McGrath Pond/Salmon Lake: The Annual Meeting Comes To Order

ummer of 2019: It's time for the five lake associations in the Belgrades to hold their annual meetings and the first to assemble is the McGrath Pond/Salmon Lake Association. Small, dynamic, forward-looking, the MPSLA is celebrating its 30th anniversary - celebrating a lot of good things this year and celebrating three decades of a steady track record working to improve water quality.

Lake associations are formed for many reasons. On McGrath/Salmon, it all began with one resident who noticed the lake was turning murky green, who traced it to the sources, a town gravel pit leaking into the lake and some illegal foresting. Other property owners became involved. Working with the town, they got it to put a siltation pond at the bottom of the gravel pit. The foresting was halted. The desire of residents to prevent further deterioration of the lakes wasn't. Conversations led to meetings, led to forming an association.

Lenny Reich, that first concerned resident, who was MPSLA President from 1989-1993 and is currently Vice President and editor of the Association's impressive newsletter, wrote the following:

In April 1989 the Association paid its state fees and officially became a nonprofit corporation. The first annual meeting took place that summer at Camp Tracy. Throughout the 1990s, our Association worked to improve water quality in our lakes and to build community among the folks who loved them.

Under Lenny's auspices, the MPSLA was instrumental in forming the Belgrade Regional Conservation Allliance (currently the 7 Lakes Alliance), was involved in the initial meetings of representatives of all the Belgrade chain of lakes - a group called the Lake Associations of the Belgrades, LABs, and starting the Belgrade Lakes Conservation Corps (today's Youth Conservation Corps).

In 1998, Lenny recounts, MPSLA embarked on its first comprehensive watershed survey to get a handle on where nutrient-rich runoff was entering the lakes. As a result the Association remediated runoff problems on more than 100 shoreline properties over a five-year period, saving something like 14 tons of nutrient-rich sediments from ever reaching the lakes to turn them green.

Two decades later, MPSLA has just finished its second watershed survey. If anything, Lenny points out, this one is more thorough than the first: With the recent survey as a guide, we have developed a Watershed-Based Protection Plan to guide us through the process of once again remediating over 100 sites. From experience, we know that there are tons of sediment to keep out of the lakes so that our children and grandchildren can enjoy McGrath Pond and Salmon Lake as much as we have. It's a job that's never really done, and it's good to know that MPSLA will always be here to work with those who love them to keep McGrath and Salmon as clean and as beautiful as they can be.

The 2019 annual meeting accentuated that quality of always being there for the job that's never really done.

President Jenny Allen welcomed the gathering with a brief overview of committees and activities designed to better protect the lakes: The LakeSmart program, Courtesy Boat Inspections, water and sediment sampling, cleanups the second Sunday of each month, and keeping uptodate on projects on the other Belgrade lakes, the watershed and the larger lakes community.

Representing the larger lakes community were guest speakers from the 7 Lakes Alliance: CEO Laura Rose Day who described the operations and resources of the organization; Amy Eskins who conducts the Plant Paddle programs; and Dr. Danielle Wain who provided a water quality update.

Water quality along with water levels and the fisheries occupied the question and answer session that followed - topics close to home and near to a property owner's daily use of the lake and good reasons to get LakeSmart.

A presentation on LakeSmart strategies and activities by Kim and Dave Hallee, (former president of MPSLA), provided a positive final note to an important meeting - the 30th anniversary of an association that has worked for three decades to preserve the lakes and increase the value of property

Watershed-Based Protection Plan

As a result of our big Watershed Survey in the fall of 2017, MPSLA put together a Watershed-Based Protection Plan (WBPP) that set out a multi-year work schedule for protecting the lakes' water quality. Each of the property owners with runoff that affected lakes water quality received a letter of notification along with a guide to available resources. The WBPP is available for viewing and downloading on the MPSLA web site as a link on the Watershed Survey page. www.mcgrathpond-salmonlake.org

Implementation of the WBPP is underway in several areas. For the summer of 2019, this includes:

- Planning and initiating Pleasant Point Park shoreline remediation with Oakland Town officials, 7 Lakes Alliance staff, and RSU18 science students.
- Supporting and promoting 7 Lakes Alliance's Camp Road Workshops, inviting MSPLA members and encouraging those identified in the Watershed Survey with road or driveway issues to attend.
- Initiating Best Management Practice workshops for lakes protection in high-density camp/residential areas such as Tilton Point Trail, Tranquility Trail, Spaulding Point, Pinewoods Trail, and Kelleher Trail.
- Conducting LakeSmart evaluations on low-impact sites identified by the Watershed Survey.

The Luckiest Boy The Guide Ghosts of Great Pond

by Rod Johnson

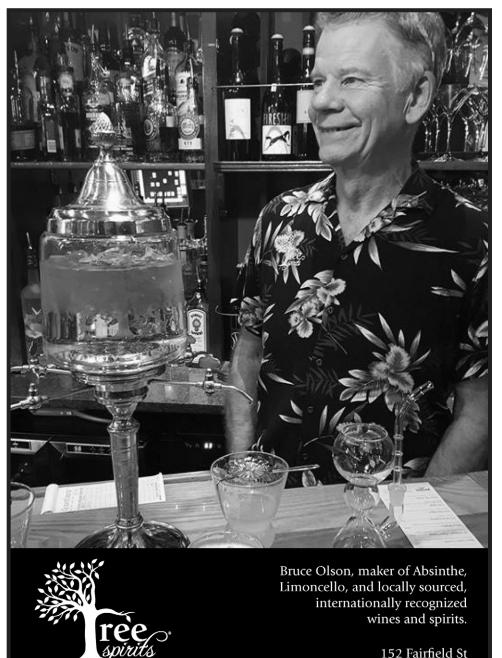

s many of you may recall, for each of the last five summers strange hap- ${f A}$ penings have occurred on Great Pond. Several "near sightings" and "close run-ins" with ghostly beings lead us to believe that the Guide Ghosts of Great Pond may in fact have an annual outing—on the very pond where they guided fishermen a century ago. Foggy nights seem to be their favorite weather, assumably to minimize the risk of being spotted. First, in 2014, it was a tourist scared out of her wits when she and her boyfriend "bumped into" a drifting old guideboat when canoeing at dusk around Abena Point. The next year, three young teenage girls heard fiddle music and voices on Otter Island when they swam out from Pine Beach. After that in 2016, the Rome police records note that a hysterical call came in from a man who had been sideswiped by a long white boat while he was waiting out a thunderstorm on Whale Rock. His frantic report described the driver of the long boat as a ghostly looking soul with whispy white hair. In 2017 Phil Cobb investigated fiddle music on Oak Island and found the still-hot remnants of a bonfire. Lastly in 2018, Rod and Doris Johnson's inboard suffered an engine failure at night while returning from a visit with Steve and Edie Dubord on Gleason's Shore. A fog had settled in quickly as they drifted onto the White Ledges and the Lyman went aground. Simultaneously they became entangled in a long anchor rode strung out from the bow of a very nice antique guideboat about 20 feet long. They took note that the old Gray Marine engine was still warm and a pail of recently caught white perch was evident. Doris recalls smelling a rather pungent odor wafting from the craft—which she described as a mix of kerosene, fish and wool, all with a strong tinge of home brew. Given the evidence, who could doubt the existence of The Guide Ghosts of Great Pond. This leads me to report on some very recent shenanigans that were reported to the Maine Warden Service just last week.

It seems that very recently on June 22nd Mr. Paul Thompson, a seasonal resident with a cottage in Sahagian Cove, Great Pond, town of Belgrade awoke early at approximately 4:45 a.m. While moving about his cottage in the new light of day he noticed a strange craft was tied to his dock. The sight of the long narrow double ended craft instantly stirred concern, curiosity and a quick stab of nostalgia. Paul realized quickly that he had not seen a boat of that type since he was a very young boy. He recalled traveling with his siblings and mother Esther when she often paddled her canoe to the village for supplies. In the Continued on page 12...

Take It Outside -

Tard to believe this is already the 7th column of the summer. I couldn't believe it when my morning paper had a "Back to School" flyer in it already! I don't think the kids are reading the paper, though. They are too busy having fun in and around the water and hiking the nearby trails. As the air has warmed to the high eighties and the water into the upper 70's, more and more people are swimming, sailing, and tubing. The trout fishing is slowing down but the bass and pike are continuing to feed on schools of alewives. The bass are also hitting big Hex mayflies that are hatching in the evening and early morning on several of our lakes, including Great Pond, Long Pond, and Messalonskee. I have had good luck with spotting feeding fish on the surface early in the morning and casting big flies or poppers to them. A three-pound smallie on a 6-wt flyrod is a lot of fun. The early morning is also a great time to watch the new loon chicks learning to

Last week I talked a bit about the summer camps in the area and this week I met a lot of campers on the trails, including a group of excited Camp Runoia "First Years" getting ready to hike "The Mountain" on their second day of camp. Also at The Mountain, I helped fellow 7-Lakes Alliance Board Member, Mel Croft, lead a geology hike to help people learn how plate tectonics and the glaciers formed the landscape and then lichens, mosses, and salmon transformed the bare rocks into a complex, forested community. We had 25 eager hikers that climbed up to the Long Pond overlook and ate lunch while Mel talked about 200 million years of geological history and glaciers. The hike was followed by a short field trip to a sand pit near the Belgrade Town Office that used to be a marine delta and a visit to the Foster Point Road Esker. I thing everyone learned something and had a great time.

This area offers some great outdoor recreation, whether you like to hike, bike, birdwatch, fish, sail, or paddle a canoe or kayak. Pick up a map of the local trails at Day's Store or from the 7 Lakes Alliance at the Maine Lakes Resource Center (MLRC). Also, please check the 7-LA FaceBook page for details on some interesting events scheduled this summer (https://www.facebook.com/7lakesalliance/).

There will be many other interesting events through the summer, including the official opening of the Fogg Island Trail on July 20th and a special presentation by the Maine State Museum at 7 PM on August 8th entitled "Maine in 112 Objects." And don't forget the annual Beanhole Supper and Loon Calling Contest on August 3th. Check the web site and keep an eye on the sign out front. And make sure you take a kid along on your next outdoor adventure.

Finely Finished Log Home Offers Privacy, Parker Pond Frontage

FAYETTE - Welcome to peace and privacy. To a generous 217 feet of frontage on the west shore of quiet Lovejoy Pond, whose boat affic is primarily canoes and kayaks. And to a handsome, spa cious, year-round chalet-style log home whose rustic character perfectly complements the natural beauty of the secluded setting.

Tucked down a short road a quick hop to Fayette village, the nine-room home offers sweet, sunrise views over Lovejoy on all three levels, and from the wraparound, elevated deck.

The house sits on a well-screened, 0.63-acre lot whose back lawn slopes very gently to the water's edge. There's a big dock, and a substantial float that can accommodate furniture for relaxed entertaining.

Finely finished throughout, the interior features an openconcept main level with exposed beams, lovely paneling, and a wood-burning river-stone fireplace that soars two stories, and combined with the adjacent kitchen provides a wonderful "heart" of the home. Surfaces are nicely tiled, with a gas cooktop on the long, two-level island. A versatile office/study makes single-level living, or guest accommodation, an option.

It's a house with "extras": a hot tub and a wood stove in the finished, walkout, primarily daylight lower level, which has extensive family room/exercise space; a two-person sauna; a two-car garage (unusual, with lakeside properties) that has walkup storage above; and a pretty, twolevel wood shed. (It's been said that you can judge a home by how well and neatly the wood is stored. This is true.)

Note Fayette is close to fine secondary schools - highly regarded Maranacook and private Kents Hill.

The home at 15 Sydney Road, Fayette, is listed for sale at $525,000 by Hoa Hoang, Broker/Owner, of

Hoang Realty in Augusta. Please contact Hoa at 207-623-0623;

The Dams Keeper Report

Well, we are enjoying some beautiful weather aren't we?! The way life ought to be! If you don't believe it, just think back seven months and all of that white stuff on the ground!

As of this writing, we have 1.65" of rain forecasted for the next 10 days which, if it occurs while we're all catching some shut-eye, will be welcomed.

Great Pond is essentially right at full pond or to be exact, 0.6" above full pond with gate 1 opened just 3" for the fisherman. In other words, Great Pond is just barely breaking over the spillway at the Village dam or right at full pond. Long Pond is 3.36" above full pond with both gates still completely closed. Salmon/McGrath remains at 1/10" below full with its one gate still opened the mandated 1 turn or 1cfs. All of our ponds are doing great.

Your eleven dedicated and volunteer representatives on the Inter-local Belgrade Area Dams Committee continue to vigilantly monitor and adjust all of our water levels with daily reports and monthly meetings to ensure these optimum water levels. And we are still doing our rain dances – which incidentally, isn't pretty but apparently effective! We cannot afford another summer of low water levels like last summer.

For those of you that have been wondering what the Salmon Lake single gate dam looks like, here it is! It might not be the Hoover Dam, but it works for us.

Enjoy the family, your vacation and this beautiful weather!

into almost every home in the USA. Edward Bok's Pulitzer was written later, The Americanization of Edward Bok, a great biographical read about a Dutch boy who became a prosperous American. He also knew how to write!

I found these wonderful Bok books at the Waterville Library, such a beauty of an old building restored and also a prize winning public library. Just across the street from the laundromat.

*Augusta finally became fire control central pretty much after the citizens of Maine brought it under control that horrid week. Out-of-state equipment and help from everywhere starting pouring in, so our capital city coordinated all the generosity of Americans everywhere.

1950's and early 1960's, a post-heyday era of the fishing guides and boats, many of these long narrow boats could be seen up on blocks or hanging from chain falls in boathouses lining the stream. Most would never run again.

Paul cautiously opened the creaky screen door, then left the camp to slowly approach the dock and craft. He had no idea what to expect and was somewhat overwhelmed with emotion. After a good perusal of the long double ender it was clear that the driver had vanished, but he noted that the boat had been tied and fendered properly as a boatman would do. He also noted several items in the boat such as antique bamboo fly rods, a frog box, ring anchor with hemp rope, and several empty Kruger Ale bottles. Also, a plug of Day's Work chewing tobacco lay on the motor box. There was no hint of any identification on the craft such as a registration or hull number, only the name IDA on the lap strake hull. He then conferred with wife Maria who had joined him at the dock and agreed they should call the Maine Warden Service. The plot thickened when the couple noticed that Esther's old aluminum canoe was gone from it's usual spot under the big pine. A young Warden was dispatched to the camp by mid-morning and took a full report of both the missing canoe and abandoned guide boat. After three days passed the warden returned with a chagrinned look on his face, saying that he could find no clues about either the stolen canoe or abandoned guide boat. By then, word had spread all over town that a mysterious antique guideboat was tethered to the Thompson dock. Boat after boat came idling by to get a glimpse of the old craft. Many folks were taking pictures, some even had the gaul to yell ashore, "Is It For Sale?" By the fourth day the Thompsons realized they needed to have the boat removed to regain their privacy and planned to do so the next morning. At midnight however, all hell broke loose when a strange weather phenomenon overtook Central Maine, shrouding Great Pond in a thick fog. Following the fog came imbedded lightning and north winds up to near hurricane force. The storm slowly petered out and by daybreak it was over. The lake took on the look of a polished mirror and as if by premonition, the Thompson's peeked out of the upstairs window only to see that the guide boat was GONE—and Esther's old Grumman canoe was back in its resting place under the pine.

Once again, our only conclusion is that The Guide Ghosts of Great Pond work in strange ways—and that we can expect their shenanigans to continue.

clear, and shoot additional scenes in Belgrade.

Indeed, "[t]he first third of the film is set in Belgrade," Cooke explained, in the first of a series of emails. It was shot at Cooke's family's camp on Great Pond, on a camp road through a field, and at Castle Island Camps. The film's ending also takes place on the shore of Great Pond.

In the film, Cooke plays hard-charging, workaholic, fifty-something Lisa, who comes to the Belgrade home of her younger, more laid back, but recently widowed sister, Karen, played by Elissa Piszel. The two sisters have long been estranged, but they take a road trip to Nebraska to view the eclipse and try to work out their differences.

To date, three, post-MIFF screenings have been scheduled. The film will be included in "MIFF in the Mountains," in which eight of the best films from this year's MIFF will be shown during a mini-festival in Rangeley, August 2-5. The film will also be shown in New York City on August 22, and at the Prairie Lights Film Festival in Grand Island, Nebraska in mid-October. Conservation Too -

The Issue of Forest Pests i.e. "Forest Bugs"

By Dale Finseth

opefully we can help people at the park or Lin their back yards identify some invasive forest pests. Maine's Soil & Water Conservation Districts have a project with the Maine Forest Service to help people identify invasive forest pests i.e. bugs that could do serious damage to our woodlands or in some cases cause you illness. While some of them have not yet appeared in Maine, many have. We need to be vigilant and identify them should they appear.

The Browntail Moth is already here and seems to be getting the most press coverage right now. Some areas of the State are affected more than others. Many people are experiencing the rash on their skin and other problems. Kennebec County and the midcoast areas seem much more heavily infested. Efforts to, not only identify its spread, but manage and minimize damage are in process. This moths' caterpillar has two distinct red/orange dots on its back. Its "tents" are also distinctive. They appear at the end of branches rather than closer to the trunk in crotches of the likely targets.

The Browntail Moth caterpillar has tiny (0.15) mm) poisonous (setae) that cause dermatitis (skin rash) similar to poison ivy on sensitive individuals.

Direct

tact with the caterpillar or indirect contact with airborne hairs may cause the reaction. Most people affected by the hairs develop a localized rash lasting a few hours or several days but on some individuals the rash can be severe and last for weeks. We have begun to hear much more of this problem. It is also possible for respiratory problems to develop which require a physician visit and possible treatment. This year there is some benefit to the wet weather with the collapse of browntail moth due to the fungus entomophaga aulicae and possibly other pathogens. It is unclear how much that may help now or in the future. But it seems to be shrinking the caterpillar population this year.

Another forest pest already here is Hemlock Woolly Adelgid. It is not that uncommon. We have been working to identify its location, possible spread and efforts to control damage. Evidence of its existence are "woolly' collections on the underside of hemlock branches along the stems where the needles occur. It only occurs on hemlock trees.

Up until two years ago we had not officially branches. Oak trees and fruit trees seem the more seen the Emerald Ash Borer. Well it is now officially identified in Maine, particularly at our SW border with New Hampshire and also in Northern Maine. The point now is to identify it early and try and limit its spread. The Emerald Ash Borer can devastate woodlots of Ash trees. Once fully established, destroying the wood is often the best option. There are areas in Michigan and New York that have needed to remove all their Ash trees. The small shiny green insects bore into the Ash trees and destroy the tree from the inside. Sick Ash trees should become suspect. The insects are tiny [see photo of examples placed on a penny] and the actual holes in the tree's bark are also very small. The damage to the Ash tree is the best way to begin identification.

What can a person do? Try and learn how to identify some of these nasty Forest Pests. The Maine Forest Service of the Maine Dept. of Ag, Conservation and Forestry has an excellent website for all invasives including these Forest Pests. www.informe.org/portal/about_me/invasives.html If you think you have identified one of these critters, do not be afraid to call the Maine Forest Service. 207-287-3891. They would rather help you learn it is NOT an invasive than have you fail to report the real deal. Take a picture or collect the bug in a bag or bottle and keep it in the freezer. Help out in this effort to protect Maine from these invasives.

Remember, protecting the woods is one way to protect water quality. Do your part!

Why? Stormwater carries soil with its pollutants like phosphorus into the lake where it feeds algae blooms. These blooms look ugly, decrease property value, and disrupt the lake's ecosystem. The loons we thrill to see and hear need clear water to find their food. Fish, frogs, osprey and eagles depend on a healthy

It's easy to fix those bare spots. Covering soil with mulch keeps pollution from being washed into the lake by stormwater. There are many mulches, but one of the best is Erosion Control Mulch (ECM). It contains large woody pieces and small stones that lock together, so it doesn't wash away in rainstorms.

Out of the Moon's Shadow

and Into the Limelight

By Gregor Smith

Cince the dawn of civilization, the moon has Oinspired authors, artists, and composers. Now, fifty years to the day after Neil Armstrong made his "one small step" onto the lunar surface, a new moon completely blocks the sun's light for a few minutes, will have its world première at the 22nd annual Maine International Film Festival.

Co-starring Belgrade actress Debra Lord ("Dee") Cooke and partly shot in that town, In the Moon's Shadow will debut at 12:30 on Saturday, July 20, in Railroad Square Cinema's 150-seat Cinema 1. The film will be shown again the next day at 3:30 in the same room. Co-stars Dee Cooke and Elissa Piszel and director Alvin Case will attend both screenings and will take questions from the audience.

The film had its genesis in August 2016, when Cooke and Case were sitting on her dock on Great Pond in Belgrade brainstorming storylines. They had worked together before, when Case cast Cooke as the lead in his 2015 sci-fi film Analogue.

Case then talked to his brother Edward, a nuclear physicist by day and screenwriter by night.

The two brothers hatched the idea of writing a story centered around the solar eclipse that would occur on August 21, 2017. The plan was to shoot for several days around the eclipse in Nebraska, where the film, inspired by a total solar eclipse, in which the eclipse would be total and the skies would likely be

Fire Novel and History Book about The Week Maine Burned in Oct. 1947

by Martha F. Barkley

I veryone around the globe was updated and informed about the famous Bar Harbor fire, but few heard the rest of the story: towns in southern Maine completely devoured by fast flames like the recent Paradise, CA disaster and southern coastal resorts destroyed so very dreadfully fast that people fled for their lives to the freezing ocean and wet sands on the beaches.

What a story, but who remembers that extra wet spring like what we just had in 2019, followed by draught conditions in August-October? Wildfire Loose, non fiction by Joyce Butler was published thirty years after the disaster in intricate detail. Facts like the lady who was baking blueberry muffins when she smelled smoke and heard "the freight train sound" of the descending firestorm through the tops of trees.

The Stars are Fire is a novel by Anita Shreve that shares the family turmoil on the southern coast of Maine during the draught and tragic losses of homes right beside the ocean. I am particularly pleased that this lesser known part of Maine history is explored in this novel rather than the very well known Bar about these two books on the same subject: the week that Maine burned. We had so many revelations in the novel as well as the documentary type history.

Only 15 people lost their lives throughout this horror was quickly pointed out by Claudia. What a miracle, but, of course, many many injuries, undocumented. The novel dealt with fire injury. A thought to be dead or missing husband returned home months after a long coma released him from his misery with scarred face and crippling conditions.

Cece commented on the world renowned lab in Bar Harbor. Who knew of this gem of science for cancer research and the mice lost for further experimentation? Science labs around the globe had shared with Bar Harbor, so the basic research was not lost, thank goodness. Clean up by shoveling mice remains out the broken windows made the volume of loss even more concrete and real in its terrible vastness.

Happy endings for novels was pitched by Martha (another one, not me) who teaches college age students. The novel has a twist at the end that I just found troubling, but maybe you, dear reader, prefer happy endings. Music is such an important part of this story and I simply was enraptured by the writing of novelist Anita Shreve about expressive piano playing and also buying a record player for the family to enjoy music in their home. Sounds like our home, full of music.

The very amazing facts of so many volunteers around Maine that you saw very few real fire fighters in their protective garb. Self reliance of every community and all the college and university age students who were right out there to help. Kay commented on the Bowdoin students who fought the fire so very long on one side of Rt. 1, that they were found the next morning, exhausted and sleeping on the other side of the road where they had BUILT fires to Barbara and others helped select these two books for us this summer and Loyce brought her huge book of Maine maps to help locate the communities Our Belgrade Library book discussion went on and on from 11 am to 1 pm and ponds in the history. The China fire was the closest to Belgrade, maybe even one of the notorious "set fires." My first edition of Wildfire Loose had a terrific map in the front of the southern fires and up the coast to Kennebunk and the back flap of my library book had the Bar Harbor fire locations.

> It was clear to me by these two maps that Bar Harbor lost a third of the historic resort to this calamity while the more complete devastation was in the south with over seven towns completely destroyed. Everything gone, from farmhouses and barns and animals to main street Victorian homes and businesses. One town destroyed bragged later that they only stopped mail delivery for one day! How did these resilient people do it?

> As Joyce Butler so carefully documents, everyone pitched in, everyone. While the men all went to volunteer as firefighters, the women were busily making sandwich after sandwich after bowl of stew or chowder for the exhausted men. Some women even delivered coffee and food to firefighters trapped inside of dangerous smoke filled, windy areas. The wind played such a role in the fire's movements and the dryness of ground level "slash" created a torrential wind from within the devouring flames.

> I found the definition of slash in the helpful vocabulary list at the end of the history. With high winds from a storm not too long before 1947, the woods were full of fallen branches and trees. Draught brought all this slash to dangerous, known levels. New Hampshire closed its woods to hunters before Maine did, and some fires still occurred in NH. Poverty Pond, now on the map as Silver Pond, experienced complete fire damage in Maine not far from the NH border...three of us at book group hunted for this one on the map!

> Our next book for August is The Library Book, another fire story about the LA public library burning. Come join our discussion. We would love to hear your opinions.

> I also recommend The Man from Maine by Edward Bok who tells very descriptively about Cyrus Curtis as a young lad experiencing the Portland fire of 1866. Curtis later developed The Ladies Home Journal which found its way

Golden Pond Wealth Management Gifts $25,000 to Waterville's Paul J. Schupf Art Center

Management in support of the community capital campaign for the Paul J. Schupf Art Center.

Designed to bring together under one roof some of Waterville's most beloved arts institutions, including the Maine Film Center, Common Street Arts, and a new gallery of the Colby Museum of Art, the Paul J. Schupf Art Center will be constructed on the current site of The Center building at 93 Main Street, directly adjacent to the Waterville Opera House and City Hall building and downtown's central green space, Castonguay Square. Waterville Creates! and Colby College are partnering on this transformative project, which will create a distinctive hub for visual arts, performing arts, arts education, and film for children and adults. In addition to enhancing Waterville's reputation as a destination for arts and culture, this new facility will add vitality to downtown Waterville during both the daytime and evening hours and serve as an economic driver for the region.

"Giving back to our community is one of our core values at Golden Pond Wealth Management, and we are particularly compelled to work with organizations that advance our collective cultural well-being," says Brian Bernatchez, managing director of Golden Pond Wealth Management. "We are a major season sponsor of the Waterville Opera House because of its tremendous impact on our community, both culturally and economically, and we see the Paul J. Schupf Art Center as an incredible opportunity to further advance the arts in Waterville." Golden Pond Wealth Management's gift was pledged in support of the $2 million community capital campaign led by Waterville Creates! as part of the overall fundraising goal of $18 million for the project.

"Golden Pond Wealth Management has consistently been a strong supporter of the arts in our community, and we are thrilled by their generous support of this project," says Shannon Haines, president and CEO of Waterville Creates! "The recent momentum that has been building for our community capital campaign has been due in large part to a business community that values and invests in the arts not only for the cultural enrichment they provide but for their power to drive a robust local economy."

According to the Arts & Economic Prosperity 5 study published by Americans for the Arts in 2017, Waterville's nonprofit arts and cultural organizations and their audiences generate over $6 million in direct economic activity per year. Business Contributions to the Arts: 2018 Edition, a study by The Conference Board in conjunction with Americans for the Arts, revealed that 63% of companies believe the arts contribute to the economy of the community and 79% of companies believe arts help to improve quality of life in the community.

Waterville Creates! connects artists, cultural organizations, and the public with arts and cultural events and programs happening in our community. We firmly believe that art and culture have the power to enrich lives, strengthen community bonds, and serve as an economic engine. We promote and support arts education, exhibitions, theatre, film, music, and dance that is accessible to all residents and visitors. By helping to build a creative economy, Waterville Creates! is leading the effort to make Waterville an exciting cultural destination and a thriving, vibrant community.
