GENERAL NEWS.

What was left of the business portion of Fort Hill, Ont., after the fire three weeks ago, burned last night.

Burlington engineers, firemen and switchmen have voted to continue the strike by a large majority.

Rev. Lyman Abbott, D. D., was elected permanent pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, last night, by a vote of 400 to 60.

Winnebago Indians in Wisconsin have suffered great hardships during the winter. They were forced to sell their ponies and are now at the point of starvation.

Frank Mills, a sub-freshman at Harvard, died last night from excessive opium smoking. Two of his companions are seriously ill from the same cause.

Students of Princeton, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Harvard universities formed an inter-collegiate chess association last night.

A despatch from Scranton, Mass., says that the schooner Lizzie S. James of Philadelphia, was struck by lightening Thursday, instantly killing the captain and injuring the crew of five men.

Cornell University is to have a department of journalism. Professor Brainard Smith will give a series of lectures on the condition of newspaper work today in the great cities, and classes will be organized very much like the city staff of a large newspaper.

The managers of the Western and Northwestern railroads met in Chicago yesterday and unanimously adopted an agreement for the conduct of competitive business taking effect on May 11. The new agreement provides for monthly meetings of the roads. No rates within the territory of the association can be changed unless notice has been made five days previous to the regular meeting.

There was an exciting scene on a crowded ferryboat in New York Thursday. A new team of horses worth $3,000, belonging to the Long Island Express company was on the forward part of the boat. The horses took fright and dashed forward, tearing away the iron gates and, with the heavy load behind them plunged overboard. One horse managed to kick loose and arose to the surface. He was caught by a man in a row boat and was saved. The other horse and wagon are still at the bottom of the river.

A few weeks ago a man of mysterious manner came to Green county, Georgia, called himself the "Holy one" and claimed to possess a divine nature. He promised to free the negroes from the bondage of false religion and worked on their superstitions to such an extent as to induce a dozen families to sell all they possessed and put their money into his hands. At the night appointed for the start the man did not appear and it was learned that he had skipped. The negroes pursued him, caught him, hanged him to a tree, and lashed him until they believed him dead. Then they left him. He was found later and cared for by white people, but he cannot recover. He is a white man but he stained his face and hands to pass for a negro.

Sons and Daughters of Maine.

ABINGTON, Mass., May 25.—A reunion of sons and daughters of Maine of the towns of Abington, Whitman, Rockland and North Abington was held here tonight. Nearly 1000 people were present. Ex-Gov. Chamberlain responded to the toast "The State of Maine." Hon. Llewellyn Powers, of Maine, responded to the toast "Maine in Congress."

THE GREAT BARROA MURDER CASE

To Be a Notable Event in the History of Maine Courts.

Thirty-Seven Witnesses to be Examined by the Defence.

Business of the Middle District Law Court.

[Special to the Press.]

AUGUSTA, May 25.—The hearing before the law court in Bangor, in July, on the motion for a new trial for Stain and Cromwell, will be one of the most interesting events of the kind which ever occurred in the State. It will assume a magnitude greater than that of ordinary criminal trials in capital cases. The defence alone will examine thirty-seven witnesses, sixteen of whom will come from Massachusetts, besides introducing a large amount of written testimony. Should the government have many witnesses the hearing is likely to be extended a week or more. The defence will be allowed to amass testimony until June 5th, after which the government will be given until the third Tuesday in June to present their evidence; and to close the case Messrs. Barker and Gillin, counsel for the prisoners, are to be allowed two weeks in which to introduce in rebuttal. The counsel for the defence are quite positive that they have sufficient evidence to secure a new trial. From evidence recently obtained it is believed that the man who wrote the letter which young Stain received at Carney's has been found, and he had no connection with the "Stain gang" either.

Law Court Business.

The Law Court of the Middle District, which has been in session here, finished all its business today, except the hearing on the Mike Burns imported liquor case, and the judges adjourned to meet in Augusta next Tuesday, when the arguments of the counsel in the case will be heard. The following cases have been argued thus far:

SOMERSET COUNTY CASES.

Edward Merrill & al. v. Philena Wyman. Merrill and Coffin for the plaintiffs; Walton & W.

Samuel Suckling v. Selden Cleveland. Walton & W.; Merrill & C.

James Wright v. E. F. Fairbrother. Wright; Walton & W.

John A. Fletcher v. Daniel H. Record. Augustus Simons; A. H. Ware.

Joseph Pomroy v. Jefferson, apl. Wright; Walton & W.

LINCOLN COUNTY.

Lucy A. Comery v. Albert E. Howard & al. Robinson & Rowell; Gould.

SAGADAHOC COUNTY.

State v. Geo. W. Hall. Baker; Gilbert.

KNOX COUNTY.

Samuel Counce, in equity, vs. John R. Studley. Gould; Littlefield.

Mary A. Ulmer & als. vs. James R. Farnsworth. O. G. Hall; Robinson & Rowell.

Joshua B. Allen, appellant, vs. Joel E. Smith, administrator. Littlefield; Gould.

Free-will W. Steele vs. Town of Thomaston. Littlefield; Gould.

Andrew Pressey vs. Geo. L. Snow. Gould; Robinson & Rowell.

Same vs. Lucy A. Snow. Gould; Robinson & Rowell.

State vs. Andrew J. Small. Rebinson & Rowell for defendant.

In the following liquor cases which went up on demurrers, exceptions have been overruled and the parties will come up for sentence next September:

State vs. Joseph Foye; three indictments; John Leighton, three indictments; George Laundry, four indictments; Marshall Hayes, two indictments; Rose Lalicterne, same; Mary C. LaFontain, three indictments; Eleazor Lessor, two indictments; L. J. Cote, Mary Lessor, Almond Bowman, three indictments; Richard Connors, Silas P. Lynch, Devine Rouchie, two indictments; L. D. Cooke, Fred Noyes, F. A. Gilman, Greenwood Stevens, two indictments; A. D. Bowman, same; Chas. Tibbetts, same; L. D. Cooke appealed.

SENATOR HALE'S COMMITTEE

Finds a Large New York Family Filling Good Berths.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The investigation of the custom house was begun here yesterday morning, with only Senators Spooner and Blackburn in attendance, Senator Hale being sick with rheumatism. The first witness was J. O. Conway, an assistant weigher who entered the service in 1886 under a civil service examination, and claimed that he was discharged without cause. He had always been a Democrat. No reason, he said, was ever given to him for his discharge. He tried to see the collector, but the latter would not see him, and referred him to the surveyor. From Mr. Rafferty, in the surveyor's office, he learned that there was no charge against him in that office, but there was a charge in Brooklyn. Mr. Fallon, who was superintendent of assistant weighers and laborers, asked him with an oath what business it was of his what he was dismissed for.

Herman Davis, a brother of Judge Noah Davis, testified: He was past 67 years of age. In 1863 he was appointed in the customs service as the voice clerk in the naval office. He was a Republican. Last July he was removed. He did not know the cause of his removal. The roundsmen among the inspectors, the witness said, went around and looked after the inspectors to see that they were on duty, that their uniforms were all right, etc. A roundsman named Penfield had reproved him for having off his uniform buttons seven minutes before the end of the day's duty. The next day, when he asked Penfield why he did not rebuke a new man on duty who was not in uniform at all, Penfield replied, "He isn't the kind we are hunting for."

An official that will receive special attention at the hands of the committee is Deputy Collector "Charley" Davis, of the Marine Division. The treasury regulations declare that "whenever there are two or more members of a family in the service covered by the Civil Service Act, no other member of such family shall be eligible to appintment to any of said grades." Davis draws $3,000 a year himself. His son, as a clerk in the Civil Service Board, receives $1,200. A brother-in-law, one Plough, is a clerk in the Marine Division at $1,400 a year. Another brother-in-law, Capt. Johnson, gets $1,200 as a night watchman. A cousin by the name of Bishop is on the rolls as a clerk in the Storekeeper's Department at $1,200 a year, and Division Inspector Hubert's relationship to Davis is distant but near enough to enable him to draw $1,400 annually. In all it is said that the Davis crowd gets a good deal more than $10,000 out of the service.

ANCIENT AND HONORABLES.

The Boston Company's Visit from the English Organization.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Eighteen members of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of London arrived on the steamer Trave this afternoon. A reception committee from the Boston company of the same name chartered a tug and went down the bay to meet the steamer. The visitors started for Niagara on the late afternoon train. On Sunday they will go to Washington and will be received by the President and Minister West. Thursday they will visit Gettysburg, and Friday return to this city and meet the Boston company, with the Old Guard of this city, and all three companies will start for Boston.

The Boston company was organized June 4, 1638. It is the offspring, and the only one, of the Honorable Artillery Company of London, which was brought into existence in the year 1537. Last year the London company celebrated its 350th anniversary. At that time, in response to a most cordial invitation Col. Henry Walker, the present commander of the Boston company, together with Lieut. Fottier and several past commanders and privates, went to England and participated in the anniversary rejoicing of the parent company.

Monday, the 4th of June, is the great day, and will be celebrated in the Ancient and Honorable way—a way that will be then 250 years old. In the first place the officers of the company will be summoned at sunrise by the roll of drums, and at Faneuil Hall an old-fashioned New England breakfast will be served at 8 o'clock. Re-enforced by the English delegates and the Old Guard, the company will march past the State House and be reviewed by Gov. Oliver Ames of Massachusetts, and as many of the governors of the 13 original States as are present. Joined then, after the review, by the governors and 200 guests, the march will be resumed, and this time the new Old South Church will be the objective point. In that church the "election sermon" will be preached by Rev. Phillips Brooks. After the sermon they will return to Faneuil Hall, where a dinner of 746 covers will be served. Among those who are expected to be present are President Cleveland, Secretaries Endicott, Whitney and Bayard, the United States Senators and Representatives of Massachusetts and Collector Saltonstall.

Mrs. Cleveland in Princeton.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 25.—Mrs. Cleveland is expected to arrive tomorrow morning and go directly to President McCosh's house. With Mrs. McCosh she will receive the faculty and college students at 11.30.

At 12.30 Prof. Marquand will give Mrs. Cleveland a lunch at his place in the outskirts. After luncheon Prof. Marquand will drive Mrs. Cleveland to Evelyn College, and thence to the University athletic grounds, where she will witness a base ball game between Yale and Princeton.

THE POLITICAL FIELD.

The Mills Bill Making Trouble for New Hampshire Democrats.

BOSTON, May 25.—The tariff issue has already begun to sow the seeds of dissension in the Democratic ranks in New Hampshire. The proof of this comes from men of the highest executive and business character. Charles A. Busiel, of Laconia, a wealthy hosiery manufacturer and a man high in the councils of the Democratic party, has stated to the Journal representative that he would not vote for the re-election of Cleveland on a platform embodying the views of the President's tariff message and of the Mills bill in Congress. Mr. Busiel is a member of the Democratic State Committee and of the Executive Committee of Ten, and has long been regarded as one of the ablest managers in his party. His brother, John T. Busiel, a lifelong Democrat and his business partner, will not only refuse to support Cleveland for re-election, but is writing and publishing articles advocating a continuance of the present laws governing the tariff on everything entering into not only woolen but common manufacturing. The defection of such men as the Busiel brothers will create a decided sensation in the Democratic party.

Gen. Gibson's Speech.

NEW ORLEANS, May 25.—Gen. Gibson, who was yesterday re-elected United States Senator, was invited to address the legislature, and did so. In the course of his remarks he said: "There never was a people, who, by the heat of a tremendous civil conflict, were so fused together as the people of the United States. It is true that here and there is to be found a man, a camp follower during the war, perhaps, or a demagogue, some man brave in bravado, some man who never wore a uniform or carried a musket, who would make you believe that the northern men were bent on humiliating the people of the South, and that they distrust and despise them. Fellow citizens, this is not true. The people of the Northern States, in my judgment, are anxious and willing to recognize the people of the South as their fellow-countrymen. I believe they are prepared to do it. This is our Union, our Constitution, and if I can do anything in my public career to bring the hearts and sympathies of the Southern people to cherish the Union and the Constitution, I would feel that my task had not been in vain. It is true that the Constitution has been changed, and that slavery has been abolished in the organic law of the land. It is true that the principles of secession have been eliminated from this structure of the Federal Constitution. I think the wisest and best thing now for the Southern people to make up their minds that they will accept in good faith the amendments to the Constitution of the United States, which we have all sworn to support."

A Hornet's Nest for Sherman.

COLUMBUS, O., May 25.—The rejection of Congressman Outhwaite's joint resolution granting national aid to the Ohio Centennial, has created great indignation in this city. The event has attracted the greatest attention all over the country, and the State at large is deeply interested in its success. A short time ago the local exhibition in Cincinnati received national recognition by an appropriation, and there was no reason to doubt that the celebration here would be liberally treated. The adverse report of the committee has awakened grave fears that the Cincinnati exhibition will be the only one favored. The Evening Dispatch, independent Republican, viciously assails Senator Sherman for his lack of interest in the matter—"If Senator Sherman is nominated at Chicago and desires to carry the State of Ohio, he will see that the Ohio Centennial Exposition is not euchred out of government aid. This demand is made on behalf of the people of Ohio for the reason that Mr. Sherman's influence and vote largely helped to to get government aid for an exhibition which is to be held at Cincinnati under the auspices of a purely corporation. The demand is made for the further reason that the State of Ohio for almost 35 years has honored Mr. Sherman as no other man within her borders."

Ohio Cold Water Men.

TOLEDO, May 25.—The Prohibition State convention today adopted a platform favoring woman suffrage and arbitration to prevent strikes, and denouncing trusts and the importation of labor. The ticket nominated was:

Secretary of State—Walter F. Payne, of Fostoria.

Board of Public Works—J. W. Penfield, of Willoughby.

Supreme Judge—John F. Moore, of Jackson.

A delegate was chosen to the National convention.

EXECUTION BY ELECTRICITY.

The Result of New York's Search for Humane Methods.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 25.—Governor Hill has before him the new bill in regard to executing sentences of death by electricity instead of hanging. He will undoubtedly sign the bill. A circular was prepared soliciting views upon the present mode of punishment, asking for observations made at hangings, and inquiring for suggestions in regard to some more humane method. The circular was widely distributed, especially among judges, district attorneys, sheriffs and physicians. About 200 replies came. Of these 80 were against a change, 87 favored electricity, 8 po ison, 5 the guillotine, 4 the garrote, and the rest for various methods. After an evidently careful consideration of all the replies and much outside inquiry and study, the commissioners decided in favor of electricity.

The bill, as passed, provides that execution must be not less than four weeks and not more than eight weeks after the sentence. The time of the execution within said week shall be left to the discretion of the warden, to whom the warrant is directed; but no previous announcement of the day or hour of the execution shall be made, except to such persons who shall be invited or permitted to be present at such execution. No account of the details of such execution, beyond the statement of the fact that such convict was, on the day in question, duly executed, according to law, at the prison, shall be published in any newspaper. Any person who shall violate this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor.

The Methodists.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Methodist Episcopal comference elected the following agents for the Book Concern: J. M. Phillips, Sandford Hunt, both of New York, Eastern agents, and Earl Cranston, of Colorado, and W. P. Staine, of Wisconsin, Western agents, at a salary of $4,000 a year.

The following resolutions were ordered placed in the discipline of 1888:

We are utterly opposed to the enactment of laws that propose, by license, taxing, or otherwise to regulate the drink traffic because they provide for its continuance and afford no protection against its ravages. We hold that the proper attitude of Christianity and the traffic is one of uncompromising opposition and while we do not presume to dictate to our people as to their political affiliations, we do express the opinion that they should not permit themselves to be controlled by a party organization managed in the interest of the liquor traffic. We advise the members of the church to aid in the enforcement of such laws as do not legalize or endorse the manufacture and sale of intoxicants to be used as a beverage and, to this end, we favor the organization of temperance leagues wherever practicable. We proclaim as our motto, unconditional total abstinance from all intoxicants as the true ground of personal temperance, and complete legal prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating drinks as the duty of civil government.

The conference then proceeded to the election of three missionary secretaries, 13 nominations being made. Before the result was made known, the convention adjourned.

The Esmonde Reception.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The attendance at the reception to Sir G. Esmonde, at the Academy of Music tonight, was very large. The boxes and platform were crowded with political leaders. Every reference to Chamberlain, Salisbury, Balfour and Churchill was loudly hissed. The names of Parnell and Gladstone were vigorously applauded. Besides Esmonde, Govs. Green of New Jersey, Lounsberry of Connecticut, Briggs of Delaware, ex-Postmaster General James, Charles A. Dana, ex-Judge Davis, and Rev. W. T. Lloyd were speakers. All declared Chamberlain greatly mistaken in saying that Americans do not favor Irish home rule.

Lowther's Companion Liberated.

NEW YORK, May 25.—Thomas Moore, the companion of Fred Lowther, who tried to liberate two New York crooks from jail at Bangor, Maine, by means of false keys, was arraigned for trial today in the general sessions court and the case dismissed from lack of evidence.

THE FISHERIES TREATY UNDER FIRE.

Senator Morgan Hints of Some Interesting Possibilities.

Its Effect Abroad: The Mills Bill Starting Welch Furnaces.

The Latest Reports of the Nature of General Sheridan's Illness.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—The Senate spent several hours again today in secret session, ostensibly discussing the motion of Senator Sherman to proceed to the consideration of the fisheries treaty with open doors, but in reality debating the merits of the treaty itself. Senator Morgan was the principal speaker, and said the colloquy between Senators Edmunds and Morgan in regard to things the President was likely to do, if the Senate does not ratify the treaty, would be read with interest if made public. No action was taken on the treaty. Though under discussion, is has not yet been formally taken up.

The Alaska Fisheries.

In reply to an inquiry by Captain Solomon Jacobs of the fishing schooner Mollie Adams of Gloucester, which is on a fishing expedition in Alaskan waters. Assistant Secretary Thompson, in the absence of Secretary Fairchild, has made the following ruling respecting the rights of American sealers in Alaskern waters:

Seals cannot be killed, except by persons authorized by statute in the Territory of Alaska or in the waters thereof ceded by Russia to the United States, nor can any one kill female seals, nor any seals less than one year old, in any locality. Vessels entering the American part of Behring Sea with seal skins on board, to be exempt from seizure, must show affirmatively that they were not taken within the limits of the territory ceded by Russia, and that they are not the skins of females or young seals. None but natives of Alaska are allowed to kill sea otter, and the use of firearms is restricted.

The Adams is the schooner which had such a checkered experience in 1886 at the hands of Canadian officials, twice being obliged to run home short of food and water, one occasion being after the rescue of the crew and material of a Canadian vessel. The Canadian authorities would not allow the Adams to land the material and nobody would take the crew off the captain's hands, Jacobs finally giving them $60, enough to pay their fare home and provisions for the trip. The Mollie Adams was driven from the Atlantic fishing grounds by these hardships and sought a new field in the Pacific.

General Sheridan's Condition.

One of General Sheridan's aides says today that the General is not so well; that, in fact, he has lost about what he gained yesterday. There has been a physician constantly in attendance since Tuesday. It is further stated by the same authority that his serious attack on Monday was due to heart failure, and there was a slight recurrence of that trouble this morning.

General Sheridan was reported as being much better in the afternoon.

BOSTON, May 25.—A Washington despatch to the Journal says: "There are alarming reports again as to the illness of Gen. Sheridan. The report is to the effect that his illness is caused by fatty degeneration of the heart, that is the cause of the alarm on Tuesday; that he improved so much that it was hoped that he would speedily recover; that he had a serious relapse last night, and that his condition is now critical. An inquiry at his house within a few minutes was answered by the statement that he is now better. When it was suggested that there is a report that he had a serious relapse the answer was, 'He is resting easier now.'" The conclusion from the best information obtainable is that Gen. Sheridan is very ill and that his family and physicians are exceedingly apprehensive.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Gen. Sheridan's condition is critical. His physicians and family tonight feel much encouraged at the improvement shown since morning. He had several bad attacks early in the day, during which he exhibited great weakness. Valvular trouble of the heart has shown itself during these weak spells and given much alarm. It was feared the action of the heart might fail while he was suffering from one of these attacks. The General rallied in each instance, and the spells grew less dangerous as the day wore on and his strength increased. He has taken a great deal of nourishment, chiefly peptonized milk. Digitalis is administered to counteract the heart trouble. A physician has been in constant attendance, day and night, for the last few days, and the symptoms are closely watched. At a consultation at 8 o'clock tonight the following statement was concurred in by all the physicians and given to the press:

The patient is sitting up; his voice is strong, and he is bright, cheerful, and hopeful. The weakness of his heart has diminished; his pulse is 110, the normal pulse rate being 106, and firm and regular. The heart sounds are clearer. Respiration is 30 and regular. He has had no nausea and taken sufficient nourishment. His tongue is clearer; and his condition, in general, has improved since the morning visit.

Its Effect Over the Water.

A despatch from Pittsburg says: "An iron worker named Phillips of this city has received a cablegram from Pontypool, Wales, apprising him that ten sheet mills and 130 pudding furnaces are about to start at that place, and asking him to return and take charge of one of the departments. A letter from a friend brings the information that the greatest activity prevails there over the probable passage of the Mills bill, and that it is on the strength of such a probability that mills idle for a long period are about to resume. Putting glue on the free list of the Mills bill has already closed a glue factory in Elizabeth, and thrown the entire trade in doubt and confusion."

Approved by the President.

The President has approved the joint resolution to enable the President to extend to certain inhabitants of Japan a suitable recognition of their humane treatment of the survivors of the crew of the American bark Cashmere: also, an act authorizing the President to arrange a conference between the United States, and Mexico, Central and South America, Hayti, San Domingo and Brazil.

Lth CONGRESS---FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, May 25.

Senator Blair introduced a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the constitution to the effect that no State shall ever make or maintain any law respecting the abolishing of religion or prohibiting free exercise thereof, and that every state shall establish and maintain a system of free public schools, but that no money raised by taxation shall ever be appropriated, applied, or given for any school, institution, corporation, or person, whereby instruction is given in any doctrines, tenets, beliefs, ceremonials, or observations of a religious sect. It was laid on the table at Senator Blair's request.

A resolution was adopted instructing the committee on Indian affairs to examine into the condition of the State bonds held by the United States in trust for the Indians.

Senator Turpie introduced a bill for the making and printing of a register of labor, being a modification of the amendment offered by him the other day to the bill for a department of labor. Referred.

The Senate considered the House bill making an appropriation to supply the deficiency in the appropriation for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs. An amendment was reported by the committee on appropriations to strike out the clause repealing the law making a permanent annual appropriation of $5,500,000 for the expenses of collecting the revenue from customs, and was agreed to. Other amendments reported were also agreed to and the bill passed. The Senate then proceeded to executive business.

HOUSE.

Private business having been set aside, the House went into committee of the whole, Mr. Blount of Georgia in the chair, on the legislative and judicial appropriation bill, which was read by paragraphs for amendment.

An amendment offered by Mr. Taylor of Ohio, to increase the salary of the chaplain of the House from $900 to $1200, was rejected.

The greater part of the afternoon was consumed in dreary discussions upon the proposed increase of salary for House employes and a tedious debate on points of order. No material changes were made in the bill.

Mr. McComas of Maryland, offered an amendment increasing the clerical force of the civil service commission. He declared that in the whole century there had never been such a clean sweep of general officers as under Cleveland. Now, this sweep was made under the guise of the most colossal hypocrisy that ever graced the office of Lord High Executioner. The Democrats would deceive nobody but morally dyspeptic mugwumps, who, for free trade, had dickered away civil service reform.

Mr. Hopkins of Illinois asserted and commented on the assertion that throughout the United States, Cleveland's federal office-holders had captured the Democratic State Conventions and elected delegates to St. Louis, regardless of the wishes of the people.

Mr. Reed of Maine said he could remember how the gentlemen on the other side, in season and out of season, used to point out the melancholy spectacle of Federal office-holders participating in nominating conventions. He remembered they used the language of violent reprobation at the appointment and removal of men for political purposes. They asserted that if they ever came into power they would end that thing, and declared it was to the interest of the Republic that it should end. Carrying out the sentiments of this virtuous oratory, President Cleveland, at the beginning of his term, proclaimed that he intended to stop Federal office-holders participating in nominating conventions, not having a prophetic eye on the recent Pennsylvania convention or the New York convention. [Laughter.] What the Republicans pointed out was that the gentlemen on the other side, after all their virtuous oratory, as soon as they got into power did precisely the same thing about which they were so indignant before they got into power. They retorted by saying "You did it." That was just what they had said before election. That was precisely the gravamen of their charge. That was precisely the fault they were going to correct, and now, when they committed this fault themselves, they reiterated what they had said before election, forgetting that the conditions had changed. The accusation made against the gentlemen was, and he hoped he was not unparliamentary, that their conduct compared with their previous declarations, savored of hypocrisy. [Laughter.]

Mr. Lodge of Massachusetts said that the providing of an additional clerical force for the commission was simply a statement on the part of Congress that it believed the civil service law should be extended and maintained.

After further debate, the pending vote being upon the McComas amendment, the committee rose and the House took a recess until 8 o'clock.

At the evening session the House passed 38 private pension bills, and at 10.30 o'clock adjourned.

LIFE IN THE COUNTRY.

[Mrs. Sherwood in the N. Y. Sun.]

The country neighborhood in England means a collection of villas, neighboring great houses, where hospitality goes on all the time, and where there is something near which is of historical interest to see. American country life must be very simple in comparison, and it is for the most part so lonely to the rich that they forsake their country places and go to Newport or the Mount Desert, where they find company. Half the once historic houses on the North river are forsaken. Half of this objection to living in the country comes from the sense of nuisance. The cook is always free to decamp on Saturday night, and the guests who come down for Sunday may take care of themselves as best they may. But many young people still like the country and have their country in the neighborhood of all large cities. They like to entertain their city guest without much parade or expense. Now, how to feed them? Every country household should try to have a vegetable garden; for peas, beans, young turnips, and salads freshly gathered are very superior to those which can be bought. Of all the country luxuries fresh vegetables are the greatest. Especially does the tired city, delight in green pease, the crisp lettuce, and fresh strawberries. The large family of salads can make the plainest dinner delightful. Given a clear beef soup, a slice of fresh fish, or a bit of spring lamb with mint sauce, some green pease and fresh potatoes, a potato salad with onion, and one has a good dinner. An egg salad is a very good dish for a hungry company, and a cold ham on the side-board will feed a multitude. A country garden is a boon to a tired city, particularly if it is one of the old-fashioned gardens, with lilacs, hollyhocks, mignonette and violets. And for a country dinner the table should be near a window or window, if possible. In fine weather it should be on the veranda, looking into the garden. And if one must dine in a small room, let the carving be done outside, and all the greasy dishes be kept out of sight. There should be a side-board and side tables, relays of knives, and spoons. Dishes and glasses not in use on a stand; the soiled dishes should be carried out of sight. A maid or servant should be taught how to carve and how to serve the dinner neatly. Soup for a country dinner should be clear Julienne, or chicken, or some light affair. The heavy soups are not in order. If the lady of the house has a talent for cooking, she will have her soups made the day before, so they will be free from grease, and she should season them herself, unless she has a good cook. It is better in a country house to have some cold dish that will serve as a resource if the cook should leave. Melton veal is an admirable thing to fall back upon. It can be made on a Saturday and will last a week. It is made of alternate layers of veal and ham, highly seasoned and baked in a pastry, and is very nice. No lady should attempt to entertain much in the country, unless she has a good cook and a competent waiter, else it is but a slavery. There is a curious lack in a spur track begins on the above described line, swinging northwesterly, follows the valley of Sour Brook, crossing East Haverhill Street, near where the latter crosses the brook. As the line approaches the head of the brook it swings to the left, passing under Prospect street, follows down Valley Brook Brook, crossing the brook, it terminates at Berkley street, near Jackson street, where a station is to be erected. The matter was postponed until next Monday evening, that the city engineer and city solicitor may consider the question.

REPUBLICAN STATE CONVENTION.

A Republican State Convention will be held in

CITY HALL,

Portland, Tuesday, June 12, 1888,

At 11 o'clock, A. M.,

for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Governor, to be supported at the September election, and transacting any other business that may properly come before it.

The basis of representation will be as follows: Each city, town and plantation will be entitled to one delegate, and for each seventy-five votes cast for the Republican candidate for governor in 1884 an additional delegate, and for a fraction of forty votes in excess of seventy-five votes, a further additional delegate. Vacancies in the delegation of any city, town or plantation, can only be filled by residents of the county in which the vacancy exists.

The State committee will be in session in the reception room of the hall at 9 o'clock on the morning of the convention, for the purpose of receiving the credentials of delegates.

All electors of Maine, without regard to past political differences, who believe in protecting the industries of this State and its agricultural products; who believe in protecting the laborer and he wage-earner in every right; who believe "in choosing a policy which inspires labor with hope and crowns it with dignity, which gives safety to capital and protects its increase, which secures political power to every citizen, comfort and culture to every home" giving free popular education to the people; in favor of free suffrage and an honest counting of ballots; who approve the prohibition of the liquor traffic and the promotion of the cause of temperance; in an economical, just and efficient administration of public affairs; a faithfully administered civil service; and who uphold all judicious measures for the encouragement of American ship building, are cordially invited to unite with the Republicans in the selection of delegates to this convention.

Per order Republican State Committee.

J. H. MANLEY, Chairman.
WILLIS H. WING, Secretary.

The Bangor Whig appears to be gradually getting back to a peace footing.

The Mayor of Gloucester, Mass, has resigned because his conscience will not allow him to sign liquor licenses.

The Burleigh papers all agree that the PRESS has injured Mr. Cleaves's candidacy. Strange to say, however, not one of them appears to be grateful.

The Calais Times alleges that the success of Mr. Bass in the fourth district Democratic convention was due to free passes, forged credentials and dishonest methods. Evidently the quarrel among the brethren down there is far from harmonized.

Mr. Randall's defeat in the Pennsylvania convention will undoubtedly seriously affect his influence with the protection Democrats of the House, and henceforth his following is destined to diminish rather than increase. The chances of the passage of the Mills bill are therefore materially improved by Mr. Randall's downfall. Indeed it was no doubt with a view to that largely that his defeat was planned and executed. That the Pennsylvania Democrats are sincerely in favor of the Mills bill is however not likely.

It seems to be a fair inference from a paragraph in the Augusta Age on the Democratic State convention that the chief reason why the convention did not adopt a license plank was because it was thought it might distract attention from the great question of tariff reform. The Age thinks that one question is all the people are capable of considering at one time. After tariff reform is secured, then the party will be in a condition to develop the Belfast plan of promoting temperance by establishing in every town a certain number of legalized rumshops.

The result of the bye-election in Southampton has proved very inspiring to the Gladstonians with the contrary effect on the Conservatives. A Conservative had occupied the seat and the Conservatives expected to retain it. Everything seemed in their favor for the Liberal candidate was absent and all the campaigning done for him was done by his wife and daughter. Nevertheless the Conservatives were routed and the Liberal candidate elected by a thousand majority. Perhaps a part of the victory may be credited to the efficiency of women as electioneering agents.

The Burlington strike has been officially declared off. It was practically off weeks ago, for the road had all the men it needed and was doing its business as regularly as if no strike had ever been inaugurated. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is perhaps the most intelligent and the most able labor organization in the country, and there is reason to believe that in this case they had right on their side. The failure is due to the fact that there are plenty of engineers outside their organization who cannot be controlled by it, and it has demonstrated anew that a monopoly of labor is practically impossible.

The accidents from the electric light wires in New York city are becoming so frequent that a grave problem is suggested to the people of great or even moderate sized cities, where the telegraph, telephone and electric light wires are strung near together. One of the newspapers of the metropolis not long ago investigated the conditions of the wires in the city. It was found that over the dangerous electric light wires are strung hundreds of telegraph, telephone, fire, police and messenger wires, ready to carry the deadly current into homes, stores and offices, or to break and carry death to unwary pedestrians in case accident or the effects of time destroy the insulation of the heavily charged light wires. Several deaths and severe fires have been caused in this way. Thursday papers reported a destructive fire in one of the New York telephone stations, caused by a telephone wire falling on to an electric light wire at a place where the insulating cover had probably worn off. The intense electric current was carried on the telephone wire to the central office, where it set fire to the switchboard. The flames spread instantly and a fifty thousand dollar fire was the result. Fires of this sort are likely to occur often in New York city, because of the great number of wires. In a recent inquest over the body of a man killed by the wires, Chairman Moses, of the National Electric Light Company, gave a vivid description of the danger that lurked in the most innocent looking wires. He was of the opinion that in the old telephone and telegraph wires that were not well cared for, there might be great danger. If one of them came in contact with an electric light wire and should be hit accidentally by a person, any current which might be in the ground would be attracted and the person, being the means of completing the circuit, would of course be killed. He would give to the public the advice he gave his children: "Never touch a wire." In smaller cities where the wires are fewer and better cared for, such sweeping advice may not be needed; but it is nevertheless a good plan to try no experiments with the wires anywhere. They may be loaded.

Politics and the Treasury.

The Republican party appears to be in danger of committing an act which in the future it may have cause to regret. It ought to set its face strongly against mixing up the treasury in politics. Instead of that it seems inclined to set a precedent in favor of this very thing by nominating for governor a state treasurer during his term in office. We are happy to say, however, that thoughtful Republicans are beginning to realize the danger of such a course, and to make them selves heard in opposition. The Hon. J. W. Wakefield, one of the best known Republicans in the State, has written a strong letter in opposition to this course, which has already been given to our readers. In this week's issue of the Farmington Chronicle is a letter from the Hon. J. W. Fairbanks, one of the most prominent Republicans of Franklin County, in which he points out in language strong, but none too strong, the evil of the course that the supporters of Mr. Burleigh are urging upon the Republican party. Mr. Fairbanks says:

Mr. Burleigh is now Treasurer of the State, and his term of office does not expire until his accounts are audited by a committee, which is to be chosen when the Legislature meets in January, 1889. The time required for settlement is about two weeks, and the Treasurer's bond holds good until a new Treasurer is elected and qualified, and his bond accepted. The Treasurer and his employes have no moral right to be engaged in politics or speculation. Our financial credit is the key to the success of all the industries of the State. We have had one experience of maladministration since the Republican party was formed, in Benjamin D. Peck. If the rule not to meddle with outside matters had been strictly adhered to in his case the tax payers of Maine would have been saved something like from fifty to one hundred thousand dollars. Can the Republicans of Maine ignore the obligations which the oath requires of the Treasurer, by aiding him in his present political campaign? The precedent is a dangerous one.

The constitution of Maine forbids the treasurer to engage in any business of trade or commerce during his term of office. By the letter of the law he is not forbidden to engage in politics. But the obvious purpose of the constitution is to guard the treasurer against temptation, and to prevent him from engaging in any business that would seriously distract his attention from the duties of his office. May not the temptation of a political campaign, which cannot be conducted without expenditures of money and time be quite as serious as the temptations of any business of trade or commerce are likely to be? Shall the Republican party observe the letter of the fundamental law, or shall it live up to the spirit of the law as well? How would the stockholders of a large corporation enjoy having their treasurer, whose duty it was to take care of their funds, engage in a political campaign in his own interest, which might require a large expenditure, on his part, of both time and money? Would they not detect some impropriety in it, and would they not protest against it as setting a dangerous precedent, even though they anticipate no harm from the particular act? Is the case any different when the corporation is the State and the stockholders are the whole people?

It will be urged that no immediate harm will come to the State from allowing Mr. Burleigh to engage in a political campaign. We do not claim that there will. No doubt many of our State treasurers could have engaged in the business of trade or commerce without inflicting injury to the State. But a bad precedent is always dangerous. And to encourage the Treasurer of the State to engage in politics is, as Mr. Fairbanks says, to set a bad precedent.

CURRENT COMMENT.

A LITTLE HARD TO SEE.

[Bridgton News.]

The question is purely one of fact. If the statement of the Whig be true, and that of the PRESS and of Gen. Hamlin false, then of course the charge of discourtesy preferred against Bangor Republicans falls to the ground. But, for the life of us, we cannot see how it happened that Mr Hamlin was defeated, if the Burleigh majority were as magnanimous as they claim to have been.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The History of Parsonsfield, from 1771 to 1888. To write a good town history requires a peculiar order of talent; hence, good town histories are rare. But anything which preserves, even in an imperfect form, the records of a community for a considerable period is of value, and the efforts of any individual who collects and puts in permanent form such records, should be commended, and his name should be inscribed upon the honored roll of public benefactors. The book before us is one of the better class of town histories which are now so frequently dropping from the press, and it not only treats of the beginnings of the town and its national growth and prosperity, but presents to the reader personal sketches of its people in all walks of life; its lawyers, ministers, physicians, merchants, politicians, authors, teachers, et id genus omne. There are also to be found in the five hundred pages which comprise the volume, interesting accounts of the schools and churches of Parsonsfield; genealogies of its principal families, etc., etc., in fact, the work covers a wide field and must not only prove valuable to the historical student, but have an especial interest for natives of the town both at home and abroad. Among the names mentioned in the book, which are familiar to Portland people, may be found the following: Hon. James W. Bradbuay; L. D. M. Sweat, Esq.; Dr. John M. Buzzell; Judge Nathan Clifford and Rev. Asa Dalton. The three first are natives of Parsonsfield, and the latter a connection of Samuel Dalton, formerly a prominent citizen of the town. A sketch of the Rev. Asa Dalton, accompanied by a portrait, which hardly does the reverend gentleman justice, are to be found in the volume. Of the portraits in the book, some are excellent and others unsatisfactory. Book makers should learn that a book is better without illustrations than with poor ones. Upon the whole, however, the book is creditable to the author, though we could wish that such a queer statement as the following had been left out; viz: "During this time he ma Miss Blank." Such an abbreviation is proper enough in a condensed genealogical table, but in a biographical sketch is improper. We are also told that a certain enterprising firm "deserve brief mention," though the writer does not intend to speak disparagingly of it. Such faults as these, however, are to be overlooked, for, it not only requires special training, but, as before remarked, exceptional talent to write the model town history, and at this early stage of our national existence we should not expect too much. Not only does the book contain a vast quantity of valuable matter but it is well printed and made up, and the price is low; namely, $3.50 for cloth, $4.50, library, and $6 for morocco, to which should be added 32 cts. for postage. Orders should be directed to J. W. Dearborn, John Bennett or Chas. F. Sanborn, Parsonsfield. (Portland: Brown Thurston & Co.)

In Nesting Time. By Olive Thorne Miller. One of the most attractive books that has lately appeared is this correction of sketches of birds, most of which have appeared from time to time in the magazines. The descriptions are mostly of birds in confinement, though several are the result of studies of the feathered creatures in their native woods, the most notable one being Bird Study in a Southern State. Mrs. Miller's birds have the freedom of the "bird room," and thus their manners and customs can be very closely observed, and as much individuality of character is found in them as in human beings. To bird lovers the book will be fascinating. Even persons caring little for, birds cannot fail to be interested in these charming sketches. All the "tricks and manners" of her pets the author has caught and reproduced in the most delightful series of word-pictures. (Boston: Houghton, Mifflin & Co.; Portland: Loring, Short & Harmon.)

Life. By Count Tolstoi. Count Tolstoi is widely known and admired as a writer of brilliant novels. He is also deeply religious and interested in all that relates to the life of man. The Life of Man, what is it? Is it merely the sum total of the functions which resist death? Is it the phenomena of organic existence? The brevity, the uncertainty, and the sufferings of life are truelsms as old as history. Yet life must have a basis which is rational and moral, as well as physical. What is the end of our existence? It is not found in the pleasures of sense, for they are short and unsatisfying. Selfish pursuits degrade and destroy the true life of man, which is found only when we renounce sensual and selfish ends, surrender ourselves to God, accept the doctrine of Christ, and like Him live to promote the highest welfare of all mankind. (New York: Thomas Y. Crowel & Co.)

The History of Judaism. By Rabbi Solomon Schindler. The object of Rabbi Schindler is to show that Judaism was not ushered into the world full grown like Minerva, but was gradually developed, from the calling of Abraham, and was a gradual revelation of God's purposes not only as affecting the Jews, but Gentiles as well. The volume consists of a series of lectures given in Boston, and are somewhat rationalistic in sentiment. The writer does not belong to the Orthodox wing of the Jewish Church, but to the advanced, though he evidently regards the history of his race with pride and profound satisfaction. (Boston: Lee & Shepard; Portland: W. H. Stevens & Co.)

The Governor of Kansas has made an interesting innovation in the use of the pardoning power by remitting the sentence of a wife murderer upon the condition that he abstain in future from the use of intoxicating liquor.

The efforts of the American war department to fit the army with a better field glass have brought to light the fact that the eyes of the Americans are nearer together than are the eyes of other nations. Foreign field glasses, especially those of Germany, the best now in use, were tried, but the glasses were too far apart to fit American eyes.

George Francis Train is coming back from Nova Scotia. It will be remembered that when the Chicago Anarchists were hanged he shook the dust of his country from off his feet and declared he would never enter its borders more. But a short residence in Nova Scotia has convinced him that his country is a pretty good sort of place after all.

The oddest strike yet on record is reported from the Argentine Republic. The government thought the people were paying too high a tax for priestly services in the matter of masses, marriages, burials and other ecclesiastical functions, and issued an order lowering these rates. The priests appear to have jointly determined to resist this encroachment upon their prerogatives; have closed the churches, and even discoutinued the ringing of church bells.

Women are competing more and more with men in the mechanic arts. There are now probably a thousand women in Pittsburg who work in iron mills making bolts, nuts, hinges and barbed wire. Three years ago the men who had been working in the bolt works gave such dissatisfaction that the proprietors decided to try girls at the same work. The venture was such a success that nothing would induce them to go back to the boys and men. A similar experiment in the wire works resulted as favorably.

Letters have been received from Mr. Blaine's party in Europe, indicating that the ladies will not take the coaching trip in Scotland with the Carnegies. Mrs. Blaine expects to sail for home by the French line on June 16. She will be accompanied by her daughter, by Miss Abigail Dodge (Gail Hamilton) and by Misses Elkins and Davis. The two young women last named have been making a tour covering a period of nearly a year, and extending to Turkey. They joined the Blaine party in Rome.

Two famous costumes, preserved at the Smithsonian Institution, were carefully photographed, recently, that their form may be preserved when the material shall have rotted away. They were the suits worn respectively by Washington when he resigned his commission, and by Jackson at the battle of New Orleans. A clerk in the Smithsonian wore the clothes for the photographing, and the result in the first case is said to be a striking picture of Washington, the gentleman resembling him very strongly in figure and feature.

Our minister to Siam has been floored by a little task which the State department assigned to him. He begs leave to report that he has nothing to say about the Siamese budget for the reason that he knows nothing about it and has sought in vain for enlightenment. According to Minister Child the King of Siam pockets all the government cash, disburses it as he pleases, and is the only man in the country who knows anything about its financial affairs. As his Majesty did not choose to take Mr. Child into his confidence, that gentleman's report has the merit of great brevity. In a few graphic lines he vividly depicts his own dense ignorance of the subject, pictures the the King as the watch dog and sole custodian of the treasury, and assures us that the Siamese "will give you no information, but reply with the politest of evasives."

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

Do you know all liquid sarsaparillas and blood purifiers are unsafe to use? They contain a large proportion of alcohol which not only neutralizes to a considerable extent their medicinal qualities but is liable to create an appetite for alcoholic stimulants. To the young they are particularly dangerous, and parents cannot be too careful to avoid them. The danger of arousing any latent tendency to alcoholism cannot be overestimated.

G. E. Lane, M. D., a prominent Boston Physician, says: "In my opinion liquid sarsaparilla and other blood purifiers are unsafe to be given to children as they contain a large percentage of alcohol. Cases have come under my observation in which there is no doubt the appetite for stimulants was acquired by using medicine of this class. Therefore it gives me great pleasure to use and recommend a strictly non-alcoholic sarsaparilla, Dinsmores Sarsaparilla Wafers. I regard them as the best and most convenient blood purifier in use."

G. W. Galvin, M. D., United States Hotel Boston, says: "I have always disapproved of liquid sarsaparillas, and consider them especially injurious to invalids and children because of their large percentage of alcohol."

Dinsmore's Sarsaparilla Wafers are compounded of pure Spanish Sarsaparilla combined with the best vegetable remedies known to medical science for purifying the blood, eradicating disease and strengthening and building up the tired and languid system. Prepared only by DINSMORE & CO., Boston, Mass. Price 50 cents per box. Sold by Druggists, or mailed on receipt of price.

is doing. The public full well knows who offers the best goods and the way they pitch in and buy, amply attests our superior mode of treating them. Every person in Portland knows that a finer grade of goods than we offer for the price cannot be found anywhere. Our cash sales for the past six weeks have averaged between $1500 and $2000 weekly, which shows that good values are what they want. We call especial attention to our Pontoosuck

Men's Indigo Blue Flannel Suits at $4.88.

All sizes, 34 to 44, and our Assabet

Boys' Blue Suits, 5 to 13, at $2.68.

These are lower prices than were ever given before for such excellent goods. We have one of the largest and most carefully selected stocks of Men's, Youth's Boys' and Children's Clothing and GENTS' FURNISHING GOODS, to be found in Portland, purchased for CASH and those needing goods in our line will find it for their advantage to examine our stock before purchasing elsewhere.

CITY ADVERTISEMENTS

CITY OF PORTLAND.

NOTICE of HEARING.

WHEREAS the Portland and Rochester Railroad has petitioned the City Council to discontinue a part of two Streets or Public Ways in said city, namely:

To discontinue that part of Cedar street which lies below Somerset street; and

To discontinue that part of Wilmot street which lies below a point 175 feet northerly from Somerset street; and

Whereas said petition was referred by the City Council, May 7th, 1888, to the undersigned, for them to consider and act upon; therefore

Notice is hereby given to all parties interested, that the Joint Standing Committee of the City Council on laying out new streets, will meet to hear the parties and view the proposed way on FRIDAY, the 1st day of June, A. D. 1888, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the corner of Cedar and Somerset streets, and will thereafter proceed to determine and adjudge whether the public convenience requires said portion of said streets or ways to be discontinued.

THE PRESS.

SATURDAY MORNING, MAY 26.

WIT AND WISDOM.

She—Ah, John, before we were married you were always wishing you were one of the knights of old so that you might show your devotion, and now—

He—Great heavens, Maria, did you ever hear of one of those old chivalry fellows jumping up from his paper to chop wood?

If you had taken two of Carter's Little Liver Pills before retiring you would not have had that coated tongue or bad taste in the mouth this morning. Keep a vial with you for occasional use.

Scene: Foreign music shop in New York. Fashionable lady, to German clerk—Has Schubert written any new songs lately?

Clerk—No, madam, not since he died.

GOOD housekeepers are fast finding out that a pure Extract made by Joseph Burnett & Co., costing a cent or two more a bottle, goes farther and makes the most delicious of dishes. Avoid goods only recommended by their cheapness.

"Edward, why do I hear that you have disobeyed your grandmother, who told you not to jump down these steps?"

"Grandma didn't tell me not to, papa. She only came to the door and said, 'I wouldn't jump down these steps, boys.' And I shouldn't think she would, an old lady like her!"

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Augustus Popinjay—Now, really, Miss De Smith, is Miss Travis a well-informed girl?

Miss De Smith—I should say she was! She knows everything that goes on in this town.

Harsh purgative remedies are fast giving way to the gentle action and mild effects of Carter's Little Liver Pills. If you try them, they will certainly please you.

Emaciated tramp (to business man)—I'm a survivor of the Mexican war, an' I want you to help me a little, Cap'n.

"Get out o' this!"

"Look here, Cap'n! what have you got against a survivor of the Mexican war?"

"All I've got against you is that you survived."

I was troubled with catarrh for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very respectfully, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity.—John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

Deacon (to oyster dealer)—We are getting up a church festival for Wednesday night. What kind of oysters have you got?

Oyster dealer—Blue Points and Saddle Backs, sir.

Deacon—Well, I hardly know which to buy.

Oyster dealer—Why not take one of each, sir?

The Moxie Secret.

It is three years since Lieut. Moxie first sent the rich South American nerve food plant called Moxie to Dr. Thompson, in Lowell, Mass. Since, over 6,000 bottles have been sold, and to-day it is undoubtedly the most popular beverage and nerve support in the world. It has become the ordinary drink of hundreds of thousands of people all over the world. This business has grown like a mushroom. When it was discovered to be a rich nerve food, there was a struggle to possess it. The contest before the United States Courts has developed the fact that it has actually recovered a very large number of cases of helpless paralysis, old drunkards, nervous wrecks, and invalid women suffering from nerve exhaustion. It has the same effect in the cure of other forms. The secret lies in the mode of artificial digestion, by which no action of the digestive organs is necessary to make it fit for immediate absorption by the nervous system. This was discovered by Dr. Thompson. The process will dissolve an albuminoid so finely that it can be evaporated like water. It has to be as fine as this to enter the nerve circulation. The women are crazy after it, and the druggists say the sale is just immense.

SCRATCHED 28 YEARS.

A Scaly, Itching, Skin Disease with Endless Suffering, Cured by Cuticura Remedies.

If I had known of the CUTICURA REMEDIES twenty-eight years ago it would have saved me a good deal of suffering. My disease (Psoriasis) commenced on my head in a spot not larger than a cent. It spread rapidly all over my body and got under my nails. The scales would drop off of me all the time, and my suffering was endless, and without relief. One thousand dollars would not tempt me to have this disease over again. I am a poor man, but feel rich to be relieved of what some of the doctors said was incurable. some ring worm, psoriasis, etc. I took .... and .... Sarsaparillas over oneyear and a half, but no cure. I cannot praise the CUTICURA REMEDIES too much. They have made my skin as clear and free from scales as a baby's. All I used of them was three bottles of CUTICURA, and three bottles of CUTICURA RESOLVENT, and two cakes of CUTICURA SOAP. If you had been here and said you would have cured me for $200.00 you would have had the money. I looked like the picture in your book of Psoriasis (Picture number two "How to Cure Skin Diseases") but now I am as clear as any person ever was. Through force of habit I rub my hands over my arms and legs to scratch once in a while, but to no purpose. I am all well. I scratched twenty-eight years, and it got to be a kind of second nature to me. I thank you a thousand times. Anything more that you want to know write me, and any one to read this may write to me, and I will answer it. DENNIS DOWNING,

A SERIES OF TRIUMPHS.

What an Eminent Specialist is Doing in Portland.

Dr. Nicholls, the eminent English specialist, although he came among our people almost unheard of and comparatively unknown, has in the past few months of his sojourn here proved by his marvelous skill in the treatment of all chronic diseases a most worthy follower of Galen. With him the healing art seems to be an inspiration rather than a science, although he proceeds to treat his patients according to the very latest scientific methods. Already hundreds of grateful people in this community stand ready to attest his success in ridding them of ailments, many of long standing. His practice has grown to stupendous proportions and every ill that flesh is heir to has been brought to him for riddance and he has yet to record a failure. Few physicians can boast as much.

Dr. Nicholls is a specialist; not in the ordinary acceptation of the term; but for the treatment of all diseases. He devotes his entire time to fulfilling the Scripture injunction "Heal the Sick." His days and nights are devoted to his art and success crowns his efforts in the cause of suffering humanity. Courteous, affable, sympathetic, he attaches his patient to himself and wins their confidence and esteem at the outset just as he secures their everlasting gratitude afterward for the relief he affords them.

In this climate catarrh is the bane of the people and if there is any one trouble in the treatment of which Dr. Nicholls is more successful than any other it is catarrh. Verily he is doing good work, a grand work here. d&w

All disorders caused by a bilious state of the system can be cured by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. No pain, griping or discomfort attending their use. Try them.

A WARNING.

The modes of death's approach are various, and statistics show conclusively that more persons die from diseases of the Throat and Lungs than any other. It is probable that everyone, without exception, receives vast numbers of Tubercle Germs into the system, and where these germs fall upon suitable soil they start into life and develop, at first slowly, and is shown by a slight tickling sensation in the throat, and if allowed to continue their ravages they extend to the lungs, producing Consumption, and to the head, causing Catarrh. Now all this is dangerous, and if allowed to proceed will, in time, cause death. At the onset you must act with promptness; allowing a cold to go without attention is dangerous, and may lose you your life. As soon as you feel that something is wrong with your Throat, Lungs or Nostrils, obtain a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. It will give you immediate relief. nov8-d1y-cT

Important to Ladies.

BOSTON, May 25.—The ladies who want to have beautiful forms and faces should read how to get them in Shirley Dare's article in THE BOSTON SUNDAY GLOBE tomorrow. She will tell also how to avoid headaches and the loss of beauty they cause; also about corsets and stays, and how the Greek girls preserved their beauty.

Returned to His Cab.

Isaac McLellan, the Grand Trunk engineer who killed John Stanley and who was acquitted by the coroner's jury, has returned to his engine. His employers have not taken any action in regard to the matter as yet, but it is expected that he will be allowed to remain in his present position.

The Bible Society.

The Rev. N. T. Whittaker, D. D., will deliver the annual address before the Bible Society of Maine at the Chestnut Street church tomorrow evening at half-past seven. A collection will be taken in aid of the society.

BRIEF JOTTINGS.

Will today be marked by the usual Saturday storm?

The Clerical Club supped at the Preble House last evening.

John McEachran was thrown from a team in Deering, Thursday afternoon, and slightly injured.

The patrol wagon and horses were photographed by Engineer Cook, of the City Building yesterday morning.

Between eight and ten thousand pounds of fish were landed by small Cape fishing boats yesterday.

Mr. O. F. Blake's horse fell on Exchange street yesterday breaking the shaft of the meat wagon to which he was attached.

Every spoke of the wheel of an overloaded lumber cart was pulled from the hub on Commercial street yesterday, letting the load fall to the pavement.

E. S. Pendexter has furnished the Deering High School class of '88 with class rings. They are broad gold bands with the figures '88.

The schooner James Dyer was the first mackereler to leave this port this season. She left yesterday.

Bosworth Post and Shepley Camp, Sons of Veterans, will attend service at State Street church tomorrow morning and Thatcher Post will attend the Church of the Messiah.

An elegant picture of Hon. Jacob McLellan, appropriately framed, was presented by the family of the late mayor to Bosworth Post, G. A. R., last evening through Past Commander Sawyer.

The Deering Land company closed a contract yesterday with Mr. Houston of Deering to build four new houses on their tract this summer. The houses will be such as generally sell for $2,500 or $3,000.

Cherry blossoms appeared Thursday, May 24th, thirteen days later than last year. In 1882 and 1873 they were as late, and the latest recorded, May 31st, was in 1726. The earliest recorded was in 1760, May 1st.

Mr. J. Henry Rines, of the firm of Rines Bros., has purchased of the Whitney heirs the land and buildings on the southerly side of Congress street, between the Sweetsir Block and the Durant House and will erect a brick block thereon.

A man in attempting to jump on the tender of a moving locomotive on Commercial street, missed his footing and was struck by the tender and fortunately knocked off the track instead of being run over. The wheels came within about an inch of his feet.

Fred Wilson a boy thirteen years of age and a resident of Ligonia, was sent by Trial Justice Robinson to the Reform School Thursday, during his minority. The boy had by reason of being light-fingered, become a source of much trouble to the people at Ligonia.

Tomorrow evening at 7.30, Rev. T. Gerrish will preach a memorial sermon in the Pine street M. E. church, upon "Our Fallen Comrades, and the past debt we owe them." The public is cordially invited to attend. Mr. Gerrish was for three years a member of the 30th Maine Regiment and participated in all its battles, save when absent on account of wounds.

Mrs. Wentworth, Mrs. Gammon, Mrs. Williamson, Mrs. Bond, Mrs. Day, Mrs. Sawyer, Mrs. Randall, Mrs. Coffin, Mrs. Trefethen, Miss Ella Trefethen, Mrs. Richards, Mrs. Horr, Mrs. Lincoln, Mrs. Wildes, Mrs. Perry, Mrs. Elwell, secretary of Bosworth relief corps, and Miss Sadie Trefethen of this city were present at the annual inspection of Sheridan Relief corps of Biddeford, Thursday evening. The inspection was conducted by Mrs. A. M. Sawyer who was afterward presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers by Mrs. J. H. Smith of that city.

An Exciting Runaway.

Mr. J. W. Thompson, Canton, of the Horse Breeders' Monthly, hired a team yesterday, at one of our livery stables, and started to go to Woodfords Corner. The horse that he drove was a spirited mare, and when Deering's bridge was reached became frightened at a dredge which was working in Back Bay. Mr. Thompson endeavored to check his horse and in so doing the left rein broke near the bit, and the horse dashed rapidly forward, the driver realizing that he was in a rather critical position. Men from both sides of the thoroughfare tried in vain to stop the horse, and so Mr. Thompson decided, as a last resort, to run the team into the fence by pulling on the rein that was not broken. In his efforts to do this the right rein broke, and this left him without any control whatever, over the horse. The animal was running away now in earnest, and Mr. Thompson was puzzled what to do. Ahead some distance he saw one of the teams of the Portland Stone Ware Company, and called for the driver to stop his horse. The man heard him, left his team, and succeeded in catching the runaway by the bit and stopping him. It was a narrow escape on the part of Mr. Thompson, who was frightened, but not hurt, and the team and the man that stopped it likewise escaped without injury.

Young People's Christian League.

Thursday evening the young people of Pine street church met and organized a "Young People's Christian League." They adopted an original and novel constitution and elected officers for the ensuing six months. The object of the society is to promote the spiritual growth of its members and to aid in all possible ways the carrying forward of the cause of Christianity. The young people, under their new pastor, Rev. T. Gerrish, feel a new impulse to work and look for grand results, as an outgrowth of their new organization.

Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Tomorrow evening Mrs. J. R. Barney, the National Superintendent in the W. C. T. U. of prison and jail work, will give a temperance address in the Free street Baptist church. Her subject is announced as "From Jericho to Jerusalem," and the lecture deals with the question of moral reform and the relation of crime to intemperance. A collection will be taken to defray expenses.

The Winthrop.

The steamer Winthrop, of the New York line, arrived from New York Thursday evening, bringing 175 Italians, who left on the midnight train over the Maine Central for Greenville. They were a stalwart, good-looking class of men, and during the voyage their songs and speeches amused the boat's crew very much. The furniture of the Winthrop has been put in, and the steamer is now ready for the summer passenger travel, which is expected to be unusually large.

Alpha Lodge.

Alpha Lodge, No. 1, K. T., held the quarterly election last evening as follows:

P. P. Charles L. True.
P. C.—Harrington L. Plummer.
D. C.—Fred H. Oliver.
T. C.—Alfred S. Goody.
C.—Lewis H. Jack.
S.—John F. Massure.

After the election, refreshments were served by Mr. Oliver, and a very enjoyable occasion was held.

Sons and Daughters of Maine.

The second reunion of the Sons and Daughters of Maine was held at Franklin Hall, Abington, Mass., last evening. Ex-Gov. J. L. Chamberlain, Hon. Charles J. Noyes, Hon. Llewellyn Powers and Hon. Harrison Hume were among the speakers. A large delegation from the association at Brockton was present.

Marriner & Company.

Those who have not yet visited Marriner & Company's store No. 203 Federal street are not aware that they have one of the largest and best arranged grocery stores in New England. This firm make an announcement in our advertising columns this morning that will prove interesting to purchasers.

Paint and Oil Club.

The Paint and Oil Club will hold its last meeting of the season at the Preble House tonight, and an unusually enjoyable time is expected. The ladies will be invited, and both vocal and instrumental music will be enjoyed.

Injured While Coupling Cars.

The Old City Hall.

The committee has awarded the demolition of Old City Hall to F. W. Cunningham, who bid $375, and the work of removing the building will commence on Monday next.

PERSONAL.

Mr. J. W. Thompson, of the Horse Breeders' Monthly, is in town.

Mr. Franklin Simmons is visiting in Lewiston.

Rev. Miss Angell is to preach the memorial sermon at Harrison.

Lieutenant George L. Dyer, formerly of Calais, has been appointed Hydrographer in the United States Navy Department.

Mr. Harold F. Roberts, editor and publisher of the Rockland Free Press, was in the city yesterday.

J. W. Monson, Esq., of Pittsfield, with Mrs. Monson, is on a western tour, Minneapolis being their destination.

Lieutenant Colonel Jared A. Smith has been ordered from Portland to Fort Knox, Me., on temporary duty.

Rev. Mr. Dunham of the New Jerusalem church, returned home yesterday from the session of the General Convention recently held in Boston.

Senator Frye, as usual at this season of the year, will spend a short time at his camp at Rangley, and will enjoy himself fishing for the trout.

Tomorrow evening Rev. J. S. Cogswell will speak at the Presbyterian church on the subject: "Will this earth be destroyed by fire?"

Dr. Heber Bishop, secretary of the Megantic Fish and Game Club, left Boston on Tuesday for Spider Lake, Quebec, to arrange for a site for the proposed club house.

Mr. Louis Gatcomb, lately with the American Express Company, has been promoted to Assistant Superintendent of Adams Express Company, with headquarters in Boston.

The Pythian Knighthood, cautious and courageous as they are as a fraternity, have learned the level-headed maxim, "When you have a good thing, keep it." This is why the Maine Grand Lodge has re-elected Grand Keeper of Records Joseph F. Chute for the tenth term.—Bridgton News.

Among the Memorial Day orators recently announced are Frank L. Noble, Esq., of Lewiston, at Weld; Herbert M. Lord, Esq., editor of the Rockland Courier-Gazette, at Liberty; S. J. Walton, Esq., of Skowhegan, at Athens; and E. C. Ryder, Esq., of Springfield, at Bangor.

A party composed of Supt. Jonas Hamilton of the Portland & Ogdensburg, Lieut. Leary of Fort Preble, Mr. Alpha Thomes of Portland, and Frank Gibbs and Eugene Chaplin of Bridgton, have been having excellent success fishing in Sebago lake. In twenty-four hours they pulled in six fine specimens of salmon, the largest, caught by Mr. Gibbs, weighing 10 1-2 pounds, and some others weighing eight and six pounds. A nice large one was taken by Mr. Hamilton. The fish were gamey, and in some instances it required from one hour to an hour and a half to land the victim.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

DANIEL SULLY.

Mr. Sully made his first appearance in Portland last evening in his domestic drama of "Daddy Nolan." Those who imagined from the title that they were about to witness a roaring, tearing Irish play, were agreeably disappointed. The play is a well written, well constructed drama, abounding in terse and witty passages, and in strong emotional scenes and situations. Mr. Sully as the old father, "Daddy Nolan," proved himself an excellent actor; natural, forcible, effective. He was well supported by a good company. The working model of the Brooklyn Bridge was a decided feature of the piece. Mr. Sully was heartily applauded.

Tonight Mr. Sully will appear in "The Corner Grocery," a comedy full of fun and bright dialogue. It has no kinship to "Peck's Bad Boy" in any way, but it has received the unqualified approval of the press wherever it has been presented. Those who go tonight will witness the last performance to be given at Portland Theatre until the end of next August.

NOTES.

The Ryan concert will net about $75 for Mr. Ryan, the blind boy, and he returns thanks to all who so kindly assisted him on that occasion.

Memorial Day in Portland.

Memorial Day this year will be observed by the Grand Army of the Republic and Sons of Veterans in the following manner. During the forenoon the smaller cemeteries will be decorated. At Cavalry, John Gooding will be in charge, and the line will be made up of Chandler's band, the Montgomery Guards and comrades from the two posts and camp. At the Western Cemetery, Comrade Alonzo W. Sawyer will have charge, and at Forest City cemetery, Comrade John Evans. The exercises will consist generally of music, prayer and short addresses by different clergymen. Lincoln Tree, Garfield Tree and Eastern cemetery will also be decorated in the forenoon by Thatcher Post who will have the the Cape Elizabeth band, and the usual ceremonies of vocal music and prayer will be carried out at the two memorial trees. A somewhat more extended programme than usual will be carried out at the Eastern, consisting of reading of roll of honor by Commander C. W. Haddock, reading of memorial poem by Miss Anna B. Allen, and an historical address by John T. Hull, Esq. Comrade D. W. Scribner will have charge of the decoration of graves of soldiers of 1812 near Quebec street, and will be assisted by the Rev. W. T. Phelan, Mrs. Phelan, and the children of the Sabbath School of Preble Chapel.

In the afternoon the procession will be made up under command of C. N. Lang, chief marshal, with Edward L. Prindall and Waldo H. Perry, aides. The escort will be composed of all the military companies in the city under command of Col. J. J. Lynch, and will form in Market Square at 1 o'clock. The posts and S. of V. will form in Congress Square, and will be joined there by the escort under Col. Lynch.

The following will be the formation:

Platoon of Police.
Chief Marshal C. N. Lang and Aides.
Chandler's Band.
Col. J. J. Lynch and Staff.
Co. A—Light Infantry, Capt. B. A. Norton.
Co. E—Montgomery Guards. Capt. T. E. Hartnett.
Portland Cadets, Capt. Barrows.
Latin School Cadets, Capt. Strout.
Co. B—Mechanic Blues, Capt. Davis.
Maine State Fife and Drum Corps.
Bosworth Post, Commander Melcher.
Thatcher Post, Commander Hadlock.
Sons of Veterans, Capt. Whitcomb.

The escort will march from Market Square through Center to Free, up Free to Congress Square, where the posts and Sons of Veterans will be received, thence down Congress to the City Building where the City Government and invited guests will join, and thence down Pearl to Kennebec street and cars for Deering taken.

In the evening at City Hall, the exercises will be opened by Chandler's Band, and will consist of vocal music by the Weber Club, Shaw's Quartette, composed of Messrs. Shaw, Thurston and Bowdoin. Hon. Henry C. Peabody will make the introductory remarks, followed by Hon. J. J. Perry in a short address, and an original poem will be read by George C. Burgess, Esq.

The committee having the evening programme in charge have taken into consideration the fact that all will be tired and have made their programme short accordingly. The meeting will close by singing America, in which all will be invited to join. We are assured that the vocal selections, some of which are original and composed especially for this occasion, are unusually fine.

Bosworth Relief Corps.

Bosworth Relief Corps yesterday elected these officers:

President—Mrs. William H. Wentworth.
Vice President—Mrs. Charles D. Clark.
Chaplin—Mrs. Geo. A. Brackett.

The Corps accepted a polite invitation to attend a special service at Pine street church Sunday evening.

The Suicide.

The following telegram was received by Coroner Gould yesterday afternoon, in reference to Adrian Chausse, the French Canadian who committed suicide at the Preble House last Tuesday night:

MONTREAL, May 25.

James S. Gould:

Let him be buried respectably in Portland, and send bill of expense and certificate of death to Madame A. Chausse, corner of Rochelle street and Papineau road.

Later, Coroner Gould receiven another despatch from the sender of the first one, asking him to keep the body until today, when it would be sent for.

GRAND ARMY.

An Appeal from Department Chaplain Shinn.

Department Chaplain Shinn, G. A. R., makes the following appeal to the posts in Maine:

Comrades throughout the State:

For the purpose of improving the observance of the sacred day it is ours to keep and consecrate in memory of our country's noble dead, may I earnestly request every Post in the Department of Maine to keep a definite record of all the exercises and doings of this day, and to carefully report all the facts called for in this blank circular. Let the matter be attended to as soon as the facts can be gathered after Memorial Day.

Last year I received reports from all the Posts in the Department, but three of them came since the meeting of the Department Encampment, viz.: Nos. 41, 73 and 149. I desire to commend the promptness of the following Posts which sent their reports next day after Memorial Day: R. W. Mullen Post No. 33; J. P. Harris, No. 60; John A. Hodge, No. 70; E. S. Parker, No. 99; Grover, No. 126. The important statistics of last year's observance are as follows: Sermons preached on Memorial Sunday, 144; comrades attending in a body, 4,658; burying grounds visited, 288; graves decorated, 9,482; graves never decorated before, 310; comrades taking part in decoratng graves, 6,478; speakers who gave addresses, 137; bands, 71, drum corps, 36; choirs or quartettes, 45.

May I emphasize the propriety of keeping the day sacred; not as a common holiday, for trivial amusements, but for holy and patriotic meditations. And I recommend that a request go up from each Post to the preachers who shall address congregations on the Sunday before Memorial Day, that they publicly deprecate the abuse and desecration of the day, and also that they urge their hearers to participate in its holy observances. I also advise all the Posts in the State to appeal to the people through local newspapers, urging that base ball games, racing and the like be discountenanced.

Trusting I may receive a good report from every Post in this Department,

I am truly yours, in F., C. and L.,
Q. H. SHINN,
Department Chaplain.

Why We Win

Because Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best spring medicine and blood purifier.

Because it is a concentrated extract of the best alterative and blood purifying remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Because, by a peculiar combination proportion and preparation, it possesses curative power peculiar to itself.

Because it is the only medicine of which can truly be said "100 doses one dollar," an unanswerable argument as to

Strength and Economy

Because it is unequalled for the cure of scrofula, salt rheum, boils, pimples, humors, etc.

Because there is nothing equal to it for curing dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, indigestion.

Because it rouses the kidneys and liver and keeps these organs in healthy condition.

Because every article entering into it is carefully scanned, none but the best is used and all the roots and herbs are ground into our own drug mill—which makes impossible the use of anything impure or deleterious. Because it is an

and every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money.

Because its advertising is original and not dependent upon the brains of competitors.

Because when given a faithful trial it is reasonably certain to effect the desired result.

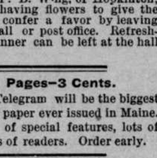
CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS.



CURE

Sick Headache and relieves all the troubles incident to a bilious state of the system, such as Dizziness, Nausea, Drowsiness, Distress after eating, Pain in the Side, &c. While their most remarkable success has been shown in curing

SICK

Headache, yet Carter's Little Liver Pills are equally valuable in Constipation, curing and preventing this annoying complaint, while they also correct all disorders of the stomach, stimulate the liver and regulate the bowels. Even if they only cured

HEAD

Ache they would be almost priceless to those who suffer from this distressing complaint; but fortunately their goodness does not end here, and those who once try them will find these little pills valuable in so many ways that they will not be willing to do without them. But after all sick head

NEW ADVERTISEMENTS.

Nervous and Sick HEADACHE.

HEADACHE is a most common and troublesome affection. In many cases the pain will be in the forehead over and between the eyes, while in other cases it will be a dull, heavy and oppressed feeling. Often the pain will be in one or both temples, attended at times with a throbbing which the slightest movement aggravates. The top of the head is frequently the seat of the trouble. The most serious form of headache is that of the back part of the head or upper portion of the spine. With it there is often a stiffness in the neck, or a feeling as if the head was partly disjointed from the spine. In the most common form of nervous headache the head seems to ache all over, while in sick headache the nerves which go from the brain to the stomach are involved, and there is added to the anguish of the head a sickness at the stomach.

All the above forms of headache are of a nervous charactor, and are caused by a weakness, irritation, or disease of the brain tissues or nerves of the head, and in order to cure such cases, it is absolutely necessary to use a nerve remedy, which, by acting directly upon the affected portions of the nervous system, restores their natural and healthy condition.

The best known remedy for this disease is Dr Greene's Nervura Nerve Tonic. Many persons who suffer from headache have, by repeated failure to find relief, despaired of a cure. To such we would say, by all means secure a bottle of this wonderful remedy, and you will be surprised and pleased at its marvellous effect. IT IS THE MOST PERFECT KNOWN CURE FOR HEADACHE.

PRICE $1.00 PER BOTTLE.

Are You Familiar with the Plans — OF THE — Union Mutual

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY,

OF PORTLAND, ME!

DO you realize that this old and sterling company is a HOME INSTITUTION, chartered in 1848 under the laws of Maine?

ARE you aware that this Company has paid to policy-holders or their representatives more than TWENTY-THREE MILLION DOLLARS?

IT has to-day more than SIX MILLION DOLLARS IN ASSETS, and over THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS IN SURPLUS calculated by the most conservative standards known to the law.

IT pays its losses promptly. Its policies after three years are free from all limitations as to Residence, Travel, Suicide and Occupation. Military and Naval Service excepted.

IT has liberal plans. Its affairs are carefully managed by its Board of Directors and Officers, whose integrity and ability are unquestioned.

THE wise provisions of the Maine Non-Forfeiture Law apply only to the policies issued by this Company, and under it extended insurance is provided for in case of lapse after the payment of three or more annual premiums in cash.

THE NEW MAINE LAW CONVERTIBLE POLICY of the UNION MUTUAL contains every desirable feature in a PERFECT LIFE INSURANCE POLICY.

If you will send your address to the Home Office, or to any of its agents, we shall be glad to furnish full information in regard to the Company and its plans.

THE UNION MUTUAL appeals to residents of Maine for their especial patronage, because it is a HOME COMPANY, and because of its age, experience, strong, financial condition, large surplus, equitable and attractive plans and conservative management.

READING HUMAN NATURE.

Personal Characteristics as Shown by the Features.

[Washington Post.]

"The proper study of mankind is man," is the way a scientist greeted a reporter the other day who called to learn something about the art of reading human nature "This faculty of reading a man at a glance," he continued, "is extremely interesting, and enables one to discriminate wisely in business as well as in social life. It is also a great aid in making a discreet selection of friends and associates, and it often saves one from becoming the dupe and victim of unscrupulous and designing persons. I remember once," continued the scientific man, "when delayed in a small town in Western Maryland on business, I missed the train and was compelled to put up at the inn, the only one for miles around. A s luck would have it it was fair time and the town was crowded, as was the inn, and when I applied for a room I was not surprised to learn that it would be necessary to have a bed-fellow. Being tired I went up stairs early and looked over my new quarters. It would be impossible for me to describe the room, but it was a very dirty one, and the bed, while clean enough, threatened every moment to deposit you on the floor. I had just turned in when the door opened, and in stalked my bed fellow. Tall, lank, with top boots and trousers stuck in them, he possessed anything but a pleasing appearance. I was struck with the peculiar glare of his eye, the shape of his nose and mouth, and came to the conclusion that he was crazy, or bordering on that state. I determined to keep awake, and it was well I did, for about an hour after when all was still, a form passed the window through which the moonlight was streaming, and ap proached the bed. Instinctively I reached for my pistol, which was in convenient reach and waited. In less time than it takes to tell it I was seized by the throat. I tried to hallo, but could not. In my fright the pistol was forgotten, but recovering my presence of mind I pushed it to his waist and fired. His hand relaxed, and uttering a cry of pain he disappeared through the door. I was arrested the next day and came very near being sentenced, the man swearing I had entered the room for the purpose of stealing, and when he went to interfere was shot. After I had given my testimony a young physician stepped forward and swore the man was crazy. This ended the trial and I was released. The man was afterward sent to the insane asylum, where he died.

"I told you this story," continued the speaker, "merely to show you how, with the knowledge of reading the human face, I undoubtedly saved my life."

"What are the signs?" queried the Star man, "by which an ordinary person can tell the character of a stranger?"

"Well," answered the scientific man, "by the eyes, the hair, the nose the mouth, the forehead, the chin, and last, but not least, by the walk. In my opinion this faculty should be included in the education of youth, and every person should become thoroughly familiar with the fundamental principles, at least. It is a well known fact that animals possess in a large degree this talent—in fact it could be called an intuitive perception of character. This is more especially menifest in the more intelligent classes of animals—for instance, observe how a cat, a horse or a dog will watch and read the character of their masters, and acting as they do upon the conclusions thus drawn, regulate their conduct. Women also have in a large degree the faculty of reading human nature, and their conclusions are usually correct.

"But," he continued, "to go into detail we'll commence with the eyes, the most eloquent features of the countenance. In fact, they are miniature windows through which every desire, passion and impulse looks out and differ widely in color, brightness, size, shape and expression. For instance, a large, bright eye denotes quick perception, and is indicative of great susceptibility to external influences, while small, dull, sunken eyes will retain impressions longer. Beautiful eyes, with finely arched eyebrows, when found in a man, indicate one of truly refined and artistic nature, and one who is an ardent admirer, and appreciative of symmetry, elegance and lovelliness wherever they appear."

"How about beautiful eyes in women?" asked the reporter.

"Why, when beautiful eyes, with finely arched eyebrows, appear in a woman they denote a character fond of dress, pleasure, music and other artistic pursuits, although at times they are indicative of a cruel, spiteful nature. Large, full eyes, resembling a cat's, are indicative of a timid, stupid, treacherous nature, and the possessor of such eyes will seem frightened and apprehensive when engaged in conversation with you."

"Before you give me your opinion relative to black eyes," ventured the reporter, "let me call your attention to the color of my own."

After assuring the reporter that he would be careful, he continued: "When you meet a person possessed of a black eye you must look out; they are apt to be artful, crafty, treacherous and always scheming. Secretive in a marked degree, they are possessed of unrelenting malignity, and when once resolved upon an undertaking are thoroughly reckless. Beware of putting confidence in persons possessed of such eyes. While the majority of black eyes are bad, some of them are exceptions indicating frankness, warm affection and a great degree of character. There is one thing, however, to be remembered about black eyes; don't rouse them. They are capable of taking fearful vengeance, and never forget an injury, and will bide their time.

"Blue eyes, or I might add," he continued, "light eyes, because they are in the same category as a rule, are cunning. Being full of tactics they keep their secrets well, and are like snakes in the grass. While professing the greatest friendship for you they are likely to be plotting your ruin. Like black eyes, there are some exceptions, and these able truthful, affectionate. Once perverted to evil, however,, they will assume the character above described and seek your ruin. Lastly, in speaking of the eyes, let me call your attention to gray eyes. These, taken as a rule, make good friends, although possessed of a good deal of selfishness, and persons having such eyes are generally painstaking, intelligent and thrifty."

"The forehead," he continued, "is another important factor in the general make-up of a person. It is the seat of reason, and here intellectual powers reside. Directly over the eyes are located the perceptive faculties, and directly over these and occupying the upper part of the forehead are the reflective faculties, the literary powers being found between the two. A person, therefore, possessing a wide and high forehead generally has quick perception and great intelligence."

"How about the mouth?" said the reporter. "What important part does that play in reading the character of a person?"

"A very important one," answered the scientist, "a large mouth belongs to a coarse, vulgar person. Lips with a cherry redness having a cushioned appearance, belong to domestic natures, fond of kisses and caresses, they make affectionate friends. Lips, on the other hand, that are thin denote a great deal of self-control, and an indication of coldness and unsociability. You have often seen persons with their lips habitually open. Well, they belong to a class that thirst for notoriety, applause and commendation. Generally speaking, they are deficient in passions, emotions."

"One of the most eloquent and important factors in the general make-up of a person's character is the nose. When wide and prominent it indicates a character strong in its composition and one determined to accomplish everything undertaken. Indicative as it is of a commercial nature, a person with such a nose would make a good business man, while the opposite type of nose, i. e., narrow is indicative of rather an effeminate character, with a great deficience in business pursuits. When turned up, continued he, as yours is, it denotes a prying and inquisitive character, an indefatigable news hunter. Should the nose be the reverse, however, that is, convex like an eagle's beak, look out for the possessor of such a proboscis, as he is exceedingly revengeful, never forgetting an injury and never forgiving one. It is also indicative of a quarrelsome disposition."

"Perhaps you don't think it, but the chin is another guide to character," continued the scientist. "A broad, full one shows strong unchanging affection, and a narrow one, while possessed of more intensity, lacks in power and constancy. A pointed chin is an adjunct to a warm and impulsive character. The square, massive chin, though, is the indicator of a strong, determined and persistent character, and one possessed of great will power. These are the ones that achieve success in this world and have stamped themselves like Cæsar indelibly on the communities, the countries and the times in which they have lived.

"Lastly comes the hair, black belonging to the bilious temperament, thereby giving great power, strength and great endurance to the possessor, while light hair is indicative of fineness and delicacy of organization, and denotes the lighter or less robust type of character. Auburn hair denotes a delicate physical organization. "Do you see that white horse?" queried the scientist. "Well, that reminds me of red-haired persons. There is nothing specially of importance to observe in a person of this type, except that they should pursue, as far as possible, outdoor life. They are generally fiery, impetuous and passionate, the curly haired type being excitable, emotional, and impulsive.

"And now," said the scientist, "my time is drawing to a close, and I will have to stop, touching slightly upon that last great requisite in the make up of a character—the walk Now, every one has a style of gait peculiar to himself or herself, denoting firmness, decision of character, fickleness and instability. Those who step firmly may be regarded as possessing a firmness and solidity of character, while a light step indicates that the possessor is of a mirthful disposition, and apt to be secretive. A graceful step belongs to a person who transacts his business in an easy manner. The brisk, rapid walker is a person of ambition, energy and hopefulness, while those of a shuffling gait are almost in every case traitors, usually resorting to treason and stratagem to accomplish their ends."

OVER NIAGARA FALLS.

How a Boy Solved the Problem that has been Fatal to Experts.

[W. O. Stoddard in Harper's Young People.]

The boat in which Rob Norris decided to make his trip over Niagara Falls was built like a yawl. It was not so very sharp, but was wide and deep and buoyant. It was ever so much better for the purpose than a barrel or a suit of blown up India rubber, or than any kind of diving armor. He intended to use oars, and he rigged a mast and sails forward, for he meant to make the trip some day when the wind should be blowing strongly down the river. What he most relied upon to steady the boat was his drag-board. This was made of two boards, each twelve feet long and one foot wide, nailed together at the edges so that it looked like four yards of a wooden gutter. He fitted two iron rings into the edge of one board. They were six feet apart, and when a rope was put through th e rings and fastened to the stern of the boat, it was plain that the drag-board would drag tremendously.

"You don't seem to take along any provisions, do you?" asked Jim Hooker.

"Of course not," said Rob. "It's one of those things it don't take a great while to do."

"And you won't need any lantern," said Jim, "unless you drift into the cave under the falls after you get down. Do you s'pose you will?"

"No," said Rob, "there isn't any danger of that. All I want is to go over steady, and come down right side up. It's too misty there to see anything, lantern or no lantern. The river runs right along, and the boat'll go out with the river."

"I'd take a lantern if I was going," said Jim. "Everybody ought to have a candle or something when they're going into a strange place."

Rob thought about it, and concluded that, after all, he had better have some lunch put up, but there wouldn't be any place around the bottom of the falls dry enough to scratch a match on, and so a candle would be of no use. It was better, too, to go barefooted than to wear rubbers, and a tin dipper was worth more than a sponge to bail the boat with, if any water should come in.

Of course everybody knew that Rob was going over the falls, and some people talked against it, and said there was too much risk in it. Rob himself thought there might be some, and he expected to get wet, but he had a great deal of confidence in his drag-boat. When the day came, and the trip was to be made, all the boys were at the landing, just as Rob expected. It was perfectly natural that they should come, and that all of them should feel disappointed because he would not let them have seats with him in the boat; but they ought not to have called him stingy, nor to have said that he wanted to have his ride, and the falls too, all to himself. What he really was afraid of was that if one of them came along, especially Jim Hooker, he might be all the while meddling with the drag-board and disturbing the balance of the boat, so that we should not go over the falls well.

As for other people, it was just as Jim Hooker said it would be: Everybody that lived within 20 miles was there. Both banks of the river swarmed with them—men, women and children. Rob counted 14 Sunday schools, banners and all, and some Turnvereins' and a Schutzenfest, and a free labor labor procession, and an association for the improvement of general information, besides a militia regiment and some fire companies. All along the bank of the river people had built great wooden stair platforms, to let out seats at 10 cents each, and they were all full, and Rob wished that they had to divide some profits with him. Considering that he was the boy that was to go over the falls, it would have given him no end of pocket money.

The moment Bob set the boat loose and pulled out from shore, people began to cheer and wave their handkerchiefs, and the militia regiment fired a salute.

Bob threw over his drag-board, put up the sail, and began to row hard right down stream. The rapids carried the boat along so swiftly that everybody cheered again. At the same time the sail and the rowing kept the boats in just a little lead of the rapids, so that the drag-board away out behind, more than six feet from the stern of the boat, had a fair chance to drag and to keep things perfectly steady.

Rob had never before felt so proud in all his life, for he knew he was beating all the men that ever jumped over from anywhere into anything. It would surely make him famous forever, and every boy in the world is anxious to become a great man. and have all sorts of things said about him, and have his name in the papers.

The boat swam splendidly, and the wind blew harder and harder, and the falls roared louder as they came nearer: that is, as Rob and his experiment came nearer to them.

The crowds along the shore took a deep interest and cheered a great deal, and several boys tried to see if they could throw stones as far out as the boat was. Two of them succeeded, and the stones they threw came right into the boat, but they didn't happen to hit Rob. He knew that all great men have stones thrown at them and he didn't mind it.

The falls roared louder, the wind blew harder, the water ran swifter, the drag-board worked better and better, and Rob was sure he saw a rainbow in the mist ahead of him.

"There's the edge!" he shouted, as he took in his oars and turned around. "I must be looking ahead when I go over, or I sha'n't see what's coming."

It was the last chance for the boys on shore, and some of them threw stones with all their might, but they missed their aim, and had nothing whatever to brag of.

"Now for it!" shouted Rob, as the boat shot clean out from the edge of the falls with the impetus she had gathered all the way, and with the force of the wind upon the sail.

It was just as he had expected. The water kept hold of the drag-board, and it took the boat down nicely all the way, with the face of the great falls about four feet behind the stern. If it had not been for the drag-board, the boat would have either tipped over or gone down end wise and spilled Rob out. As it was, she came down into the water at the bottom steadily and evenly, as buoyant as a cork, and shot away down stream, Rob felt proudly than ever for just one moment, while he thought of how great a man it would make him; but the drag-board began to pull a little too strongly, and there was so dark a fog he wished he had followed Jim Hooker's advice and brought a candle or a lantern It drew and it drew, and it was pulling him under the falls. The water began to come down right on his face and into his mouth, and just as he was gasping and choking he heard Jim Hooker exclaim:

"Well, Rob Norris, the bell's just rung to let out school. Never knew you to sleep so hard before. Took a whole spongeful to start your eyes open."

"Guess 'twas the arithmetic did it," said Rob, rubbing his eyes; "but there must have been a quart of water in that sponge."

Seafaring Sparrows.

[Rockland Courier-Gazette.]

Capt. Mark Pierce, of the steamer Katahdin, has just found two unique pets on board his boat, and probably a similar instance cannot be discovered anywhere. Around the foregaff there are a number of hoops, and these being unattached fell in against the mast. Inside these hoops a pair of English sparrows have built their nest and are proceeding to raise a happy family. They accompany the boat back and forth between this city and Boston and seem very much at home all the time.

Boulanger's newness to the public in France is shown by the disagreement of the French newspapers as to his first name. Some called him Ernest and some called him George. As a matter of fact his name is George. An elder brother, a scapegrace who disappeared years ago, was named Ernest, and that name is also repeated as the general's middle name, being a family favorite. The somewoat British look in the general's face is accounted for by the fact that his his mother was a native of Wales. Her family name was Griffith.

Views of a Fairfield Correspondent on Horse Breeding.

Horse Breeding in Maine Said to be on the Increase.

Interesting Facts About the Great Horse Dexter.

FAIRFIELD, May 16.

To the Editor of the Press:

I will occupy a small space in your valuable paper by describing a few of our horses and colts in this section. Age, length of years, whether pertaining to humanity or or horsmanity—other things being equal—should and does command respect therefore, with due courtesy to others I will first speak of Broadway, the seven year old stallion, property of A. F. Gerald. Without going into details suffice it to say he is bred standard three geherat ions back on both sides and has to his honor Electioneer and Volunteer as grandparents. This horse has never been handled for speed but is fast demonstrating to his patrons that they have made no mistake in breeding to him. His first get, Longway, now two years old, stands 15-3 and weighs 1000 pounds. This colt is entered in the colt stakes and I am going to lay him up for a winner. Three other Broadway colts are entered—all gifted with speed and game. Look out for Somerset County. One other stallion here I scarcely need mention for he has had his good clothes on and appeared in public as a first class actor too many times not to be well and favorably known. Lawrence record is 2.29½. He can well afford to rest on his laurels until the strength of years shall enable him to carry his present gait, a mile in 2.20.

Maud R., the property of Mr. Nye, is being jogged daily. She is looking strong and healthy and those who have had the pleasure of seeing her trot a 2.25 clip, with an even rapid stride believe in her capabilities to go the present season in 2 20 or better. Mr. Nye is also working Shylock. This colt has improved greatly with his wintering and can now trot fast.

The writer has the misfortune to be defraying the expenses of two stallions. One four years old got by Harbinger, dam by Gen. Knox, stands 15-2, weighs 1000 pounds, trotted a full mile as a three-year-old after serving thirty mares, in 2.47. I have also a three year old by Gen. Withers, dam by Gen. Lightfoot, her dam by Green Mountain boy. This colt stands 15-3 and weighs 1050 pounds He can trot a 2.40 clip easy and for style, action and strength of limb has no superior in the State. They are both in service.

Quite a number of good colts are owned in this vicinity, representing all the royal blood lines from Kentucky to the wilds of Maine, but tnere seems to be a scarcity of gentlemen's driving horses. In fact it would be hard to find around here, for sale, a horse that would fill the bill. In may judgment a great mistake is being made by many of our farmers in trying to breed speed regardless of size, style, etc. If you neglect these essentials and fall short a minute in speed, as you probably will, how are you going to reconcile your purse? In riding through the country and coming in contact with farmers I have been amused and instructed in looking over their prospective weh. It seems strange that a sane man will persist in breeding from an old toothless nag with a broken constitution whose blood is so slow that it hardly makes a revolution in 24 hours. I actually saw last week an old sorrel mare, ears at right angles, abdomen hugging spinal cord, knock kneed and puffed, ancestry d ito, which I was told by the proprietor, with an air of pride and satisfaction, was booked to one of the best stallions in the State. What will the harvest be? We are slow to comprehend the fact, simple as it is, that the colt is as closely related to its mother as to its sire. What should you tnink of a man who would breed to a sire with the attributes of the sorrel dam I have described above? Yet reverse your glass and you have your man, mare, sire and ass all complete for throughout all nature there runs that unchangable law, "like begets like." Let us use common sense and expect to reap just what we sow, and not let our prejudices run away with our judgment not flatter ourselves because the "old mare" has been faithful in taking us to and from the mill, cemetery, church and town meeting that she will be a producer of speed.

I. P. TASH, M. D.

The little trotting beauty, Katie B., record 2.30, by Lord Nelson, son of Lander's Knox, by Gen. Knox, has been sold by Mr. Luther Hutchinson of Weld to a Rhode Island gentleman, for about $2000. This record was obtained at Lewiston during the State Fair, and the sale of this mare removes a possible candidate for the free-for-all of '88.

One of the finest and most promising colts in the vicinity of Belfast is to be seen at the stable of Mr. William H. Blodgett of Morrill, sired by Black Diamond, who is the father of many fine colts in this section. He is two years old next June, stands 15½ hands high, color, black, and will weigh upwards of 950 pounds. He has a fine style and action, and is a very promising animal in every respect.

Dr. F. B. Lancaster of Norridgewock likes a good horse, generally has one or more of them and is giving attention to the rearing of some fine colts. He has two colts by Dictator Chief, a stallion and a filly and one by Daniel Boone that are very promising.

Mr. Albert Murray, of Skowhegan recently imported a finely formed young Clydesdale stallion, from Prince Edwards Island, four years old, that weighed 1700 lbs. The horse has since been sold to parties in eastern Maine for $800. He will be known as "Barrister, Jr.," and is a full brother to Mr. Murray's fine stallion, Frank Barrister.

Mr. J. Q. Lander's justly celebrated trotter, "Gray Terror," of Piscataquis county, has wintered well and come out in fine shape. This fine stallion is well known in eastern Maine and also in Boston as one of the great promising trotters of this great horse raising State. "Grey Terror" has trotted in private in 2.34. He is a half brother to "Plumed Knight," formerly owned by Mr. Lander, but now the property of a Mr. Davis of Cambridge, Mass. Plumed Knight trotted in 2.35 and has a record over Mystic Park, of 2.36¾ in the fourth heat. These two fine animals were sired by the celebrated "Mike Logan," owned by Mr. P. M. Jeffords, formerly of Foxcroft, but now of Atkinson, Ill. "Mike Logan" was raised in Foxcroft by the late Daniel Wyman, and was purchased by Mr. Jeffords who soon after took him to Illinois, where he has raised some good colts, many of his get showing up in fine shape. There are a good many horsemen who are looking for great things from these very promising animals.

E. T. Monroe purchased, recently, says the Piscataquis Observer, a pair of bay mares which looked so much alike and so near of a size as to cause much speculation as to the probable difference in their weight. Upon being carefully weighed each tipped the beam at exactly 1050 pounds. This is somewhat remarkable, as they were raised by different parties, in different parts of the county. There is but slight difference in their ages, both being three years old. They are after Mr. Monroe's well-known stallion, Fred Lothair. One was raised by George Plummer, of Dover, the other by John Bennett, of Sangerville.

Sheriff Poole of Piscataquis county has sold his fine mare to R. G. Palmer of East Dover for $200. She was after the Lanpher horse "Victor," which is a Knox and Drew stallion. The mare was a good one and will undoubtedly bring a good price in the Boston market where she will be offered for sale.

Oxford county can now boast of three stallions whose speed and pedigree is such as to enable them to command $50 for service. These three are Baby Dean, by Daniel Boone, owned by Robinson Dean, Buckfield; Westland, by Colonel West, owned by Barrett Bros., West Sumner, and Hebron, owned by M. L. Horne, Norway.

Mr. W. J. Wheeler, of South Paris, has completed arrangements with a horseman of Fryeburg, to take his three-year-old stallion Ned V., and stand him at Fryeburg for the benefit of the breeders of that section. Ned V. has size, speed and good breeding, his sire being Thomas Carlyle, by Gen. Withers, son of Almont, and his PARSON JIM.

[Chamber's Journal,]

The express trains of that monument of engineering skill, the Denver & Rio Grande Railway, now daily traverse the extreme eastern portion of the Rocky Mountains, lying between the city of Denver on the north and Pueblo on the south; and summer tourists, as well as all-the-year-round men of business, pass over the picturesque road by hundreds and by thousands in the course of a single year. There was a time, however—not very long since either—when white men were very scarce in that section, and when the only means of locomotion was a much dilapidated Concord Coach, whose trips were alleged to be weekly, though, as a matter of fact, the time-schedule of said coach was practically filled out to suit the driver, as he, with much "cussing" and little speed, carried Uncle Sam's mails from stage to stage.

Rather more than twenty years ago there was, about midway between Denver and Colorado Springs, a point on the road where the broad valley narrowed into a deep and wild gorge, known as the George Washington Gulch. The gorge is there yet, I presume, but the name has apparently disappeared, there being no such station on the railway, nor, so far as I can discover, such a place on the revised maps of Colorado. But in those old days George Washington Gulch was a relay station of the Denver stage line. Leaving Indians out of the question, they being of a ubiquitous nature, the resident population of the Gulch numbered three souls, all told, while a census would have revealed the fact that these all occupied the same dwelling-house. There was in those times no town or settlement of any account between Denver and the Springs, so that the Stage company was compelled to establish a number of stations at perfectly wild and unpopulated points, to effect proper changes of horses. So a rough shed had been erected in the Gulch to do duty as a barn for the accommodation of the four horses usually to be found there; while adjoining was a frame mansion, consisting of one apartment, which served as bed-room, parlor, dining-hall and kitchen for the three inhabitants, as well as being the official headquarters of the Hon. Samuel Green, who, in addition to his position as agent of the Stage company, held a postmaster's commission from the President of the United States.

The Honorable—be it remembered that Mr. Green was a government official, though no postoffice business had ever passed through his hands, not even a letter to or from himself, unless we count those which had to do with the stage business and went "deadhead"—the Honorable Samuel Green's companions in the solitude of the Gulch were a negro named Ananias—doubtless from his propensity for prevarication—who was chief groom of the stables, and a half-breed Indian, whose main occupation was to trap and shoot game and then cook it. The latter individual was known as Francis Murphy, and his chief failing was a fondness for undiluted whiskey.

At the close of a fair summer day, the Honorable Samuel Green, with Messrs. Murphy and Ananias, sat together on a bench placed along the front of their residence. The two last-named gentlemen were still enough to justify one in the supposition that they must be sleeping; but the Honorable Samuel was busily engaged in rapping and rubbing two little pieces of rock which lay in the palm of one of his hands. He was evidently much interested.

"'Nias!" said he at last.

"Sah?" responded the woolly-headed darkey, rubbing his heavy eyes.

"I'm a-goin' through to Denver with Bill to-morrow." (Bill was one of the drivers on the stage line; the other was Si—abbreviated from Silas). "You an' Francis Murphy keep awake part o' the time, an' sorter watch things while I'm gone—do yer ketch on?"

"Yes in course, sah,"

Four days later the Hon. Samuel Green returned to the Gulch from Denver, and brought with him a regular mining kit—picks, mattocks, hammocks, shovels, blasting powder and other useful articles.

Two weeks passed, and again the postmaster of George Washington Gulch "went through with Bill"—this time loaded down with samples of rich silver ore.

By the following spring the Gulch was alive with a population of over three hundred white men and three women—not counting Indians and Chinese. George Washington Gulch contained a rich vein of silver—enough to make it a scene of much activity for five whole years.

About a year after the Postmaster's important trip to Denver the Gulch was floating bravely on a floodtide of wealth and prosperity. The Honorable Samuel Green actually had considerable postal business to transact, besides which a double coach service had to be put on the road, while Gulch passengers arrived or departed with every coach. Add to this the fact that the Postmaster owned an interest in the richest claim in George Washington Gulch, and it will be readily understood that he had developed into an individual of some importance.

Still if one had quietly at that time investigated among the strange characters who formed the curiously cosmopolitan population of that Colorado valley, with a view to learning who among their number was held in the highest esteem, the Honorable Samuel's name would scarcely have received mention. The Parson was the favorite among "the boys;" and hardly a man but would gladly have given his last dollar, ay, or his life's-blood, had anything so serious been necessary to help the parson out of a tight place. Never let it be imagined for a moment that the Parson at the Gulch was the orthodox pastor, in the habit of wearing broadcloth of clerical cut and white cravats. He wore a broad-brimmed hat, but it was of the approved cowboy pattern; to a coat he was well-nigh a stranger, being content to appear in a heavy red woollen shirt; while for trousers he substituted the highly ornamented and picturesque buckskin breeches affected by Mexicans, Indians, and other denizens of the Far West. It is also certain that the title of Reverend had never been, verbally or in writing, prefixed to his name; and yet he knew, and the boys knew, that to be called "Parson Jim" was in itself a mark of distinction in a district where men were supposed to have no official titles or surnames, while Christian names were invariably reduced to monosyllables.

Parson Jim's record and capabilities were hardly such as would recommend him as a candidate for church work in communities laying claim to advanced civilization. He could not read the Pentateuch in the original Hebrew; nor discuss the Thirty-nine Articles; but he was a dead-shot with a revolver, and could gracefully ride the back of a bucking broncho. The Westminster Catechism was a sealed book to Parson Jim; but he could set a broken limb, raise a tent, or build a shanty with the next man. And because he was as cool as ice when fiery blood coursed through the veins of other men—because he was as brave as a lion—because he was as gentle as a woman with sick men—because he had a big heart—because he spoke kindly words, and because nothing came amiss to Parson Jim, the rough specimens of humanity in George Washington Gulch loved and respected him as they never could have respected a grave and learned Doctor of Divinity from the East.

Now, in a Western mining town it is a gross breach of etiquette to make inquiries as to a man's pedigree, or to attempt to learn more than he chooses to tell of his history prior to his arrival in the camp. So long as he is "square" and behaves himself, he is one of "the boys," and as such is bound to them by a sort of freemasonry. Hence, when Parson Jim came to the Gulch and announced himself as a preacher, the miners asked no questions. They did not take "much stock" in preaching, but they were disposed to give the newcomer a "show;" and when time passed, and Parson Jim proved to their satisfaction that he was made of the right "stuff," they not only tolerated him, but made him heartily welcome.

There was no church in the Gulch; there was no school-house; there was, however, a large frame shanty used for a whisky saloon, named by its proprietor "The Rocky Mountain Sample Rooms." In the West, be it remembered, all the drinks are samples, no matter if the same consumer gets away with fifty glasses from the same barrel.

Parson Jim made his appearance in the Gulch during the winter immediately following the summer when the Hon. Samuel Green made his important discovery of the existence of silver in the valley. He arrived on a handsome roan mare, without bag or baggage, and made his quarters at the rude hotel connected with the Rocky Mountain Sample Rooms. During the evening there was a scuffle in the large barroom, and the newcomer looked in through a door to see what was the trouble. A young and slender lad of perhaps twenty years was struggling with a brutal, muscular giant of twice his age. It was only a question of minutes when the big rough fellow would "down" his young opponent, and yet the dozen or so of onlookers made no attempt at interference. Just as the new arrival appeared on the scene the younger combatant got in a blow which evedently hurt and irritated his opponent. Quick as lightning the big fellow drew his bowie knife and raised it preparatory to plunging it into the lad.

"Hands off, you bully!" shouted the stranger in the doorway. The burly fighter glanced rapidly in the direction from whence these words came, but did not drop the hand which gripped the ugly knife.

"Drop that knife!" thundered the stranger, at the same time laying his hand on his pistol pocket.

The bully noticed the last named action, and letting go the boy, yelled with added oaths: "Curse you, shut up! Who are you, anyway?" He was evidently very angry. He held the knife in his left hand, and with his right drew a heavy revolver, which he proceeded to level at the stranger.

"Throw up your hands, quick!" shouted the latter. But the fellow did not heed this warning. Click! went the hammers of the pistols. It was a question of quarter-seconds now. Bang! went one revolver—the stranger's—and the big man fell—dead.

Then there was a momentary silence, followed by some queer ejaculations: "Dead as a injun!" "Sarved him right!" "Stranger's a plucky un!" "Be-ewtiful shot!" "Who air you, stranger, anyhow?"

"Boys," said the new arrival, when at last he had a chance to speak, "this is a sort of business that I am not fond of. Sometimes it is necessary, though, as it was to-night. I am sorry; but let us say no more about it. I pay the funeral expenses and answer all questions. You want to know who I am? Well, I'm a preacher; and there'll be preaching in this room, with the landlord's permission, next Sunday morning at 10 o'clock."

It was a strange introduction for a preacher, but it was perhaps the best one he could have had in that wild place. Anyway, the respect of those rough miners was lastingly secured, and from that time he grew in favor as a man and a preacher.

In those old coach days there was one serious drawback to travelling between Denver and George Washington Gulch—the road was infested by a small, but hitherto invincible band of desperadoes, under the leadership of a regular dare-devil known as "Kansas." This man had attacked and robbed the coaches fifteen or eighteen times within six months; and though he had never been known to be accompanied by more than three confederates, his band was the terror of the stage drivers and their passengers. Once the proprietors of the stage line had organized a posse of armed men, who scoured the country in search of Kansas and his crew; but the outlaw remained at large, and within a week lightened a coach of seven thousand dollars' worth of silver ingots.

Late in the evening of a summer day, when, with the exception of a party of gamblers at the "Sample Rooms," all the citizens of the Gulch were soundly sleeping, a solitary horseman rode up to the unpretentious shanty which did duty for a parsonage. It was nothing but a two-roomed hut, rudely constructed and roughly furnished.

On this occasion the "parsonage" was in sole charge of Ah Wing, a "heathen Chinee," who acted as Parson Sim's cook and chambermaid. Ah Wing was himself perchance in some Chinaman's paradise, for his sleepy features, usually utterly void of expression, were illuminated by a yellow smile. The Parson was off, as he frequently was, on a trip down the valley, and the parsonage being well removed from the main portion of the settlement, was seldom visited during his absence. The dreaming celestial was therefore much surprised, and indeed frightened, when he was awakened from his slumber by a violent hammering at the barred door. He cautiously drew back the wooden bolt, and peered out into the warm, starlit night. Close to the door he beheld a stalwart man with long black hair and a heavy moustache, holding in one hand the bridle of a large horse, while on his left arm he carried a girl—evidently dead or in a fainting condition.

"Where is the Parson?" asked the stranger in a firm but quiet voice.

"Parson Jim he go away muchee; he no come home till Sunday," replied the surprised Chinaman.

"Well, hold my horse, and hold him tight. This young woman is very sick, and I'm going to lay her on the Parson's bed."

He entered the room, and tenderly laid his burden on the camp cot which Parson Jim used for a bed. Then he tore a fly-leaf from an old book which he saw lying around, and, producing a short end of a pencil from his pocket, wrote hastily and somewhat clumsily a few words.

"See here," he said to the Chinaman, as he stepped to the door; "give this piece of paper to the Parson as soon as he returns. This young lady is hurt a little and frightened a great deal, and she has fainted. Pretty soon she will come around. When she does, see that you take good care of her, you yellow-skinned, white-livered duck! Perhaps you'll behave yourself all the better if I tell you my name is Kansas!

The Chinaman perceptibly trembled as he heard the dreaded name, but said nothing, and the handsome stranger sprang to his horse and rode away.

Ah Wing quietly surveyed his new charge, and saw that she was a yellow-haired, fair-complexioned girl of perhaps fifteen or sixteen years, slender, and evidently unused to work of any kind. The Chinaman faithfully kept watch all night, and noticed that the girl passed gradually from her faint into an easy slumber.

It was six o'clock in the morning and the girl was still sleeping, when Parson Jim returned. Ah Wing felt much relieved, and at once handed the note to his master. It was written in a rough, unknown hand, but this is what he managed to decipher:

PARSON: You are understood to be a pretty good fellow. This girl's father was accidentally shot this evening in a scuffle with the coach-people. She must be cared for; and I select you for the job. I know your record, and you are the only man in Colorado I would trust with an improfected girl. I will see that you are supplied from time to time with money for her keep. Be true to this trust, or look out for KANSAS.

The Parson twirled the paper in his fingers, shoved it into his hip-pocket, and then asked a few questions of Ah Wing.

"What kind of a fellow brought the girl here?"

"Muchee fine Melican man," replied the little Chinaman.

"Would you know him again if you saw him, Ah Wing?"

"Yes, siree; Ah Wing no fool."

Half an hour later, the fair young stranger opened her eyes, and the Parson, in his homely but pleasant way, proceeded to make her feel at home.

"I am afraid, miss, that you have just passed through serious trouble; but try to feel that you are at least safe and among friends. You are welcome to all this poor house affords, and anything we can do for you shall be done."

But the girl burst into a flood of tears, and could speak no words but "Poor father—poor father!"

Later on, Parson Jim learned that she and her father were the only passengers on the preceding day from Denver, and that they were going through to Colorado Springs on their way to New Orleans. The coach was attacked by highwaymen, and as the girl's father, Mr. Winship, rather unwisely resisted them, he was shot dead. Then the girl had fainted, and remembered nothing until she found herself in Parson Jim's best room. Her name, she said, was Ethel Winship.

Putting the girl's story and the contents of the note together, it looked as though the desperado Kansas had killed the girl's father, and prompted by some feelings of remorse and pity, had undertaken to help the bereaved daughter.

A day or two later, when Ethel was somewhat rested, and her grief less poignant, Parson Jim had another talk with her.

"What would you like to do?" he said.

"Oh, sir, there is nothing for me to do. Get me work of some kind here in this place. We had no friends—father and I had lived and travelled together since my mother died, many years ago. We were getting poor, too, I know, and my father had some plans of his own, but what they were I do not know. If you will help me to get a living here I shall be much obliged, and I am willing to try anything."

"My poor child," said Parson Jim in his kindly voice, "I am truly sorry for you. If you can be content in my rough home for a while, stay here until we can manage something better for you. I have no one for whom I care, or who cares for me—only the boys in the camp. But those same boys will tell you that not a hair of your head shall be hurt while you stay under my roof. I have plenty of this world's wealth—more than the boys imagine—and I can afford a slight addition to my family."

So she stayed, and found that Parson Jim's words were true. She could not have been treated more as a lady had she been an earl's daughter and the guest of a dowager duchess. As the weeks passed, Parson Jim managed to add a couple of 'cute little rooms to the parsonage, one of which was "my lady's chamber," and the other the "parlor." Then, too, pretty carpets and furniture came from Denver, and the boys began to think the Parson was putting on "lugs." But they excused a good deal in the Parson, and really vied with one another in paying homage in their rough way to the Parson's ward.

Of course they soon knew the story; and Parson Jim had shown the Hon. Samuel Green and one or two others the note that Kansas had left with Ethel Winship.

Months fled, and Ethel stayed on at the Gulch. She became contented, and much appreciated the Parson's care and efforts to make her comfortable. She showed her gratitude in a hundred womanly ways, and kept the parsonage as neat and pretty as if it had been in Massachusetts or the English midlands, instead of in a wild Colorado valley. Only, every time news came of a robbery or murder by Kansas and his gang would the poor girl become agitated, and cry for vengeance on the man who took from her a dear father.

Three years slipped quickly away at George Washington Gulch. The robber had evidently not forgotten his promise to provide for the girl; for, at odd times, a package of money had been found on the outside of the Parson's window-sill, marked "From Kansas." It had always been placed there over night, in a mysterious manner, for no one was ever seen to do it. Parson Jim himself still preached every Sunday in the Sample Rooms, and was still a prime favorite with the miners, though they sometimes wondered why a man who was evidently so well "fixed" as the Parson should elect to stay in a rough, out-of-the-way place like the Gulch.

Ethel Winship had grown into a beautiful woman, and was as good as she was pretty. Parson Jim perceived this. Parson Jim was in love with his ward.

One evening in the springtime he told Ethel of his love, and asked her to be his wife.

"I cannot answer that question, dear Jim," said the girl. "Myself is the only reward which I can offer to any man, because I have naught else. So I have long ago made up my mind to keep myself to offer, if needs be, as a reward to the man who shall kill or capture Kansas. If it were not for that firm resolve, I would say 'Yes' at once, for Jim, you deserve my love and all I can give you. But do not ask me, dear. Perhaps Kansas will be captured, anyhow, and soon, by some one who will never think of reward. Then—well, don't think badly of me, Jim, dear; two things will make me a happy girl—vengeance on Kansas, and the right to call you my husband."

Parson Jim heard these words sadly enough; but he thought too much of Ethel and her resolves to seek hastily to turn her from her purpose even for his own benefit.

Early in the following summer, towards sunset, Ethel sat down on the porch of the parsonage quite alone. The Parson was away, and had been away all day, and might not return until the following evening. One of the men from the Gulch approached and doffed his hat.

"Parson in, miss?"

"No, Zeke; he is away to-day."

"Well, I wuz jest a-goin' to tell him that we've got news that Kansas is likely ter be up ter mischief 'way about ten miles along ther valley ter-night. It's the first time we e'er got a pointer as ter Kansas's tricks, an' some uv us thought as like enuff we might make a little crowd to down his nobs. Parson's mostly game fer business that's right an' squar', so I kim up ter tell him."

Ethel's eyes flashed, and the warm blood coursed quickly through her veins, as a wild thought occurred to her. She could ride like an Indian, and was a dead shot; Parson Jim had taken a special delight in making her a good horsewoman and clever with a pistol.

"I will go," she said. "I'm not going to ask if I may go; I'm going, Zeke."

"All right, miss; only it's risky work, an' not fit fer ladies. Mebbe the Parson wouldn't like fer yer to go?"

"Yes, he would, Zeke—yes, he would. Don't you know—don't you remember all about my poor, poor father? I will go; and if I get within range of Kansas I will shoot him without mercy."

So Ethel joined the party of fifteen or twenty armed men who rode out that night for the purpose of capturing, if possible, Kansas and his desperadoes. They rode in as wide a line as the valley would permit, so that no company of horsemen might pass them unnoticed, and this plan proved a good one. About ten o'clock at night they espied four horsemen, evidently awaiting the coach, and closed in upon them. Zeke insisted on keeping Ethel Winship back, and made her promise to stay with him if the boys could effect a quick capture. But, no; the outlaws knew that certain death awaited them should they be captured, and resolved to fight dearly for their lives. There was a sharp, quick interchange of pistol-shots. Three of the robbers and three of their pursuers fell from their saddles. The fourth desperado put spurs to his horse and dashed right through the crowd of miners, who, in their surprise at this action, allowed him to pass. The desperate man emptied all the charges of his revolver behind him, as he galloped, threw the pistol down, and drew another from his belt. He rode in the direction of Ethel and Zeke, and they could see that he was a magnificent man, with long black hair and a black moustache.

"Kansas!" muttered Zeke.

Ethel no sooner heard that detested name than she levelled a revolver at the man riding rapidly past. It required a steady arm and a sure eye to hit such a mark; but she did it. Click—bang—and a bullet lodged in the brain of the highwayman. A dozen men rode up and lifted the man. He was dead.

They laid him back on the ground, and one of the men, more curious than the rest, proceeded to examine the wound in his temple. To do so, he brushed back the long black hair, and discovered that it was false. Then he looked closely at the heavy moustache, that also was false; so he pulled both wig and moustache from the dead man. As he did so, a long and piercing scream rent the air, and Ethel Winship threw herself upon the corpse of the highwayman.

"Oh, my God! my poor Jim! my poor Jim! I have murdered you!" And then she fainted.

"Parson Jim!" almost whispered a dozen men.

One of the slightly wounded ruffians who also stood near, between two of his captors, nodded his head and said: "Yes, Parson Jim. He fooled you boys badly. We called him Kansas!"

When they lifted the girl from the dead body of Parson Jim, or Kansas—Ethel Winship's lover and the slayer of her father—she, too, was dead. Kansas was punished, and Ethel's father was avenged.
