MRS. S. KING

And they said she didn't bite!

things we did today #2 while on our own allotted plots of ground we play we think about the grownup things we did today a little war was fought and won a while ago in which we found the generals were made of snow while high above a spaceman journeyed to the moon and while he faded out of sight "I'll be back soon" he said

though we all knew he'd be dead before the morning came.

a flock of ladybugs would crawl across our hands and buy a castle that we built all out of sand and when we'd come back to the beach on saturday we'd find that all the ladybugs were washed away waiting for us in the sea making tea for company knowing they'd be dead before the morning came.

plastic angels float away on cardboard waves looking for inconsequential yesterdays could have said they wouldn't find a single one never something melting faster in the sun than journeymen and generals made out of snow we hear they won a little war a while ago fifty million killed and many hurt as they melt their bones mix with the dirt could have saved them all the pain the message we sent with the rain told them they'd be dead before the morning came.

high above us now the sun begins to set while water drops reflect it on our fishing net we hope to catch a miracle before it's gone too bad we didn't know we'd have to wait so long it's time to go our playthings turning into clay now only time to talk of things we did today the lives disturbed the passions smothered by our souls the bayonets and bullets that destroyed our goals and left them lying dead before the morning came.
