The Cuban Congress has authorized an issue of 7,000,000 postage stamps in commemoration of the installation of the Cuban republic.

It is a relief to the public, says the Kansas City Star, to know that approximately all of the Vanderbilts are now married for the time being, anyhow.

The editor of the Formosa (Kan.) New Era has grasped the leading characteristics of the country village. "We prefer," he says, "to live in a small town where all the people sympathize with you in trouble, and if you haven't any trouble will hunt up some for you."

"Uncle Joe" Cannon has just passed his birthday for this year, and when asked by a reporter to say something about himself and the day Mr. Cannon declared: "Mr. Cannon was born of God-fearing and man-loving parents. He made himself and he did a blamed good job of it."

An awful question has arisen in the Philadelphia high school. The teacher of physical culture has ruled that no girl in the graduating class shall have a train on her graduation gown and the girls have risen and are on the warpath against the decision. There is some talk among them of refusing to take their diplomas unless they can receive them in the gowns they see fit to wear.

A Great Dane dog was buried in New York last week, and the event was one of importance. The dog belonged to a member of the theatrical profession, and had traveled twice around the world, and appeared on the stage before crowned heads. Its body was placed in a rosewood coffin and taken to its grave in an automobile, while for 40 cars followed the puffing hearse, for the whole funeral went to the funeral in their automobiles.

Editor McKelway of the Brooklyn Eagle is quite right when he puts whatever odious tactics to assist journalism on sashet. The daily receipt of personal items from the pens of those named in them, with the polite expressions that they are on the way, and of providing later a new subway for surface cars which now use the tracks on Washington street. There have been many surmises as to the probable routes of the two new subways but all are merely conjectures until the report of the commission is made public.

During the past 15 years Boston has entertained three great conventions, the Grand Army, the Knights Templar and the Christian Endeavor, but these memorable receptions are to be eclipsed by the one now being prepared for the National Educational association which will be held here July 6-10. It will be the greatest educational opportunity for those engaged in the profession of teaching that has ever been given in this or any other country. A tentative program has been given out which is subject to change up to June 25 when the final schedule as adopted will be printed for the sessions. The plans for entertaining the delegates promises to be the most complete and extensive of any convention that ever met in Boston. There will be a solid week of excursions. Every afternoon will be devoted to excursions and sight-seeing. As President Eliot of Harvard is president of the association the treasures of that institution will be open to the delegates, a privilege never before accorded any public gathering. Special committees have been appointed to escort the visitors to every point of interest in the city. The commissioned officers of the Boston school regiments will be on duty during the week, meeting trains, escorting the delegates to their quarters, furnishing information

Work on a project which is of much importance to shipping and commercial interests, namely, the construction of a breakwater for a harbor of refuge at Point Judith, Rhode Island, is about to be begun. The breakwater, which will be built of riprap and masonry, will extend from the shore at Point Judith at a point about 1,300 feet northwest from the lighthouse, or within half a mile from the protection formed by the present breakwater. The experience of vessels that have safely ridden out, in the harbor of refuge, in some of the worst storms, has proved the holding ground to be good, excepting perhaps the part near the apex of the triangle formed by the present breakwater, but toward the shore the holding ground is all that is required for safe anchorage, essential.

The goldfish farm near Waldron, Ind., was the result of one man's hobby for pet fish and the disinclination of his ground to yield a profitable income. William Shoup, the owner, tried first to farm his land in the accustomed way of tilling the soil. The result he considered not worth the work involved. Pet stock claimed his attention and he gave up his extensive acres to rearing them. In one small pond he kept his gold fish until he found that they were multiplying so quickly as to crowd each other out of their preserves. In order to get rid of them he sent to the East to find a sale for his superfluous fish. Mr. Shoup's special hobby in his love for pets has always been goldfish, and as he was among the finest specimens to be had anywhere, he received a prompt request for more until he decided that it would be worth while to devote additional farming space to his fish. So from a mere pastime sprang the biggest goldfish industry in the world. At a rough calculation, out of his 150,000 fish, this goldfish farmer realizes every year about $20,000.

Dr. Agnew's Catarrh Powder has proved a blessing to many a "man before the public" in cases of hemorrhoids, bad throat, catarrh and catarrh. Some of the most recent evidence of its efficacy comes from a well-known actor, whose home is in New York City. He says: "I have never found anything so effective for quick relief." 25 cents—Sold by W. J. Coakley and C. H. Moore & Co.

In Boston.

"Pierce" Tells Us Some of the Matters Going On At the Hub.

Boston, May 19, 1903.

The Massachusetts legislature is strenuously endeavoring to find out whether or not a member of the Senate offered to sell out to Raymond. It is getting very fashionable to have a scandal by the legislature. Harvard is strictly up-to-date in this respect although it was hardly to be expected of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts with its honorable record in the past. Residents of Boston and vicinity have become accustomed to seeing the sign "Sold Out to Raymond" greet them on every hand and by the time this is in print we shall know whether or not it is to be pasted on the sacred codfish and emblazoned on the Bulfinch facade.

It often occurs to us that this is a very small world. The latest coincidence to call this to our attention is the arrest of Moody Merrill, who was well known here up to last year, and then under serious charges dropped out of sight as mysteriously as if he earth had swallowed him up. Not long ago at the Harbor Opera House, in Boston and along with a Boston inspector was strolling through the Common. A handsomely dressed woman passed them and the Boston inspector remarked that it was Moody Merrill's wife. The New York man thought little of the incident until some time later when watching for a suspect at the Harbor Opera House, in the crowd this woman passed him accompanied by a gentleman. Within a day or two Moody Merrill was arrested.

The centennial of the birthday of Emerson falls on Monday next and will be generally celebrated throughout the country by literary folk. Harvard is observing the occasion by a series of lectures this week closing with next Monday night. These lectures are by prominent members of the Harvard faculty and are open to the public. There will also be a public observance during the day and evening at the Parker Memorial with addresses by prominent people.

The Boston Transit Commission is expected shortly to announce its decision as to the route for the new Washington street subway. The proposition now before the commission is a tunnel to afford a new way of bringing the elevated trains down town from the present elevated structure at Castle street, and to give up their route in the present Tremont street subway to the surface cars which formerly traveled it. The other part of the proposition, which may not be taken up until the end of a year, after the completion of the new subway, is a proposition for the whole question of the extension of the elevated trains to surface cars, and of providing later a new subway for surface cars which now use the tracks on Washington street. There have been many surmises as to the probable routes of the two new subways but all are merely conjectures until the report of the commission is made public.

The Courier-Gazette.

Andrew Carnegie and his gifts form the subject of almost daily discussion in the newspapers of the world. The spectacle of a millionaire who thinks it a disgrace to be wealthy and who distributes his money with a free hand—where the object seems worthy—is well calculated to fill the people with amazement. The current impression that he gives his money almost wholly for libraries is very erroneous. He has given $600,000 for negro education, $13,042,000 for technical education and $26,019,500 for general education and research, besides millions for miscellaneous objects such as the palace for The Hague tribunal. Geographically, Mr. Carnegie's gifts have been sprinkled over every state and territory of the United States, except Arkansas, Mississippi, South Carolina, Delaware, Rhode Island, Idaho and the Indian Territory, and they have also reached Porto Rico, Cuba, Canada, England, Scotland, Ireland and Holland. In spite of these imposing figures and the fact that his benevolences are constantly increasing, Mr. Carnegie has hardly succeeded in distributing more than his income. The principal represents a tremendous treasure upon which to draw, but he is only 65, healthy and vigorous, and may yet live upon some plan that will save him from the task of making a lengthy will.

The offer of John A. Farson, the Chicago banker, of a million dollars for a satisfactory servant girl, placed some of Carnegie's benevolences in the shade until it became known what Mr. Farson's definition of "satisfactory" involved. The requirements which accompany his splendid offer are as follows: She must love her vocation; she must be physically strong, physically clean and good natured; she must be a diplomat; she must be neat, prudent, and know her place; she must never discuss household affairs with outsiders; she must always be dignified; she must never make an error in table service; she must know at a glance the likes and dislikes of my guests; she must never sulk; she must be a good nurse, a good cook and know something about dress making. Were it possible to find all or even 90 per cent of these attainments in a servant girl it will be generally conceded that she is fitted to occupy a much higher sphere, but there are other strings to the offer. The million dollars goes in the form of a legacy after the banker's death. Meantime the servant girl must be diplomat, mind-reader, physical culturist and all the other things on a modest salary.

A Nebraska paper, edited by one of Bryan's closest friends, serves notice that if the reorganizers in the Democratic party obtain control the Bryan element will support Theodore Roosevelt in the next campaign. This paper intimates that the same forces which defeated Benjamin Harrison are now seeking to undermine President Roosevelt, through the elevation of Grover Cleveland. Although the Republican party is not likely to require the assistance of any other than its straight party voters it is cheerful to know that there is even this vague proposition of help in case of a combination against the President. Democrats as a rule are obliged to confess their admiration for Roosevelt and many of them are probably wondering even now why they should think of voting for anybody else in November, 1904.

The California lad who thought it an evidence of precocity to shout "Teddy" at President Roosevelt was promptly and publicly rebuked by the latter. We suppose it is very proper for the rough riders, who almost don't know his last name, to call him "Teddy" but it is scarcely the fitting way for a little boy to salute the chief magistrate of the country. It was in order for the maternal parent to supplement the President's scolding by giving the boy a sound spanking, but it is barely possible that both the boy and the father rather enjoyed the distinction of being "called down" by President Roosevelt.

A Rockport Domestic Jar.

Thomas Fortune Lost His Wife and Furniture But Eventually Recovered Both.

A Knox county man who resides between Camden and Rockport, or who did until a few days ago, is wondering what's in a name. He has traveled life's pathway more than half the years ago when he returned from his labors and found that his wife had not only left him but part of the household furniture had departed also. Thomas Fortune, and has oftentimes felt that the title was a misnomer.

He certainly felt that way a few days ago when he returned from his labors and found that his wife had not only left him but part of the household furniture had departed also. Thomas Fortune, and has oftentimes felt that the title was a misnomer.

He did not require the services of Prof. Leostidow to gain a clue. Some months ago there had appeared in his household a boarder by the name of Lewis Mushrau. Lewis was a blacksmith and not only had the muscles of a Vulcan, but the grace of an Apollo and the beauty of an Adonis. At least so thought susceptible womankind, and he appeared to be making such an impression upon the Fortune family that Thomas thought it better to advise him to locate elsewhere.

The blacksmith took the hint and departed. It was only a short time later that Mr. Fortune came home and missed a wife—likewise the furniture. He discussed the matter in all its phases with Sheriff Tolman and County Attorney Howard, and finally, armed with a search-warrant, went to the tenement where it was claimed that his wife and also had been stopping. Mrs. Fortune was present when her legs and the sheriff appeared, and for company she had a temper which appeared to have recently been whetted on a grindstone.

She expressed her opinion of Thomas Fortune in a manner that admitted no doubt as to how she regarded him. Sheriff Tolman is a modest and a bashful man; anybody in Pleasant Valley Grange will bear out this statement; and he tried to turn a deaf ear on the conversation which ensued. But when Mr. Fortune began to collect the furniture, Mrs. Fortune did not confine herself to mere verbal exercise but fell upon her master in a manner strictly prohibited by the marriage oath. She kicked at him with a vigor suggestive of football practice, and when this failed to prove persuasive whacked her husband with the three feet of a yardstick. Still Thomas Fortune maintained a calm and even disposition. The thought of recovering his beloved furniture seemed to exclude all other feeling, although his wife's lapse from choice language must have hurt his sensibilities.

The painful scene was over at last, however, and another warrant was issued, this for the arrest of the blacksmith, charged with having caused the removal of the furniture. M. A. Johnson, who appeared for Mushrau, was sponsor for the fact that he would be present Tuesday afternoon when the hearing was to take place but although the appointed hour came, the village blacksmith did not.

The hearing was productive of some satisfaction, however. With the sheriff, the county attorney, Judge Miller and Mr. Johnson using their powers as diplomats it was finally impressed upon Thomas Fortune and his wife that they should bury the hatchet, the yardstick, and all other implements of animosity. Thomas added a codicil to the effect that Mushrau must do his future mashing at the forge; while Mrs. Fortune put in an amendment that Thomas should omit the national game and the national beverage from his future diversions.

Mr. Fortune has found employment in Rockland and with his wife has again resumed housekeeping. The only man in Knox county who probably hopes that the New England Telephone Co. will continue to impose a toll rate between Rockland and Rockport is Thomas Fortune.

Reason: obvious.

"I speak positively when I say I have made the moon control the weather. My researches extend for thirty-six years. ## SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Grenfell Lorry, a wealthy American globe trotter, stumbles into acquaintance with a charming foreign girl on the train from Denver to Washington. The pair are left behind when the fire stops for repairs in West Virginia. Lorry leaves ahead to hold the train. He and the unknown girl ride twenty miles at a tearing pace in a mountain coach. There is no love-making, but a near approach to it as the rolling stage tumbles the passengers about.

III.—Lorry dines with the foreign party, consisting of Miss Guggenlocker, Uncle Caspar and Aunt Yvonne. They are natives of Graustark, a country Lorry had never heard of before.

IV.—Lorry shows the foreigners the sights of Washington. They leave for New York to sail on the Kaiser Wilhelm. Miss Guggenlocker naively calls Lorry her "ideal American" and invites him to come and see her at Edelweiss.

V.—Wildly infatuated, Lorry hurries to New York. The name Guggenlocker is not on the steamer list. He sees the steamer off. Miss G. waves him a kiss from the deck.

VI.—Lorry joins his old friend, Harry Anguish, an American artist, in Paris. Graustark and its capital, Edelweiss, are located by a guidebook. The Americans get no trace of the Guggenlockers there.

VII.—Lorry sees his charmer driving in a carriage with a beautiful companion of her own sex. He gets a glance of recognition, but the carriage rolls on, leaving the mystery unsolved. Later he receives a note at his hotel signed Sophia Guggenlocker, inviting him to visit her next day.

VIII.—In the evening Lorry and Anguish ramble about the grounds of the castle where dwells the court of the Princess of Graustark. They overhear a plot to abduct the princess and resolve to capture the plotters red-handed.

IX.—Following the conspirators, Lorry finds himself in a room where they designate as that of the princess.

CHAPTER XI.

LOVE IN A CASTLE.

AS the day wore on Lorry grew restless. He could not bring himself into full touch with the situation. Standing Harry's frequent and graphic recollections of incidents that had occurred and that had led to their present condition. Their luncheon was served in the court's room, as it was inadvisable for the princess to go to the dining hall until he was stronger. The court physician assured him that he would be incapacitated for several days, but that in a very short time his wound would lose the power to annoy him in the least. The Count and Countess Halfont, Anguish and others came to cheer him and to make his surroundings endurable. Still he was dissatisfied, even unhappy.

The cause of his uneasiness and depression was revealed only by the manner in which it was removed. He was lying stretched out on the couch, staring from the window, his head aching, his heart full of a longing that knows no other solace. Anguish had gone out in the grounds after assuring himself that his charge was asleep, so there was no one in the room when he awakened from a sickening dream to shudder alone over its memory. He turned on his side and curiously felt the bandages about his head. How lonely those bandages made him feel, away off there in Graustark!

The door to his room opened softly, but he did not turn, thinking it was Anguish—always Anguish—and not the one he most desired to—

"Her royal highness," announced a maid, and then—

"May I come?" asked a voice that went to his troubled soul like a cooling draft to the fevered throat. He turned toward her instantly, all the irritation, all the uneasiness, all the loneliness, vanishing like mist before the sun. Behind her was a lady in waiting.

"I cannot deny the request of a princess," he responded, smiling gayly. He held forth his hand toward her, half fearing she would not take it.

The Princess Yette came straight to his couch and laid her hand in his. He drew it to his lips and then released it lingeringly. She stood before him, looking down with an anxiety in her eyes that would have repaid him had death been there to claim his next breath.

"Are you better?" she asked, with her pretty accent. "I have been so troubled about you."

"I thought you had forgotten me," he said, with childish petulance. "Forgotten you?" she cried, quick to resent the imputation. "Let me tell you, then, what I have been doing while forgetting. I have sent to the Regenzet for your luggage and your friend's. You will find it much more comfortable here. You are to make this house your home as long as you are in Edelweiss. That is how I have been forgetting."

"And not much sense. There is but one woman a man would do so much for, and she could not be a mere woman in his eyes." Lorry's face was white, and his eyes gleamed as he hurried this bold conclusion at her.

"Especially when he learns that she is a princess," said she, her voice so cold and repellent that his eyes closed involuntarily, as if an unexpected horror had come before them. "You must not tell me that you came to see me."

"But I did come to see you, and not her royal highness the Princess Yette of Graustark. How was I to know?" he cried impulsively.

"But you are no longer ignorant," she said, looking from the window.

"I thought you said you were a mere woman."

"I am, and that is the trouble!" she said, slowly turning her eyes back to him. Then she abruptly sank to the window seat near his head. "That is the trouble, I say. A woman is a woman although she be a princess. Don't you understand why you must not say such things to me?"

"Because you are a princess," he said bitterly.

"No; because I am a woman. As a woman I want to hear them; as a princess I cannot. Now, have I made you understand? Have I been bold enough?" Her face was burning.

"You—don't mean that you"—he half whispered, drawing himself toward her, his face glowing.

"Ach! What have I said?"

"You have said enough to drive me mad with love for more," he cried, leaning back with his eyes closed, instantly, rising to her feet.

"I have only said that I wanted to hear you say you had come to see me. Is not that something for a woman's vanity to value? I am sorry you have presumed to misunderstand me." She was cold again, but he was not to be baffled.

"Then be a woman and forget that you are a princess until I tell you why I came," he cried.

"I cannot—I mean I will not listen to you," she said, glancing about helplessly, yet standing still within the danger circle.

"I came because I have thought of you and dreamed of you since the day you sailed from New York. Can I ever forget that day?"

"Please do not recall"—she began, blushing and turning to the window.

"The kiss you threw to me? Were you a princess then?" She did not answer, and he paused for a moment, a thought striking him which at first he did not dare to voice. Then he blurted it out: "If you do not want to hear me say these things, why do you stand there?"

"Oh!" she faltered.

"Don't leave me now. I want to say what I came over here to say, and then you can go back to your throne and your royal reserve, and I can go back to the land from which you drew me, unless because I love you. Is not that enough to drag a man to the end of the world? I came to marry you if I could, for you were Miss Guggenlocker to me. Then you were within my reach, but not now! I can only lose a princess!"

He stopped because she had dropped her hand from the window, her serious face turned appealingly to his, her fingers clasping his hands fiercely.

"I forbid you to continue—I forbid you! Do you hear? I, too, have thought and dreamed of you, and I have prayed that you might come. But you must not tell me that you love me—you shall not!"

"I only want to know that you love me," he whispered.

"Do you think I can tell you the truth?" she cried. "I do not love you!"

Before he had fully grasped the importance of the contradictory sentences she left his side and stood in the window, her breast heaving and her face flaming.

"Then I am to believe you do," he groaned after a moment. "I find a princess and lose a woman!"

"I did not intend that you should have said what you have, or that I should have told you what I have. I knew you loved me or you would not have come to me," she said softly.

"You would have been selfish enough to enjoy that knowledge without giving joy in return. I see. What else could you have done? A princess! Oh, I would to God you were Miss Guggenlocker, the woman I sought!"

"Amn to that!" she said. "Can I trust you never to renew this subject? We have each learned what had better be left unknown. You understand my position. Surely you will be good enough to look upon me ever afterward as a princess and forget that I have been a woman unwittingly. I ask you, for your sake and my own, to refrain from a renewal of this unhappy subject. You can see how hopeless it is for both of us. I have said much to you that I trust you will cherish as coming from a woman who could not have helped herself and who has given to you the power to undo her with a single word. I know you will always be true to me, true man my heart has told me you are. You will let the beginning be the end."

The appeal was so earnest, so noble, that honor swelled in his heart and came from his lips in this promise: "You may trust me, your highness. Your secret is worth a thousandfold more than mine. It is sacred with me. The joy of my life has ended, but the happiness of knowing the truth will never die. I shall remember that you love me—yes, I know you do—and I shall never forget to love you. I will not promise that I shall never speak of again, but I will keep your secret as long as I live. I will come to me a courage I did not know I could feel."

"No, no!" she cried vehemently.

"Forgive me! You can at least let me say that as long as I live I may cherish and encourage the little hope that all is not dead. Your highness, let me say that my family never knows when it is defeated, either in love or in war."

"The walls which surround the heart of a princess are black and grim, impenetrable when she defends it, my boasting American," she said, smiling sadly.

"Yet some prince of the realm will batter down the wall and win at a single blow that which a mere man could not conquer in ten lifetimes. Such is the world."

"The prince may batter down and seize, but he can never conquer. But enough of this! I am the Princess of Graustark, you are my friend, Grenfell Lorry, and there is only a dear friendship between us," she cried, resuming her merry humor so easily that he started with surprise and not a little displeasure.

"Because you are a princess," he said bitterly.

"No; because I am a woman. As a woman I want to hear them; as a princess I cannot. Now, have I made you understand? Have I been bold enough?" Her face was burning.

"You—don't mean that you"—he half whispered, drawing himself toward her, his face glowing.

Miss Alice Bailey, of Atlanta, Ga.,

tells how she was permanently cured of inflammation of the ovaries, and escaped the surgeon's knife, by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The universal indications of the approach of woman's great enemy, inflammation and disease of the ovaries, are a dull throbbing pain, accompanied by a sense of tenderness and heat low down in the side, with occasional shooting pains. On examination it may be found that the region of pain will show some swelling. This is the first stage of inflammation of the ovaries.

"Dear Mrs. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for the restored health and happiness Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought into my life.

"I had suffered for three years with terrible pains at the time of menstruation, and did not know what the trouble was until the doctor pronounced it inflammation of the ovaries, and proposed an operation. I felt so weak and sick that I felt sure that I could not survive the ordeal, and so I told him that I would not undergo it. The following week I read an advertisement in the paper of your Vegetable Compound in such an emergency, and so I decided to try it. Great was my joy to find that I actually improved after taking two bottles, so I kept taking it for ten weeks, and at the end of that time I was cured. I had gained eighteen pounds and was in excellent health, and am now."

"You surely deserve great success, and you have my very best wishes."—MISS ALICE BAILEY, 50 North Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

Another woman saved from a surgical operation by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Read what she says:—

"Dear Mrs. PINKHAM:—I cannot thank you enough for what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. If it had not been for your medicine, I think I would have died. I will tell you how I suffered. I could hardly walk, was unable to sleep or eat. Menstruation was irregular. At last I had to stay in my bed, and flowed so badly that they sent for a doctor, who said I had inflammation of the ovaries, and must go through an operation, or medicine could help me, but I could not do that."

"I received a little book of yours, and after reading it, I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am now a well woman. I shall praise your medicine as long as I live, and also recommend it to anyone suffering as I was."—Mrs. MINNIE OTTOSON, Ohio, Iowa.

All sick women would be wise if they would take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be well.

"And a throne," he added, smiling, however.

"And a promise," she reminded him. "From which I trust I may some day be released," said he, sinking back, afflicted with a discouragement and a determination of equal power. He could see hope and hopelessness ahead.

"By death!"

"No; by life! It may be sooner than you think!"

"You are forgetting your promise already."

"Your highness' pardon," he begged.

"You laughed, but their hearts were sad, this luckless American and hapless sovereign who would if she could be a woman."

"It is now 3 o'clock—the hour when you were to have called to see me," she said, again sitting unconcernedly before him in the window seat. She was not afraid of him. She was a princess.

"I misunderstood you, your highness. I remembered the engagement, but it seems I was mistaken as to the time. I came at 3 in the morning."

"And found me at home!"

"In an impenetrable castle, with ogres all about."

CHAPTER XII.
A WAR AND ITS CONSEQUENCES.
LORRY was removed to another room before dinner, as she had promised.

After they had dined the two strangers were left alone for several hours. Anguish regaled his friend with an enthusiastic dissertation on the charms of the Countess Dagmar, lady in waiting to the princess. In conclusion he said glowingly, his cigar having been out for half an hour or more because his energy had been spent in another direction:

"You haven't seen much of her, Lorry, but I tell you she is rare. And she's not betrothed to any of these confounded counts or dukes either. They all adore her, but she's not committed."

"How do you know all this?" demanded Lorry, who but half heard through his dreams.

"Asked her, of course. How in thunder do you suppose?"

"And you've known her but a day! Well, you are progressive!"

"Oh, perfectly natural conversation, you know," explained Anguish composedly. "She began it by asking me if I were married, and I said I wasn't even engaged. Then I asked her if she were married. You see, from the title, you can't tell whether a countess is married or single. She said she wasn't, and I promptly and very properly expressed my amazement. By Jove, she has a will and a mind of her own, that young woman has! She's not going to marry until she finds a man of the right sort, which is refreshing. I like to hear a girl talk like that, especially a pretty girl who can deal in princes, counts and all kinds of nobility when it comes to a matrimonial trade. By

"I don't know anything to tell. I'm not interested in the princess, and I didn't have the nerve to ask many questions. I do know, however, that she is going to have an unpleasant matrimonial alliance forced upon her in some way."

"That is usual."

The Cause of Many Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, heart failure or apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell.

Bladder troubles most always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the night. It is put up in many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sized bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

The Week's Political Gossip.

An Expert Analysis of Presidential Candidates by Southern and Western Correspondents.

R. M. Moorman, Washington correspondent of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, has returned from a southern trip. Talking about politics Mr. Moorman said:

"The best sentiment among southern Democrats seems to be that there must be two first-class political funerals before the Democratic decks can be cleared for effective action. At one of these events it is agreed that Mr. Bryan should be the central figure, and at the other it is desired that Mr. Cleveland 'look natural.' After this has been accomplished it is thought that the Democratic party can come around to the old ways of thinking and possibly accomplish something.

"Eliminating the personality of both Bryan and Cleveland, there are undoubtedly more Democrats in the south who believe in these things than there are those who are willing to follow the Bryan banner. People who were most virulently incoated with Bryanism a few years ago have recovered, although it must not be understood for one instant that the Bryan faction will not have its say in the next national convention. It is believed in the south that there will be enough Bryan men to defeat Cleveland for the Presidential nomination, should he desire it, just as there will be enough Cleveland men to hopelessly bury Bryan.

"Mr. Bryan's gratuitous and officious meddling in the affairs of the party is causing unbearable irritation. Mr. Bryan's case is simply summed up in this way: It is rather poor taste for a man who has had a liberal application of sole leather twice to come around and ring the door bell again. In the south, the name of politics is realized that Mr. Bryan is sitting on the plank nearest the ground.

"There has been a most wonderful change in sentiment in favor of Mr. Cleveland. His utterances, always apt and dignified, are commended, especially when they are compared with the frequent fulminations of some of the vocal gymnasts. Mr. Cleveland's sound Prosperity may keep the Republican support in vigorous and winning form. Roosevelt goes further and renders the enemy helpless. He makes it absolutely impossible to turn the Bryan following into an old-line Democrat. There is no account of this support Roosevelt has not the confidence, respect and support of the middle-class business men. Here and there one finds a big capitalist, interested in large speculative and commercial gambling schemes, who is in sympathy with the Wall Street objection to Roosevelt. There are not many of these. Their influence is inconsiderable. Their political activity will not be great. The average business man is convinced that Roosevelt is making some sort of a big fight against monopoly and corporation oppression which in the end will be for the good of the country. It does not even occur to them that this warfare will have any bad effect upon prosperity. They know all about prosperity. They are digging it out of the ground, making it in factories, selling it in stores, working for it at good pay at countless jobs. According to their view, Roosevelt is not bothering these workers. He is after those who are thriving on their industry and thrift. There is some discussion as to what he may be able to accomplish, as to whether Congress will help, how far the courts will support him, etc., but the fact that harm may come as a result of his efforts is not thought of as a possibility.

"Occasionally some political leader breaks loose with something which apparently indicates a serious intention. Roosevelt. These usually amount to nothing. The men really in politics dare not talk against Roosevelt in Ohio and Indiana. If Sen. Hanna should lend his name to an anti-Roosevelt movement he would be beaten for re-election. The same may be said of candidates for all federal and state offices in both states.

How about a change? There is absolutely nothing to indicate that one is coming."

Henry Waterman in the Louisville Courier Journal further discusses the Cleveland presidential boom, which, he says, he has never and does not believe will be a serious threat to Roosevelt. The average southern Republican will surrender any conviction if by doing so he can attach himself to an office. It is this that clinches them to Mr. Roosevelt at present. They think his nomination is a foregone conclusion and they are all scrambling for the highest seat on the band wagon. If they thought Senator Hanna, Senator Fairbanks or any other good Republican could get the nomination they would fall in line with the same agility as they are now following Mr. Roosevelt.

Washington, May 18.—Otto Carmichael, Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, Minneapolis Times and other papers, is in from a western trip. Mr. Carmichael had this to say about politics beyond the Alleghenies:

"There is some little gossip to the effect that should Mr. Cleveland be nominated by the Democrats he could not get the Bryan vote in Indiana. This is doubtless true. But it is also true that Cleveland could get as many of them as any other Democrat. Most of the Bryan Democrats will vote for Roosevelt.

"I spent several days recently in Ohio and Indiana, and made inquiries of well-informed men as to the political situation. I was told by railroad men that the employees were almost solid for Roosevelt and would vote for him without regard to former political convictions. I was told the same thing of the thousands of workmen on the trolleys and suburban lines. Traveling men, who meet the smaller merchants over the state, say that the approval of Roosevelt is so general that one rarely hears a word of criticism. These statements are the same from so many reliable sources that they may be accepted without the slightest question.

"The wise political doctors, and these states are full of them, are disposed to claim that the Republican administration has this confidence, and that Roosevelt personally is not responsible. There may be some little truth in this contention. Indiana and Ohio are tremendously prosperous. All the towns, big and little, are having booms. Central Indiana is making more rapid industrial progress than any section of the country. The towns of Ohio are making amazing strides. The farmers never made so much money and were never more contented. It is true that the Republican administration is given credit for these good times. It is also true that it is generally believed that the McKinley administration laid the foundation for this amazing prosperity.

"This much may be admitted without detracting from the commanding importance of Roosevelt in the situation.

TORTURING DISFIGURING

Skin, Scalp and Blood Humours

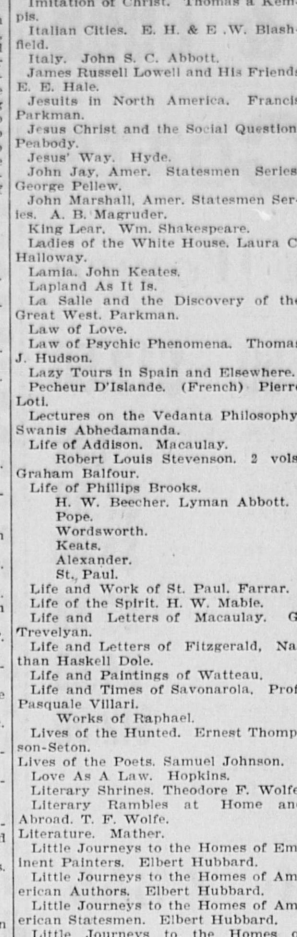

Speedily Cured by Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills

When the Best Physicians and All Else Fail.

The agonizing itching and burning of the skin, as in eczema; the frightful scaling, as in psoriasis; the loss of hair and crusting of the scalp, as in scalded head; the facial disfigurements, as in pimples and ringworm; the awful suffering of infants, and anxiety of worn-out parents, as in milk crust, tetter and salt rheum,—all demand a remedy of almost superhuman virtues to successfully cope with them. That Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills are such stands proven beyond all doubt. No student is made regarding them that is not justified by the strongest evidence. The purity and sweetness, the power to afford immediate relief, the certainty for cure, and the permanent cure, the absolute safety and great economy have made them the standard skin cures, blood purifiers and humors remedies of the civilized world.

Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, take the Cuticura Resolvent Pills, to cool and cleanse the blood. This complete treatment, costing but one dollar, affords instant relief, permanent rest and sleep in the severest forms of eczema and other itching, burning and scaly humors of the skin, scalp and blood, and points to a speedy, permanent and economical cure when all other remedies and the best physicians fail.

DESPAIR AND HOPE

A Tragic Life Story.

If there is anything in the theory that we get our heaven and hell here on earth, it could be said with perfect truth that a $1 medical prescription known as D. D. D., literally lifted this man out of hell. The awful miseries of a poisoned skin can be understood only by the afflicted. The nights of sleepless agony with hands tied to prevent tearing the flesh, the rundown general condition which results, and the black hopelessness of life can all be visibly traced in the first of these photos. As will be seen, this man is a man of powerful physique, but it will be seen from his face in the first picture that it is a grim struggle to live and keep up his courage.

In contrast, if the reader will fairly consider the picture after treatment with D. D. D., a new man is seen. Study this picture; contrast the two. Something has worked a wonder here. Reader, it was nothing on earth but D. D. D., and a kind Providence which directed the attention of this man to a public announcement about this medicine and its wonderful work in such cases. Providence went farther than this; it gave him some confidence in what he read. He made up his mind that he would try it. To this fact he owes all the peace, content and happiness so plainly seen in his face in the second picture. He states that after the third application of the remedy all his previous distress had disappeared entirely. The fevered condition resulting from continued irritation had subsided and he slept soundly nights.

The name of this gentleman is Mr. Henry Walters, of St. Louis, Mo. We have the sworn affidavit of Mr. Walters that in just twenty-nine days after starting treatment with D. D. D. he discontinued further use of it, every visible trace of the disease having disappeared. Since that time not a trace of the trouble has shown itself on any part of his body. His hair has since grown long and the scrubby beard previously grown on his face to hide the sores, is kept clean shaved, and he is today a man of strikingly fine appearance, with the highest ambition and activities in life and every happiness possible to most men here on earth. Results of this kind that are proven to be directly due to a preparation of this sort, certainly call for public appreciation. This prescription in sealed bottles, bearing authentic label of D. D. D. Co. of Chicago, sold at $1. The bottle is a liberal one and has proved sufficient to entirely cure many cases.

Eczema

is probably the worst and most stubborn of skin diseases, and it was for this that this prescription was studied out and perfected, but all skin diseases are caused by parasites or some form of germ life in the skin-structure. The prescription quickly and entirely annihilates all forms of parasitic life lodged anywhere in the skin. Many people imagine they have blood trouble when they break out with some form of skin affection, but not in one case in a hundred is this a fact, as the very healthiest blood is often found in the strongest men affected with breaks and eruptions of some kind in the skin. In all such cases the trouble is at the surface or near the surface, and it can be searched out and annihilated completely by this preparation.

The Above Is True.

I have received carefully prepared and fully attested documents and particulars regarding the case above mentioned of Mr. Henry Walters, of St. Louis, a victim of eczema, a form of eczema. I can say to all men and women afflicted with any form of skin disease that the medical testimony submitted shows beyond a doubt that they can cure themselves by the use of this preparation. I say beyond a doubt. I mean this fully, providing the affection is really a skin disease, as it has been shown that each of the known germs that cause skin affection have been entirely routed out and conquered by this preparation.
