HOW TO PREVENT FIRE

The vigorous campaigns against accident and for fire prevention just brought to a close, the one by the Safety Institute of America, the other by the city of New York, reveal facts and convey lessons which it will be well to hold in mind. It has been established that every year more than 75,000 people are killed by accidents in the United States and that 3000 or more of them perish in New York city alone. Fires there in 1910 caused a loss of $8,217,811; since that year the total has steadily increased until the figures for 1921 showed it to be $98,340,452. During the eight years tenement fires numbered 45,432, dwelling fires 6971, and factory fires 4519, all from causes which included "cigars, cigarettes and pipes, playing with matches, careless use of matches, faulty stoves, boilers and ranges, uncleaned chimneys, machinery friction and spontaneous combustion". Fire losses cost the inhabitants of Holland 11 cents each annually; in Switzerland the cost per person is 15 cents, in Austria and Italy 25 cents, in Germany 28 cents, in France 49 cents and in England 83 cents. But in the United States the charge upon each individual for fire losses is $5.

Out of both campaigns have come a series of recommendations designed to lessen such losses, along with the many fatalities and sufferings which they entail. For street and factory accidents alike Director L. V. Coleman urges "discipline and a sense of responsibility", but especially "alertness of mind" in the exceptional as well as in the ordinary situations of life. Dr. F. D. Lawson, who founded the Society for the Prevention of Accidents, writes that "the keynote of safety from accidents consists of devising a method of keeping in the minds of all a constant provision of the awareness of danger in other words, a means of making people think". Both these experts see that means in safety-first organizations of all sorts, since each of them, by its propaganda, is doing efficient work in reminding the careless individual of the risk he is so prone to take. And Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the public safety committee of the institute, favors to that end a year-round campaign enlisting the school, the press, the industries and the various civic agencies.

Fire prevention week has also brought a set of rules outlining exactly the kind of precautions which should be taken in the home and generally by householders. One of the most important of them is that which insists on stovepipes being cleaned frequently and kept in proper repair. Houses should be cleaned of all inflammable paper and other rubbish. Do not use kerosene in lighting the fire, and do not hang clothes over the stove. Keep your matches in a metal box and away from children. Lighted candles should not be carried about, and there should be no filling of kerosene lamps at night after they have been lighted. Locate the firebox near to your home and learn how to send in an alarm. These suggestions are but typical of a score which the householder may easily exorcise for himself. And if they are all remembered and followed we shall have fewer losses from fire.

NATIONAL ROAD BUILDING

Fifteen or 20 years of building good roads lie ahead of the United States. There will be built, during that time 150,000 miles of improved highways, which will constitute the Federal-aid highway system, and an equal or greater mileage of State and local roads. When the task is finished, the transportation facilities of the country will far exceed those of any other nation, past or present.

Details of this vast road-building program are to be placed before the Highway Education Board, in Washington, Oct. 26 to 28, by State Highway Engineers and officials of the Bureau of Public Roads, and the United States Department of Agriculture, to whom has been entrusted the work of planning and supervising the construction of Federal-aid highways. The plan also will enable the board to proceed authoritatively with its work of devising aids for schools and colleges to which road-builders of the country are turning for competent highway engineers.

Officials of the bureau place the aggregate cost of the Federal-aid program alone at about $3,000,000,000, spread over the twenty-year period. They base this estimate on an average cost of $17,000 per mile. The average cost in turn, takes into consideration all classes of improved roadways from the cheapest to the most expensive types. Approximately one-third of the proposed system, or 60,000 miles of improved highways, already are either built or building.

The program is new. Up to comparatively recent years, road-building in the United States had been conducted without special regard to a national system. Highways had been constructed where needed without considering whether they would link effectively with the whole network of roads over the nation. Engineers had sought more to meet immediate and local demands than the broad requirements of states and nation.

The present Federal-aid road-building program, will contemplate the construction of only such roads as fit into the national program and contribute to the national system. At the same time the roads will be so selected as to serve the most important local requirements. With marked modifications, the systems adopted in building the railways of the country will be borne in mind. There will be main lines of highway communication between centers, and thousands of miles of feeder roads, reaching back into the more sparsely settled regions and into the rich agricultural sections, to tap areas whose population and products will flow over the new system.

New roads will be planned and built thousands of miles of them, where they will fit most advantageously with the entire program. The bureau is continuing its research work into most efficient methods of road-building, including the character and wearing qualities of materials, resisting qualities of varying subsoils, etc., and has amassed a considerable store of valuable information all of which will be available for the highway engineer of tomorrow, whom the board is seeking to have educated in practical and modern methods.

THE AUTUMN OF THE BIBLE

One wiser than us has said there is something in the fall of the year which is kin to the blood of all of us. It is zest and a clean spirit that are world old and eternally new. Spring may be the renewal of life; autumn is its refreshing.

Turn to the Old Testament and read there all the manifestations of autumn and early winter of the east wind, the breath of the Lord coming up from the wilderness, the clouds, the storm and the rain. The comparisons of the Bible are all with simple things, but none are more effective, none more beautiful, than those which link the humility of man or the glory of God with the powers of nature.

In the imagery of autumn there is something sombre. Calamity cometh on a whirlwind, we read and it has blotted out as a thick cloud, thy transgressions and as a cloud, thy sins. The rain of fall is not the early rain of spring which covereth the valley of weeping with blessings, but the latter rain which watereth the earth. The dancing of brown leaves in fantastic procession and the whirling dust before the storm bring to most of us sick with the city's cares, a breath of that sharp, thrilling air which makes life glorious and love a lovely thing.

The town in autumn takes on new features and drapes herself in fresh garments. Over her the setting sun throws strange colors and the pavilions of the clouds dark in grandeur. The snap, the keenness of vitality, all above all.

"The spring, like youth, fresh life, some doth produce. But autumn makes them ripe, and fit for use".

NO GRUMPY GREETINGS

Have you ever realized what a difference the home greeting makes to the children, make, in fact, to every member of the family? When they come home from school, when they run in from their play, when they arrive home from a day's outing or a short visit, how do you greet them?

Do we ever say simply, "Hello, what a wild you ever remember to give your feet?" or, "Dick, why did you persist in dashing in like a wild Indian when I've told you so often about coming in quietly?" or "Bibby, you've ripped off a button. Come here quickly and let me fix it." Do we quench their enthusiasm, their joy at getting home by such remarks? Will the children greeted so look forward to meeting mother? Will they have a picture in later years of a loving, smiling mother, always glad to welcome them back to the home nest.

What a difference a simple "Hello" makes. It is a little of your love and your own will that is the secret of the matter.

A safe way to judge a man is to ascertain first what people he doesn't make.

Wealth consists not in a store of riches, but in contentment and serenity.

It is harder to live for others, but it is a crime to neglect our own.

or a sharp, scolding, criticising mother, ready to find fault?

Surely it is worth while to control our manner, our speech, and never let anything prevent us from giving the warm, hearty, loving welcome home we would wish to give our children, our loved ones, making them glad to be at home, making them love the home-comings. If faults must be reformed, advice given, save it for other times than the moment of arrival. Let the greeting be hearty and loving, one which will warm the children's hearts at the time and which they will remember with joy in the after years.

FAITHFULNESS

Whatever happens, never forsake a friend. When enemies gather, when sickness falls on the heart, when the world is dark and cheerless, is the time to try true friendship. They who turn from the scenes of distress betray their hypocrisy, and prove that interest only moves them. If you have a friend who loves you, who has studied your interest and happiness, be sure to sustain him in adversity. Let him feel that his love was not thrown away. Real fidelity may be rare but it exists in the heart. They only deny its worth and power who never loved a friend or labored to make a friend happy.

Charity thinketh of no evil. With an unwilling ear and a sad heart it hears bad news. It glories in no man's downfall in no one's misfortune. It rather holds down its head and partakes of his shame. It rejoices in the belief that all men are sincere. Where it cannot succor want it will console.

Wives, don't sit up waiting for your husbands. Go to bed and get all the sleep you can. In the morning when you are looking and feeling your best, if you have anything to say, say it nine chances out of ten you will win.

The woman that saves up her house- hold worries and her bodily aches and pains to entertain her husband with on his return home from a hard day's work at the office drives a sure nail in the coffin of conjugal happiness.

Memories of what we learn through bitterness and sorrow may not all ways be held in regret.

The thief who steals your piece of mind is meaner than the one who steals your property.

Usually if we postpone our worries for a day or two it will fail to keep its appointment.

The circle of human duties is only complete by the union of those of man and woman.

Good appearances may be poignant, but solid reality is more comfortable.

If religion has done nothing for your temper it has done nothing for your soul.

Many a rich pretense to care for a woman when all he really cares for is himself.

Think a little of your own life and you will think a great deal of others.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MAKING THE MOST OF OUR RESOURCES

Philip W. Blake, assistant to James Q. Guhae, president of the State Chamber of Commerce, has for 16 years made a business of finding out the sick things about cities and states and then prescribing remedies. Just at present he is devoting his energies to ascertaining what Maine is doing to remedial measures. In a nutshell Mr. Blake has spent several months in making a survey of the State and its industries. Those findings he has embodied in a series of carefully drawn charts which show strikingly the rise and fall of Maine's business tide from the early fifties up to the present time. And Mr. Blake has discovered some decidedly worth while things.

Probably no State in the Union has greater resources and natural advantages than Maine. But, according to Mr. Blake, we have not only not been making the best of what we have, but have not even been holding our own. All this because of a lack of organized and intelligent effort to bring business to Maine instead of allowing it gradually to slip away from us. Outside of 18 so-called industrial cities in Maine the State has gained approximately an average of only 1,000 people per county since 1850.

Aroostook County is a luster, that has long been conceded; but it is somewhat startling to learn that with the exception of that county the other 15 counties show an average loss in population per county from 1860 of approximately 3700. And it also comes as a shock to learn that there are nearly 100,000 acres less of improved

FISH FEEDING STATION

Patten, Me., Oct. 4, 1922

Editor, Houlton Times
Houlton, Maine.
Dear Editor:

Realizing the fast increasing demands made upon our lakes, ponds and streams by the native as well as the visiting fishermen, the people of Patten, Mt. Chase and surrounding towns have started a movement to establish a feeding station for fish at the foot of Upper Shinn Pond. The temperature of the water has been taken every week during the months of July and August and has been found to be suitable for raising trout. The Fish and Game Commissioner has already looked over the proposed site as well as the Chief Clerk of the Fish and Game Department. Mr. Briggs, the General Superintendent of the hatcheries of the state has taken levels and measurements and made an estimate of the cost and everything seems favorable, so that it now remains with the incoming Legislature to know if funds will be provided to do the work, that to the people of this section seems so very important.

A free deed of gift of the land has been generously offered to the state for this purpose as well as a right-of-way across his land from the main highway by Z. L. Harvey, who is noted for his public spirit in all things pertaining to the public welfare, and it is hoped that the hoped for feeding station may be a reality in the near future.

Situated as we are on a branch line of the Bangor & Aroostook railroad and from the fact that the only hatchery in the whole of Aroostook and Northern Penobscot is situated at Caribou, it will be readily seen that this hatchery cannot adequately supply the northern part of their own county, while all the other hatcheries are so remote that fish shipped out in the early morning can only arrive here on the night train, all tired out at best, and the only alternative for the applicants to save them is to transport them by buckboard, by hand and by lantern light to the various ponds and streams for which they were intended.

It would seem that from the amount of money invested in the numerous public and private sporting camps hereabouts and from the fact that Patten is considered one of the most important centres for fishing and hunting and furthermore, on account of the activities of the new Publicity Bureau established this year at Patten and a correspondingly greater increase of visiting fishermen, that the Legislature should have no hesitation in granting the small amount of money necessary to establish a feeding station, so that some of the great many fish hatched out in the established hatcheries at the present time might be fed and raised to the fingerling stage to supply stock for some of the sadly depleted lakes and ponds in this most important section.

Yours truly,

Howard Wood.

FIGHTING THE COLD

The house feels cold. Not cold enough yet to call for a fire in the heater. But just chilly enough to make us feel uncomfortable. It may be only early in the morning and at evening that we feel it; it may be a sunless day, with raw air. The warmth would be excessive if we started up the furnace. If we have an open fireplace a bit of a wood fire would do the trick for us, with cheering effect. But comparatively few of us are that lucky. Yet if we do not do something to take off the chill the consequences might be serious. The doctors tell us to keep warm, by all means. But can we do so without artificial heat? It largely depends on the individual. Young people may find little trouble; with delicate persons or with old people it may be quite otherwise. In regions of mild climate, say like Rome, we Americans commonly find the air of unheated rooms in the winter months intolerable, while the natives do not mind it in the least, they are used to it.

The first thing to look after is to do all we can to keep the body heat at work on the job. A change of clothing to thicker underwear, or heavier outer garments, as the case may be, is often sufficient. More blankets at night, perhaps. The equilibrium is thus restored; the heat of the body is kept from radiating. But care should be taken to adjust the clothing to the temperature; when we begin to heat the house we shall need less clothing otherwise we shall become morbidly sensitive and subject ourselves to chills and colds.

Proper diet and rational exercise should do much to keep us comfortable. Violent exercise is not called for. But a sedentary person tends to get sluggish in his circulation, and that means heat deficiency in the system. A brisk walk in the open air, not as a set task but in interesting places, if possible, perhaps combined with errands, is one of the best things for counteracting this tendency. Many a Boston business man keeps himself in prime condition by walking into town from Brookline or the Back Bay every morning along the esplanade or by Commonwealth avenue. But we are told that more effective than walking in promoting the circulation is arm-exercise, for instance, such as comes from rowing or paddling. At any time we can resort to this in the house for a few minutes at a time, either with free gymnastics or with Indian clubs. Again, what better exercise than a little family dance in the evening?

One of the best forms of inducing a vigorous circulation is said to be a method of promoting the activity of internal muscles while we may be sitting or standing, apparently motionless. This is by means of what is called "deep breathing". It is said that 30 gradual breaths, long and deep, properly taken, are sufficient to drive away a chilly feeling while sitting in a cold room, inducing a glow all over. Dr. J. H. Kellogg has related how in this way he has even made himself perspire freely while sitting in quietness. One might thus take his exercise, sending the blood coursing through arteries and veins while listening to a sermon in church, or to a lecture or concert, much as the steam, hot water or hot air courses through the house in the pipes of a heating system.

SOME STARTLING FIGURES

Four fifths of the young population of the country has little or no vital connection with the church, and behind this detachment lies a deep misinterpretation of the faith, by which Christian men and women live, or the ideals of life which they hold. This reports the International Sunday School Council of Religious Education, which recently met in Kansas City. Again, the report discloses that there are more than 27,000,000 American children, nominally Protestant, not enrolled in any Sunday school or church, and who receive no formal or systematic religious instruction, and we are told that there are 5,000,000 American children, less than ten years old, growing up in non-church homes. Estimating the total number of youth under twenty-five years of age at 42,000,000 is a most startling percentage. Putting these statistics in another way, and summarizing them briefly:

Nineteen out of every 20 Jewish children under 25 years of age receive no formal religious instruction; 2 out of every 4 Catholic children under 25 years of age receive no formal religious instruction; 2 out of every 7 Protestant children under 25 years of age receive no formal religious instruction. Or, taking the country as a whole, 7 out of every 10 children and youth of the United States under 25 years of age are not being touched in any way by the educational program of any church. This calls up a vital question: How long may a nation endure, 7 out of 10 of whose children and youth receive no systematic instruction in the religious and moral sanctions upon which its democratic institutions rest?

FINDS A CURE FOR DIABETES

After years of investigation and research in which time medical science was at a standstill to discover remedy for the successful treatment of diabetes, physiologists at the University of Toronto (Canada) have prepared a serum which is pronounced an "absolute cure for the disease."

A small quantity of the serum was sent to the University of Pennsylvania a week ago for physicians at that institution to use experimentally on diabetic patients. Today after several injections had been administered to three cases selected for the purpose, Dr. Alfred Stengel, professor of medicine in the Medical school of the university pronounced the experiments an unqualified success.

"I regard the serum as one of the big discoveries of the age in medical science," Dr. Stengel said today. "So far as we have been able to discover its results have been entirely satisfactory. After using it we have found a great improvement in the patients to whom it was administered."

Dr. Stengel was asked if he regarded the serum to still be in the "experimental stage," no I think it is an absolute cure for diabetes," he replied. "People must not imagine, though, that it is a cure-all for everything. For the treatment of diabetes, a disease that has always baffled physicians, it is a great step forward. Undoubtedly in that way lies the future treatment of the disease."

The announcement that a cure has been discovered for the diabetes will interest vitally 50,000 persons in the country who are estimated to be suffering from the disease.

BANCOR CRITIC ON MONTE CRISTO

Crowded to the doors the past two days and almost certainly to play to over capacity the balcony of its own, Monte Cristo has thrilled the big audiences like no other theatre ever has. The highest commendation is heard on all sides regarding this splendid presentation. Monte Cristo is another of the big William Fox productions. It has retained all of the beauty and intrinsic of the original story, and the scope of the action is so broad that it is almost impossible to do justice to the many exciting incidents in the line of the famous fiction character, Edmond Dantes, who later became the Count of Monte Cristo. The two things which make the back ground of the story, and the entire story is covered with dramatic incidents.

An all-star cast headed by Tom Gilber and Kathie Taylor portray the many different parts.

Many of the older patrons, after phrasing a comment for the picture, it being so far ahead and elaborate than the look or the stage play. The scenic beauties are truly wonderful.

CROPS DOOMED BEFORE PLANTING

Weather six months or more before planting probably determines the size of the potato crop in Colorado, according to Dr. H. G. MacMillan, pathologist of the U. S. Bureau of Plant Industry.

Temperature and factors influencing temperature appear to affect the potato yield in Colorado. A critical study of meteorological factors and potato production indicates that temperature for at least six months prior to planting is collected in the condition of the crop and the yield. Summer temperatures have much less effect. No data are available over many years as to the nature and cause of the prevailing disease, but Fusarium blight probably has been the controlling factor in potato production in Colorado. The high temperature in certain years, showing an increase above the normal during the winter and spring months appears to cause the infection of the potato seed pieces or plants by Fusarium fungus, with a rapid increase in the quantity of disease. An estimate of the winter and spring temperatures, showing whether they are above or below normal would be of great benefit to the farmer in preparing his seed potatoes. In years of high winter and spring temperatures he should plant whole seed. The critical temperature for infection of the potato seed by Fusarium is about 14 degrees.

SCROFULA MOST

PROGRESSIVE NOW

Sudden changes of weather are especially trying, and probably to none more so than to the scrofulous and consumptive.

The progress of scrofula during a normal autumn is commonly great. It is probable that few people are fully aware of the danger of this disease, and the wasting of the body without thinking of the benefit many suffer from it have derived from Hood's Sarsaparilla, whose success in the treatment of this disease alone would be enough to make it what it is, one of the most famous medicines in the world.

There is probably not a city or town where Hood's Sarsaparilla has not proved its merit in more homes than one, in restoring and completely eradicating scrofula, which is almost a serious and its cure to be feared as its cure relative consumption.

Hood's Pills, too, call for a note with Hood's Sarsaparilla, in cases where the bowels are constipated and through in effect.

of 3.8 bushels (414 millions for the United States) or more, usually causes prices to work gradually downward so that by spring they are considerably lower than when the crop began moving. In between these points the direction of the price trend is less certain. This year's production is 4 bushels per capita; and since the crop began moving prices have declined and low prices throughout the season would seem probable from the experience of past years. However, the amount of unmarketable potatoes, freezing in the fields, shrinkage in storage, better general business conditions, and other unknown forces may divert somewhat the normal trend.

Foot Ball

Football, which has been smoldering for several years at Patten, was fanned into flame last Saturday when Patten Academy knocked Sherman Mills High for a 31-0 goal.

Considering the fact that neither team had ever played a real game of football before, the game was quite well played and interesting.

Both teams were fairly evenly matched from a weight standpoint but Patten had the advantage as far as football knowledge was concerned.

HOULTON TRIMS

PRESQUE ISLE 25-12

Houlton High walked through the Presque Isle line in the second half of the game here Saturday afternoon overcoming a twelve point margin and winning by a score of 25 to 12.

In the first quarter the locals seemed unable to get away at all and the game was more in Presque Isle's favor. Presque Isle got away a beautiful forward pass that netted them a touchdown before the first quarter was gone. They failed to kick the goal. They repeated the stunt in the second quarter and then High School seemed to snap out of it and play real football. They started a rush down the field and made first down repeatedly but lost their chance to score in this half of the game when the whistle ended the quarter with the ball on the visitors' fifteen yard line.

At the opening of the second half Ira Bagnall made a beautiful kick-off that rolled almost under the Presque Isle goal posts. The man was nailed before he had moved five yards and a few minutes later when the upcountry lost ball on downs Bagnall broke through for a touchdown and made a beautiful drop kick for the extra point.

Presque Isle received again and another long kick rolled almost across the last chalk mark. A few minutes later Bagnall again crossed the last white line for the winning touchdown. The kick was blocked.

The last touchdown came in the last part of the fourth period when the long and lengthy Ira walked through the middle of the Presque Isle line for a run of about twenty yards with three men hanging to his belt. Again he failed to kick out shortly the game was over with Houlton winning by a large margin. Presque Isle lost their fight after the locals pushed ahead.

The entire Houlton backfield played good football with Bagnall the star as he gained every Houlton point.

PICTURE COMING

"The Three Musketeers", coming to the Dream, Wednesday and Thursday is announced by house manager Adams, as the most gripping and spectacular film ever produced by Douglas Fairbanks.

Based on that universally read classic by Alexandre Dumas, "The Three Musketeers," and added to from the Memoirs of D'Artagnan, this feature is said to embody more that is adventurous, romantic and dramatic than it has ever before been possible to incorporate in a film vehicle.

The feats of swordsmanship alone in this picture are said to be worth the price of admission. Added to that are a specially arranged prologue and a musical accompaniment written for the production by Louis Gottschalk, one of our best contemporary composers.

STOCK MARKET SITUATION

Wellesley Hills, Mass., Oct. 14, 1922.—Readers should not be surprised—according to Roger W. Babson—because of the recent action of the stock market. When interviewed in Wellesley regarding the matter, Mr. Babson today said the seriousness of the European situation is greater than most people realize.

"It is really surprising that the stock market has held up so well during the past two weeks. Of course the break was due to the gravity of the Turkish situation which was understood only by the big bankers in New York. The real facts are that France is today in quite a similar position as that held by Germany in 1914.

"The real seriousness of the danger has somehow been hidden. The change has come swiftly. A few weeks ago England was in the saddle. At conferences she was the dictator. She did the talking and France did the worrying. Today the situation is just the reverse. England is now in a hole. France deliberately put her there.

"England alone of all European nations has stood for law and order. She alone has stood for the payment of debts, and the fulfillment of obligations. Germany and Austria are bankrupt. Chaos reigns in Italy. Italy is on the verge of bankruptcy. France is committing suicide. England is the only country who has told us that she will pay her debts with interest.

"England's policy with Germany has been in opposition to that of France. England has wanted to get for France as much out of Germany as possible without killing the goose that laid the golden eggs. France was for killing the goose, but still for demanding the eggs. England was Europe's big brother and upon her the financial world has relied.

"Today England is faced with fighting Europe because she stands practically alone. The new government of Greece is not with her. Germany alone, in case of war, is helped only, possibly ally. The Germany of today is not on friendly terms with the Turkey of today. Should, however, Germany go in with England, there would have to be an entirely new interpretation placed on many European relationships and the problems of these relationships. There is the matter of reparations, for instance. All international finances would be upset.

"Yes, England stands practically alone, facing the great schemes of Russia will back Turkey. Russia will back Turkey. And, of course, France will back Turkey. Hence it must be kept clear that the real issue is not between Great Britain and Turkey, but between Great Britain and France. France has been backing Turkey. England has been backing Greece. Turkey and Greece, however, have been but pawns on the chessboard.

"When the last war was on, Russia was promised Constantinople. Russia withdrew. Then it was decided to keep Constantinople free, out of the power of either France or England. England slowly got a bit of the upper hand. This hurt the pride of France who patiently awaited her opportunity. Last month it came. Then France played her cards. In a few hours the entire European situation changed. Today France holds the trumps. It is not merely a war on paper, no. Turkey is fortifying herself by putting guns and troops at strategic points. Frankly, England is in a hole and this is what caused the stock market to break and foreign bonds to tumble. Her own people are against war. There is the memory of the recent bloodshed. There is still the warning mark of great sorrow. An Englishman, too, cannot see himself going to Turkey to fight. When Germany thundered in Europe right at England's door, the English Tommy was on fire to fight. But today it is different. The Englishman remembers sadly what happened at Gallipoli. He remembers the fearful cost of conquering a few doors in South Africa. He knows that there are over 200,000,000 Mohammedans at Turkey's back door.

"Even the Englishman, who hasn't a son that is already lost or a son to lose, has taxes to pay. England, with her intention of paying her debts, is the only European country that really taxes her people severely. The ordinary English tradesman is up to his chin in taxes. England has the highest tax rate in the world. He is not eager for more. The weight of which would almost break him. This is the position with which England is faced. She has either got to back the Turks at a tremendous cost of men and money, without the real cooperation of her own people, or else she has to lose India, Egypt, Persia, and the Holy Land. Do you wonder the stock market broke?

"What will happen, I do not know, but what ever happens, there will be no check on business. The future will be helped by higher prices for wheat. Manufacturing and shipping will become more active. The cost of living will go up. Money will be tighter and scarcer. People will sell their foreign securities. The stock market, however, will not permit anything. When the financial history of 1922 is written this will be charged only as a break in a bad market. Moreover, the writers will add: 'Convinced that the great schemes of Russia will back Turkey. Russia will back Turkey. And, of course, France will back Turkey. Hence it must be kept clear that the real issue is not between Great Britain and Turkey, but between Great Britain and France. France has been backing Turkey. England has been backing Greece. Turkey and Greece, however, have been but pawns on the chessboard.'

IMPORTANT MEETING OF MOTORISTS

Washington, D. C.—Motorists of the Nation will sit in representation soon, through accredited representatives of the American Automobile Association. In one of the most important conferences ever staged in motordom. Briefly, the meeting is to be one in which all persons interested in good roads will participate. The meeting is to be held from October 26 to 28, inclusive, under the auspices of the Highway Education Board of which the federal Commissioner of Education, John J. Tigert, is chairman. The object of the meeting is to further methods of constructing good and durable roads at minimum cost to the States and Nation.

This great work can best be accomplished, in the opinion of the Board, through a campaign of education conducted by schools and colleges in equipping the newest of the engineering professionals, the highway engineer. The Highway Education Board is seeking to bring together the college professor and the practical highway engineer, the motorist and the road builder, the manufacturer and the highway official and from the meeting skim the cream of suggestions for inclusion in courses in highway engineering now taught in about 170 educational institutions. There is no precedent of yesterday to guide these institutions. Road-building in its present gigantic scale is new to the world. The textbook of today may be obsolete tomorrow. To meet these conditions and to satisfy the greatest need of the engineering profession existing today, the clearing house of ideas has been promulgated.

Among the delegates to the convention will be George C. Diehl, President, H. G. Shirley, Chairman Good Roads Board and M. O. Eldridge, Executive Chairman of the American Automobile Association. Mr. Diehl with other will speak for the motorists of America. He will undertake to tell the meeting what the motorist wants and expects in the building of highways.

"I should appreciate the best thought and suggestions of automobilists from every section of the United States in order that I may be thoroughly equipped to present all phases of the motorist's case," Mr. Diehl said today. "To that end, I should appreciate hearing from the automobile clubs of the country and from the individual motorists. Their suggestions should be sent promptly to our Washington Office as there is but little time before the conference meets.

"We are engaged now in a great scheme of highway construction. The Federal-aid highway system alone contemplates work for the next fifteen or twenty years. When complete, that system will measure 15,000 miles of highway.

ed highways, stretching into every section of the United States. The States themselves have great road-building programs. They probably will construct another 150,000 miles during the same period.

"We need competent engineers to build these roadways. The combined cost of the two systems will approach $8,000,000,000. How can we best train the engineers? What kind of roads best suit our needs? How can roads be built to endure at minimum expense of construction? In other words, how can the road builder and the engineer, within the limitations of the money they have to spend and the materials with which they must work, best aid the motorist in obtaining the full advantages of a new and improved system of highways?

LOCAL BOY MARRIED

IN BOSTON

An old-fashioned colonial quaintness marked the first wedding ever solemnized in the new edifice of the Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church in Arlington, Mass., where last Tuesday evening October tenth at eight o'clock, Miss Marianne Achsah Morris, daughter of Lieutenant Commander Albert H. Morris of the United States Naval Reserve Forces, and Mrs. Morris, of East Arlington, became the bride of Harold William MacConnell Berrie, also of Arlington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy S. Berrie of Houlton, Me.

Following the wedding, a reception to the several hundred guests, who had been invited to the ceremony, took place in the church parlors. The church was decorated for the wedding and reception with palms and chrysanthemums.

The bride studied at Simmons College for two years, as a member of the class of 1922. She is a member of the Somerville Simmons Club. The bridegroom is a veteran of the World War, in which he served overseas as a sergeant in the "Yankee Division." He was decorated with a Croix de Guerre, with three citations. He belongs to the Somerville Ex-Service Men's Club. Mr. Berrie is now in business in Boston. Following a wedding trip through the White Mountains, Mr. Berrie and his bride will make their home at 14 River Street, Arlington.

HERE'S A CHANCE TO ATTEND WEST POINT

United States Senator Frederick Hale will hold a preliminary conference

There are now more than 10,000 motorists in the United States. If each one were to take to the road at the same time, their cars, and to end, would make a line more than 6000 miles long. The line grows fast and we want to provide ample roadways of the best possible construction to afford them greatest comfort and a maximum of road room. I should like to hear from these motorists and see what they have to suggest.

ESKIMOS HAPPY PEOPLE, MATE OF M-MILLAN DECLARES

"Eskimos are honest," asserts Jot Small of Provincetown, Mass., mate of the Bowdoin, the MacMillan Arctic exploration vessel, now in port, after 14 months in the region of Baffin's Land. Jot, who, Dr. MacMillan says, is the most efficient man for northern exploration work whom he has ever met, has made four trips into the Arctic ice, and while he now says that it is uncertain whether he will go back again, MacMillan smiles and says: "No need to worry about Jot. He'll be here when the Bowdoin sails in July, 1923."

Eskimos are a favorite topic of conversation with Jot, if you can get him talking, which is not easy. A sailor man by heritage, he has always followed the sea, but has never gained the habit of loquaciousness characteristic of sailors.

He got warmed up on his favorite theme about the Eskimo the other day and their natural honesty.

"They're honest, more than the average white folks, I'll say," he declared, continuing: "How many of us white folks when hungry would see good eats laying 'round and not take them? Not one, I'll say; we'd dip in and help ourselves. An Eskimo'd do nothing of the sort. He'd wait until you gave it to him or he'd starve, and if you don't think that is true, ask Mac. They're good people. Their ways of living are different from yours and mine, because conditions are different from what they are here. They live according to their understanding and I don't believe that there is a happier people in the world than they."

"What do they live on?" he was asked.

Jot squinted his left eye, took a couple of puffs at his pipe and said that the Eskimos didn't have many strawberry shortcakes to live on, but that meat and eggs constituted the greater part of their food supply. Game is plentiful and they are great hunters. The eggs, he explained, are duck's eggs. The eggs are collected by the natives during the spring season and are very good eating. Contrary to the general understanding the Eskimos do not eat much fish, Jot says. "They may have fish a couple of times a year," said he, "that will be in the summer when they can catch some trout in the lakes. These trout aren't much good; they taste a good deal like a dried cedar shingle."

In support of his claim that the natives of the Arctic region are intelligent Jot tells of an experience which he had on one of his four voyages into the Arctic zone. "I had a rifle," said he, "which was fitted with first class peep sights. One of the Eskimo boys was much impressed with those sights and studied them carefully and soon learned their superiority over the ordinary sights on his rifle. A few days later he appeared with his gun fitted with peep sights which he had made and adjusted. I tried them and they were perfect. He had done it without knowledge of mathematics and without calculations such as I would have had to make to have fitted them."

Dr. MacMillan says that one of the reasons why Jot Small of Provincetown, Mass., is so valuable a man on an Arctic expedition is that he is a great philosopher. "On our trip to Crocker Land," says Dr. MacMillan, Jot and I were out on an ice hummock scanning the southern horizon in the hope of sighting the expected relief expedition.

Suddenly one of the Arctic birds swooped down and almost grazed Jot's head as it passed him. The bird was going like a race horse. Jot followed the bird's course with his eyes for a moment and then remarked: "That fellow won't live long."

"Why not, Jot?" I asked.

"Jot got down on all fours and gave a very good imitation of the leisurely walk of an elephant. 'That's the elephant,' said he, 'and the elephant moves with moderation and certainty. He lives to be hundreds of years old. The turtle is one of the slowest moving animals and it lives to great age; an eagle will fly for hours with scarcely a motion of its wings and it has long life. I've noticed that the animals which are in such a great hurry don't live to be very old, but that those which take their time go slow and make sure, live for years and years; that's why I've made up my mind to go a little moderate.'"

BIG ROAD-BUILDING PROGRAM AHEAD

Fifteen to twenty years of building good roads lie ahead of the United States. Under the program which the country has adopted there will be built, during that time, 186,000 miles of improved highways which will constitute the Federal aid highway system and an equal or greater mileage of State and local roads. When the great job is done, the transportation facilities of the country will far exceed those of any other nation, past or present, in the world. The highways of the ancient Romans, whose fame has come down through the centuries, will pale by comparison.

Do Not Neglect

Your Blood

If it is in abnormal condition, the longer you delay taking a good blood medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla, the longer it will take and the more difficult it will be for you to get back to "normalcy." Not only boils, pimples, eruptions, but headaches, nervous spells, "all-gone" feelings, indigestion and loss of appetite are readily traced to impure blood. Thousands date getting on the right road to health from the day they began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. "Why not try it?"

Details of this vast road-building program are to be placed before the Highway Education Board at its conference in Washington October 26 to 28, inclusive, by State Highway Engineers and officials of the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, to whom has been entrusted the work of planning and supervising the construction of Federal aid highways. The plan will be presented to enable the Board to proceed authoritatively with its work of devising aids for schools and colleges to which road-builders of the country are turning for competent highway engineers.

Officials of the bureau place the aggregate cost of the Federal aid program alone at about $3,000,000,000, spread over the twenty-year period. They base this estimate on an average cost of $17,000 per mile. The average cost, in turn, takes into consideration all classes of improved roadways from the cheapest to the most expensive types. Approximately one-third of the proposed system, or 60,000 miles of improved highways, already are either built or building.

The program is a new one. Up to comparatively recent years, road-building in the United States had been conducted without special regard to a national system. Highways had been constructed where needed without considering whether they would link up in the most effective manner with the whole network of roads to be spread over the Nation. Engineers had sought more to meet immediate and local demands than the broader requirements of the States and nation.

The present Federal aid road-building program, officials of the bureau state, will contemplate the construction of only such roads as fit into the national program and contribute to the national system. At the same time the roads will be so selected as to serve the most important local requirements. With marked modifications, the system adopted in building the railways of the country will be borne in mind in the construction of the country's new highways. There will be main lines of highway communication between centers and thousands of miles of feeder roads, reaching back into the more sparsely settled regions and into the rich agricultural sections, to tap areas whose population and products will flow over the new system.

New roads will be planned and built thousands of miles of them, where they will fit in most advantageously with the entire program. The bureau is continuing its research work into most efficient methods of road building, including the character and wear-making power of materials, resistance of varying subsoils, etc., and has amassed a considerable store of valuable information all of which will be available for the highway engineer of tomorrow, whom the Board is seeking to have educated in practical and modern methods.

JUST TALKS

On "Old-Fashioned Plenty"

What has become of the "new potato"? I have not had one of them for a good many years—not a new potato and hardly an early green pea. Now days they all taste like the grocery store. Maybe I ought to have a garden for my self.

Many wonderful things happened at grandfathers when I was a boy. I recall that for reasons of their own, they had their dinner at half-past eleven in the forenoon and it was a hard task for a roaming boy to fix that exact hour in his mind, when there was no general movement of boys who dined at half-past twelve. Movements of boys en masse were a good deal like the movements of cows toward the pasture-bars at about milking time. They hardly knew why they went for they had no watches; only an internal watch that suggested food.

If I were late, I got a good talking to and a good luncheon laid away by grandmother in the pantry, usually better than I deserved. And what I remember most of all was the new potatoes; nothing like them since—never anything like them again, probably. Those were "Early Roses." I do not know if they are grown any more. It seems as tho we just order potatoes nowadays and they come in a bag. They are even weighed, I believe. Yet I can hear the thump! thump! of the potatoes as they rolled down the railway into the cellar into the bin by the bushels and bushels, a winter's supply ordered by contract in spring all "running about even." Of course modern potatoes are all right as potatoes, but where do you find a real baked potato nowadays. You can't! All right; lung your delirium. But you never had a good baked potato if you never had one of grandmother's, nor a new potato unless you had one of those tender nuggets of home-grown sweetness that used to go along with green peas that wrinkled their noses in gloe and melted in the dish into delectable ambrosia like the meat of Olympians. And does it not seem ridiculous to see a husky grocery boy tromping in with "pounds" of spuds when in the old days they used to roll down into the bin via the spout in bushels and barrels?

I can smell the odor of those potatoes in the cellar now. They would sprout later and we had to go down and "sprout" them; what a job! In that old cellar with its cider barrels in a row and its vinegar barrels in a row, and its beer barrels in a row, and its pork barrels in a row, and its cabbage bins and its carrot bins and its beet bins and its swinging shelves of pickles and preserves.

I have no doubt you have seen a month-house on an old-fashioned farm, too, where they stored the meat for winter. We had come for a neighbor and one and it was worth seeing, too, if I do say it. There was a meat house, a kitchen, a small cottage, and in it were pigs and hives and nations of the use of this farm family and some of the neighbors. As a rule, remote country people do not have any meat winter, but my grandfather did. I recall a whole one winter in a district district and we never had a piece of meat all winter—nothing approaching it nearer than boiled salt pork, lean pieces that were boiled until the fat was well out of it and it made very good warm nourishment for growing children. We had this once a week and I came to have a fair regard even for the lean pork as against a diet of stewed beans and vegetables with all ways good bread and butter and plenty of milk and cream. Bread and milk was the standby, after all a good food of well-balanced ration, it is said.

I used to enjoy seeing the hams smoked. It has a mouth-watering suggestion of plenty. There was something in the odor of the smoke and the meat that enriched life. The sausage and the hams that used to come out of that smoke-house were worth duke's ransoms. To grab off the pantry at four o'clock after coming home from school a cold sausage that crinkled to the teeth and a sugar cookie from the cookie jar and make a quick getaway was the business of my young life.

Years hence children of today will remember mother's cooking and perhaps grandmother's cooking as we do provided mother and grandmother now know how to cook. I mention this latter conditional clause because it is being said that grandmother in knickers and mother in riding-habit are not good cooks. But if the children have no memories of pies like mother used to make, then it is hard on them. Memories of plenty in the pantry and plenty in the cellar are far better than memories of ten cents worth of pork-chops at the corner grocery and a pint of cream out of a homogeneous bottle with a loaf of baker's bread and a pound of saltines. Yet, we do well to have the service of the willing grocer. God alone knows what would happen to some families but for his patience and his foresight in making house-work easy.

MORE EXCITEMENT FOR RACING IN 1923

A report from "Frederickton, N. B." says that a syndicate is being formed there to purchase a free-for-all pacer worthy of upholding the honor of Frederickton in international battles in 1923 with the trio of whirlwind pacers now owned by three of the towns in Arrostook county, Maine.

Providing the money, so one of those interested said, did not look like nearly as difficult a proposition as finding the pacer that is capable of beating John R. Braden, 2:02 3/4, Roy Grattan, 2:01 1/4, and Jackson Grattan, 2:01 1/4, which now represent Presque Isle, Caribou and Houlton, respectively. However, the local syndicate is to have $15,000 capital and will, following the example of the Arrostook towns, send a committee away to pick their horse when they are ready to buy.

Since the speed craze hit Arrostook prices of free-for-all pacers capable of extreme speed have jumped upwards in a phenomenal manner and now when a committee from Down East come in sight, prices of pacers which are claimed to be able to race in 2:05 or so over a half-mile track shoot into at least five figures. When John R. Braden, 2:02 3/4, was purchased by the Moosehuck Club he cost in the vicinity of $8,000, but now he is held at $11,000 and it is doubtful if twice his original cost would drag him away from Presque Isle where they never tire of singing his praises.

There is also a well founded report that the Woodstock Driving Club is also likely to soon purchase a fast record pacer to represent Woodstock in next year's free-for-alls with the Arrostook battlers. The only thing in the way of the importations seems to be the difficulty of finding pacers with a reasonable chance of upholding New Brunswick's end in international battles with Arrostook's representatives.

The Outstanding Closed Car Value

1923 Five Passenger Six-Cylinder Sedan—$1985

Measured by any standards you may choose and for every kind of motoring, the Buick five passenger six-cylinder sedan is easily the outstanding value in a closed car.

It is a handsome, richly appointed sedan; tasteful in the quality of its interior fittings and in the comfortable luxury of its wide, easy seats with their fine plush upholstery.

Every driving convenience is found in this car, so perfectly arranged that each function is recorded before the driver's eyes and every control is at his finger tips.

And in addition, there is the dependable, enduring performance and the economical, satisfactory motoring that always has been so marked in the Buick chassis and the famous Buick valve-in-head engine.

Buick Drives Through "Third" Member

All Buick cars drive through a torque tube third member on the rear axle. Buick springs serve as cushions only. This not only makes riding easier, since the springs do not take the driving thrust but it also means that any accident breaking a Buick rear spring cannot misalign the axle and prevent driving the car home on its own power.
