KILLED WHILE HUNTING RABBITS

While Montford Hear and Vance Oakes were rabbit hunting Saturday afternoon in the woods about three miles from Rangeley village, Vance shot and wounded a rabbit. As it went past Montford he struck it with the butt of his rifle. In doing so, the contents were discharged, the bullet taking effect just over the heart.

Vance started for help but it was sometime before he found his way out of the woods. About 150 men formed a searching party and at about eight o'clock his body was found.

He was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Hoar and was 13 years of age.

The funeral services were held at the church, Monday afternoon, a large number being present. The village schools were closed during the services, the pupils in Montford's room attending in a body. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Rev. L. A. White officiated and a choir consisting of Dr. A. M. Ross, Mrs. Olin Rowe, Mrs. C. B. Harris and Harry Huntton, with Mrs. C. C. Murphy as organist, sang "Lead, Kindly Light," and "Sometime We'll Understand." Mr. Huntton also sang a solo. "Face to Face" Much sympathy is expressed for the sorrow stricken family.

FEARED WING WAS LOST.

There was a good deal of excitement in Kingfield, Saturday, when it was announced that Earl Wing, son of H. S. Wing, Esq., one of our most popular and promising young men was lost in the mountains beyond Shiloh pond while hunting.

Searching parties were hurried out and the day spent in scouring the deep woods. It was ascertained however early in the day by the young man's father that his son had been at his camp that morning, so that fear was allayed and it was felt sure he would return home safely in due season, which he did.

DON'TS

Don't grasp a gun by the barrel and drag it after you out of a boat, through a fence, or anywhere else, unless you want to test the truth of the saying that a man has more lives than a cat—and then don't. One discharge may blow them all out.

Don't carry more than a small quantity of whiskey with you on your hunt. It's poor stuff to shoot on, and the devil who engineers the "deplorable accidents" you read of frequently while the hunting season is on has no more potent ally than the product of the still.

Don't under any circumstances allow your gun muzzle to point for one single instant at any living thing you do not mean to kill.

Don't allow yourself to carry a cocked gun in your hands, not even if you are alone. A sudden stumble may fire it, and you can never tell where the contents may go.

Don't carry a loaded gun into your camp or stopping place. And be absolutely sure that every cartridge is taken out of it before you go near the door.

Don't shoot at a noise.

Don't shoot at a moving bush.

Don't shoot at small game such as rabbits, quail or squirrels with big ammunition.

Don't go away from camp before you have familiarized yourself with the lay of the land and the landmarks within at least a radius of half a mile.

Don't go out without a good supply of matches, part of them in a waterproof case as an emergency supply; a good heavy, hunting knife, a well-ground hunting ax or hatchet, a pocket compass and a lunch. There is always such a thing as getting lost among the possibilities.

Don't lose your head if you do lose your bearings; that is if you get lost. Sit down, take a smoke, get your mind out of the first panic into which the fact that you don't know where you are is sure to throw it, and as soon as it is in normal working order don't make a fool of yourself in trying to find your way back. If you could do that you would not have got lost in the first place.

Don't give yourself up for lost, however. Get busy. Gather a heap of wood in case you have to camp out all night. Make a fire. Then sit down and wait for the guide or your comrade to find you. That's what they are sure to be trying to do so don't make it harder for them by getting away from them as rapidly as panic speed can effect it. A good thing to do is to keep on top of the ridges.

Don't shoot at running game or any other unless you can clearly see three things — the game, the front sight of your gun and the rear ditto, and all three in conjunction, mind.

Don't jerk the trigger when you do see three things in conjunction; press it. Then you won't throw the gun barrel up the least trifle when you fire; the veriest trifle elevation at that moment spoils the shot.

And lastly: Don't forget a single one of these don'ts.

Don't forget to observe them so rigidly that their observance becomes a second nature to you.

AS TOLD BY THE MAINE WOODS

QUESTION—(1) How wide would the white stripe be on a broad stripe skunk? How wide on a narrow stripe? (2) How would a skunk be classified that has a stripe two-thirds of the way down the back, and some white on the tail? L. C.

ANSWER—(1-2) It would depend mostly on the size of the skunk, for they are graded more by the amount of black fur than by the white. For instance, you might have two skunks having the same size of white stripe, but one pelt is large and the other small. In parts of the West a large variety of skunk is found, having two long stripes, but the stripes are low on the back, leaving a nice strip of good black fur between and the animals themselves are larger than those of the East. Eastern skunks having the same amount of white as these western ones are worth considerably less.

QUESTION—Will you please give me a good camp remedy for insect bites, wasps, etc.

Arthur Brown, Norwich, Conn.

ANSWER—Common mud is excellent; use plenty of it. Crushed penny royal weed keeps mosquitoes away.

QUESTION—Where may I secure a copy of trapping methods, which may be termed reliable.

R. C., Douglass, Mass.

ANSWER—Address Maine Woods, Phillips, Me., enclosing 25 cents and they will send you what is required.

QUESTION—What part of the Great Smokies did those fellows start from in "Roughing It Through the South?"

L. D. Dalton, Byson City, N. C.

ANSWER—Tellico Plains, Monroe Co., Tenn.

QUESTION—(1) What is the U. S. Geological Survey? (2) What is wallaby fur?

Oscar T. O'Brien South Manchester, Conn.

ANSWER—(1) The U. S. Geological Survey is a bureau of the Department of the Interior, and under the immediate charge of a director, who is nominated by the president and confirmed by the senate. The members of the permanent corps are appointed by the secretary of the interior upon the recommendation of the director, and appointments are based upon merit alone, the fitness of applicants being determined by competitive examination conducted under the civil service rules. The object is to survey all lands and mineral wealth of the United States, and no surveys or examinations are executed for private parties or corporations, and all collections of rocks, minerals, fossils, objects of natural history, archaeology and ethnology when no longer needed for investigation are deposited in the Natural Museum. The survey is organized into four branches: Geologic, topographic, publication and administrative. A plan of operations is submitted by the director to the secretary of the interior at the beginning of each fiscal year and if approved by him, becomes the order for the year's work; and the director also makes an annual report of operations. (2) The wallaby is a smaller species of kangaroo. It is an Australian animal. It furnishes leather and furs and also the best venison. Their skins are exported to London every year in vast quantities.

QUESTION—(1) Does a beagle dog make a good hunter for coon, skunk and mink? (2) Is an alreadale dog better for these animals? (3) Would a shepherd and spaniel mixture make a good hunter for these animals? F. H., Boston, Mass.

ANSWER—(1) A beagle is really a rabbit dog, and we do not think he would make a good hunter for coon, skunk and mink. (2) Yes. (3) We don't think so.

QUESTION—(1) I would like to know how often coons have young and how many? (2) How many young does a fox have and how many litter? L. S., Holly, Mich.

ANSWER—(1) A coon has only one litter a year which are born in April or the beginning of May, and have from four to six in a litter? (2) The fox has from five to eight or nine in a litter only once a year.

Sebago Salmon Doing Finely in Far Away Tasmania Waters.

About a year and a half ago, during the administration of Leroy T. Carleton, as chairman of the inland fisheries and game commission, a shipment of salmon eggs from Sebago lake was sent to the Northern Tasmanian Fisheries Association in the State of Tasmania, Commonwealth of Australia. Nothing had been heard from these eggs beyond the report of their safe arrival until a short time ago when Ex-Chairman Carleton received a letter from the secretary of the association telling of the development of the yearlings. This letter was turned over by Mr. Carleton to Chairman Wilson of the fish and game commission. The letter was accompanied with a report from the association covering the details of the experiment and is as follows:

Dear Sir:—Although some 18 months have now passed our anglers have not forgotten your generous action in the matter of arranging a supply of Sebago salmon eggs for this association. I am writing now to advise you that the rearing from fry to yearlings has turned out well. Our report for the past year is just from printer and by this mail we are posting you a copy. On page 14 you will see all details of the Sebago experiment. Once again we are much indebted to you for the interest you took in the matter, and we hope in two or three years' time to be able to report the taking of an adult wild fish. The best of the yearlings were fine, chubby, little fellows up to 7 1/4 inches long and give promise of thriving well.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES H. HARRISON,
Sec'y.

SOME GOOD SHOOTING

No hunter from Skowhegan has derived greater pleasure in even shooting a bear than George Young did Sunday in shooting a specimen of the crane family. But in this case the anticipation was greater than the realization. Dr. Charles Viles was the prime factor in giving Mr. Young this hunting opportunity. He evidently saw the bird standing in the water at Lakewood and hastened to the cottage to tell George to come with his gun. The latter acted promptly and was shortly pouring bullets into the bird. George had always heard that these birds on stilts were hard to shoot and realized it after he had fired six shots and the bird still floated around in the water. It soon dawned upon him that there wasn't much satisfaction in shooting at dead birds anyway. He found that the bird was true enough a crane but had been stuffed several years ago and Dr. Viles had experienced a dull moment and had placed the bird out to live things up a little. He did all right. George has the satisfaction of knowing that the bird is now past usefulness as an ornament. —Somerset Reporter.

Death Rate of Country up to
Nov. 1, Completed by U. S.
Dept. Agriculture.

Reports received by the U. S. Department of Agriculture from various sources indicate about 45 fatalities that accompany the hunting season, have occurred up to Nov. 1.

November marks the height of the hunting season. Upland game birds are well grown, and the migration of water fowl is at its heaviest.

The chief interest centers in the opening of the hunting season for quail. Every state in which they are abundant, from New York to Nebraska, and from Florida to Texas opens its quail season this month, with the exception of Georgia, where the opening is delayed until the first of December. The season is already open in New England, Michigan and Minnesota, where quail are few, and in the western States, whose quail differ from the bobwhite of the East. Eastern sportsmen may take the field from the first day of this month, except in Delaware, Kentucky, Ohio, Kansas, South Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana and Oklahoma, where shooting begins on the 15th, and in Indiana and Illinois, where it begins on the 10th and 11th respectively.

Next in importance to the opening of the quail season is the opening of wild turkey hunting in most of the States where turkeys are abundant. Arkansas, Arizona and Maryland have permitted turkey hunting since September, and in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Texas, the opening of the season is deferred until after the close of November; but in all other states from Pennsylvania to New Mexico where the hunting of wild turkeys is a feature, the season opens in November.

Eight northern states which offer deer hunting, Vermont, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Wisconsin, Minnesota and North and South Dakota, open seasons in November, varying from five days to a month in length and in the south deer hunting begins this month in Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

October witnessed the opening of the ruffed grouse season in most of the states still affording good shooting, but Pennsylvania, where an unusually abundant supply is reported this year, opens its season on the first of November.

The shooting of waterfowl has been in progress throughout most of the United States for one or two months, but two important ducking centers of the East, the Susquehanna Flats, at the head of Chesapeake Bay, Maryland, and Currituck Sound, North Carolina, have been closed to duck hunters until this month.

Duck shooting on the waters of New Jersey also opens in November.

The hunting of black bears is not a general form of sport, and in a few states bounties are paid for their destruction. Several states, however, retain the bear on the game list, with a fixed hunting season and three of those in which bear hunting is still a prominent sport, viz.: Michigan, Louisiana, and Mississippi, open their bear seasons in November.

November witnesses also the closing of some important seasons. By the end of the month, deer hunting is over in the north, except in Maine and New Hampshire. It may be followed in the south for additional periods varying from one month in Louisiana and Texas to three months in Mississippi. In New York and everywhere in the west the deer season is closed by the beginning of November. By the last of the month the prairie chicken season is over in every state in which these birds may yet be shot; and woodcock shooting has ended in all northern states in which woodcock may yet be found in comparatively large numbers, though in the south the season continues open.

WHAT STEVENS GUNS ACCOMPLISHED IN THE 1911 SEASON

More and more sportsmen are coming to a realization that shooting at the Traps is about as clean and interesting a sport as can be conceived.

Steadiness—celerity of movement—resourcefulness—and above all, quickness of eye—are all called into play in this "Premier Outdoor Sport". Gun Clubs are being formed in all sections of the country, and tamed business and fagged professional men becoming rejuvenated and "physically fit" because of indulgence in trap shooting. To break the elusive, whirling clay birds with a minimum of misses, is what the trap shooter strives for and the sport and direct benefit he gets out of it cannot be equalled by any other form of recreation.

During the Trap Shooting Season just closed, Stevens Repeating Shotguns have merited an enviable reputation and among the numberless trophies and championships secured by the Stevens were, National Amateur Championship—G. A. H. Tournament, High Amateur Average—G. A. H. Tournament, High Amateur Average—Wisconsin State Shoot, Dupont Trophy—Western Connecticut Trap Shooters' League, Maryland Handicap, High Amateur Average—Jewell, Iowa, 99 per cent, Tied for High Score at Western Handicap, Omaha, Nebraska, Score 98x100, Dupont Trophy at White City Gun Club, Centralia, Ills. etc. etc.

The gun known as a "Natural Pointer" and "Non-Balkable" is making good everywhere and such impressive victories show what the Stevens is capable of. Experienced trap shooters are unanimous in declaring Stevens Repeaters the fastest and best balanced guns before the public. They are made in five styles and list from $25.00 to $100.00.

Send now for the new Stevens Shotgun Catalogue—decide to purchase a Stevens Repeater next Season. Your dealer can show and explain this very modern gun to you and its convincing points of merit are bound to greatly appeal.

Your Money Back if You are not Satisfied with the Medicine We Recommend

We are so positive that our remedy will permanently relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish the medicine at our expense should it fail to produce satisfactory results.

It is worse than useless to attempt to cure constipation with cathartic drugs. Laxatives or cathartics do much harm. They cause a reaction, irritate, and weaken the bowels and tend to make constipation more chronic. Besides, their use becomes a habit that is dangerous.

Constipation is caused by a weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine or descending colon. To expect permanent relief you must therefore tone up and strengthen these organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our recommendation. They are exceedingly pleasant to take, being eaten like candy, and are ideal for children, delicate persons, and old folks, as well as for the robust. They act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on other associate organs or glands. They do not purge, cause excessive looseness, nor create any inconvenience whatever. They may be taken at any time, day or night. They will positively relieve chronic or habitual constipation, if not of surgical variety, and the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments, if taken with regularity for a reasonable length of time. 12 tablets, 10 cents; 36 tablets, 25 cents; 80 tablets, 50 cents. Sold in Rochester only at our store—The Rexall Store, W. A. D. Cragin, Phillips, Me.

Fly Rod's Note Book

BY FLY ROD

St. Anthony's Cottage,
Phillips, Me., Nov. 14, 1911.

It was only 80 years ago that my own people, as little children, played around the wigwam of Pierpole, "the last Indian of the Sandy." Then, in the little village of Strong in spring after sugar time was over and baskets had been made from the ash tree.

"Hannah sold maple sugar to the Eastmans and the Reads, And the Porters and the Hunters, sold them moccasins and beads. To the Titcombs and the Belchers, and the Wendells Hannah sold Baskets full of maple sugar and she took their scanty gold."

Today, as true friends of mine, I am happy as I go in and out their homes, which in place of tents where they lived nearly a century ago, I enter fine cottage houses, well built and well furnished. Often there is a piano, for the Indians are fond of music and instead of the musical chants they sang in their own language in those days, one hears the popular airs of 1911 and the hymns sung by the children in school and at St. Ann's church.

About my own humble country home are baskets, the gifts of the Indians, woven for me by the granddaughter of Pierpole and Hannah, and I fancy I love the dear old forest with the same devotion as my Indian friends for

"Of all the beautiful pictures that hang on memories wall, The one of the dim old forest, is brightest and best of all."

How I recall nearly 20 years ago of spending two weeks in the wilderness under the shadow of Katahdin, the highest mountain in Maine and of a climb to the top.

I had for guide, "Joe" of the Penobscot tribe, and for my companion a beautiful Indian maiden who has since "crossed over the silent river."

Their kindness and devotion I'll never forget, for they are ever thoughtful of the comfort of those they take into the wilderness.

It was in summer time, and the blue bells were blossoming on the banks of the West Branch, and I wore a big bunch of them on the side of my red felt hat that Joe often picked for me. As we paddled up Sourdunahunk stream there was a huge bull moose taking a drink—it was before the state of Maine voted no—we shouted for Mr. Moose to go back into the woods, and I waved my hat at him, for I thought it would be too near his lordship if we attempted to pass by and as it was in closed time the moose was in less danger than we.

As moose hunters the Penobscot Indians are unsurpassed and but few white men are their equals.

It is told how Pierpole would strike the trail of the moose up the Sandy river and follow him for days across the mountains. The poem tells us how Hannah sat by the wigwam and "told her beads" when it would have made a more beautiful and truthful story to have told how Hannah prayed the good God to watch over and protect Pierpole, her brave husband, for "each bead is a prayer" and that poor ignorant Indian woman was not ashamed to pray.

The red men are very fond of picking up a moose trail, after a light snow has fallen.

Then in light marching order they will follow the animal for miles and miles across the country, crossing streams and mountains until at last they tire him out and then he meets death at the hand of his untiring pursuer.

This method of moose hunting is regarded by many as the most sportsman like but as the process frequently takes four or five days it is possible only for the hardest of hunters.

It is a well known fact that a vigorous man can tire out a moose in a long run, and the Indian will at length approach near enough to get a good shot. He can burden himself with but little in the way of camp equipage, however, and then a scanty supply of food and a blanket are all that he carries beside his rifle.

It certainly requires courage, endurance and determination as well as wood craft, and would be an impossible feat for the average hunter, but a man could justly be proud of a head secured in this way.

When a moose is started he will rush through the woods like an express train, making kindling wood as he goes.

If it is before a deep snow fall, and the traveling is good, it is a simple matter to follow the trail.

After a time the animal, confident of having thrown off his pursuers, will gradually slacken his pace and stops. But he is off again immediately upon hearing the first sound or upon scenting the presence of those who are following.

No white man, no matter how expert, can ever equal an Indian in following the trail.

In the now "long past" the time was when Indians used only birch canoes, but nowadays they make but few. Though winter bark is used in their construction and with the encroachments of civilization, it is becoming more expensive and harder and harder each year to get it. A high grade of birch canoe, it is claimed will out last three which are covered with canvas and almost every winter some wealthy sportsman will have a "birch" built on Indian Island.

They are much heavier than the canvas canoes however, and for a long trip where there are frequent carries most people prefer the canvas covered craft.

EXPECT A RECORD YEAR FOR DEER.

Proprietor Jones Laying For Monster Moose a Little Later.

(Special to Maine Woods.)
Mosquito, Me., Nov. 13, 1911.

While moose hunting last week I saw 15 deer in two days and four moose. Two of the moose were bulls but were not large enough for me, although they both had four points on a side. Moose seem to be very plenty here this season, but large heads are not very numerous, although I followed one very large fellow the other day but did not come up with him. I think you will hear from me a little later though, after the snow comes. This fellow has an immense head, knocking the limbs and bark off of the trees as he travelled along. At present I know where there are 9 moose; two of them are very large bulls. We are just waiting for snow, then we will be after them in earnest. We expect to make this a record year for deer at these camps.

The Brown party have four deer at present and will remain this week to get four more deer. It has been remarked that deer are not so plentiful this year as usual, but we find them just as numerous as ever.

Some of the guides have seen as many as 10 deer in one day.

Following is the list of game shipped from Jones' Camps up to date, since Oct. 1, 1911: Mrs. C. L. Alsterberg, Falmouth, Me., 1 buck, 1 doe; Joe Conderman, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1 buck, 1 doe; W. O. Partridge, Boston, Mass., 1 buck; H. H. Michaelson, Brooklyn, N. Y., 1 buck, 1 doe;

Dr. J. O'Donohue, Huntington, N. Y., 2 bucks; Watts L. Richmond, Batavia, N. Y., 1 doe; C. H. Wood, Batavia, N. Y., 1 buck; John B. Williams, Philadelphia, Pa., 1 buck, 1 doe; H. B. Hatch, Philadelphia, 1 buck, 1 doe; K. Burnham, Boston, 1 buck; Dr. Suffa, Boston, 1 doe.

To Boost Maine.

The new president of the State board of trade, Col. Boothby, and Secretary Blanding have issued a strong appeal to the local boards to get together, and push things, and it is likely that their advice will be followed.

Read carefully the article in another column by "Yule Yan" on Anti-Bangs. It contains much food for thought.

OLD NEW ENGLAND STOCK.

What has become of the old Yankee stock which cultivated our farms, raised generation after generation of children and made New England known all around the world? The old New England stock is disappearing. Once upon a time New Englanders did everything. They tilled their farms, conducted their fishing enterprises, made their shoes and sent out into the world the products of their own manufacture. Now things have changed.

The disappearance of the old New England stock impresses most forcibly visitors from other parts of the country to the New England states. The old farms are in the hands of Portuguese, Italians and Armenians. The fishermen are Greeks and Portuguese and a large proportion of the sailors. The laborers are mainly Portuguese and Italians. The peddlers who traverse the country districts and the gatherers of junk are mainly Jews with an occasional Syrian. The textile factory people are Poles, Greeks, French and Russians by a large majority. In the shoe making industry, Scandinavians, Canadians, French and Americans abound and in the remaining iron mills there is a large infusion of Portuguese among the workers. The impress of southern Europe is likely to be powerful enough in southern New England and the new social structure bound to evolve will have little trace of the Pilgrim and the Puritan, only so far as it is involved in its plastic condition by the laws and customs which have made New England what it is.

"UP AGAINST SOMETHING"

Kingfield, Oct. 30.

To the Editor of Maine Woods.

A certain business man in town says that the saying that the "unexpected always happens" was demonstrated to him in a very forcible manner one day recently, while carrying a traveling salesman to New Portland, New Vineyard and Strong in his Stanley steamer.

While crossing a bridge near New Portland the machine ran onto a large spike which punctured a tire, and being close to a farm-house he drove into the door-yard to make repairs.

An innocent looking but robust lamb was quietly grazing nearby, but paid no particular attention, until our friend knelt by the punctured tire to remove it, when the lamb approached from the rear at a speed of about twenty miles an hour and coming in contact with him sent him under the auto, with such force that he rubbed off grease with the side of his face that had been there all summer.

He says that no particular damage was done to him physically, but mentally it was a severe shock but he gave vent to his feelings by bursting forth with a flow of language and a series of well-directed kicks aimed at the fast fleeing lamb which would have been a credit to a foot-ball player.

He outside a lamb as a menace to the automobile public in general.

HAS GOOD WORD FOR DR. BROOKS

Mosquito, Me., Nov. 1 1911.

In reply to Dr. Robinsons very ungentlemanly letter, I would say that he is the fool and not Dr. Brooks. No gentleman would write such a dirty mean letter, and I am surprised that MAINE WOODS would publish such a letter.

I have guided Dr. Brooks three years; one year guided him 37 days and want to say right here he was as careful a man as I ever guided, many times telling me to be careful. But then why multiply words upon the matter. No man endowed with good common sense would write such a fiendish letter a Dr. Robinson did and we all think he is the crazy one, not Dr. Brooks.

Yours sincerely,

Geo. C. Jones.

A VENISON SUPPER

Every one of the 45 members of the Bangor & Aroostook Clerks' associations showed up for their work Thursday morning in spite of the speeches they listened to, the stories they heard told and the vast amount of venison and pastry which they consumed at George A. McCaw's venison supper party down in the boys' room in the basement of the Y. M. C. A. building Wednesday evening. The fact was considered remarkable, it was said confidentially by some of the B. & A. officials Thursday.

Mr. MacCaw, who is a clerk in the passenger department, shot the deer, near Grindstone, where he was spending his vacation on Thursday of last week. He carried the carcass of the animal five miles through the woods. It was hard for him to believe that it only weighed 145 pounds, when he finally flopped it down on the scales in the baggage room of the little railroad station in the woods. An invitation was extended to each of the 45 members of the clerks' association to attend the venison supper. Wednesday night and each of them responded.

Louis Hegwein, who was the caterer, served the venison in a number of appetizing styles. First there was venison stew with plenty of juice and potatoes and onions and other vegetables, roast venison with mushrooms and a ragout which was a wonder. Beside the venison there were the other fixings which go with a venison supper including pies in 57 varieties. Pres. McArdle of the association ate five pieces, so Mr. MacCaw said Thursday.

Four of the young ladies in the B. & A. offices, Miss Florence Muzzy, Miss Alice McGrath, Miss Vergie Severance and Miss Frances E. Creamer, volunteered to act as waitresses and their services, which were of the highest order, were greatly appreciated by the members of the order.

After coffee had been served and cigars lighted, the time was passed in telling stories and in listening to songs by a quartet made up of Charles Elkin, J. A. Flanders, Jr., Irving Pierce and C. E. Page, until B. E. Dempsey, chairman; F. A. W. a late hour.

The committee, which had the affair in charge was composed of B. E. Dempsey, chairman; F. A. W. Field, A. E. Avery, E. S. Richardson, Frank J. McArdle and P. H. McCready.

LOCAL NOTES

Mrs. Ella Barker Williams of New Vineyard was the guest of Mrs. Diana Aldrich last week.

Mrs. Phillips, who has spent the past few months with her daughter, Mrs. F. A. Lawton, returned to Auburn last Friday where she will be with her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Nilson; Mrs. Lawton accompanied her and remained a few days. Mrs. Phillips has won many friends in town by her gracious manner and it is hoped that she will be with us another summer for an extended stay.

The Rebekahs had a most delightful evening at their last regular meeting Friday night when the C's did the entertaining consisting of the following committee: Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Currier, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Carlton and Clarence Campbell. All kinds of stunts were given the members to do and they all entered into the jolly good time. At the guessing counters Mrs. C. E. Parker carried off the blue ribbon and Mrs. F. B. Davenport drove a nail so well that a red ribbon was pinned on her. In the hunt for peanuts Mrs. Fred Morton of the targets number E. V. Holt will now do the sewing for his family, as they all pronounced him a first class seamstress. A. D. Grafman was quite an expert threading a needle when seated on a jug with his feet crossed, and anyone trying it will find it quite a "shaky" thing to attempt. The notice that a tasting party would be in order brought out lots of delicious viands from the sisters and they were enjoyed to the utmost.

Miss Mollie Hescock, who for several weeks has been employed in the department of Coutier Bros., Waterville, has returned home.

Last Saturday morning a party of Boy Scouts, consisting of Lew Noble, Charlie Toothaker, Floyd Reed, Henry Scamman, Albert Scamman, Bruce Davenport and M. S. Hutchins hiked from Phillips village to the top of Mt. Adams. They returned to the village late in the afternoon well pleased with the trip for the tramp to and from the base of the mountain, makes, when added to the climb, a good day's work for even the most energetic of the scouts.

Upon Champagne has leased Spring Farm, Carrabasset, and will take possession at once and begin to get ready for spring business. Mr. Champagne is just the man for the place and we predict for him a good trade at this, one of the finest outing spots in the whole country—"a Sportsman's Paradise" indeed. Mr. Frank J. McMurrer the proprietor has returned to his old position as track manager of the trolley lines in New York city.

WELD HERFORD COW HAS SIX CALVES.

Weld, Me., Nov. 7. Thomas Williams and son, prosperous farmers in Weld, were somewhat surprised Monday morning, upon going to the barn, to find that one of their cows had given birth to six calves during the night. Two were dead when found and one of the four living has since died. They weighed on an average of 30 pounds each. The cow is a Hereford nine years of age and girths about 5 feet, 8 inches. The sire of the calves was a one year old Holstein. Five of the calves were marked almost alike, being black and white.

Since receiving the above, report has come that the cow and all the calves are dead.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Erie, Pa. — "I suffered for five years from female troubles and at last was almost helpless. I went to three doctors and they did me no good, so my sister advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and when I had taken only two bottles I could see a big change, so I took six bottles and I am now strong and well again. I don't know how to express my thanks for the good it has done me and I hope all suffering women will give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It was worth its weight in gold."—Mrs. J. P. ENDLICH, R. F. D. No. 7, Erie, Pa.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record for the largest number of actual cures of female diseases we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials are on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., from women who have been cured from almost every form of female complaints, such as inflammation, ulceration, displacements, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion and nervous prostration. ANTI-BANGS

By Yule Yan

(Written for Maine Woods)

There was a lank sportsman named Gunner,

Who after the game was a runner.

While running quite slow
He stubbed his big toe.

The bang that he got was a stunner.

There is many a man who gets a bang for his love of hunting. He is thought of as inhuman, and blood-thirsty. I have known him to be riddled with tongue-shot, which is number one buck, six pellets to an ounce of tongue.

"I don't see how you could kill a deer."

"What? Eat one of those pretty gray squirrels? Never!"

A good friend of mine, who has gazed with me at grand old Katahdin, lost in wonder, love, and praise, has a wife and two daughters, who let him hunt but won't eat his bunny. Last winter, while he was cooking their Sunday dinner he sandwiched in a hare with the rooster, and at the table served one piece of white meat from chancicleer and one piece of dark meat from the forest kitty. And they said, "Papa, wasn't that a good rooster?" Now, the oldest daughter says, "I'll admit that I liked the hare," but I'm not going to eat any more. Brave girl! Tastes do change, where they get half a chance.

The hunter is a man who begins at the beginning of his task. He goes out after the game, finds it, lays it low, brings it home, separates the parts, cooks them, and then plays the worthy host. Thus he gets the benefit of an all round philosopher about his platter. In the division of labor he has taken part of each man's trade. With wisdom he can declare, if there is no disgrace in eating meat it is honorable to go out after meat. Your hunter is not afraid to step where the live meat is, and to pass through all of the stages necessary to the satisfaction of appetite.

Perhaps a woman cannot understand the hunting spirit. Her part in the division of labor has always begun after the killing is over. Being domestic, woman has come to prefer home killing and slaughter-house killing to the killing of wild game. Yet every cook-book that woman has gotten up presents us with a chapter on, Venison, Etc. Woman's cook-book presupposes phlebotomy by means of the knife, axe, or rifle. "Take a chicken, yes but that implies some instruction as to what to do with its head. Neither sex would want to cook a live chicken, with its head on.

Hunting is not necessarily brutal or cruel, nor does it lead to man-killing. A study of all the murder cases in this world would reveal comparatively few hunters. The hunter loves animals and he admires their form, beauty and traits. Witness his affection for his dog. But he believes that God has given man some animals to eat. Hunters' Associations stand back of legal enactments which protect the game. And your hunter in the woods and on water is no more wasteful and prodigal than the average being among us. Where he secures his small share of meat its drops of blood are as nothing to the steady stream of blood ordered daily by humanity through myriads of markets.

Nor is your hunter obliged to don the habit of an atheist, or to doff the spirit of kindness. Cannot a man love God and fifty-two times during the year kill a hen for his family to eat? Strengthened by the meat of forest and barn do not men walk on the Sabbath unto the house of divine gratitude?

The thinker who argues that there is as much reason for believing that an animal has a soul as that man has, therefore killing an animal is murder, and we ought everyone of us to be vegetarians, this man's thought is sentimental and incomplete. The vegetarian takes life in bringing his vegetable through unto maturity. The housewife takes life to preserve eatables. The very water we drink, teeming with life, our stomachic arsenal and gunpowder factory blasts with chemical change. God has created two kinds of life in the world, stationary and movable life. The plant is endowed with just enough instinct to hold on to the soil where it has been placed, and grow. And each animal has been endowed with just enough instinct, no more, as may be sufficient to carry out its peripatetic growth. Lion or rabbit, eagle or fly, whale or trout, to each has been given that very small amount of self-governing capacity which insures motion, procures sustenance, and maintains watchfulness. Killing a skunk is much the same thing as pulling an obnoxious weed up with the roots. Shooting a deer that is ready to be eaten is an act similar to pulling up the beets in one's garden. Vegetables and animals are both a part of the divinely ordained commissariat of nature, which has been so arranged as to offer a variety unto man. The hen-roost is as lawful as the garden.

Societies to check cruelty toward animals have a grand task to perform, but overstep their bounds when they undertake to castigate the hunter and cause sentiment against hunting itself. To eliminate all unnecessary cruelty from the chase is as far as they should go in that direction. Dumb animals are moving edibles, with a proper place on the menu, when man wishes. If the weapons that secure beef-steak are uncondemned the steel tube which appropriates venison is legitimate. Every person who eats meat virtually asks somebody to go and get an animal and kill it.

The joy of hunting is much akin to the joy of agriculture. Hunter and farmer both find pleasure in extracting food from nature, in overcoming nature, in making nature pay tribute. Each has to work hard to get anything, each has to study

COMMON SENSE IN MEDICINE

The Wealthy Can Afford Doctors and Nurses.

Many Good People "Cannot Afford to be Sick."

Proprietary Medicines Prove Efficient and Economical.

Wealthy families do not feel obliged to consider the matter of expense in case medical treatment is needed. They can afford to consult physicians, to get prescriptions and to have medicines specially put up for them. Most families, however,—and they are the bone and sinew of the country, intelligent, prudent, economical men and women,—have so little to go and come on that professional services are out of the question, except where they are absolutely necessary. These families, these millions of men and women of only ordinary means, regard it as "common sense in medicine" to avail themselves of the leading proprietary medicines, which are so remarkably effective and so easily obtainable.

The makers of Hood's Sarsaparilla are justified in saying that for all the diseases and ailments for which this great medicine is recommended thousands of families have found it entirely satisfactory. It is unquestionably the leading proprietary medicine for impure blood, lack of strength, that tired feeling, loss of appetite, and for severer troubles, such as rheumatism, eczema or salt rheum, catarrh, blood-poisoning, bad sores, scrofula and other diseases.

It has effected more cures than any other medicine.

Harry D. Frink, Gloversville, N. Y., says: "I had a large bunch on my neck, which appeared to be scrofula. I have taken a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla and the bunch has entirely disappeared."

Any preparation said to be "just as good" as Hood's Sarsaparilla is inferior, costs less to make, and yields the dealer a larger profit. Insist on having Hood's and get it today in usual liquid form or tablets called Sarsatabs.

and plan. Did anyone ever hunt without becoming a veritable lover of nature? Ah, the delights of the forest, the secrets of the dense woods, the views from the mountains, the tent in the valley, the canoe on the stream! The farmer has begun to know, and the hunter has pushed beyond him into these joys. Make flings against the hunter! Curse the meat wagon that calls at your door, first! You don't know what it means to sing Bobbie's old song, "My Heart's in the Highlands."

Mattapoisett, Mass., Nov. 1, 1911.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DEATH.

Mr. Everett R. Freeman of Augusta, Maine while at work at Prescott's livery stable had a narrow escape from instant death. Mr. Freeman was on a load of hay tending a patent fork such as is now used while hoisting hay to the loft of a stable. This fork and rigging did not run fast enough from the door of the loft to the end of the track to suit Mr. Freeman who is a hustling sort of a man, and he pulled the rope so quick and hard, that the fork and rigging which weigh about 75 pounds, ran off from the end of the track and fell a distance of more than 20 feet, the point of the fork striking Mr. Freeman just under the heart with terrific force. As he was not instantly killed it was evident something he wore saved his life. The clothing on his body consisted of two flannel shirts, a Beach Warm Back Vest, and a North Star Beach Coat. The two last named garments are made from cloth that is warranted not to rip, ravel or tear, as every stitch of it is a knot. Mr. Freeman says that nothing except the extraordinary strength of the cloth in this coat and vest saved his life.

The Huntington Clothing Company of Augusta, Maine, are jobbers of Beach Jackets, Beach Warm Back Vests, and sole distributors of North Star Beach Coats. See their advertisement on the third page of this paper.

GEMS IN VERSE

The Lay of a Fox Hunter

Happiness is not so much in what we do
As it is in the thoughts we brew;
Thoughts of past hunts both wearisome and gay
As the memories of their return to-day.
We start just before light as the fox makes his last track,
I take my fox gun, lunch and old dog Jack,
We wind our way through the woods to the newly made trail,
And I hear the dog drive him over hill and through dale.
Till the wily old cuss either takes to the earth
Or in some other way gives the dog a wide berth,
When the sun's slowly sinking far down in the west
We must soon be returning to our home, feed and rest.
Now let us prepare for that fearful old gag;
Say, how many did you get? Go show up the bag;
We will answer as usual, we got air a plenty, and lots of fun,
And the good old dog had a splendid long run.
Just think of the chance the hunter man faces,
The pack has fifty-two cards and only four aces,
Or liken it, if so it pleases you, to eucher or poker,
It isn't every hand that can draw a flush or a joker.
The interest to the true sportsman is surely not in
The number of pelts or the price of a skin;
But it's the pitting of very great cunning against his skill
That gives the fox hunter the exquisite thrill.
If, when I die, I go where I can have as much fun
As we had on Old Now England hills with dog and gun
I will then believe all the stories that ever were told
Even of the city that is paved with marble and gold.
C. L. Morse, Athol, Mass.

The apple crop was very abundant this year and many hundreds of bushels have gone to waste. We know of many families in cities and towns who have to go without "sass" and pies. It seems a pity that supply and demand cannot somehow meet and to top so much reckless waste of nature's bounty. It is not a sign of New England thrift this loss of so many of the necessities of life. Every year many tons of hay remain uncut, the woods are full of waste wood from the lumbering operations which would make most excellent fuel; nuts, berries and many other products are not harvested at all or in very limited quantities; ashes, refuse, waste products, etc., if made into a compact heap on every farm would go much farther in bringing back run out farms than tons of commercial fertilizer would, besides making the vicinity of buildings more tidy and healthful and the cots nothing but a little time.

Grandma Hamblet although nearing her 93d birthday (Dec. 6) is in excellent health and busy as ever. Just now as her custom has been for many years as the cold weather approaches she is engaged in knitting wristers for the sailors. Many a seaman can thank her for a warm comfortable pair of "pulse warmers" when the "busty blasts howl through the ships rigging.

WEST PHILLIPS

West Phillips, Maine, Nov. 6, 1911.

Farmers are late with their fall's work; many apples frozen and large amount of cider made, a large amount of hay pressed by the press of B. Frank Beal. Mr. Beal's crew consists of five men and four horses: Len Kinney, Jim Dunham, Billy Bangs, Charles Heath and Lew Walker, who has with him a large pair of horses owned by E. B. Hanscom. The press began work at Dill Bros. and thence went up by Beedy and Hodges farms to the Pearson place, thence over the hill to Littlefield's and down through Madrid. The whole number of tons pressed to date is four hundred, more or less; the cost of pressing is $2.50 per ton. The shortage of hay in Massachusetts makes it bring a good price in Boston.

Walter S. Hodges, in addition to other fall work, has shingled the front of the ell part and shed of the house and put on a new portico; and at this time is adding 250 feet to the aqueduct which supplies the barn and live stock with water during the winter.

A few days since some 400 bushels of potatoes, owned by several farmers in this vicinity were shipped from Hodges' crossing to Chapin Bros., Boston; returns from these show that when all bills, freight, commission, etc., were received, it left the farmers, sixty-five cents per bushel. In sending stuff away it makes a mighty big difference to whom it goes. I can tell a little story of a few apples that went to another merchant in Boston and now we are sorry we did not give them away to friends in Phillips.

Sporting? Well, we get no time; bears have been seen and shot at in No. 6. D. E. Pettingill, who lives in B. M. Co's office and works for Mr. Haley, on Nov. 2 shot a buck deer which weighed 300 pounds; he was a beauty and had eight points. We can also solemnly affirm that the steak was good. D. F. H.

POULTRY

TURKEYS GAINING IN FAVOR

Industry Has Increased in Many Ways on Account of Efforts of Producers for One Breed.

The growing of turkeys seems to have markedly improved within the last few years as a result of a determined effort on the part of producers of what is termed standard bred, or exhibition, stock to demonstrate that it is more profitable to use pure bred breeding stock than the smaller and less vigorous stock of days gone by. Their efforts to introduce throughout the country the several standard varieties of turkeys has greatly benefited the turkey-growing industry of this country. This has supplied rich, new, vigorous blood throughout the country, adding strength and vigor to innumerable flocks, and thereby, to some extent, building up the stock that had become deteriorated through the carelessness and inattention of the producers themselves.

The fact that one fecundation is sufficient to render fertile all the eggs of one laying has made possible the undermining of the health and vigor of the present-day domestic turkey. Being advised of this, hundreds of people depend upon their neighbors' flocks for the services of a male, and pay no attention to the breeding stock except to keep one or two turkey hens. This has reduced many of the turkeys throughout the country almost to a condition of imbecility. The lack of vigor in a large portion of the breeding stock throughout the country has jeopardized to a certain extent the production of a sufficient number of market turkeys to supply the demand. In fact, not fully realizing their failure was largely due to undermining the vitality of their breeding stock through inbreeding. People have become so disheartened in some localities with the meagre results of their efforts to grow turkeys for market that they have given up the attempt.

POULTRY NOTES

Don't crowd your young chicks. The loft should be cleaned out every month, at least.

Resolve to set no eggs this year from a weak, crippled, or ailing hen. Do not catch ducks by their legs. It is much safer to handle them by the necks.

Warm charred corn is fine for the liver, and sends biddies happy and warm to bed.

Have removable nests, not too many together, so you can dump them and fumigate when necessary.

It is an unpleasant fact that much spraying is done badly; this means that much money is thrown away.

A good male bird is half the pen, and his influence on the entire progeny is very marked.

Keep the brooder perfectly clean, and always feed the chicks in a clean place if you want them to live and thrive.

Nests should be placed in any little sheltered corner and should be so made that they can be closed when needed.

Where plenty of nests are provided little trouble will be experienced with hunting eggs in the tall grass or with egg-eating hens.

Farmers who raise 150 to 200 chickens every season could raise double the number with half the labor by the use of incubators.

Artificial incubation has been reduced to such a science that it is comparatively an easy matter to hatch any number of chicks.

A Pennsylvania woman raised $85 worth of young turkeys from three turkey hens last year, an unusual record, but what has been done, can be repeated.

Those who raise poultry on an extensive plan get better results and more profits by using the incubator than when dependence is placed solely on the hens.

A most excellent mixture for cleaning the henhouse is one of carbolic acid and whitewash. Paint all the interior with it; using an ounce of the acid to a pail of whitewash.

CARING FOR YOUNG GOSLINGS

Should Be Left in Nest or Incubator Twenty-Four Hours After Hatching—Keep Them Dry.

Goslings should be left in the nest or incubator for twenty-four hours after hatching, then fed with light bread soaked in milk and young, tender grass cut up fine and mixed with it. If they will not eat it, open their mouths and pour it in with a spoon. It is often hard to teach them to eat, and many are lost if left to learn alone, or are put out with their mothers until they can eat. Scatter blades of short grass among them and they will soon learn to pick it up. Two or three feeds will usually teach them and save you many dollars. After they learn to eat this, feed unsifted cornmeal and bran.

Keep the mother indoors until the dew is off the ground, after which confine her to a small pasture. If possible, as she will tire the young goslings by walking too far. Do not let them get chilled or get caught out in a heavy rain, for they are much more easily drowned than chickens. Exposure to cold, damp weather and wet coops will give them rheumatism. Plenty of grass and water are necessary, with a little grain, until the time for fattening arrives in the fall.

The most practical and altogether effectual remedy for bee stings is to put ammonia on them immediately; this is a simple remedy, but the application of ammonia will give instant relief and prevent swelling.

AN ENGLISH AUTHOR WROTE:

"No shade, no shine, no fruit, no flowers, no leaves—November!" Many Americans would add no freedom from catarrh, which is so aggravated during this month that it becomes constantly troublesome. There is abundant proof that catarrh is a constitutional disease. It is related to scrofula and consumption, being one of the wasting diseases. Hood's Sarsaparilla has shown that what is capable of eradicating scrofula, completely cure catarrh, and taken in time prevents consumption. We cannot see how any sufferer can put off taking this medicine, in view of the widely published record of its radical and permanent cures. It is undoubtedly America's Greatest Medicine for America's Greatest Disease—Catarrh.

CHURCHES

Union Church.

Melvin Sherburne Hutchins, Pastor.

Calendar for week ending Nov. 25. Sunday Nov. 9, 10.45, morning worship. Sermon, "The Search for Truth." 11.45, Sunday school. 7.30, People's service, music by the Choral club. Address, "No Ink In His Pen."

Thursday, Nov. 23: 7.30 P. M., mid week prayer meeting.

Saturday, Nov. 25: 2.30, P. M., Free Baptist Conference.

The subject of the sermon preached at the Union church Sunday morning by Rev. M. S. Hutchins was "Religious Prejudice." The text John 21, xxii, "What is that to thee? Follow thou me."

In this world where each one has his own view point, his own opinions, his own ideas, there has, from the times of earliest history arisen differences in these things, and at some time each one feels some degree of prejudice against those who his views. This prejudice darkens fail to recognize the correctness of life, deadens sympathy, takes away good fellowship, undermines friendships and proves destructive to the best qualities of the heart. Prejudice in its effects is very, very bad.

Prejudice is a mixture of different qualities. Not all are alike in temperament, in disposition, in characteristics of mind and personality. It is well that it is so. If all were alike in these things much of the interest of life would be taken away. We should act like automata, existence would be monotonous. The individual personality creates the interest in life.

Take away individuality and progress ceases. It is the differentiation in mind and temperament which promotes thought and investigation that is conducive to progress.

God's love is more than love for the race as an entity. It is love for the individual. In this is the hope of personal immortality that belongs to the Christian religion.

The Hindoo religion, the best of the heathen religions, teaches immortality. After many reappearances in various forms, which are successively higher as one increases in goodness, one's existence is absorbed in that of God. One has achieved immortality, but lost personality. How much dearer is the Christian conception of immortality.

To be sure God loves the race. The church should love and work for the race, work for those things which better society and its conditions and not expend all its strength upon work for a few individuals. But remember that God loves individuals as well as the race, and the church must do that also.

As God has made us not all alike it comes about that our opinions concerning many things will be different. One develops strong opinions about those things which most interest him, his work, his business. As one's own opinions become strong and stronger is he tempted to look unfavorably and with prejudice upon those who differ from him. Is it, then, not right to have strong opinions? He who does not have them will drift, will accomplish little. But strong opinions by themselves is not prejudice. Prejudice is strong opinions mixed with selfishness. Selfishness underlies every form of sin.

In the history of mankind no other prejudice has been as strong as religious prejudice, and it began long ago in early ages. It was religious prejudice which caused the chosen people to refuse to listen to the warnings of the prophets. It was religious prejudice which for three years hounded the Master, the Founder of our religion, and the Savior of our souls. It was religious prejudice that sent him to a terrible death. It was religious prejudice which so long delayed the free acceptance of the Gentiles into the early church. It was religious prejudice which for centuries persecuted the followers of Christ, sending often to deaths of terrible torture. This it was that established the Inquisition, persecuted the Puritans and Pilgrims, and made them persecute the Quakers and those suspected of witchcraft. It has been the instigator of the most cruel wars. It has prevented the various divisions of the Christian church from perceiving the good in those differing from themselves. It has a black, black record.

We rejoice today to say that though it has not disappeared from the earth, it is no longer as bitter as in former years. The day is past when a Baptist preacher might not occupy a Presbyterian pulpit, or a Presbyterian a Methodist pulpit. The great sections of the Christian church can see good in the teachings and work of one another and even see that from some heathen religions we may receive knowledge of God.

Yet the battle is still on. A Methodist bishop residing in Utah in a recent magazine article wrote that in some things he had found more good among the Mormons than was sometimes thought to exist, and for writing this he has been deluged with denunciatory letters.

The cross which to Protestants and Catholics is a loved and revered symbol of their faith, to the Jews of Russia is an object of dread, speaking to them of the Russian Greek church, whose cruelty they know but too well.

Today there is too great prejudice, too great over looking of good in the other in the two great divisions of the Christian church. The church has prejudice towards the world and prays too often the prayer of prejudice. "Lord, I thank thee that I am not as other men are." Those outside the church are prejudiced against it because some within it are guilty of deeds that they would not do. There is prejudice against those who do and against those who do not accept the teachings of "advanced thought." Little churches, two or three or more in a town which can ill support one consume their strength in denunciations of each other.

It is well to ask, Do I harbor prejudice? Whatever you find in others, hear the words of Jesus, "What is that to thee? Follow thou me."

A LITTLE GOSSIP FROM "SAM" FARMER

Arkansas City, Kan., Nov. 1, 1911. To the Editor of Maine Woods:

We made a delightful call on Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Vogel this morning at their magnificent home on South B street, this city, and Mr. Charles Howard, his father, who lives with them, well known in Phillips, many years ago. We were treated most respectfully and enjoyed our short visit hugely. They have three fine boys, the oldest being 8 years old and the second one nearly two years younger. The oldest is named Charles H. Vogel for his grandfather, Charles Howard; the second Louis H. Vogel. The youngest only two weeks old is named for his father, Frank J. Vogel. They are all fine boys and a great comfort to their grandfather, who failed to have any boys of his own, and is now made happy. Mr. Vogel is as faultless a man as we know and is one of the most respected conductors on this section of the Santa Fe railroad. We congratulate Blanche Howard on getting so fine a husband and must acknowledge Mr. Vogel should congratulate himself as much. Their home is a happy one.

Mrs. A. D. Prescott arrived home last week and says she enjoyed the summer very much in Minnesota, where she has so many friends, where she used to live. Besides she went in company with several lady friends from this city. She said she could not bear the thought of going to Maine alone this year having spent two summers there with Mr. Prescott, but that she should surely spend the summer in Phillips next year if spared and she has subscribed for the Maine Woods and stopped the Chronicle. She plans now to go with her son and wife to spend the winter in California. Samuel Farmer.

A FATHER'S VENGEANCE

Would have fallen on any one who attacked the son of Peter Bondy, of South Rockwood, Mich., but he was powerless before attacks of kidney trouble. "Doctors could not help him," he wrote, "so at last we gave him Electric Bitters and he improved wonderfully from taking six bottles. It's the best kidney medicine I ever saw." Backaches, tired feeling, nervousness, Loss of Appetite, water of kidney trouble that may end in dropsy, diabetes or Bright's disease. Beware! Take Electric Bitters and be safe. THE WAY THE FARMERS FEEL Representing U. S. Agriculturists, the Grange Has Aided in the Fight Against Reciprocity.

When the Grange, in many states, took up the fight against Canadian reciprocity and declared that it represented the sentiment of the farmers of the country, there were many who loudly proclaimed that the farmers were being misrepresented and that the latter were "not really opposed to reciprocity."

Since then a perfect flood of letters from the farmers has poured in upon Washington, and no doubt any longer exists that the farmers of the country, as a whole, are against the measure, positively and unmistakably. How one Ohio farmer feels about it is seen in an episode between Deputy W. J. Edgerton of Belmont county, and his congressman which shows distinctly the Grange farmer sentiment in that state. Mr. Edgerton wrote the congressman his views on reciprocity, expressed in a courteous, proper way. The congressman did not think it necessary to reply, evidently, but instead sent the usual congressional salve—a package of free seeds. This was a little too much for Brother Edgerton and he returned the seeds to the donor with the following letter:

"I see by your recent vote that you are more interested in the welfare and prosperity of the farmers of Canada than of those of your district. I am returning to you the seeds which came to my address this morning, with the suggestion that you send them to some of your Canadian farmer friends. It is an insult to any intelligent farmer to send him a bunch of cheap seeds after you have voted to rob him of markets rightfully his own. This is especially true when the seeds were purchased with his money and without consent. Some of the statesmen (?) of today will later learn that for every dollar the purchasing power of the farmer is reduced the nation must suffer a two-fold loss. Allow me to suggest that you later may have plenty of time to meditate on the fact that farmers of your district believe in exact justice to all classes and will be content with nothing less. Your Grange constituents have gone to the square deal school too long to accept any apology."

SUBORDINATE GRANGE PICNICS

Attendance Has Been Good and Great Interest Shown in Lectures and Speechmaking.

The visit of Oliver Wilson, lecturer for the National Grange, to Colorado, resulted in a number of picnics among the Subordinate Granges of Colorado. Brother Wilson spoke at Castle Rock, City Park, Fort Collins and the Chautauqua at Boulder. He is the man of the hour and strikes straight from the shoulder. In clear forceful language Bro. Wilson told of how the National Grange, the oldest farmers' organization in our country, had secured practically all the legislation that has been enacted, directly favorable to the farming class.

Don't waste your money buying strengthening plaster. Chamberlain's Liniment is cheaper and better. Dampen a piece of flannel with it and bind it over the affected parts and it will relieve the pain and soreness. For sale by all dealers.

among the good laws secured by the organized farmers through the National Grange, was the "Rural Delivery." When this bill was first introduced there was but one legislator who had the nerve and strength of character to support the measure. They held up their hands in holy horror, at the very thought of legislating for the farmer, who had been played for a sucker for a century and they saw no reason why he should not continue in that role. However, the Grange persisted and today nearly fifty millions of farmers are enjoying rural delivery yet but few of them realize it was secured through the efforts of the Grange.

This worthy organization has now determined to secure the enactment of a Parcels Post measure into law and every farmer throughout the country should give his assistance by organizing subordinate Granges and working for their own interests through their organizations. The attendance at all these Grange picnics and the interest taken in the speaking was good. If the farmers of Colorado only realized their opportunity of securing favorable legislation and better prices for their produce, they would organize Subordinate Granges in every community.

Welsh Miners' Place of Worship.

One of the most remarkable places of worship in the world is the miners' chapel in Myndd Menigdd colliery, Swansea, Wales, where for more than 50 years the workers have each morning assembled for worship. This sanctuary is situated close to the bottom of the shaft. The only light is that obtained from a solitary Davy safety lamp hung over the pulpit from the ceiling, and the oldest miner in the colliery is generally chosen to officiate.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

Designs everywhere. Ask yours to show you the Perfection Heater enameled; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of Standard Oil Company (Incorporated)

CONVENIENT TO DRY FRUIT

Loss and Labor May Be Saved by Using Reversible Trays—Taken to Shelter Without Trouble.

(By H. F. GRINSTEAD.)

The evaporator is the best for a number of reasons, but where one must dry by the sun there is yet a much better way than spreading out one the house roof or a scaffold of boards.

Loss and labor may be saved by having wire bottom trays two feet wide and two or three feet long. These trays should be made reversible, which may be done by having the sides of two pieces of inch-and-a-half timber nailed together with the wire bottom between them. This secures the bottom and makes a tray an inch and a quarter deep either way it is turned.

Four of these trays will hold as much as any ordinary family would want to put out at one time, and more can be had as needed.

The wire cloth for the bottom should be galvanized and what is known as No. 2 or No. 3 mesh; that is, there are two or three wires to the inch, which is close enough to hold fruit.

The scaffold is made by setting four posts high enough to be out of danger from the poultry. Strips of 1x4 are nailed from one post to the other as high as wanted for the trays to rest on.

The end posts should be set two feet or a little more apart, which will be the proper width of the scaffold, putting the other pair of posts as far from these as the length of the scaffold is wanted to be.

When the trays are placed on these supports the air passes up through the fruit, drying it much quicker and more uniformly.

The greatest convenience in having the trays is when a shower threatens or to protect the half dried fruit from the night dew.

The trays may be quickly taken to shelter without disturbing the fruit.

If there should be several days of rainy weather the trays should be stacked one on top of the other in a shed or in the house; the air passing between the trays will keep the fruit from souring till again placed out-of-doors.

The pruning hook here illustrated will be found handy and its construction is easily within the possibilities of any blacksmith. A piece of 1/2 or 5/8 inch iron rod is shaped as shown for the handle. PURE BRED SITES NECESSARY

The sires should be pure bred of a recognized breed of draft animals. He may be a little shorter and more compact than the mare, otherwise the description I have given of the mares applies to the stallion also. Do not breed the largest horse, but select the best one. Do not cross-breed if you can help it, especially do not mix the breeds indiscriminately.

Having selected a sire of a certain type, stick to that breed if possible. If you must change, change to the breed that has the most good sires in your neighborhood so that you can keep up one line as long as possible. The best time for colts to come is in April or May.

If the colts are properly fed and well cared for until four or five years old, and then carefully broken, they will sell readily at a good profit. It pays to raise heavy draft horses, and I am sure that every farmer who has tried it has found this to be true.

The illustration shows Boquban Lady Peggy, a champion English Clydesdale.

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

Loss of Appetite or Distress After Eating a Symptom That Should Not Be Disregarded.

Appetite is just a natural desire for food. Loss of appetite or stomach distress after eating indicates indigestion or dyspepsia. Over-eating is a habit very dangerous to a person's good general health.

It is not what you eat but what you digest and assimilate that does you good. Some of the strongest, heaviest, and healthiest persons are moderate eaters.

There is nothing that will cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract serious maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all in Phillips who suffer from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that we will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine, they are not perfectly satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have yet to hear of any one who has not been benefited by them. We honestly believe them to be without equal. They give very prompt relief, aiding to neutralize the gastric juices, strengthen the digestive organs, to regulate the bowels, and thus to promote perfect nutrition, and eradicate all unhealthy symptoms.

We urge you to try a 25c box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, which gives 15 days' treatment. At the end of that time, your money will be returned to you if you are not satisfied. Of course, in chronic cases length of treatment varies. For such cases we have two large sizes, which sell for 50c and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—W. A. D. Cragin, Phillips, Me.

Nearly every ready has heard of Doan's Kidney Pills. Their good work in Phillips still continues, and our citizens are constantly adding endorsement by public testimony. No better proof of merit can be had than the experience of friends and neighbors. Read this case:

For years I was afflicted with kidney trouble and rheumatic pains and was often unable to get about. I passed many sleepless nights, and was also bothered by the kidney secretions. TAKING CARE OF CORN CROP

In Years of Scarcity of Roughage All
Fodder Should Be Saved—Sled
Cutter Proves Best.

In years of scarcity of roughage like this, all the corn fodder should be saved. In some localities this is done almost every year, while in others it goes to waste. Anyone who expects to save and handle corn fodder without a great deal of work will be disappointed, but there are some short cuts that will lessen the labor. We have never found the corn harvester satisfactory in this section, says a writer in the Homestead. Most of the corn is cut by hand. The most satisfactory method I have ever practiced was to tie up the saddles at the places where the shock was wanted and cut the two rows by hand, then use a one-horse sled cutter if the corn were standing well. Start in at one end, and as you reach a shock stop and set up the bundle you have cut. In this way a row of corn may be cut through almost as fast as a horse can walk. The cutter herewith illustrated is simply a sled with an old saw blade secured at the proper angle. Two men can operate a double cutter which is made the same way, except there is a blade on each side. When the shocks are finished, let them stand a day or two unless it is stormy then draw tight with a rope, and tie with twine.

FOR PULLING A FENCE POST

The tool shown in illustration is made with a heavy piece of steel formed with three sharp points at one end, says the Orange Judd Farmer. These should be about 1½ inches long. It is then bolted to a strong scantling about 8 or 10 feet long, as shown in illustration. By pressing the points into the wood of post and using the scantling as a bar any fence post may be easily drawn from the ground.
