Verdict for Democrats

Through an error in the printing of the Republican ballots, the town of Kennebunkport, which went Republican at the recent election, will have a board of assessors composed of Democrats this year.

Monday a hearing in equity was held before Judge Henry C. Peabody in Portland to determine who was elected assessors in Kennebunkport the Democratic or Republican candidates, and it was determined that the Democrats had been legally elected.

The Republican ticket contained three names for "selectmen, and overseers of the poor," and the Democratic ticket contained three names for "selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor." The Republican ticket was Palmer Twambley, Fred G. Littlefield and Frank M. Irving, and the Democratic ticket was W. Frank Goodwin, Fred G. Coleman and Frank L. Kimball. Fred G. Coleman on the Democratic ticket ran ahead so that he got more votes than Palmer A. Twambley on the Republican ticket.

On the closing of the polls the vote was canvassed and the moderator declared that Frank G. Littlefield and Fred G. Coleman, Democrats, had been elected selectmen, assessors and overseers of the poor. It was not discovered until some time afterwards that the Republican ticket did not include the office of assessor, and steps were immediately taken to determine the legal status of the respective parties, and correct the records.

A friendly suit was begun by W. Frank Goodwin and Frank L. Kimball, Democrats, against Frank G. Littlefield and Frank M. Irving, Republicans, to straighten out the matter. Upon a hearing of the matter the court found that the plaintiffs were legally elected and decreed that the town records be changed accordingly.

Cote's Theatre

Crowds which greatly exceeded the capacity of Cote's new theatre, which is located in Hardy block, Biddeford, thronged the new establishment and clamored for admission Saturday afternoon and evening, when the initial performances were given. That all were well pleased, both with the theater and with the entertainment, was shown by the words of commendation heard on every hand. During the evening the front of the hall and the square were brilliantly lighted by many colored electric bulbs. It is the plan of the management to give the public the best there is in the line of illustrated songs and motion pictures. Attendants of the theatre are in uniform and a parlor has been provided for the lady attendants. Five minutes before cars leave for Kennebunk and Kennebunkport it is announced from the stage.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22, 1911

Spring began Monday—officially.

A lot of people seem to think that spending money is more honorable than paying their debts.

The weekly payment bill has become a law. It is expected by both business men and wage earners to be beneficial.

No man can sell his birthright for a mess of pottage, and then expect to be able to fool people into believing he didn't sell out.

Not every man that says Lord, Lord, is going to have a reserved seat in the Happy Hunting Ground but many times good men are deceived by the apparent sincere declarations of these scheming hypocrites.—Lisbon Enterprise.

Springvale citizens were so displeased with the taking away of the village high school compelling scholars to journey daily to Sanford, that they petitioned the Legislature for a division, but the Committee voted leave to withdraw.

By cutting appropriations half a million, even at the expense of many pet measures, the Legislature has shown the moral courage to meet a financial crisis. This is further demonstrated by the passing of an emergency appropriation to pay up the old deficits of $333,000.—Brunswick Record (Rep.)

They have already begun to squeal. The Massachusetts Board of Trade has solemnly protested against a revision of the tariff on the ground that it "will injure business." That has been the cry for years and years but it would not avail. There is going to be a revision of the tariff by the new Congress and it will be done in the interest of the people, not the trusts.

Postal cards sent openly in the mails bearing the notification that the person to whom they are sent is a debtor, delinquent or defendant in any case, will not be accepted for mailing. If found in the mail dropped in boxes they will be taken up and the facts reported to the postoffice department.

The Enterprise is in receipt of a number of communications relating to the keeping of the prohibition amendment in the constitution. To print them all would fill many columns of this paper and to accept one and reject the other would be unfair. The Enterprise believes in prohibition, will advocate that policy editorially and will gladly give space for reports of temperance meetings and temperance committees. But it is necessary to draw the line somewhere. It costs money to set type. News is not opinions and under these circumstances the Enterprise feels it necessary to notify all prospective contributors that communications bearing on the prohibition question will only be printed at advertising rates.

EARNST LODGE

Celebrate 35th Anniversary of Institution

Earnest lodge, No. 55, I. O. G. T., held its regular meeting and also celebrated its 35th anniversary at its hall, Wednesday, March 15th. On account of the rain of the morning and the bad traveling there was not as large a number present as in the past years.

At seven o'clock a bountiful supper was partaken of by all present. After supper the following programme was given:

Reading, Mattie Fletcher
Singing, Sarah Noble
Reading, Orchestra
Music, Amos Redlon

Remarks, Choir
Drama—"My Turn Next,"

Music, Orchestra

A most pleasant evening was spent by all members and friends. Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jones, Mr. and Mrs. U. A. Caine, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. George Fletcher, Mr. and Mrs. Harland Waterhouse, Mr. and Mrs. John Waterhouse, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Redlon, Mr. and Mrs. James Stubbs, Mrs. Mary Harvey, Mrs. Chapman, Mrs. Sarah Noble, Mrs. Emma Towne, Mrs. Ellen F. All went home feeling that the committee had done all they could to make the thirty-fifth anniversary long to be remembered.

Historical

On December 23, 1875, a small number gathered to see about instituting a Good Templar lodge. J. J. Merrill was appointed chairman, and on March 15, 1876 fifty two gathered together and the lodge was instituted. Then it was suggested that each member write some name by which the lodge should be named. T. R. Goodwin sent the name Earnest and it was named Earnest lodge, No. 55.

Out of the fifty-two charter members only 29 are now living. Earnest lodge was instituted in the same hall which it now occupies. With one exception in all these years, every Wednesday night found the fire burning and the lamps shining in our cozy little lodge room where every Brother and Sister was welcomed, to help the cause along.

The largest number at one time on the roll-book was one hundred and fifty-two, and the smallest fifty-two, which is our present membership and the same number as when instituted. In the thirty-five years there has been six hundred and sixty-eight joined. Out of that number many have gone home, others have left and gone to all parts of the United States, and some have gone for that which we are striving to banish from the land, the liquor traffic.

Funeral Services

Funeral services for Deacon Hiram Waterhouse, who died March 13, were held at his late home on last Thursday afternoon. A goodly number of people representative of the religious, home and business life of the community, attested by their presence love and honor for the deceased. Relatives present from other places were Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y., Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Waterhouse of Portsmouth, N. H., Seth Waterhouse of Boston, Mrs. Fred Cate of Haverhill, Mrs. Milton Moore of Haverhill.

Rev. Mr. Cann of the Baptist church, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Carter of the Methodist church, officiated. Burial was in Hope cemetery. Rev. Mr. Cann said:

I cannot divorce this occasion from its personal aspect. The late Mr. Waterhouse, whose sudden demise we now mourn and in honor of whose memory we are gathered, was more than a mere man or a passing stranger to me. He was my friend, fellow citizen, and the senior deacon of the church that for three years I have served in this town. I should not be true to him, or to myself, or to the church of which he was for so many years an honored and valued member did I not say a word that revealed my personal impression of the man and Christian.

From the hour of my first acquaintance with him he was genial, ever most kind toward his pastor and the pastor's wife, was intelligently sympathetic, most appreciative of every endeavor worthy in its intent, and cordial in his moral support.

No one could come into his presence for any length of time without finding the pulse of his own cheer and courage quickened, there was something about the man that invariably stiffened the backbone of one's moral integrity, and leaving the home after an hour's conversation always meant that you carried away sharpened wits, a kindlier feeling toward one's fellows and a faith in God made steadier and stronger.

ENTERED INTO REST

From the fair land of Beulah,
Where the shining ones are seen
Across the dark, cold river
This land and home between,
Keeping his age-long promise
To conquer Death's last strife,
Our blessed Lord himself hath come
And lifted thee to life.

Still, the Master was beside thee,
Nor left thee, day or night;
The darkness was the background
Where the day-star shed its light.
And we marvelled as we saw thee
In all thy weakness strong,
And heard thy words so sure and sweet,
So full of heaven's song.

Slow days were thine to linger
In the valley's shadowy rim,
But ever pulsing through them
Was Heaven's unceasing hymn.
The light of God transfigured
The beauty of thy face,
And the glory of the better land
O'erlaid thy dwelling place.

Now, thou art gone, beloved;
But gone not far away:
It is but a breath to heaven
From our fading mortal day;
And none who watched anear thee
When the silver cord was riven,
Thenceforth may dread the golden path
That leads Christ's own to heaven.

If there is any word of profit coming to us, the living, today, from the life of the one who has thus entered into rest it is in the suggestions offered by his life as to what constitutes the "Complete Life." The late Mr. Waterhouse embodied in himself features that go far toward revealing the rounded life, and to that degree we should catch up and utilize the direction and inspiration that his spirit and deeds furnish us.

For one thing it was given unto him to have length and vigor of days. To him certain Scriptural expressions are easily applicable. "Thou shalt come to thy grave in a full age, like as a shock of grain cometh in its season. The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree, He shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon. They shall still bring forth fruit in old age. They shall be full of sap and green, To show that the Lord is upright and that there is no unrighteousness in him." Many days, and days full to repletion with glad toil were his days, and we feel the fittingness of this if our lives are to be complete. The heart of man craves from its Maker length of days and strength to toil so long as the spirit is strong. This wish of his soul was certainly granted to Deacon Waterhouse. Not until his life was as a full ripe shock of corn was he garnered by the hand of the great Harvester.

A second feature that marks the life that is complete and that was revealed in striking fashion by the late Mr. Waterhouse was his keenness and practicality of interest in the affairs of the day, the matters that make for the weal and the woe of men. That living interest in his fellow beings welfare was, in the case of Mr. Waterhouse, genuine and deep and constant. I can imagine that in his days of full strength of powers he was an admirable illustration of that increasingly rare type of humanity "a good old-fashioned kind of neighbor." Certainly I know that he has tramped miles across fields through the winter snows to carry a breakfast to a hungry family, and in later life he was, as you are well aware, vitally and persistently interested in matters of town financial integrity and politically governmental affairs. He never removed himself from the inner circle of men and their doings, but made himself a living part of all the life of his day, because of his interest in men as such and because of his desire to offset the evil of the world and lend the good the weight of his influence.

Keenness of interest in and completeness of identification with the affairs of every-day life is a virtue that we who now remain may wisely add to our excellencies, if we would be complete and thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

The last trait evident in this man's long and useful life that I would mention as worthy of emulation by us all is his faith in God.

No man of Mr. Waterhouse's activity of mind, vigor of body, and industriousness of disposition would have sedulously reserved time from his duties and plans for regular attendance upon the house of God, its worship and activities, had he not been heir to strong faith in God and a deep desire to honor Him before men. To see that aged man who weekly wearied himself with manual labor, in the house of God every Sabbath morning until within six months of his death, though for half a decade he had been unable to catch the strains of music or hear the preacher's voice, was for me each succeeding Sunday both a pathetic sight and an inspiration and noble example for all who follow after. And when we add to that the more modern example or the general manager of the great Harriman railroad system traveling one thousand miles each week in order to superintend a Sunday school in Chicago, we become more convinced that every man has hours enough and leisure enough to honor God in united praise and worship with his fellowmen. Still more certain did the speaker come to be of his deacon's faith in God and hunger after Him when he learned somewhat recently that the Sunday slips of paper upon which he had written the hymns, text and digest of the sermon had all been carefully preserved by him in the Bible he daily read, that they were carefully coned by the good man and his wife, that together on the last night of his life, as was his wont, he committed himself and his family unto the God of his many days, and that one of his latest expressions was the fear that he had not thanked his heavenly Father sufficiently for the manifold blessings that had crowned his long life.

Our heartfelt prayer on this occasion can well be, let me live the life of the righteous; let me die the death of the righteous, for the latter end of that man is peace.

Our thoughts and our kindly support can in the coming days find no better direction and outlet than toward the widow of failing strength who needs must walk the remainder of the long way alone, and yet not altogether alone, for within herself she murmurs: Side by side are we still, though a shadow Between us doth fall, We are parted and yet not parted, Not wholly and all.

For still you are around and about me, Almost in my reach,
Though I miss the old pleasant communion,
Of smile and of speech.

And I long to hear what you are seeing,
And what you have done,
Since the earth faded out from your vision,
And the heaven's begun.

Since you dropped off the darkening illet
Of clay from your sight,
And opened your eyes upon glory,
Ineffably bright.

Since the time when our path grew so narrow,
So near the unknown,
That I turned back from following after,
And you went alone,

For we speak of you cheerfully always
As journeying on;
Not as one who is dead, we name you,
We say you are gone.

For how could we speak of you sadly,
We, who watched while the grace
Of eternity's wonderful beauty
Grew over your face.

Do we call the star lost that is hidden
In the great light of morn?
Or fashion a shroud for the young child
In the day it is born?

Yet behold this were wise to their folly,
Who mourn, sore distressed,
When a soul that is summoned, belling,
Enters into its rest.

Well is it with her, and well will it be with us in the hour of sorrow, and age, and loneliness, if we shall be able to sing this song of trust:

Grief's storm-tossed seas around me roar,
I cannot grass the encircling shore;
Home's beckoning light I strive to see,
And yet, I know, there's help for me.

Life's May-day flowers have dropped their bloom,
My hopes lie faded in their tomb;
No sunbeam gilds earth's wintry lea,
And yet, I know, there's joy for me.

I hear each burden, make my moan,
As 't is autumn's wind-swept tree;
And yet, I know, there's love for me.

Christ lends His aid, beyond compare,
Restores His joys that angels share;
He shares His love, abundant, free,
And these, I know, are all for me.

Yes, all for me.
"Look up," He whispers o'er the deep;
"Mine own I will in safety keep;
And if thou'lt trust Me, ne'er thou'lt see
One needful good withheld from thee."

All this for me!
I'll serve Thee, trust Thee, day by day;
Though dark and lonely be my way,
Thy love I'll claim; when wounded flee
For Thy blest wings to shelter me,
All, all for me!
