Notwithstanding the poor outlook for crops in this section of Maine and in New England generally, the report of the Government Bureau of Statistics shows that over a million more acres were planted to corn than last year and that the condition of the crop is way ahead of last year's record, and barley is some better. The apple crop also leads July of last year.

Last Wednesday evening about 8.30 an alarm was rung in from box 25, which called out the fire department. The blaze, which was a slight one, was in the house occupied by Frank Towne on York street and was confined between the walls. It was supposed to have been set by rats. It was reached and extinguished by cutting through the partition in the attic.

Last Wednesday evening the hardware store of H. E. Lunge was broken into. A small quantity of knives, revolvers and ammunition was taken. The thieves entered by breaking the glass in the back door, then putting in a hand and pushing back the spring lock. When he discovered them they were both frightened as night was coming on and they did not know which way to turn. He at once guided them to the Atlantic Shore Line railroad track and started them toward Sanford. Monday LaForce received congratulations from members of both families.

Republican Caucus

The Republican caucus of the voters of Kennebunk was held Thursday evening at the town hall. About 160 voters were present and the following delegates were chosen to represent the town at the county convention:

Chas. R. Littlefield, Asa A. Richardson, Benjamin F. Williams, Fred C. Knight, Hartwell E. Grant, Walter A. Tripp, M. S. Batchelder, William R. Pitts, Wesley L. Jackson. The delegates were uninstructed. The chairman was William F. Bowen and the clerk was Asa A. Richardson.

Twenty-fifth Annual

During the week of August 4-9, a large number of Knights of Pythias of this village will visit Boston where will be held the 25th annual convention of that order and to say that there will be a great time is putting it mild.

The Knights of Pythias is one of the largest and most influential fraternal orders in the country. Two great parades will be held the first two days of the convention and it is estimated that from 15,000 to 20,000 men will be in line.

The city is to be elaborately decorated for the occasion and there will be special electrical effects. One of the special decorations will be the United States Frigate Constitution, (Old Ironsides) at the navy yard.

The railroads have made special excursion rates to the city, and have also reduced fares on many side trips that can be taken. We feel sure that those of our local company who attend will be more than satisfied with their visit.

Special Town Meeting

At a special town meeting held last Saturday afternoon in the town hall it was voted to use the upper room of the engine house on Fletcher street for the sixth grade at the opening of the school year instead of the lower room of the opera house as formerly.

There was considerable feeling about the matter and possibly another meeting will be called. The question of school accommodation in this village seems to be a hard one to decide.

$2500 was also appropriated to pay the men who were employed fighting fires. A small amount may be left from this sum but it was thought best to be on the safe side and appropriate enough. Asa A. Richardson, chairman of the board of selectmen, paid over $2000 Monday and Tuesday.

As we go to press we learn that there was an enthusiastic gathering at the Republican convention at Alfred today. There were contests for only three places and these were declared for W. J. Mewer, sheriff, J. H. Dearborn, treasurer and B. F. Hamilton, senator. The following ticket was nominated:

County Commissioner—Lewis W. Pendexter, Parsonsfield.

County Attorney, Fred A. Hobbs, South Berwick.

County Treasurer—Joseph H. Dearborn, Biddeford.

There were 191 delegates entitled to seats and there were 181 present. The convention was called to order by Clerk of Court Willis T. Emmons of Saco, chairman of the Republican County Convention.

Delightful Musicales

There was a delightful musicale at the Fleetwood Tuesday evening at which time Rev. E. J. Prescott of Rockland, Mass., formerly pastor of the Unitarian church of this village gave some exquisite violin solos being accompanied on the piano by Miss Evie Littlefield. Other selections were rendered and the evening was greatly enjoyed by those present. Rev. Mr. Prescott and Mrs. Prescott are guests of Mrs. Mary Moody for a few days at her delightful home on Summer street.

Promises Gone Astray

Last week a man stepped up to us and said he would pay us every cent he owed us if he lived until Saturday night. We presume he died. Another man said he would pay us in a day or two as sure as we were born. Query: Did the man lie or were we never born? Another man said he hoped to go to the devil if he didn't pay us within three days. Haven't seen him since; suppose he is gone, but trust he did not hope in vain. Quite a number said they would see us tomorrow. They must have been stricken blind or tomorrow has never come. One man told us six months ago that he would pay us as soon as he got some money. The man would not lie of course, he has not had a cent since.—Farmington News.

On Slang

The sea was turquoise, and in their deck chairs the schoolmarm, laying down their novels, talked of the little island country they were soon to reach. "What amuses me," said the gray schoolmarm. "Is the English idea of American slang. An English philologist at a dinner at Oxford once gravely tried to talk to me in our own easy colloquialisms. The things he said! "But now I'm shouting turkey," was one. He thought it meant talking non sense. Flowers he called "blummies." He didn't care a hate he said for ballooning. A neat person was "gin and tidy." A friend of his had "seen the elephant"—that is, has gone bankrupt. So he rambled on tickled to death with his cleverness as proud of his American slang as a George Ade. Where did he get all that nonsense of "blummies," and "shouting a turkey," "gin and tidy" and "caring a hate."—New York Press.

Origin of Moving Pictures

How the Popular Amusement Grew to its Present Form

The beginning of moving pictures was in this wise; Sir John Herschel, after dinner in 1829 asked his friend, Charles Babbage how he would show both sides of a shilling at once. Babbage replied by taking a shilling from his pocket and holding it to a mirror.

This did not satisfy Sir John, who set the shilling spinning upon the dinner table, at the same time pointing out that if the eye is placed on a level with the rotating coin both sides can be seen at once. Babbage was so struck by the experiment that the next day he described it to a friend, Dr. Fitton, who immediately made a working model. On one side of a disk was drawn a bird, on the other an empty bird-cage; when the card was revolved on a silk thread the bird appeared to be in the cage. This model showed the persistence of vision upon which all moving pictures depend for their effect. The eye retains the image of the object for a fraction of a second after the object has been removed. This model was called the thaumatrope.

Next came the zoetrope, or wheel of life. A cylinder was perforated with a series of slots and within the cylinder was placed a hand of drawings of dancing men. On the apparatus being slowly rotated the figures seen through the slots appeared to be in motion. The first systematic photographs taken at regular intervals of men and animals were made by Muybridge in 1877.—Chicago Tribune.

Has Resigned

Charles Jacobs, who for the past eight years has served as general foreman on the Eastern division of the Atlantic Shore Line, has resigned the position and left the employ of the company Thursday. Train Master McCrea is at present acting as general foreman. Mr. Jacobs came to Kennebunk from Skowhegan some eight years ago. He was then employed as foreman on the Somerset Attraction railway. He has not decided as yet what his future plans will be. Since coming to Kennebunk Mr. Jacobs has made many friends along the line who regret that he is to leave this section.

Maine Children's Home

Sunday evening, August 2, Miss L. C. Treadwell is to give an address at the Baptist church upon the work of the Maine Children's Home. Miss Treadwell has been in the work for the past six years and from the experience of these years of service, prompted by love for God and humanity she brings her message. A cordial invitation to be present Sunday evening is extended to all.

Dr. Smith Baker, former pastor of the Williston Congregational church, Portland, says: "Miss L. B. Treadwell gave a delightful address upon the work of the Maine Children's Home at Williston church on Tuesday evening. Our people were doubly interested, not only in the subject but the way it was presented."

The subject is one of the most worthy in the state and no church can regret giving Miss Treadwell an opportunity to address them. Also from the same city comes the following words of appreciation from the ex-pastor of the Pine Street Methodist church, Dr. J. Frank Haley:

"Miss Linnet Belle Treadwell has spoken in the Pine Street Methodist church, and each time her message was listened to with great interest. Miss Treadwell is a well-known resident of our city, an earnest Christian worker and a very interesting and effective speaker."

Miss Treadwell will also speak at Alewife Sunday morning.

A Chain and Its Links

In telephoning there are three links in the chain that constitutes "good service": 1. The person calling. 2. The operator. 3. The person called.

No matter how much any one or any two of these links do to develop good service, the result is determined by the measure of co-operation of the third. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

If the person calling fails to consult the catalogue and gives a wrong number, the operator inevitably repeats the error. If the person called fails to answer promptly and the caller leaves the telephone, naturally "there is no one on the line."

Being human, the operator—the third link—is liable to err occasionally, but careful analysis demonstrates that she is not fairly chargeable with many of the difficulties frequently ascribed to her.

If Link No. 1. Gives the Right Number and Calls Distinctly, and Link No. 3 Answers Promptly, the Telephone Company will be responsible for its part of the chain. If no higher motive actuated it, the motive of economy, or self-interest, would suffice.

From any Pay Station you can speak to any one of 300,000 telephones in the territory of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Even if he is not a subscriber, you can arrange to have the person desired called to a Pay Station to talk to you.

YOU will get your money's every time if you purchase your groceries of FARM BREVITIES.

The progressive farmer who has his work all planned out for days or weeks ahead finds that he saves both time and labor, as a rule. His easy going neighbor who makes no plans in advance never has things ready for work when the time comes that a job should be done and therefore is a loser.

When cabbage and cauliflower plants are set out the soil should be tightly pressed around the stem of the plant at the surface, and the soil itself should be pressed down smooth, flat and firmly as one means of protection against the root maggots.

From the breeders' standpoint records are especially valuable in assisting in finding customers for their stock. Many buyers insist on seeing records of dairy performance before purchasing.

The dwarf lima beans because of their habit of growth are planted and cultivated practically the same as are field beans. They are slightly harder than pole limas, and for that reason toward the northern limit of the range of this crop it can be planted somewhat earlier in the season than the pole limas.

On many farms if the garden be fenced off, with wire netting, say, about four feet high the chickens can then have practically the run of the land. With persistent fliers the clipping of the flight feathers on one wing will generally keep the birds on the ground floor.

In placing labels of any kind on orchard trees it is best to place them at about the same corner on all the trees, say on the southeast corner about four feet from the ground. The foliage often hides the labels unless one can remember just where to look.

Pasturing, especially during the first year, injures and sometimes kills alfalfa. In nutritive qualities alfalfa stands in the front rank. Cattle and sheep sometimes bloat when grazing on alfalfa. It is said to make an unrivaled hog pasture, and when fed to farm teams the ration of corn can be greatly diminished.

The feed is responsible for the health, growth and flesh of poultry. Young chicks are often overfed and usually fed in filthy places or in unclean troughs or vessels. More young chicks die from overfeeding and sour, fermenting, decomposing feed than from any other cause.

How to Cook Rice.

Few housewives understand how to cook rice so that it puts into a snowy mass, each kernel distinct. I have found a way, says a writer in Harper's Bazar. First wash it thoroughly through several cold waters, rubbing the kernels between the hands. This is to remove all the loose flour on the outside of the grains. After the water runs clear turn the rice into a colander and drain; then put it into a deep stewpan, allowing one quart of boiling water to a cup of washed rice. Add a teaspoonful of salt and allow it to come to a good boil. Cook steadily for twenty minutes, lifting the rice occasionally with a fork to prevent its sticking. Shake the kettle also for the same purpose, but never stir or mash with a spoon. Take it from the fire, pour off the water if any is left and place it on the back of the stove in the oven or even over a pot of hot water until it finishes swelling. Cooked in this way you will find the rice plump, light and white, each grain distinct and separate.

How to Clean Wall Paper.

Wall paper that has a smoky or grimy look can be brightened with a powder preparation which frequently removes even very objectionable marks. Make a mixture of equal parts of cornstarch, whiting and fuller's earth and with a soft cheesecloth or any cotton rag dip it into the powder and carefully go over the paper, rubbing vigorously, but not enough to injure the print. Change the cloth as it gets badly soiled, after which wipe the walls with large pieces of cotton rags

CRYSTAL GAZING.

If You Want to Try It, This Will Tell You How to Proceed.

Having satisfied myself that some people really would see hallucinatory pictures in a glass ball or in water, I examined the ethnological side of the question. I found by studying works of travel and anthropology that many savage and barbarous races gaze into water, polished basalt, rock crystals, and so on, for the purpose of seeing distant events, foreseeing the future, detecting criminals, and so forth. It does not seem to me credible that so many and so widely separated peoples should agree with ancient Greeks and the races of western Europe in staring away if they did not see hallucinatory pictures. So I believe that some people do see them. Nor is this fact now denied by professors of psychology.

I have never been able to foresee from character, complexion, habit of mind and other indications what persons would prove capable of describing even fancy pictures in a glass ball. The best gazers of my acquaintance, those who hit on pictures coincidental with actual events unknown to them or with the secret thoughts of a companion, are both of them not unfamiliar with other curious experiences. But I have tried with the glass ball two or three other friends who have seen what are vulgarly called "ghosts" in haunted houses, and in the glass ball they can see nothing, while people who never saw ghosts do see "coincidental" pictures in a glass ball.

If any readers care to make experiments, they can begin by purchasing a ball, or, of course, a glass jug of water will do, or even a teaspoonful of ink, in some cases, but both are inconvenient and may spill. Having got the ball, it is best to go alone into a room, sit down with the back to the light, place the ball at a just focus in the lap on a dark dress or a dark piece of cloth, try to exclude reflections, think of anything you please and stare for five minutes, say, at the ball. That is all. If after two or three trials you see nothing in the way of pictures in the ball, you will probably never succeed.--Andrew Lang.

Circumstantial Evidence.

During a discussion in regard to circumstantial evidence a lawyer told of a remarkable case which, he said, appears in the Virginia reports. It was this:

A man was discovered drawing a knife from the prostate form of another man near a roadside. The witnesses rushed upon him and took the weapon from him. It was still dripping with the warm blood of the victim. He was accused of the murder, but asserted his innocence. He claimed that he had happened along the road but a few moments before and saw his alleged victim struggling with another man. Before he could come up the unknown had driven his knife home and had fled into some brush close by. Seeing the knife still in the breast of the fallen man, he stooped over and drew it forth just as his accusers came on the scene. That was his story. The knife being identified as the property of the accused, no credence whatever was placed in his tale. He was tried, convicted and hanged.

A year later the man who had really committed the crime while on his deathbed confessed that he was the murderer and told how he had stolen the knife from the innocent man who had been sent to the gallows.

How to Water Plants.

In watering plants it would be well to bear in mind that a simple method by which you can tell whether a plant is dry or not is to tap on the side of the pot with your knuckles, and if it has a ringing sound it is an indication that water is needed and therefore must be given a good soaking. The best time for watering is in the morning, but on no account should a plant be allowed to suffer for the want of water, no matter what time of the day its need is discerned.

Scrap Book

The Request Granted.

He was standing on a corner in the shopping district of New York waiting for a car when a woman, handsomely gowned and evidently a stranger, approached him and said hesitatingly: "I wish to go to John Wanamaker's." Instantly he replied in a tone of indulgent seriousness: "Very well, you can go this time, but don't ever, ever ask me again!"

WASTED AFFECTION.

Talk not of wasted affection. Affection never was wasted. If it enrich not the heart of another, its waters, returning Back to their springs like the rain, shall fill them full of refreshment. That which the fountain sends forth returns again to the fountain. --Longfellow.

Doing His Best.

Two leading attorneys of Memphis, warm friends for years, happened to be opposing counsel in a case. The older was a man of magnificent physique, about six feet four and built in proportion, while the younger was barely five feet and weighed not more than ninety pounds.

In the course of his argument the big man unwittingly made some remark that aroused the ire of his adversary. A moment later he felt a tugging at his coat-tails. Looking down, he was astonished to see his opponent wildly gesticulating and dancing around him.

"What on earth are you trying to do there?" he asked. "By Gawd, suh, I'm fighting, suh!"--Everybody's.

The Other Joshua.

In a southern federal court an old colored man was on trial, charged with running an illicit still.

"What is your name, sir?" asked the district attorney.

"Josh Hicks, sah."

"Are you the Joshua that made the sun stand still?"

"No, sah. I's de Joshua dat made de moon shine."

He Announced His Intentions.

A young man and his ladylove attended a protracted meeting which was being held in the village church. Arriving late, they found the church filled, but a gentleman gave the lady his seat, while the young man was ushered to a seat in another part of the building.

The service grew warm and impressive.

"Will those who want our prayers please stand up," said the preacher.

At this juncture the young man thought it was getting late and he would get his sweetheart and go home, but not just knowing where she sat he rose to his feet and looked over the audience.

The minister, mistaking his intentions, asked, "Young man, are you seeking salvation?"

"No. I am looking for Sal Jackson!"

--Ladies' Home Journal.

Corrected, if Not Charged.

Some years ago a freshman at Dartmouth college called upon one of the professors and asked for medical advice. Having received it, he offered the usual fee, but it was refused with the explanation that students were never charged.

"Oh, I see. It would be too much like dog eat dog."

"Dog eat puppy," dryly corrected the professor.

An Easy One.

Ex-Senator Spooner tells of a case tried in a Wisconsin court in which, during the course of the cross examination of an exceptionally youthful looking physician, the opposing counsel was led to utter some rather sarcastic remarks as to the probability that so young a doctor should thoroughly understand his business.

"Are you," asked counsel, "acquainted with the symptoms of concussion of the brain?"

"Then let us take a concrete case. If my learned friend, counsel for the defense, and myself were to bang our heads together, should we get concussion of the brain?"

"The probabilities are that counsel for the defense would!"

They Were Quits.

A city fellow while hunting went out into the country one day and lost his way, and as he was standing by a crossroad he saw a farmer a little way off. He walked over to the farmer and said, "Say, Pat, which road leads to the station?" "How do you know my name is Pat?" asked the farmer. "I guessed it," said the fellow. "Well," replied the farmer, "then guess the way to the station."--Judge's Library.

Inferences.

When a man fails to keep an appointment, infer that you are seeking the favor, not he.

When you hear an American lauding the institutions and customs of Europe and speaking slightly of the United States, infer that he will never be president.

When you hear a man "dearing" and "darling" his wife in public, infer that he "damns" her at home.

When a woman prattles much about female rights, infer that she doesn't understand the meaning of household duties.

When you hear a spinster gushing over the many offers of marriage she has rejected, infer that she will snap at the first fellow who comes along.

When a critic is unjustly severe in condemning a literary production, infer that it has wounded his pride, vanity or self interest.

When a magazine returns a voluntary contribution, infer that the editor knows what he wants and you don't.

When an acquaintance invites you to take a drink, infer that he expects you to treat back.

When it is told about the clubs that you are the most popular poker player, infer that you are losing all the money.

When a man flatters you, infer that he takes you for a fool who is easily worked.

When an acquaintance whispers softly in your ear some dark secret, infer that he has spread it all over town.

His "Character."

There is a story of a Scotch gentleman who had to dismiss his gardener for dishonesty. For the sake of the man's wife and family, however, he gave him a "character" and framed it in this way, "I hereby certify that A. B. has been my gardener for over two years and that during that time he got more out of the garden than any man I ever employed."--Ladies' Home Journal.

The Governor and His Band.

Ex-President Cleveland tells an experience he had when governor of New York.

There was a public meeting at one of the theaters to which the governor and his staff were invited. The staff put on their most gorgeous uniforms. There were fifteen or sixteen of them, and they were resplendent in gold lace and cord.

When the party reached the theater entrance they found so many people there that somebody suggested they should go around and enter by the stage door.

They encountered a stolid stage door-keeper, who had been at his post for years and was used to the wiles of people who try to get behind "the scenes."

"Can't get in here," he said gruffly.

"But I am the governor."

The door keeper looked the governor over carefully. Apparently he recognized him, for he said, "All right, governor, you can go in."

Then he waved his hand at the gaudy staff and announced, "The band must go around the other way."

Mark Misjudged.

When Mark Twain was a young and struggling newspaper writer for the Atlantic County Herald in New York city a lady of his acquaintance saw him one day, with a cigar box under his arm, looking in a shop window.

"Mr. Clemens," she said, "I always see you with a cigar box under your arm. I am afraid you are smoking too much."

"It isn't that," said Mark. "I'm moving again."

Only the Runner Up.

The best man thought he'd take a look around and see that everything was running as a fastidious bride would wish it, and up in the room where the presents were displayed, alone and unhappy looking, he came upon a youth, seemingly ready, like the wedding guest of the English poet, to "beat his breast." He was wandering about, looking at silver and cut glass without seeing them, and the best man hardly knew how to approach him.

"Er--have you kissed the bride?" he asked at last.

And the answer told far more than its two meager words might have been expected to. It was "Not lately!"--Lippincott's.

On Papa's Side Only.

"Mamma, our teacher says I'm descended from a monkey."

His mother (glancing severely at her husband)--Not on my side, darling.

Not Quite the Same.

Having arrived at that point in the baptismal service where the infant's name is conferred, the clergyman said, "Name this child."

"Original Story," said the sponsor nurse.

"What do you say?" he asked in surprise.

"Original Story," she repeated.

"It's a very odd name. Are you sure you want him called by the name of Original Story?"

"Original Story--that's right."

"Is it a family name?"

"Named after his uncle, sir," explained the nurse.

Original Story the little fellow was christened. Some weeks after this event the minister made the acquaintance of the said uncle, a farm laborer in another village, whose name was Reginald Story.

The Painter's Way.

When a painter has taken up the parlor carpet, removed the furniture from the dining room, leaned two ladders against the hall mantel and stacked a half dozen variegated cans of paint on the sideboard, it means he is now ready to paint the outside shutters and the back fence.--Mark Twain.

Crockett and the Mules.

It is told of the famous Davy Crockett that one day while standing on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, a swarm of mules trotted by under the custody of an overseer from one of the stock farms in Virginia. A congressman from Boston attracted Crockett's attention to the unusual sight, saying: "Hello, there, Crockett! Here's a lot of your constituents on parade. Where are they going?"

Crockett looked at the animals with a quizzical glance and answered quietly, "They are going to Massachusetts to teach school."

Cape Porpoise

The members of the Men's club of the Main street Baptist church, Biddeford, accompanied by their ladies and other invited guests, held their first annual outing here Thursday afternoon. A special car conveyed the party. One of the chief features of the trip was a fine shore dinner served by Mine Host Davis of this popular resort. The afternoon and evening at the Casino was given to social intercourse and music. Later in the evening the party was entertained by a social event given by the young people of the shore. The club left here at 8.30, all having had a delightful time. The only source of regret was the absence of the pastor and his wife who were detained by the serious illness of Mrs. Tilton.

The house in which the reception was held was built in 1795 and the interior was inspected with much interest by the guests.

Mrs. Crockett was born in Taunton, Mass., and at the age of 19 years married Charles Smith Crockett. The next day after the wedding she and her husband went to Portland by train and later by stage to Standish where the couple located on a farm where Mrs. Crockett has lived for sixty years. Mr. Crockett died five years ago and since that time Mrs. Crockett has been living out. She is an exceptionally bright woman for her age and is today brighter than many 20 years younger. She has an excellent memory and some few moments of pleasure were spent with her Monday listening while she told stories and related happenings of her younger days. That she may enjoy many more years of a happy life was the parting wish of the guests as well as others. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Stevens and a day of pleasure was enjoyed by all. Among those present from out of town were Jason L. Stevens, Miss Ruth Stevens and Miss Gladys Stevens of Waltham and Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Foote of Biddeford.

Elmer D. Bennett of Sanford was here last Saturday and installed 700 feet of water pipe for the water in Will H. Bennett's new cottage.

Ogunquit

The 80-foot whale which went ashore here, July 19, was beginning to be something more than a curiosity and its final disposition was beginning to puzzle the town officials. Last Wednesday they gave three York Beach men, C. C. Philbrick, George F. Parsons and W. H. Norton leave to use it or to do anything to get it away from the beach. The three men with power boats tied lines to the whale and at high water dragged it from the rocks to deep water. It did not sink and they towed it to the Nubble light at York Beach, where they have anchored it.

The annual concert given under the auspices of the Methodist church occurred Monday evening. The following program delighted a large and enthusiastic audience and from this source a substantial sum was added to the treasury.

There is considerable interest in the decision of the Maine law court that advertising liquors in this state is illegal, as decided in the J. P. Bass vs. state case. U. A. Caine of this town, after stopping all advertising in every form throughout the state, tried every way to stop continuous advertising in the Bangor Commercial, but without effect. He then prosecuted Mr. Bass through a Biddeford court, the case slumped through and was again taken up in a Sanford court through a friend of Mr. Caine, E. H. Emery, now a secretary of the civic league; it was decided that the evidence was not sufficient to hold the publisher. Later another case was called at Sanford and the judge decided that it should come up in a Penobscot county court. The papers were then turned over to the Maine Civic league who, represented by Rev. Mr. Pringle, the secretary, pushed as many cases as the Bangor court would allow and these were appealed to the supreme court where Mr. Bass and the other gentlemen were found guilty and they appealed to the law court. The five judges after many conferences, referred it to one of their number to write the rescript, and he died, which threw the case back to them again and the new judge came into the decision. While this was pending all the papers and evidence was burned in the Portland city hall fire and the case had to be worked up again with the decision in favor of the law. Mr. Bass is an influential citizen of the state, a director of the Maine Central R. R. and prominent in all good works. His whole object in the case has been to settle the question for all time and he has rendered valuable service to the state by so doing.
