

WILLIAM E. WEBSTER—LEWISTON.

THERE'S Noah and there's Daniel in the Webster roll of fame:
 The one could make a dictionary, the other could declaim,
 But the busiest day of either was a pastime, to the way
 Our William has to hustle in an ordinary day.

Twice guardian of the city's cash; and twice the people's mayor—
 He's had his share of public trust and known its hours of care.
 In church, in trade, and politics, deal with him as you may,
 The square deal and the golden rule you'll find is Webster's way.
 To-day, once more in private life, he shapes up to the plan
 Of what we call in common prose—the successful business man.
