MIFF Features World Premiere of American Thief

The 23rd edition of the Maine International Film Festival, taking ▲ place at the Skowhegan Drive-In July 7-16, will feature the world premiere showing of the American independent political thriller American Thief as its Centerpiece Film selection.

Four years in the making but fresher than today, this wildly original, truly thrilling film has the immediacy, daring and perspective of only the best cinematic triumphs of recent years—yet it's a true American Indie, shot because it had to be, and introducing us to several great talents, including director and co-writer Miguel Silveira, producer and co-writer Michel Stolnicki, co-writer Missy Hernandez and leading actors Xisco Maximo Monroe, Khadim Diop, Ben Becher, and Josefina Scaro.

In American Thief, Toncruz and Diop are teenage hackers. Diop wants to awaken society to the reality of overreaching government surveillance programs, while Toncruz wants to use technology to avenge his father's murder. As Toncruz connects to internet criminals on the deep web, Paul Hunter, a disgruntled and possibly somewhat askew video blogger, rants about political conspiracy theories. Both Paul and Toncruz are contacted by a mysterious, nameless figure who claims to be able to provide what they all need to expose the truth. Meanwhile, an artificial intelligence programmer observes what unfolds as she attempts to contain the monster she's created. American Thief leads up to an astonishing climax on Election evening 2016.

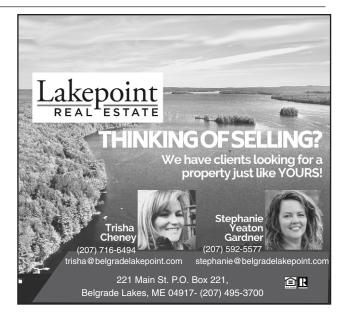

Festival Director of Programming Ken Eisen says, "American Thief was a thrilling discovery for us, and we are convinced that our audience will share our excitement when they become the first ones to see a public screening." The film shows at 8:45 p.m. on Sat., July 11, and the filmmakers will be present at the event. Individual tickets and passes are now available to purchase online at MIFF.org.

—The Luckiest Boy—

uring my early years of growing up in the Lakes, a colloquial vocabulary was acquired, much of which could not be found in Merriam Webster's biggest book. Many were bastardizations of proper words or phrases—lengthened, shortened or somehow twisted. The local old timers that had lived through WWI and or WWII would intermittently spout words that were slang at best and often just plain garble or swearing. Of course, we kids in the village heard much of this over time and carried some forward. For instance, a person sick with cold or flu was said to have "The Creepin' Crud." I heard myself using the phrase just a day ago when we received a call that a good friend had contacted the COVID-19 virus. Five minutes later I decided to reprimand myself for using such a slangy term for a deadly virus. It seems the old term has a slightly funny or certainly less serious inflection to it than is required to describe the killer virus. Let's reserve Creepin' Crud for colds, seasonal flu, or poison ivy for that matter. I would like to share a rough timeline of our ongoing health crisis that is affecting us all, really on a world wide basis.

Jan 15, 2020: We are watching the nightly news as usual. There are occasional blurbs about a virus in Wuhan, China that could spread.

Jan 20: The WHO says cases are now in Japan, Thailand and South Korea

Jan 25: Wuhan is put under strict quarantine

Jan 30: WHO declares a global emergency as there are now 9,000 cases in 18 countries

The Creepin' Crud

by Rod Johnson

Feb 4: The Diamond Princess cruise ship is quarantined in Yokohama, Japan with 3,700 on board

Feb 11: The WHO announced that the official name of the virus is COVID-19

Feb 14: The first death outside Asia occurs in France, a male Chinese tourist

Feb 20: South Korea reports the virus has taken 104 lives

Feb 24: The U.S. stock market plummeted after the Dow experienced it's worst day in two years

Feb 29: The first corona virus death, a man in his 50's, died in Washington State

March 6: An 8.3 billion dollar stimulus package was passed as the number of global cases of corona hit 100,000

March 10: Italy announced a lockdown for the entire country, and Iran reported 900 new cases and 291 deaths

March 13: States across the nation are closing schools, numbers of sick and dying are increasing daily in the U.S and overseas

March 16: Canada closes it's borders to noncitizens, MLB pushes opening by 8 weeks, NASCAR and the Kentucky Derby postponed

March 20: The Olympic flame arrived in Japan, though the committee said a postponement or cancellation is possible

March 23, 24, 25: Many governors are issuing stay at home advisories or executive orders

March 30: Spain announced 85,195 cases, China 81,470. New York City announced the first death of a minor from the virus

April 2: The U.S. Department of Labor released figures that showed 6.6 million Americans filed for unemployment benefits last week

April 5: The number of deaths in New York topped 4,000, U.K. Prime Minister Johnson enters the hospital due to the virus

April 8: New York suffers it's worst day with 779 new deaths, and France reported their death toll today was 1,417.

Much has happened since this was written on April 15, 2020. It's hard to fathom that we heard about a virus in China, no matter it's proper name, on January 15. In a bit less than three months we are quarantined with stay at home directives, wearing face masks and keeping at least six feet apart. Sadly, tens of thousands of people have died world wide in those three months, and in our own country we have surpassed 22,000 with more coming. Perhaps this reminder of the early stages might be helpful in getting it all in some sort of perspective. Also, it is very likely that we all know people who had the awful virus and many of us knew people who perished. May we all not forget those lost and keep in mind how fragile life really is.

It's difficult to find positive developments in a pandemic, though some by-products if you will, have come forth. Who would have thought our world wide air pollution has decreased by a large degree. Telemedicine seems to be filling a large gap in personal medical appointments. There is a resurgence in human kindness and tolerance that we see on a daily basis in grocery lines, walking outside, helping others who need it and so on. The cheering from balconies for people who serve, care for and supply us. Violent crimes are down. During this time of despair, we all look for rays of light to give us hope. It seems to me that the ones just mentioned are helpful and I'm sure there are others that you can find and put on the list. Don't let this silent monster take you out either physically or mentally. Be Strong, be smart and be careful.

Keep in mind that this story was written in early April. Here we sit now in early June and the death toll is 112,00 in the United States and has topped 400,000 world wide.

Take It Outside -

 \mathbf{C} o far this has been a cool and windy transition to summer. The fishing has continued to be productive, especially early in the morning and late in the evening. I love fishing these crepuscular periods when the lake is typically dead calm, and it is easy to spot fish feeding on or near the surface. Recently, I was heading down the lake shortly after sunrise in about 45 feet of water when I spotted some riffles on the surface and slowed down. There was an insect hatch taking place and some fish were grabbing breakfast. I grabbed my 6-wt flyrod and cast a big brown, bead-headed, woolly bugger into the middle of the action (for my non fly fishing readers, the woolly bugger is a big ugly fly that doesn't really look like anything in particular but looks enough like almost everything fish eat that they can't resist it). I immediately had a hard strike and suddenly a huge rainbow trout that thought it was a salmon jumped three feet in the air trying spit out my fly. And then it did it again and again making seven water clearing jumps, two of which were at least three feet high before I finally got it in the net. After a battle like that, I decided it had earned its freedom and I gently unhooked the 20"+ fish while keeping the net in the water and reached into my pocket to take a picture before releasing the fish. Just as I got my camera in my hand, the fish made jump #8 up and out of the net, totally drenching me in the process before I got a picture. I laughed out loud and realized why I love fishing so much. Even without the picture, I now have an indelible memory etched in my brain that will last as long as I have a brain. I headed down to the dam in the Village and took a few more casts with the woolly bugger, catching two nice bass before losing my woolly bugger to a snag on the bottom. Yesterday, I was again out early and spotted a school of alewives at the surface being chased by larger fish. This time I had one of my flyrods rigged with a White Zonker, a streamer that nicely mimics the landlocked alewives in the lake. I quickly caught several nice smallmouth bass and then tied into another nice fat 20" rainbow.

Soon the wind picked up and the baitfish went deep as the sun rose higher. I headed for some weedbeds near the lee shore and switched to my 9-wt flyrod with a wire leader and a Todd's wiggle minnow fly that has been productive for both northern pike and crappie this summer. I soon landed a nice 30" pike that provided a real battle on the flyrod. By the time this article is published, the water temperatures will be around 70F in the lakes and the bass will be in the shallows either sitting on their own beds or chasing the sunfish on theirs. It is a fun time for fly fishermen to catch a lot of fish on streamer flies or surface poppers, especially at dawn or dusk. Spinning gear also works well with surface lures, especially at dusk. It can be a great time to teach a youngster how to fish because the action is fast.

Every spring I act as a "Fish Friends" mentor for the Atlantic Salmon Federation (ASF). I work with several schools (and the MLRC) to help students raise Atlantic Salmon fry in refrigerated tanks in the classroom from eggs we receive from the National Hatchery at Green Lake in Ellsworth. The students study salmon life cycles and migrations and the fish are eventually stocked into the Bond Brook in Augusta to help restore this Federally-listed endangered species. This year with the schools teaching virtually, the kids missed out on stocking the fry, but they got to watch videos of their teachers doing it while properly socially distancing and masked. Lauren Pickford (7-Lakes Staff) and I stocked the MLRC and Winthrop HS fry after carefully equilibrating the temperatures and pH between the cooler and the brook. This is a great program and gets young people (and their parents) excited about these critically important fish. Maine is the only U.S. State with reproducing native Atlantic salmon and is trying to restore these once thriving fisheries.

During the sunny windy days, I have been doing a lot of hiking on 7-Lakes Alliance properties and conservation easements where we will be constructing new trails. The wind helps keep the bugs away. I also recently hiked our Mount Phillip trail and just as I was starting out, I met a young woman named, Bronwyn, and her roughly year-old daughter who were just finishing up their hike. They currently live in Bingham but Bronwyn grew up in Mount Vernon and "loves to hike in this area." She and her daughter had hiked French Mountain earlier that morning

Your Part in Protecting Water Quality

By Dale Finseth

7hile I hope last week's article on invasive plants was timely, I'd like to return to some of the more general discussions of water quality protection this week.

We seem to have finally launched into summer as I sit here at my computer. It's unclear how the "summer season" will be further altered by the Covid-19 virus and how our behaviors will change as we each decide how to prepare for and carry out our summer activities in our watershed. I do want to make sure to recommend becoming active in the upcoming Long Pond watershed survey scheduled for September 22nd and 23rd. It is an excellent way to learn more about your watershed and how to help protect the water quality. For more information check the BLA website or directly contact the BLA at 512-5150 or info@BLAmaine.org Take the opportunity to help protect the future of one of your lakes i.e. Long Pond.

I'll start with the basics such as a brief definition of "non-point source pollution" or NPS. The term means just what it implies. The pollution comes from many sources instead of a single "point". It's the rain runoff from roofs, parking areas and roadways. It includes the unimpeded runoff from your yard/lawn or a farmer's field. It may include the runoff from a local commercial/retail activity. Some of it may come from an area of the watershed where septic systems are not working effectively. NPS at all those sites adds up and has a cumulative effect on our lakes. The spring runoff from heavy rainfall and such can heighten the impact of NPS. That's why it's called "stormwater runoff".

How do we address these NPS sites? We use another "three letter abbreviation", a BMP or "Best Management Practice". [I prefer to use the term "Better Management Practice". It's presumptuous to think we know what is best.] A BMP is a practice done to address the problem caused by the Non-Point Source. It doesn't need to be complicated. It can be as simple as modifying where the water runoff goes as it heads downhill towards the lake or stream. Perhaps it is adding some trees or shrubs or a berm to slow the impact of rain and slow the runoff as it flows across your yard. Staff here at the Kennebec District or your local watershed group are able to identify different types of BMPs designed to intercept water runoff. The practice either removes or decreases that runoff's impact on a stream or pond.

What you want to know is "what can I do to help protect and even improve the water quality of our marvelous watersheds?" This summer's issues of "Summertime In the Belgrades", will help readers identify different conservation issues and how to address them. Some of those will be suggestions for how to mediate an NPS site on your own property. While we often focus on people who own camps on the water's edge our suggestions are for everybody who uses the resources in that area whether you simply walk on the beach, live year-round on the shoreline, or occasionally drop a boat into the water. In fact, it is not essential that you live 'on the water'. Even if you are spending your time or living quite a distance from the shoreline you are still in a watershed. Everyone lives in a watershed. The water that leaves your property ends up in one of our streams or ponds. Even if it seems to disappear down a storm drain, that water runoff ends up somewhere. Think about your impact on that water and what it carries to the larger water body.

Some people like to focus on how they manage their yard. Minimize your lawn and only fertilize if you absolutely need to and then only in the fall. Keep the lawn well back from the water's edge. A good buffer planting of shrubs with erosion control mulch [ECM] does a good job of intercepting water runoff, slowing its speed and filtering it before it gets to the lake. Control the water runoff from your buildings or driveway and parking areas. These impervious surfaces concentrate rainwater runoff and funnel it into the lake or stream. Clean and manage drainage ditches. Divert that water into the woods or otherwise filter it so it doesn't transport soil, chemicals, or other toxics into the water. If you have a driveway or share a camp road, make sure it is designed and maintained to collect the rainwater and divert it into either filter ponds or a vegetative area where the water has time to settle before it gets to the lake. Check the road surface, the ditches and the culverts to see that they are NOT simply channeling soil particles and other pollutants into the lake. If you use a boat, keep it maintained. Don't spill or drain engine fluids into the water. Make sure you check your boat and trailer for any petroleum residue and/or other pollutants. ...AND MAINTAIN YOUR SEPTIC SYSTEM!!! Have it checked regularly and pumped as needed.

Celebrate Father's Day June 21

• Father's Day is Sunday, June 21 and a good way to do something special with a Dad, a Granddad or a Dad figure is to take a tip from the beautiful surroundings and match one of the many outings nearby with the Dad in your life. Top of the list might be fishing, ice cream, a scenic hike, a drive to a breathtaking view or a cook-out with Maine red hot dogs. Happy Father's Day..

Oakland Public Library Is Open

• The Oakland Pubic Library is open for check out of books, magazines and movies, and computers are available. Hand sanitizers must be used upon entering and also at the service desks and masks that cover the nose and mouth must be worn. There is a 30-minute limit on visits and a 5-item limit on loans. Patrons must observe 6-foot physical distancing. Hours are Tuesday 10 am-7 pm, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday 10 am-6 pm. Contact staff@oaklandpubliclibrary-maine.org or oaklandpubliclibrary@gmail.com or 465-7533.

CLYNK Program To Feed Children

• One bag of bottles equals one meal. Camp Mechuwana in Winthrop has been preparing hundreds of meals daily for school-aged children in the local communities. Their latest appeal for support is a CLYNK program. Participants will receive CLYNK bags, labeled and ready to be dropped off at local Hannaford stores. Contact mechuwana@fairpoint.net or 377-2924

Readfield Church Celebrates 225

• The Jesse Lee Meeting House on Route 17 is celebrating its 225 anniversary this summer. The oldest Methodist Church open for worship in New England, the church was built in 1795. For information about services call 685-6211.

Mid-Maine Chamber Schedules Golf Classic

The Summer That Wouldn't Be

1 816: "The people of Belgrade suffered great hardships... Not even in the days of the first settlers, 25 years before, when hunting and fishing as well as tilling the soil, were depended upon to furnish food, and when what few store supplies the settlers had were brought upon their backs many miles through the woods from Hallowell and Gardiner, was there more suffering or privation among the inhabitants.

"In May, buds and fruit were frozen; ice formed half an inch thick and corn was killed Corn fields were again and again replanted until deemed too late. In June, almost every green thing was killed and fruit was nearly all destroyed. Snow fell to the depth of 10 inches in Vermont, seven in Maine, three in the interior of New York, and also in Massachusetts. There were but a few warm days, and very little rain fell. The wind blew steadily from the north, cold and fierce.

"On July 5 ice was formed as thick as common window glass in New England, New York, and some parts of Pennsylvania. August, too was a cheerless month. Ice was formed half an inch in thickness. Corn was so frozen that a large part of it was cut down and dried for fodder."

Only in one section of Vienna, afterwards known as Egypt, some crops were saved and were a source of seed corn and wheat for the region the next year.

"When the spring of 1817 finally rolled around, prices were exceedingly high. The price of hay was $20 a ton and higher; wheat 15 shillings ($1.80) a bushel; potatoes 4 shillings (.50), and corn $2. Hundreds of residents migrated to Ohio and Pennsylvania, and others went to Illinois, Iowa, and Wisconsin. It is believed that about 15,000 of Maine's scanty population went West that spring and it was said that some settlers sold their farms for as little as $10, and some places were abandoned outright.

In the vicinity of Belgrade Lakes in May of 1817, there was two-day vendue, as auctions were then called. About 19 or 20 families had decided to migrate to Ohio, so they agreed to hold a union auction at a meeting house which they had been in the process of building, and although not completed the frame was up and boarded. Two men were sent out on horseback to ride far and wide, announcing it as the 'great vendue.'

"A big crowd came. Some were accommodated at the settlement, and as many as 50 camped about the meeting house, the interior of which was filled with various kinds of household goods, of the different families, in separate lots. Early the following morning, cattle, colts, sheep, and geese were driven there and confined in hastily built yards where people could look them over. Dogs, cats, and other pets were offered as gifts to anyone who would take them.

"Several old people who either did not want to leave Maine, or were believed too infirm to bear the journey were 'bid off' to resident pioneers who would engage for a payment (one family received $100) to take good care of them and see them through life."

They're staying put proved wise since warmer summers returned. There has never been another such season as 1816, although in 1907, 1945, and 1967 there were heavy snowstorms in May.

The most likely cause of the 1816 year-round freeze was the volcanic eruption of 13,000-foot Mt. Tamboro, on the Island of Sumbawa near Bali, East Indies. One of the greatest eruptions in history, it took 56,000 lives and blew dust into the stratosphere in quantities that dimmed the sun's effectiveness the whole cold year.

Getting to Know New Places With Good People.

From Winterberry Farm June Newsletter.

'ello friends!! Apprentice EK (or Emma ■Kate) here! As the flowers begin to grow and the greenery fills the beautiful Maine landscape, I get to say that I am lucky enough to experience spring twice this year. Once from Georgia, where I am from, and now here in Maine. I'm the new(-ish) gal here, wrapping up my first month on the farm. Winterberry Farm has been a blessing that I stumbled upon in the wake of canceled summer plans due to the Covid-19 that has run rampant through all of our "normal" daily lives. Just as I was about to give into the beast and stay put at home for the summer, Maine called, and I answered. Thankfully, it has not been a call that I have regretted picking up. Through the lovely MOFGA, I found this little slice of paradise to learn all things bees and flowers. And who could say no to that?!

A day in the life of a apprentice:

It is amazing how quickly I have become enamored with the beauty of this wonderful place called Maine. And the houses! Oh my! They are all so idyllic; I simply cannot get over it!! If it weren't for the cold winters that would make this Southerner cry frozen tears, I'd be packing my bags and moving right on in. But who knows, maybe one day I'll buck up and stick around for a while. The only complaint I have of Maine is of the vicious mosquitos that are trying to lift me up and carry me away every day. While I am not appreciative of their feasting upon me, I tried to stay strong and hold off on the use of bug spray, unfortunately to no avail. Due to my sheer lack of willpower, I am now bathing in the strongest bug spray you can buy each morning because, as the saying goes, you can't keep dancing with the devil and wonder why you're still in hell.

Besides those irritating little buggers, I am thoroughly enjoying my time here.

I have finally, finally finished planting all flowers known to man. and now I spend most of my days diligently watering those babies, solely because I refuse to be the apprentice that kills them all. If you're wondering just how long it takes me to water everything, take your best guess and then add 10 years. It's absolutely maddening. So, if you haven't been hoping for rain already, please start to, not even because we need it, but just because you feel sorry for me.

Anywho, come by the shop or find me at the Winterville market on Thursdays at 2 and tell me all about your favorite places in Maine that I should go visit. Oh, and maybe stick around and buy a pie and some jam while you're at it.

The Dams Keeper Report

As of this writing Great Pond, Long Pond and Salmon/McGrath, as well as most of our ponds, are full or starting to feel the effects of the lack of precipitation. We are getting some showers as I pen this week's column, but we need rain (preferably at night!) to bring our water levels back up and to keep them up. Sporadic light showers are a welcomed relief for our gardens and farmers but of little consequence for our water levels.

Both Great Pond's Belgrade Village dam and Long Pond's Wings Mill dam have been completely shut down for a few weeks now. Salmon/McGrath continues to have it's one gate cracked just 3 turns to allow for the required 1cfs flow. Great Pond is now exactly at full pond meaning that the water level at the dam in the village isn't quite going over the stone spillway. Long Pond is now 1.44" below full pond and our neighbors on Salmon/McGrath and Snow Pond are at 3/10" and 1.5" below full pond, respectfully. So, you can see that the lack of precipitation is beginning to have an effect already on our water levels.

With the Covid-19 delayed Town Meetings, the Dams Committee has come up short of the necessary funding for our 2020 scheduled projects, foremost being the long awaited repairs of Long Pond's Wings Mill Dam. Your Dams Committee could use all of the support you, as citizens, can muster at your respective Town Meeting to approve all Dams related warrant articles. The Wings Mill Dam project starts this coming July 15th so we need help – and now! Thank you one and all.

Enjoy this beautiful summer, weather and your vacation – and stay safe!

Ken Roberts: Historic Novels

by Martha F. Barkley

The orange sky softened to a rosy yellow: dimmed slowly to a pallid green. The mountains bulked black against the fading light, and as the stars began to appear above them the lake darkened until there was no telling where water ended and shore began". I thought I would simply skim through Northwest Passage, but the 734 page turner kept history and local Maine color too close to my heart to not read and find out what would happen next?

When we end up in London, after crossing the Atlantic several times, the homesick artist and his wife long for "the glitter and gleam of fields, trees, rocks and sea beneath our burnished Maine sky". The grime of London and the Old World makes the coming Revolutionary War inevitable.

No wonder Charles Dickens visited here twice: I highly recommend his two adventures in the New World, too, one before the Civil War and one after. Different time in history but a similar contrast between the two Atlantic worlds. Parts of Dickens travels in Pennsylvania were so good, I xeroxed copies and drawings for my sister who lives near the Susquehanna.

Ken Roberts collaborated with NCWyeth in * Trending into Maine: I anxiously await this inter-library loan, because EBWhite stated that it "...takes you into the kitchen, sits you down by the stove, hands you a doughnut, and stuffs you full of Arundel, Maine traditions, Maine smells, Maine people, the hardships of soldiering, the pleasures of ducks' breasts, the bravery of sea captains' daughters". Arundel was a favorite of mine years ago and it had a dark, yet bright, oil painting by NCWyeth on its cover. Both March to Quebec (eighth grade required reading back in the day) and Boon Island were unforgettable in land and water descriptions and historic happenings.

I guess I have never seen such multiple publishing dates before for one author of so many titles, many in Braille as well as languages around the globe. His tales take the reader everywhere, kind of like James Michener and his many books (fiction and non-fiction), so in Northwest Passage you soak up the many gory battles with the French and the Indians. Starving as they trek on and on, Rogers makes the Rangers stop while he bravely goes on looking for food, rafting along the river. "We were pretty far gone. If you're ever starving...don't waste time on fish. Try to get hold of marrow bone. There's more nourishment in a good marrow bone than in a fifty-pound trout."

The several run-ins with Copley the artist brought a personal connection: our Charleston home is located on The Elms Plantation owned by Ralph Izard. He and his wife had their portrait painted in Tuscany by Copley. Since the Izards gave away their wealth for the Revolutionary Cause, they could not pay Copley. In Ken Roberts novel, he fully expresses Copley's frustration with the wealthy being stripped in the New World by the rabble rousers who were fighting King George III.

Another personal connection was a friend recently asked me about the Isles of Shoals. Much of Northwest Passage is anchored around life in Portsmouth and Kittery, so I discovered on page 493 a sentence about this island, which is now a tourist cruise destination, just twelve miles off the coast. "...[T]hose islands aren't unlike the famous Isles of Greece you hear about so much of. Greatly overrated, those Grecian islands. Sailed among 'em as a midshipman on the old Bacchus a few years ago...".

Makes me want to check out Boon Island again, which was riveting reading, recommended to me by a Charleston neighbor. Both Lynn and her husband Tom would summer in Maine like we do. I could tell by our friendship and book exchanges that we both loved good literature and Maine stories always ring true.

Why not try a Ken Roberts "oldie but goody" read? I still can not believe how I read the entire Northwest Passage this week between jumping in the lake. * Trending into Maine contained so many NCWyeth oils, so I read and read Ken Roberts' tales. You will too!

Meet Your Future Lake

Dcommunity that beckons will not be owned. It will own you.

It's summer in Maine. The season is new and days at their longest: perfect for looking at and thinking about property and having downtime to enjoy the area, too.

---Start out practical: get a map; study the area; list goals - a safe, fun shoreline for children and grandchildren to play and swim and hangout or a deep protected water approach for that flotilla of watercraft that inevitably finds its way to a vacationing family or an addictive view from hillside or overlook that with a quick glance refreshes the at-home work station grind.

--- Search like a visionary: think renovation, addition, winterization, rental potential, community structure, nearby parks and trails, safe house/retreat, retirement to the good life.

--- Be lured: listen to the call of the loon, seek out the glow of a lingering sunset, show up with the children in bathing suits and see how they react, imagine the warmth of a cozy cottage fireplace or stove on a weather-obtuse day.

North Pond Association Project Enhances Smithfield Public Access

by Jodie Mosher-Towle

nother successful Best Management Practices project was completed on the grounds of the Fairview Grange #342 thanks to grant monies awarded to the North Pond Association (NPA) through Maine Community Foundation's Western Mountains of Maine grant. A porous paver walkway is an all access walkway to be used by our tri-town communities .The NPA set out to meet the needs of their tritown lake community by helping to fill the void of no public access on and off the lake to the thriving Smithfield village area and add to their incredible display of Best Management Practices (BMPs) on the grange grounds. Providing a safe, stable, smooth all access walkway using porous pavers has been helpful in increasing foot traffic entering and exiting the lake for townspeople, boaters and visitors to get to the general store, church, the historical society or grab pizza or an ice cream.

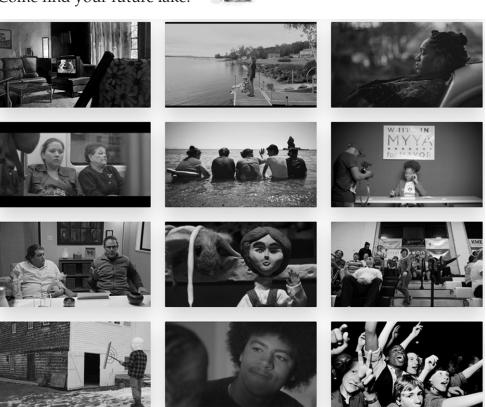

Once the grant was awarded, the NPA worked closely with Andy Marble, Smithfield's Code Enforcement Officer, and LakeSmart and Non-Point Source Control - Maine DEP Certified, John Lynch of Lynch Landscaping in Norridgewock. The walkway transitions to the existing infiltration steps on the embankment to the lake, which is another BMP. The porous pavers allow water to sink into the ground rather than run off as a bareground, paved or concrete walkway would. Signage explaining the many BMPs on the grange grounds meets the NPA's goal of educating the public about the need for such practices directly on shore front property to help prevent algae blooms while promoting healthy lake living and improved water quality.

This project is benefitting everyone that steps foot on the grange grounds whether by boat or car. The walkway provides a smooth transition for those using walkers, wheelchairs or strollers to picnic tables on the waterfront in a natural environment. The NPA invites lake associations to plan a visit to explore their BMPs by contacting them at jodie@northpond.net.

uyer be aware: that lake property or view or access or lakeside --- End up a captive: You will live for summer, your family will, your pets will and..the invite-themselves guests will. Lake country memories will walk into your mind in far places at unbidden times: sunsets, childish laughter, the cool embrace of tall pines, long chats with strangers while in town on short errands. Your internal time clock will reset to lake time.

> Your lake will own you but the memories will be yours to own. Come find your future lake.
