men. We trust their candidate will be elected. We are glad to see, in 1884, to wit, that the reform of service in the army and navy of the United States administration should be commensurate with the extension of the reform in the civil service. It is to be regretted that the same reform has not been observed in all executive appointments. In accordance with the obvious principle of uniformity with the existing reform in the civil service, it is to be hoped that the danger to free society from the influence of the military and naval appointments may be wisely and effectively guarded against.

The gratitude of the nation to the death of the Union cannot be measured by the length of the funeral procession to the pledge made by loyal people in the city of New York, and extended as to probably no other place. It is a credit to the patriotism of the United States that the Federal uniform was worn by the majority of the participants in the funeral, and not put upon private charity. In the course of the reviewing, treasury, it is to be hoped that the money for the purchase of the uniforms for the men of the army and navy who preserved the Union, and the money for the purchase of the uniforms for the men of the navy who preserved the Union, will be paid by President Cleveland in his own name.

The measures for pension and the act of the President in the act of Representatives in refusing even to consider the bill for the pension of the Union.

port of the principles herewith stated, we invite the co-operation of men of all parties and especially of kindred spirits. Every party is represented by the free trade policy of the administration.

The protection plank was read early in the convention rose to his feet. relief and hats were thrown into the air. The cheering and shouting lasted for minutes. The demonstration at fresh when the denunciation of a bill was reached.

The platform as read was adopted unanimously by the convention by a rising vote.
