I have been acquainted with John Presley since his boyhood; I know him to be a good citizen, an industrious man, and a good son to his widowed mother.

He was in my employ for four years prior to his enlisting in the Army. I always found him to be trustworthy, willing to do the best in his power, and perform his duty with fidelity.

It is my opinion that in whatever position he may be placed he will fill it with honor to himself and profit to his Country.

His advancement would gratify a large circle of friends and acquaintances.
