every well-bred man, who dines out, is presumed to do. Not to feel, over the surface of the skin, as though one had wrapped, and rolled, in cobwebs, is to shew, that one is so vulgar, or silly, as to permit fine liquors to pass him unenjoyed.

6. Every gentleman who follows the business of "dining out" should form a close connexion with a good physician, who will study the constitution, and find his account in keeping the gentleman on his legs, as long as possible. Speedy and skilful remedies, upon a subject naturally sound, and well constituted and well understood, by practice, have been known to baffle the Chronics a surprising length of time; and to wrest from the gripe of the acute, and restore to the dinner table, again, and again.

In fine, what character among men is superior to that of the gentleman who dines out?

He is the friend and patron of the arts and sciences.—All human industry, in all corners of the earth, look to him for benefit and reward. The happiest efforts of genius would perish unregarded, but for him.

Not satisfied with being actively useful while alive, he dies, to promote the progress of learning, and makes his case richly tributary to the annals of experimental research.

IMPRISONMENT FOR DEBT.

Extract from the Message of Gov. Robertson to the Legislature of Louisiana, at the commencement of its annual session.

"At the last session of the Legislature, I proposed for its consideration, the propriety of abolishing Imprisonment for Debt; or, in other words, of rescuing the individuals of society from the meanest of all slavery, and the most humiliating of all tyranny, that of confinement in a jail by one of themselves. It is the boast of the institutions of America, to have secured the liberty of man against public oppression—whilst they have left it the victim of individual tyranny. The State, the United States, cannot conduct even criminals to a prison, without a public trial before learned Judges and impartial juries, whilst a creditor, by means of an oath, in the first instance, and subsequently, by the fiat of a single obscure justice of the peace, may lodge by the side of the convict, in the same mansion of vice and misery, an unfortunate and less favored debtor. Barrier after barrier is erected between the murderer and his cell, whilst the way is clear from obstructions, and the doors of the dungeon stand open wide for the reception of the debtor. But it would seem that the injustice and inhumanity of the practice, are objections, not sufficiently strong, to produce its abolition; will it be yielded up if it be shewn to be contrary to the Constitution? Is it not a violation of contract? Does it not add an engagement to that agreed on by the parties?—The promise is to pay money simply—the law adds, or renders the body to prison.

"It may be, as it has been said, that the laws are known, that they are in the contemplation of the parties, that their provisions form a part of the agreement. But this to the extent of the proposition as stated, is a fallacy; the parties contract with a view to none but constitutional laws. Laws, violating a contract, are unconstitutional, and any change, whatever, of the express agreement between the parties, is a violation of the instrument, and consequently void. What would be the effect of an agreement on the part of an individual, to undergo imprisonment for a certain time, in discharge of a debt? Would the courts enforce it? It is believed that they could not—because the right of liberty is inalienable—because the person is secured against unreasonable seizures—because cruel punishment cannot be inflicted. But if imprisonment be not found in the contract, or, if found, he nugatory, can it be superadded by the laws, and considered binding on the parties? although all these principles are violated, as well as the sacredness of the contract itself."

Dandelions.—A medical writer in the National Intelligencer remarks:

Dandelions have always been considered peculiarly useful in visceral obstructions, particularly those of the liver, when eaten either as greens, salad, or taken in ptisans. They seem calculated from their stimulant diastrenst powers, to promote bilious discharges, and, from long experience, have been found highly efficacious in all biliary infractions of the liver. They are also good to keep the body open, and are diuretic and attenuant. In the dropsy, the dandelion has been known for ages to be of great utility. The ancients, says Willich, were better acquainted with the properties of this excellent vegetable, than those modern practitioners who appear to be more anxious to introduce exotics, imported from distant countries, than to ascertain the qualities of those numerous medical plants which grow in our own climate.

I advise all who are troubled with bile, flatulencies, fullness of blood, and who are fearful of dropsy, vertigo, &c. to make free use of this precious gift of nature, the Dandelion.

PROGNOSTICS.

The London Courier of the 10th March repeats the following old incident. "About the commencement of the American War, it was found necessary in fitting a new bowsprit into the Atlas, first rate, ship to cut away a part of the Globe borne by her figure-head of Old Atlas.—It happened the portion of the Globe removed, was the greater part of North-America, and that the operating carpenter was an American!"

We well recollect hearing of this incident at the time, and of the impression it made in America. It brought to recollection another incident more characteristic and extraordinary, and well established in history. When George the third of England, was crowned in 1762, the Crown used on the occasion had been laid up useless during the long reign of his predecessor, and the jeweller, in repairing it, seems, had omitted to inspect one of the large diamonds which formed one of the highest points of the crest.—And when the Great Officer of State took the Crown from the table to place it on the head of the King, this diamond being loose, fell to the floor, and though immediately replaced, it was stated, that many, and among them the King, considered it ominous of some great national loss.—This incident was remembered, and in 1783, on the acknowledgment of American Independence by the King, an article appeared in the London prints to the following effect, which, as we quote from memory, may not be wholly exact.

TO THE KING.

A serious omen of an early date, Which threatened a convulsion in the State: When on thy head they plac'd the Imperial Crown, Then the most precious diamond tumbled down; Now it is verified, events must tell, The jewel was America that fell.—CENTINEL.

ALLENTOWN.—The site for the town on Thompson's Island was on the 6th ult. named "Allentown," in honor of the late Lieut. Com'd Win. H. Allen, who fell in a gallant attack on the Pirates off Key Yacas. The American flag was hoisted, and a national salute fired on the occasion. Lt. H. represents the situation of the island as very salubrious, the scenery as uncommonly beautiful, the soil rich and capable of producing all kinds of vegetables in abundance. The squadron was, however entirely dependent on its own resources for provisions of every kind, as the circumjacent country did not yield any supplies of the animal or vegetable kind, and until it shall be peopled and settled by some industrious farmers, the residents, as well as the squadron, must rely much on traders from the U. States, for such articles of fresh provisions and luxury as they may stand in need of. A few cargoes of this description will command a good market, as soon as the stock of the squadron, which is small, shall be exhausted. There is much lime stone in the island, but the water at Allentown is not good. The supply for the squadron was obtained from two miles distant, but even that was not of the best quality. Com. Porter had it in contemplation to sink wells at Key Yacas, where the water was said to be remarkably fine.

The Navy Hospital carried out from here (in frame) was to be immediately erected at the principal watering place, two miles from Allentown, which is stated to be a very healthy position, accessible to the pure sea breezes from every point. It was to be under the orders of Surgeon Williamson. A hotel was also to be established by one of the proprietors of the island. Norfolk Beacon.

Antwerp Claims.—Information has been received (says the N. York Advocate) from Mr. Gallatin, our minister at Paris, stating that claims of American merchants for property seized in the port of Antwerp, under a decree of the late emperor Napoleon, will be liquidated by the present government of France.

Eastern Lands.—Seventeen townships and two or three smaller tracts of land, situated in Maine, on the Penobscot river, north, and north easterly from Bangor, being a part of the land assigned to this commonwealth in a late partition with the State of Maine, were yesterday sold by auction, at Merchants' Hall, in this town. The quantity sold was 381,035 acres. The prices given varied from 5 1-2 to 25 cents per acre. The amount of the sales is $13,000, being an average of 11 1-3 cts. per acre. A further sale is advertised to take place sometime in the approaching summer, or autumn. Post. D. Adv.
