In the case of Melvin D. Tibbetts of Rangeley against Duncan B. Harrison of New York, the jury rendered a verdict of $94.78 and interest for Tibbetts. J. Blaine Morrison for plaintiff and E. E. Richards for defendant. The action was to recover payment for supplies, plumbing, etc., for Mr. Harrison's cottage at Rangeley. The defendant claimed that the work was not satisfactory and that the charges were outrageous.

In the case of C. W. Barrett of Rangeley against D. M. Marshall of Oakland and Charles Stone of Rome, a default was entered. This was an action brought to recover pay for certain boats furnished by Barrett to the defendants. J. Blaine Morrison appeared for the plaintiffs.

The action of C. H. McKenzie Co. vs. A. L. Savage and Rangeley Trust Co. and Berlin Mills Co. trs. was discontinued as to the Rangeley Trust Co.

MEMORIAL DAY IN PHILLIPS

All Help the Veterans to Make the Day a Success.

Memorial Day which was observed last Monday, May 31, if not the greatest, is the nation's tenderest and finest holiday. Around Memorial Day cluster tender associations, loyal devotion and a spirit of fidelity to principle and to comrades. The citizen of America is the loser when he fails to ignore the observance of the day, and the nation will be the poorer in a pure and patriotic sense when the last Grand Army veteran is gone.

The Memorial Day program in Phillips was carried out just as planned with absolutely perfect weather. By the kindness of the citizens who owned automobiles, conveyance was furnished for all of the soldiers which was very much appreciated by them.

The old soldiers who were present this year were: Messrs. Wm. Leavitt, S. W. Parlin, N. E. Gould, Mr. Ingham, Judge James Morrison, L. G. Voter, J. M. Teague, W. H. Babb, Eben Rowe, Geo. Huntoon, Will True, John Cushman, Wm. Cothren, Al Perry, Nat Nile, Dexter Lamb.

No exercises were held in the cemetery this year with the exception of music by the band and the prayer by Rev. H. A. Childs of Rangeley.

At the noon hour a fine dinner of baked beans, etc., was served to the Members of the Grand Army, their wives and the widows of soldiers, and 38 sat at the tables. At each plate was a boutonniere of violets for the veterans, and these were contributed by the kindness and thoughtfulness of Mrs. Harry Dunham. The committee having the dinner in charge were Mrs. M. S. Kelley, Mrs. N. E. Wells and Miss G. V. Wilbur.

The exercises at the hall were most entertaining. The address by Rev. M. S. Hutchins one of the best, and the attendance one of the largest for some years, and a pleasant fact is that the audience remained until the last number was finished, which has not always been the case in past years.

It seemed this year that everyone was more anxious to show the honor and esteem they felt for the old soldiers than ever before, as was well evidenced by the attendance.

SUCKERS MAKE GOOD EATING

Bear's Meat on the Bill of Fare at the Bow

(Special to Maine Woods.)
Oxbow, May 24.—Gentle reader, have you ever caught a sucker? Not the two legged kind that preys on mankind, but the funny finny kind, which inhabits meadow brooks and ditches and some ponds, and which have no proper jaws like a regular, self-respecting fish. Let me tell you that they are entitled to your highest esteem; they are not to be despised nor cast aside, neither should they be called "uncommon nor unclean." Just now, out of cold water, they are both useful and toothsome, as we well know, having landed a big one lately and had it fried in the same pan with three succulent brook-trout. It's flesh was white, juicy and firm. Of course trout are 'par excellence,' but a well-cooked sucker has many a time, (no doubt) saved more than one unlucky fisherman from near starvation if not from an ignominious, painful and untimely death. They are often caught with a wire slip-noose, but the one of which we write took the worm just like any other fish, and gave our fly rod (which we happened to be using) a beautiful hump in the back. There is another sucker-fish, the German carp, which sometimes grows to weigh 100 pounds and has a snout three or four inches long; it is sometimes called the fish-hog for that reason. They love plants, roots and vegetables and do not trouble other fish. Such a fish, weighing 46 pounds was killed with a long-handled shovel in the outlet of a small lake in the town of Wakefield, Mass. We bought two slices of him; it resembled beef steak in the raw, and when fried with bacon looked not unlike salmon, with texture and flavor like sword fish. Seven million pounds of carp were sold in New York lately in one year. Jewish people are fond of them and may be found in fish markets in the West End of Boston. Lake Erie is the most prolific area for German carp in the world. Thousands of tons are taken there every year. Two thousand boats and millions of nets and other gear are used. Two females are good, it is said, for 400,000 eggs and 95 per cent in natural waters, will grow to maturity. As is well known, their flesh is rather coarse, is no good in warm weather, and is one of the cheapest of fish food. We have seen them in large schools disporting themselves, churning the water like a parcel of school boys playing water polo, high jumping or leap-frog. This 46-pounder had a tail-fin which spread 12 inches too powerful for any rod to hold, and capable of towing a good sized schooner (beer?) all over the lake. Such a thing actually happened in this same lake. The angler's tackle held and the big fish made frantic rushes to free himself, towing the boat for several minutes. Nevertheless, the fact remains that a succulent sucker, securely segregated, scientifically seasoned and sizzling hot, is some solid solace as any hungry angler might call it in case of dire need.

Stream fishing hereabouts has been likely. Your scribe took 20 seven and eight-inch brook trout last week, and a young lad landed a two and a half pounder close up to the edge of a little 7 by 9 deep hole.

Reports from the lakes up river, show plenty of good luck. The Portland party just returned to our home camp at the Bow, say they had all the success any reasonable angler could conscientiously ask or expect. They took over 200 large trout and one salmon. The weather was fine, with cool nights but warmer days.

Indications point to the usual remarkable catch in Lake Millmagasett for the rest of May and the month of June. Trout caught so far run large, from 2 pounds to 5½ lbs., and there seems to be plenty of them not far from the camp.

Two unfortunate accidents happened to one sportsman, Mr. H. D. Kellogg of Philadelphia, who was upset in boiling, rapid water, the canoe falling on top of him. The swift current took all hands in shore and with prompt assistance they were rescued none the worse for a cool bath and were made as comfortable as possible. Ill luck followed Mr. Kellogg in camp; he cut his foot on a raucous dull razor which caused him considerable discomfort, but prompt application of ozone, a clean rag, and a dash of Cologne water, removed all danger of gangrene, and relieved the whole party of any misgivings as to the final result. However, Mr. Kellogg expressed his entire satisfaction with the trip as did the whole party.

Fishing in this lake will be first-class from now on till very hot weather, and flies drive the fishermen to drink. The party took out many fine, large trout.

This loving epistle would not be entirely truthful nor complete without a record of an unusual feast of bear's meat, brought to earth and brought into us by Horace I. Lucas of Norwich, Conn., a guest at Billy's home camp at the Bow. Horace is a very modest and retiring young man (especially about 8.30 p. m.) and when asked where he got it and how the battle went, replied: "Never mind, there's the goods"—and it was good.

Yours cordially,
J. C. Hartshorne.

GET A GOOD FISH IN "DOOR YARD"

Captain Hamblin Says Lake the Roughest for 14 Years.

(Special Correspondence.)

Mountain View House, Rangeley Lake, May 28.—The rain of this week as well as the days of sunshine brought luck for the fishermen and there have been many coming and going, and by another week several of the camps will be taken and the Mountain View family returning to their summer home.

Camp Kemankeag on the lakeshore is now open and the following party who came by automobile are spending the week there: Messrs. Robert Lincoln, M. P. Capen, G. A. Tower and W. D. Adams, who plan to return via White Mountains, which in summer time is a very popular route for the tourists who come by auto.

The little church at Oquossoc "Our Lady of the Lakes" was opened for the summer this week. Rev. Fr. T. J. McLaughlin of Farmington, who has charge of this mission was here and celebrated Mass Tuesday morning, and expects next week to announce the time of the regular services during the summer season.

There have been well-known people here this week, Charles A. Schieren, Jr., of Brooklyn, who for many years accompanied his parents, the late Ex-Mayor Schieren and wife who spent the summers at Mt. View and are missed but not forgotten by a host of old friends. Mr. Schieren came in his Fiat 55 horse power limousine with New York license No. 47,506 from his home in 20 hours, a run of 507 7-10 miles to the piazza of this hotel, and is accompanied by two friends, J. R. Vandyck and Rear Admiral Reynold T. Hall, United States Navy, detailed on inspection duty with the Bureau of Engineers and stationed at Philadelphia. The party have for guides, Charles Harneden, Frank Porter and Wilmont Patterson, and are greatly enjoying trips to the different places, but as yet have not caught any fish over three pounds weight.

Tuesday the following well-known Augusta people came in their automobile, a 1915 Packard six, Hon. and Mrs. F. G. Kinsman, Col. and Mrs. L. L. Cooper and Mrs. S. O. Stenson, who left for home yesterday. The Colonel thought he would take his wife out for a little fishing Wednesday afternoon and as they were rowing around here in "the door yard," only a short distance from the wharf, Mrs. Cooper struck a gamy salmon, which gave them great sport before he was safe in the net, a 5-pound silver beauty.

Messrs. M. B. Damon and F. J. Nichols, the Fitchburg, Mass., gentlemen, who came the first of May, are these cold, windy days keeping their guides, Al Sprague and Cliff McKinney busy picking fir balsam and attending to the camp fire while waiting for the weather to change so they can go fishing.

Yesterday and to-day will go down in history as the time when "the greatest" wind ever known came down from the northwest, and calm Rangeley lake was like the sea and the steamboat missed a trip. This morning the Maine Woods reporter came down the lake in the Oquossoc with Capt. Chas. Hamblin at the wheel, feeling as safe as in a rocking chair. "I have been on this lake for 14 seasons and never knew such a high wind as yesterday," said Capt. Hamblin, but it was a perfectly safe sea-worthy steamboat and a good captain, that on May 27 crossed from Rangeley to South Rangeley, not with a rough sea and a high wind, but the deck covered with ice, it was but 28 degrees above zero when they left the wharf. "This cold spell is a sure sign warm days are coming," remarked one of the truthful guides.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Judd of Bristol, Conn. find this a restful spot while waiting for the weather to change.

A party are expected to-day for "Don't Worry Camp," to remain until the arrival of the Fronsfield party of Moylan, Penn., the middle of June and the last two camps will be taken the first of the week.

It is hoped summer days will bring summer weather, for life out of doors is the life to live in this corner of Maine.

FEW WHO DO NOT KNOW THE LAW

Question of Time When the Trout Fishing Will Become a Thing of the Past.

The officials of the State department of fish and game are much exercised over the continued acts of vandalism and lawlessness on the part of men who ought to know better. In catching trout that are under length, six inches. The department and also the fish and game societies are doing a good deal toward stocking the ponds and streams with small trout which if left to themselves will grow in two years or so to be of legal length. But some of the sports are so humory for that they go out and begin to catch the streams and land fingerlings or anything in the shape of fish that they can induce to locate their hooks. There are few men who ever go fishing who do not know the trout law. And yet within a short time past Warden Cushman in this city has captured three men with more or less little trout in their possession. He got one man, a college professor from outside the State, who had 119 of them with him, little bits of fish too small to eat or to do anything with except to count up as a grand total of his catch.

It is estimated that upwards of 100,000 fingerling trout have been put into the water within the past year or two in this vicinity. There are enough to ensure good fishing for some time to come if people would only let them alone until they grow large enough to be caught properly.

The members of the fish and game association as well as the officials of the State department are much exercised over this continual violation of the law which they claim is not done in ignorance of the law, but in defiance of it. They say it is hard to spend good money for propagating fish only to have them taken in numbers before they have had half a chance to get a start in life. If this sort of thing keeps on it will be only a question of time when the trout fishing will become a thing of the past.—Portland Press.

NEVER HAD BETTER FISHING

The Handsome Chestnuts Worth
Price of Automobile

(Special Correspondence.)

Bald Mountain Camps, May 28.—To say the garden near the camp is being planted and the finishing touches being put to the store, by the management of the new goods. Had not been for the windy days the last log would have been laid for the new camps, for which the furniture is waiting.

Walter G. Clark of North Attleboro, Mass., reeled in a 4-pound salmon for the last of the handsome string he took home Tuesday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Parker of Rumford are spending the week in camp and this evening will be joined by a party of five friends for the week.

James Richie of New York, who has fished these lakes for more than a quarter of a century declares he never had such good fishing as one day this week, when all by himself he caught the limit, largest a 4-pound salmon, and had to come back at mid-day.

horses that Mr. Ellis drives this spring have already attracted the attention of a city man, who is willing to pay the price of an automobile for them.

Mrs. A. S. Hinds and family join Mr. Hinds to-night coming by automobile from Portland.

As more letters than ever before have been received for June comes, from now until the end of the season this will be a busy spot.

LUCK OF BOSTON FISHERMAN

Governor of Connecticut Presented
With the Big Salmon

(Special Correspondence.)

The Barker, Mooselookmeguntic Lake, May 29.—This morning the guests are all wearing a smile, for after the three days' blow they are again off for the fishing grounds. The fishing was exceptionally fine last week. The catch that was made on the days following the last report has eclipsed even the most ardent fisherman's expectation. Record fish came in morning and evening, carried by the laughing guests, who could not hide the pleasure the sport so deservedly created. The fine fishing has stimulated an interest among those who enjoy the health and pleasure it gives and guests continue to arrive daily.

Geo. H. Gibby of Winthrop, Mass., has joined the Healy and Gove party from Boston, and all are greatly enjoying log cabin life. Tuesday Mr. A. Healy came in with a "dandy" 7-pound salmon to prove his skill, Gard Hinkley guide. Robt. T. Gove had two 3-pound salmon and Mrs. Gove skillfully brought to net a 3-pounder. "We never had such a feast as with our salmon planked for dinner," was the way they told the story.

Dr. P. H. Ingalls thought it more than paid him to come all the way from Hartford, Conn., for four days' fishing on Mooselookmeguntic lake, when after a well-fought battle he brought up to the boat, and his guide David Haines netted the "biggest yet," a 7½ pound salmon. This silver beauty Dr. Ingalls presented to Governor Marcus Holcomb of Connecticut, of whose staff he is a member. Now let the Governor come and try his skill fishing in the Rangeley waters.

The Boston fishermen, whose good luck we reported last week, continue to bring in the big ones and add to their laurels. J. E. Ackerman may well be proud of his pair of 5-pound salmon, and a pair of 3½ pound salmon, also one 4½ pounds. E. Feibelman's best pair was a 6-pound and a 5-pound salmon, one 4½ pounds and two 3½ pounds. Wm. Hirsch came in with a 3-pound trout, Fred Fowler guide. Messrs. A. W. Luchs of Boston and M. C. Rosenfeld of New York joined the Ackerman party this week and now the wind and waves are no more, they have an opportunity to try their skill with rod and reel.

One must acknowledge the genuine pleasure of these days. Bostonians would scarcely recognize the group of their ten most successful business men could they see them. Ten kids at a circus could not have more fun or enjoy life more than these same "big kids from Boston" did. They caught the fish with a laugh, ate the planked fish with a smile and laughed half the night over the prospects of the morrow.

Mrs. F. G. Eddy of Providence, R. I., is proud to record a 4½ pound trout, the largest recorded. Dr. Eddy intends to land "that big ten pounder" that took Mrs. Eddy's fishing tackle. Charles Record is their guide.

Dr. L. W. Hotchkiss of New York has this week been joined by his son, Henry J., who has just finished his college examinations at Columbia University, and is taking a needed rest and as they could not fish the last few days, have been taking walks in all directions. Bob Martin is their guide and the Doctor has two good salmon, one 4½ pounds, the other 4 pounds to his credit.

C. H. Phinney of Brookline, Mass., came yesterday for his annual fishing trip.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Rose of Hartford, Conn., enjoyed part of the week in camp.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wilson of Pittsfield, Mass., who came last night have Webb Boulton for guide and no doubt will record a good catch.

Messrs. Geo. E. French, Charles J. Duncan and A. C. Walton are a party of Portsmouth, N. H., gentlemen who came to-day for a fishing trip.

A. Solomon had a 3½ pound trout for his last fish which he took to Boston.

There is a good story that no doubt will be told at the Boston clubs, by one of their members, how, when their party were at The Barker, one day they went for a shore dinner. Mr. — was sure he could cook the dinner better than the guides. He wanted to show his skill as chef. The coffee was boiling, a big fry pan of fish frying crisp and brown, and soon Mr. — was to call the party for the feast. They heard a yell, which they supposed was the call to dinner. On reaching the shore they found something had happened, for the pan of fish had been spilled on the ground, and a white man informed them that hearing a noise in the bushes back of him, he looked to see a black bear coming to the feast, and well, all they could find was the tracks of the bear, and it is said the guides made the wood ring with their laughter as they cooked the dinner.

KATAHDIN IRON WORKS, ME.

Reports from Little Lyford and Long Pond are to the effect that the fishing is good, also at Little Houston Pond, where some good catches have been made this spring.

Chairback Mountain Camps, Katahdin Iron Works, Me., C. J. Henderson, Propr.

Reports from these camps state that the fishing is excellent, square tail trout and salmon being caught from the wharf.

CAMP WAPITI, DAVIS POND, SHINN POND, ME.

The year 1915 is proving an exceptionally fortunate one in regard to fishing at Camp Wapiti. Since the ice went out 600 fish have been caught at Davis Pond. Fly fishing has been especially good for the past ten days. Mr. O. M. Savels and party of Worcester carried out their full allowance of fish upon their return from a ten days' fishing trip. A party of fishermen from Houlton are now enjoying excellent trout and salmon fishing.

PACKARD'S CAMPS, SEBEC LAKE, MAINE.

Bangor, Me., May 27, 1915.

As the water in the lake commences to grow warmer, the salmon are returning to their summer haunt over the deep places in the lakes and the fishermen at Packard's Camps are having fine sport trolling with a live bait or the Pearl Spoon. The large salmon taken the past week was caught by Mrs. Monble of Somerville, Mass. It weighed 5 pounds and 14 ounces. Mrs. Fred Huntley and Miss Emma Chaffin of Fitchburg Mass., with guides made a trip to one of the nearby ponds and caught 14 nice trout, the largest weighing two pounds. Mr. and Mrs. A. I. Chatfield of Waterbury, Conn., are having good luck, having caught a number of nice salmon and trout. Mr. Edward A. Selliez and Mr. Walton of Philadelphia are at Packard's Camps for a few weeks' fishing. Mr. Walton is strictly a fly fisherman. E. W. Coburn of Roxbury, Mass., with Scott Cook, guide, is having great luck. He caught in three days 21 salmon, not any of these fish were big, but were all good sizable salmon. Mr. Coburn is a very conservative sportsman and only kills what fish he wants served at his own table at the camp. Mr. and Mrs. Walter D. Greene of New York City have just arrived at these camps and expect to stay until August. Mr. and Mrs. Rounds of Bristol, N. H., are also new arrivals and are planning to have great sport during the first half of June.

The fry received from the United States Fish Commission this week by B. M. Packard and liberated in the lake made a very interesting sight for the guests at Packard's Camps. There is no doubt but what the heavy restocking for the past eight years with young salmon, as well as closing the breeding streams and having the fish ways kept open has been the direct cause of the phenomenal salmon fishing at Sebec Lake for the past two seasons.

LOWELL PARTY ENJOYING CAMP LIFE

D. T. Flanders at Ricker Camp, Who Made First Trip 38 Years Ago

(Special Correspondence.)

Mooselookmeguntic House, Haines Landing, May 28.—The "big wind" is going down to-night and the past week has been a delightful one for those fortunate enough to be here, for the fishing before the high wind was extra good.

Not only fish big and little have been caught, but the fishing tackle business has been greatly improved by the amount of tackle that those "big fellows" have broken. "I know for I had a good look at him, that it was that 16½ pound salmon they weighed at the hatchery last fall that I hooked, and I'll not mourn for my tackle, but I shall all my life mourn for that fish," was the way the story was told to me. The biggest fish are the ones that get away, and that there are as big fish in the lake as have ever been caught, seems to have been proven a fact.

Up at Camp Doraljo the flag is flying by day, and at night the new lighting plant gives a fine illumination, so that for miles away the effect is brilliant. Mr. and Mrs. Spotts are now entertaining two of their New York friends, Dr. W. B. Short and Charles Burner.

Down at Hirobsamcook, at the Ricker camp the following party from Malden, Mass., are greatly enjoying a ten days' stay, Dana T. Flanders, who first made the trip across the lake with Capt. Barker 38 years ago, and Mrs. Flanders, Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Bartlett, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Robins, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Howard. "We are having extra good fishing, although the big one to date is only 3 pounds," said Mr. Flanders.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. S. Carlisle of Newton, Mass., who were here on their wedding trip, returned home this week. Mr. Carlisle recorded a 4-pound salmon, the mate to the 5-pounder his wife caught last week, with Dick O'Brien guide.

J. Russel Marble and party of Worcester, Mass., spent the weekend at Grant's returning home Monday.

One of the camps near the hotel is taken by Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Kenney of Lowell, Mass., who in their touring car left their home at 7.30 o'clock Sunday morning, with Wm. McElroy at the wheel and their friend, F. N. Haynes, who came just for the pleasure of seeing the country. At Portland they stopped for dinner and then drove to Livermore Falls, where they spent the night and arrived here at 1.00 p. m., 232 miles from home. They report the roads in good shape. Geo. Robertson the guide was waiting and had the tackle all strung up when they came from dinner and Mr. Kenney caught a good mess of salmon for Mr. Haynes to take home with him the next morning. The following day Mr. Kenney went down to Black Point camp and trolling back caught four 2-pound trout and a 4-pound salmon and stopped fishing as he had the limit for that day. Mr. and Mrs. Kenney are greatly enjoying log cabin life here at Mooselookmeguntic.

J. O. Thompson, Jr., and son, Philip E. Thompson of New Bedford, Mass., are among the late comers who will spend some time here.

Messrs. Chas. A. Harrington, M. F. Heath of Worcester, Mass., and J. W. Rodick of Auburn, who went home to-day had the best fishing ever, and if they try to tell a big fish story they cannot stretch the truth this time as they had more than "luck." Mr. Rodick had the largest, a 7½ (Continued on page seven).

THURSDAY, JUNE 3, 1915.

Senator Charles F. Johnson, in his Memorial Day address at Oakland, took the position that this country must prepare vigorously and extensively for war, not in the expectation of hostilities but to avoid the humiliation of being caught unprepared in case war should become unavoidable.

EAST MADRID

May 31.

The Oberton League was entertained last Wednesday by Mrs. Solon Mecham. It was voted that during the summer months, the League meet only in the afternoons. The next meeting will be on June 9th, with Mrs. G. L. Savage.

A fairly good attendance gathered at the schoolhouse last Saturday evening to enjoy the social and box supper, several coming from out of town. The League realized $12.66 from the boxes, bran pie, candies and lemonade, and the members feel very grateful for the amount, as it helps them to spread more cheer and sunshine.

Mrs. Frank Barnjum and daughters came to their summer home in King-field last Saturday and on Sunday were the guests of Mr. and Mrs.
George Barnjum.

Mr. and Mrs. George Raymond of Lewiston and Mrs. Cyrus Hills of Rockland are at Thorpe's, spending their annual vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. James Pulsifer and Dr. and Mrs. Chittenden, all of Auburn, were guests a few days last week at F. H. Thorpe's.

Dr. Clifton L. Buck of Danvers, Mass., and Ralph Sawyer of Wilton spent a few days recently at F. H.
Thorpe's.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Welts, Mr. and Mrs. N. D. Wing, Mr. and Mrs.
Ralph McLaughlin and children, Mrs.
Solon Mecham and Paul Croteau,
Miss Pearl Baker and Roland Welch attended the Memorial exercises at Phillips last Monday.

Miss Clara Virgin has finished work for Mrs. McLaughlin and returned to her home in Dryden.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sawyer, with two friends of Wilton spent Monday fishing on Perham stream.

Happiness.

The small boy gets his happiness neck deep in the creek on an August day; the grandfather finds it in the society columns of the newspapers when their names appear "among those present;" some look for it in the stock market—to them it is a matter of dollars and cents. There are as many varieties of happiness as there are sorts of people. But the most satisfying and lasting happiness is the retroactive type that comes through making others happy. We get out of life in proportion to what we put into it.

Profit in Mistakes.

Because one has made a mistake in the business world is no cause for discouragement, for if one is keen enough to see and correct it, it may lead to future success.

Setting the goal high and permitting no discouragements or mistakes to change the course will do away with many of the disappointments found in the path of most people at some time in their experience.—Christian Science Monitor.

IN AND ABOUT PHILLIPS

Mrs. Emma Young, who has been in Farmington since the death of her husband, Mr. Cyrus Young, was the guest over Memorial Day of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Kennedy.

DeBerna Ross, esq., arrived home Saturday night and we are pleased to report that he is much improved in health, having gained much in flesh in the past few weeks. He has been stopping with his brother, Dr.
Harold Ross since he was dismissed from the Massachusetts General hospital.

More red tape to be gone through with, for after June 1st a passenger who is sending baggage under check must declare the contents and the value thereon signing a written declaration therefor. It is also the same with freight shipments, that a declaration and value must be given.

Frank Pillsbury is breaking up the lot on Main street, preparatory to the building of the residence of C.
E. Parker.

The Rebekahs of Phillips received a cordial invitation from the Rangeley lodge to be their guests last Tuesday evening when their own members would confer the degrees, and serve a banquet, but the required number could not be obtained in order to pay for a special train, much to the regret of a large number of the members of Hope Lodge.

The King's Daughters will be entertained Friday evening of this week by Mrs. Georgia Masterman.

The many friends of Mrs. Julia Lambert were pleased to receive a dooryard call from her Tuesday morn-the same selection rendered at the prize speaking contest, as did also Albert Scamman; there was music by the band; and various drills and marches by the several grades in the village schools, who had been successfully drilled by the Misses Beulah Irwin, Tina Miller, Emma Russell and Mrs. C. Nell Parker; Hortense Butler and Gertrude Stillman rendered a duet, the children joining in the chorus. Miss Bessie Crowell offered prayer.

At the close of the exercises
Commander Will True presented a bible to the chaplain, as a gift from Rev. M. S. Hutchins to James E.
Cushman Post and thanked Mr.
Hutchins in behalf of its members.
Judge Morrison also in behalf of the Post thanked the citizens, the teachers, school children, the Phillips Cornet Band, the Federated church and all who had extended courtesies in any way and helped to make the day a memorable and happy occasion.

The Band was under the leadership of Charles Hammons, and although in practice but little rendered most excellent music, which always adds to the pleasure of a gathering of this kind.

The least patriotic citizens of a later generation who enjoy the blessings won by the valor of their fathers can do, is to see to it that the day of such significance shall always be fittingly observed and its spirit kept alive.

THE DAY OF MEMORY

Bring the flowers, fair and sweet;
Follow close the marching feet
Of the veterans who go,
With their loyal hearts aglow
With the love of men for men,
To their comrades' grave again.

Bring the blossoms, sweet and fair,
Lay them down with love and care
Where the little banners wave
O'er each soldier's sacred grave;
Say a word of peace and prayer
For the hero buried there.

Listen while the chaplain reads
Office for the dead and deeds
Are recounted once again
Of the war stormed hill and plain;
Listen while is called the roll—
Death has taken heavy toll.

Bring the little ones to see
And to listen eagerly;
Dirge and volley, prayer and speech,
Deep into their hearts will reach;
They the rites must carry on
When the veterans all are gone.
—Emma A. Lente in Farm Journal.

NO MOVE TO REPLACE WARDENS

No Plan Under Consideration to Word from Fish and Game Department.

There will be no move for some time at any rate to fill the five chief warden positions made vacant by the summary removal of the five accumbents by the Governor and Council at the April 27 council meeting.
Inquiry at the department of fish and game brings out the information that there is not under consideration at the present time any plan for filling the vacancies and Chairman Austin says that inasmuch as the five men, who were Republicans, were removed without the preferring of charges against them or any indication or representation of inefficiency, it is to be presumed that the Governor and Council believe it unnecessary to have men in the positions from which they were removed.

TORY HILL

June 1.

The morning of May 27 was the coldest May morning for a good many years, the thermometer registering only 28 degrees above zero at 4.30 a. m. The ground was frozen hard enough to hold a horse. Leaves on the trees, also apple, cherry and plum tree blossoms were damaged.

Mrs. Will Hood went to Rangeley last Friday for a few days' visit with her daughter, Mrs. Frank Badger.

The high wind of last Thursday caused a good deal of inconvenience by connecting three or four of the telephone lines together.

Misses Muriel and Evelyn Brown, who have been visiting their aunt, Mrs. Carrol Russell in the village a short time returned to their grandmother's, Mrs. W. W. Hood's, last Thursday.

Mrs. Wm. Moores was a guest of her sister, Mrs. Mary Dunham in the village from Saturday until Monday.

Miss Moody is working for Mrs. Will Mitchell.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Taylor of Kingfield were guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Gates Sunday and Monday.

F. S. Brackley is planting potatoes for the people on the Hill.

Sorrow was cast over the community last Tuesday morning, when it was learned Mrs. D. W. Toothaker had passed away, after a long and painful illness. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. Toothaker in his great loss. Mrs. Toothaker was a highly respected lady and will be mourned by a host of friends.

QUEER USE OF GRAMOPHONE

That Instrument Is Not Designed Merely for Amusement Has Been Proved.

The gramophone is sometimes put to strange uses. The leader of an African hunting expedition, who set out on a motor trip from the Cape to Cairo, recently used it as a decoy for tigers and hippopotami. In tiger hunting it is usual to tether a lamb to a tree; its bleatings attract the tiger within reach of the hunters. Before leaving England, the explorer had some records made by bleating lambs, and, says a writer in Answers, he tried them on the unsuspecting tigers of the African jungle with considerable success.

The record makers gained one of their greatest triumphs when they succeeded in getting good nightingale and blackbird records. The chief difficulty was the objection that the birds had to the sounds of the recording machine. The clever men got round that by setting up a dummy recording machine, in the horn of which they put some of the birds' favorite food.

When a bird entered the horn to get the food the clockwork was set in motion. The little creatures soon grew accustomed to the sound, and so, after much tedious and discouraging labor, successful records were made. These records are selling in thousands all over the world.

The gramophone is also of service in more serious and more scientific undertakings. Records of all dialects and languages spoken in Great Britain have been made and preserved in the British museum for the benefit of posterity. The people of the thirtieth century will know by the help of these records just how Manx and Gaelic sounded, and how the cockney lingo differs from "braid Scots." Several of the universities also have collections of the same kind.—Youth's Companion.

TOOK THE CREDIT, ANYWAY

Man Who Had Intended to Disregard Wife's Advice Made Her Think Otherwise.

When I am going to be extravagant I always like the encouragement of my wife, and I usually get it, writes A. Edward Newton in the Atlantic Monthly. I determined to talk over with her a proposed purchase. Her prophetic instinct in this instance was against it. She reminded me that the business outlook was not good when we left home and that the reports received since were anything but encouraging.

"That amount of money," she said, "may be useful when you get home." The advice was good, indeed, her arguments were so unanswerable that I determined not to discuss it further, but to buy anyhow and say nothing. Early the next morning I went back and to my great disappointment found that someone more forehanded than I had taken the treasure. My regrets for a time were keen, but upon my return to this country I found myself in the height of the 1907 panic. Securities seemed almost worthless and actual money unobtainable. Then I congratulated my wife on her wisdom, and pointed out what a fine fellow I had been to follow her advice.

HERE FOR 47TH
FISHING TRIP

Bearce Camp Open at Beaver Pond and Getting Good Fish.

(Special Correspondence.)

Upper Dam, May 24.—This is one of these days, warm and balmy, 66 degrees above zero. Everyone has taken their lunch and the guides will make hot coffee on the lakeshore.

Fishing under these conditions is a pleasure, with the lake calm and the sky clear, the fisherman takes his ease as rowed over the lake by the steady, strong pull of the guide at the oar and is happy and content even if the fish don't bite.

W. D. Brackett of Stoneham, Mass. is here for his 46th fishing trip. His first big fish was a 5-pound salmon, which was a thing of beauty, when planked by Chief Hindle, and a joy to Mr. Brackett and his friends when served for dinner. Mr. Brackett is the only angler who now cares his fish, keeping them alive until he is ready to go home, when those he wants are killed and the others returned to the lake. Frank Philbrick, his guide for years, expects to have a well filled car by the time Mr. Brackett is ready to return home.

John B. Watkins, the New Yorker, who for years has enjoyed the early fishing here at the Upper Dam, with Ernest Grant, guide, is having not only good fishing but a great outing. A 4¼ pound trout, a 3½ pound salmon and a number of 3-pounders have already been landed by this skillful angler.

Col. H. E. Russell and wife of Manchester, Mass., after a few days at Upper Pond spent the week-end here. They are looking for a camp in this part of the Rangeleys that they can lease for the summer.

H. L. Elliott of Rumford was here this week for a fishing trip, and, with Hollis Ellingwood guide, made a great record. His catch included four trout that weighed 16½ pounds.

Mrs. Wm. B. Littlefield of Lynn, Mass., came last week to spend a few days with her husband and niece. The party returned home this morning, each having their usual number of fish to take home to their friends.

Alex Lyons of New York, who is here for his annual early fishing trip, is accompanied by his friend, Dr. J. S. Unger of the same city, who comes to catch his first Rangeley trout. Oscar Dyke is their guide and they will no doubt have a good catch to report later.

Messrs. Charles A. Hardy of Boston and C. L. Larrigan of Lawrence, Mass., came Saturday and have taken one of the cottages for ten days. Clayton Sweatt is their guide.

H. G. Semmons of Boston, with Fern Philbrick for guide is after a good fish and no doubt will land him.

Dr. and Mrs. R. W. McAllister of Everett, Mass., who are here for the fishing, caught fifteen trout and salmon the first day out.

The water remains very low in the lakes. It seems strange not to see the huge booms of logs waiting to be sent over the dam and across the lakes, as they have been in years past.

As one looks from the piazza of the main camp, to the immense stone dam, through the gates of which the water plunges into the great oval pool, the natural home of the largest brook trout known, it seems a little odd not to see the fly fishermen sending their lines out over the water. But everyone who comes now trolls day after day in the lakes and leaves the fish in the pool to the quiet and freedom of jumping out of the water, with no tempting bright feather tied to a hook to attract them from their home. But soon the fly fishermen will be here and then there will be sport for the anglers.

A party of about twenty New Yorkers have engaged camps for next week.

HOW TO CAMP OUT IN COMFORT

Some Tricks of the Game, Told by a Man Who Knows.

The old seasoned camper, who has learned the "ropes" of outdoor life, well knows that the hardships which the inexperienced usually associate with camping are by no means necessary for a vacation under canvas. Of course we have all met men who prefer to rough it, and they fondly believe that the genuine-back-to-nature-life must of necessity include a meagre outfit and uncomfortable living. This is perhaps the average conception of the novice—the tenderfoot invariably takes the rough and rocky road, while the "old hand" side steps the "tough going," simply because he has learned his little lesson. For plain solid comfort is just as essential for the enjoyment of camp life as it is in every other environment—and, comfortable camping pays.

To the majority of men and women to whom camping-out appeals strongly, there is much real pleasure in planning and arranging the temporary home in the woods. To the average camper, sport with rod and gun is merely incidental. The essential factor is the carefree and invigorating life of the outdoor world and, if he has the true sportsman's philosophy in his make-up, he will find recreation and health in every hour he spends in camp. On pleasant days, fishing and shooting may be indulged in, and on days too hot and rainy for pleasure in the open, one may practice rifle and pistol shooting from the open tent door, or pleasantly employ the time by devising many a "rough and ready" contrivance for the comfort of the camp. If a permanent camp be established, take the wife and family along. Most women and children quickly adapt themselves to camp life, and you will find them good companions for sharing the simple pleasures which Mother Nature has provided.

THE CHOICE OF A TENT.

To thoroughly enjoy the virgin life of the woods it is essential that the outfit be wisely chosen. It should properly embrace the few necessities which most of us deem indispensable for everyday comfort, and it should include but few of the luxuries. The first point is the shelter to protect the outer from rain and wind, with sufficient room to stand and move about in, yet open at will to admit air and sunshine and the pleasant warmth of the evening campfire when the nights are cool. For a summer camp which is moved but seldom and there is no particular necessity for "going light," it is wise to choose a good, roomy tent, and among the most comfortable tents to live in are the regulation army or wall-tent and the baker style. For two persons, the best wall-tent is the seven and a half by nine feet size, having a window of bobbinet and a flap for closing, and provided with a six or ten-inch sod-cloth, sewed in at the bottom edge.

For long and rough trips by pack or canoe, "waterproof silk" is the best material, while for the more permanent camp regulation army duck or drill is the best selection, and is of course much cheaper and more durable than the lighter weight materials. In this case, the addition of a "fly," which may be stretched over the top, or set to extend over the front to make a little covered porch, will add to the comfort of the canvas home. A ground-cloth of waterproofed canvas is a good thing to have along, and will be appreciated during heavy rains. This should be large enough to cover the entire floor space of the tent. A poncho or rubber blanket may be used for the same purpose, though all, excepting possibly the poncho, are likely to be left out on longish trips.

The "A," lean-to, miner's, Sibley, Indian teepee and other types are also used, but they are less comfortable to live in than the wall and baker designs. For long trips by canoe, or whenever an outfit of minimum weight must be chosen, the canoe, open lean-to or the forester's tent is suggested. It may be mentioned that all tents may be obtained in many sizes and in different weight materials, but whatever fabric is selected, the material should be well waterproofed. The duck or drill tents may be obtained in the common white color, in the tan or khaki shade, or in the newer and less conspicuous dark forest green.

Each tent should be supplied with a canvas bag of its own, and while poles and stakes are furnished with wall, "A" tents and others that require them, these may be left at home unless the camper is en route to a treeless region. For it is a simple matter to cut them at the camping ground.

FLY AND MOSQUITO NETS.

To insure unbroken rest in the woods, every tent should be provided with some method for excluding flies and mosquitoes. The most satisfactory device is to obtain an entire inner tent made of cheesecloth or bobbinet and suspend it from the ridge-pole, or less thorough screening may be done by making use of a curtain to drop over the flap opening. Mosquito netting is good enough to keep out flies and mosquitoes, but the coarse mesh will let the gnats or "no-see-ums" in, and hence it is better to be on the safe side of comfort and procure the finer material. Do so, and you will thank me for the suggestion.

To the sportsman and sportswoman who have a liking for "doing things with their own hands," tent making will offer no special difficulties provided one can copy a good model, or procure the measurements of one, and lay out a pattern before cutting the material. The ordinary sewing machine, may be used for the lighter materials, but the heavy drill had best be hand sewed. A woman's advice and assistance will help mere man over the hard spots.

CAMP FURNITURE AND COOKING KITS.

Camp furniture, including tools, cooking utensils and other necessary articles for outdoor living, should be chosen only after sober consideration. The first item on the list is the axe, and for the more permanent camp a full weight tool should be selected. The small pocket and belt hatchets are good little companions on a hunting or fishing trip, but for the permanent camp, where one is obliged to rustle frequently for fire wood, the three pound axe is none too heavy. The double-bitted axe, with two cutting edges, is perhaps the best for camp, since the flat side may be utilized for driving stakes, and such things. A good belt axe also should be carried along, one weighing one and a quarter to one and three-quarter pounds being the most useful and convenient.

For the cooking kit the aluminum outfits made up for two to eight persons are by all odds the best, since they are of light weight, are easily cleaned, and nest compactly. A two-person outfit includes two cooking pots or kettles, coffee pot, frying pan with detachable handle, plates and cups, soup bowls, knives, forks and spoons. The entire outfit is self-contained, nesting in the largest kettle, is provided with a canvas case, and weighs less than seven pounds. Larger outfits include kettles and pans of greater capacity and additional spoons, and so on. A cheaper but very satisfactory outfit may be procured in tinware, but this is of course heavier in weight and less attractive to serve food in. The aluminum alloy ware is, considering the long service it gives, the most economical in the long run.

The charms of camp life may be enjoyed without the special equipment described, and usual kitchen utensils will serve well enough for permanent camps. For fast, light trips, the boy scout cooking outfit makes a good and very light weight mess kit; the whole outfit, including a folding-handle frying pan, weighs but one and three-quarter pounds, and is contained in a canvas shoulder case but little larger than the common canteen. The Preston mess kit is also a good individual outfit, though more expensive. The regulation army mess kit is also well adapted for "going light and afar off."

The detachable handle frypan and the folding baker are two of the most important items of the cooking kit, and deserve special mention. There are two styles of frying pans designed for camp cooking. One is provided with a patented detachable handle carrying a hollow socket, in which a long stick may be inserted to lengthen the handle so that the cook can keep a comfortable distance from the fire. The other pan is fitted with a folding handle which folds back flat on the bottom of the pan. This handle is provided with two rings, in which a stick may be inserted when a longer handle is wanted.

The patent folding baker comes in three sizes, the smallest having an eight by twelve inch pan, and the largest measuring ten by eighteen. The smallest size weighs but two pounds and will bake a dozen biscuits at a time. It folds flat and is furnished with canvas case and shoulderstraps. A baker of this kind is much better than the average stove, which is so bulky and heavy as to be out of the question in other than fixed camps. Anything and everything may be cooked to a turn in this simple device, and it will roast fish, meats and fowl as well as baking the most delicious "sinker" biscuits.

Camp luxuries in the way of folding chairs, tablets, cots and so on are generally eschewed by the experienced camper who changes camp often. For the fixed camp, ready-made furniture and the hundred-and-one patent hangers and so on may possibly be worth packing. Two exceptions, however, are the folding table and the collapsible bucket or pail. These handy articles should have a place in the camping kit whenever possible to arrange for their transportation.

LANTERNS FOR THE CAMP.

For the camp lantern one of the folding kinds for burning candles is the most portable, and is very satisfactory on light trips. Kerosene gives better illumination, but is less cleanly, and the fuel must be transported in screw top cans. A good camp lantern for kerosene is the tubular pattern and guarded globe type, used in the army. There is also a combination lantern, which burns kerosene, signal oil or candles, which the writer has used with much satisfaction. This lantern is of the tubular frame type with guarded globe, and gives about two candle-power light. Acetylene and carbide lamps give a brilliant light, but are suited only for permanent camps. One of the small pocket electric flash-lamps is a handy thing to have in camp, and since the weight of the lamp and extra battery adds but little to the outfit, this little luxury is often included in my dunnage.

FOOD OR PROVISION BAGS ARE CONVENIENT.

When traveling by canoe or pack, provision bags for the different food-stuffs carried are a great convenience. A good size measures fourteen by nine inches, and is provided with a draw string at the top. These bags fit into the regular duffle bag, and friction top tins also may be procured in suitable sizes to fit the food bags, thus enabling the camper to pack butter, lard, pork, etc.

Equipped with two duffle bags and a tump-line pack harness the camper can pack his individual outfit over the hardest trail with less fatigue than when the common pack-basket or shoulder pack is used, and the pack is more easily stowed and balances a canoe much better than does the basket. Both are extensively used, however, and the camper can take his choice. For shipping the outfit by rail or boat, packing cases of fibre are strong, light and durable. The usual trunk or wooden packing boxes will answer the same purpose, thus eliminating the expense of this luxury.

EVERY CAMPER SHOULD HAVE A COMFORTABLE BED.

A good bed is one of the necessities for an enjoyable trip in the woods, and for the permanent camp the folding cot is perhaps the best choice. The pneumatic or air mattress and bed is a positive luxury, but its cost and weight are factors to be taken into consideration where lightness and economy must be observed. The sleeping bag makes a practical and comfortably warm bed to crawl into, and has many points to commend it. The best bags are of the type which may be opened out for cleaning and airing, and the usual size measures seven feet long by three feet wide. Sleeping bags are fitted with as many thicknesses of blankets as wanted, twelve giving sufficient warmth for winter, while four thicknesses are about right for summer use. The carry-all sleeping bag is an excellent bed for light trips, and the bed tarpaulin, recommended by S. E. White in "Camp and Trail," makes a good bed, not too heavy or bulky to pack on long trips. For blankets, the regulation U. S. army and mackinaw are good, and a pair should be carried, wrapped up in a heavy pack cloth or poncho, provided you do not use the sleeping bag.

The stretcher bed, made of stout brown canvas and provided with a double bottom which may be filled with hay or leaves, makes a comfortable bed. By running two stout flexible poles through the pockets at the sides, and resting the ends on stones or logs, a good couch is quickly made. For permanent camps a bed of this kind is good enough for anyone but the most particular, and the fussy individual who will not learn the philosophy of the woods has no place in camp.

MAKING UP THE PERSONAL OUTFIT.

For the personal outfit, made up of the "little things" which the individual will not willingly go without, there is naturally a rather wide divergence of opinion. The experienced camper is likely to strike the happy balance in making up his "ditty" bag to include only the few articles absolutely necessary for his comfort and well being while in the woods. The novice is prone to leave out many useful articles and pack numerous items of questionable utility.

A watch is by no means essential in the woods, but as most of us have acquired the civilized habit of depending upon our timepiece, and would feel at a loss without it, it is

PULLING THE TRIGGER

The earliest form of what we call the "trigger" on a rifle or other firearm was simply a little lever which, when pulled brought a lighted fuse or "slow match" into contact with a small charge of powder in the priming cup of the firearm and in due course of events the charge behind the bullet exploded—at least half the time!

In those days triggers didn't have any of the modern diseases such as "creep" and "drag" and a trigger which didn't break the finger of the user was perfectly satisfactory.

The trigger on a modern firearm has but one object—to release the hammer at the exact time desired by the shooter. There are two faults which will defeat this result,—a trigger which requires excessive pressure or one which does not release positively and entirely at a uniform pressure. Trigger pulls are apt to vary all the way from the perfect pull which releases clean at about four pounds, to a pull which is so heavy that it puts a permanent kink in the shooter's finger and lets go like a miser parting from his coin.

As stated above, the proper weight for a trigger-pull is four pounds by actual weight on the trigger, not guess-work. A trigger-pull having a weight much in excess of this will cause flinching, while a lighter one is dangerous.

It is rather an interesting fact that the majority of women require a rather heavier trigger pull than men do, owing to their more nervous temperament.

B. T. W., Elkton, Mich.

1. What are the best all round sights for a .22 calibre rifle?

Ans. The great majority of hunters of course use the regular sights supplied on rifles, which are of the plain open variety. In some sections of the country the flat top or the straight bar rear sight with the small "U" notch is most popular, while in other sections, the old type of sight known as the "buckhorn" is most popular. The general tendency is, however, to get away from the buckhorn style, and from a scientific point of view it has little to recommend it. The ivory front sight is very popular as is the gold bead front sight. There is little choice between these two. The most accurate shooting can, of course, be done with the tang peep sight. Either of the two makes now on the market give excellent satisfaction.

2. What kind of front sight is best to use with a Lyman combination rear sight?

Ans. As stated above, choice of sights is so much a matter of individual preference that it is very hard to advise any particular one. The regular sights supplied on a rifle will give good results, or you can select ivory or gold bead sight, or another good one is the combination globe and ivory front sight.

3. How should sights be removed from a rifle barrel?

Ans. If the rifle is held at the shoulder in shooting position, the sight should be driven out from the left side toward the right side. The sights should be put on by being driven in from the right towards the left.

4. Would a 32-40 cal. rifle be heavy enough for large game, such as bear?

Ans. A number of these rifles are used for such work, but a heavier power rifle would probably be advisable.

K. L. F., Okmulgee, Okla.

1. I have a .22 model 1890. The butt end where the shell fits is all torn up and shells swell until the ejector will not pull them. Please advise as to whether or not there is any way for it to be fixed or will I have to get a new barrel for it.

Ans. There is only one remedy for a badly pitted and rusty barrel, and that is—a new barrel. A barrel in which the chamber of the barrel is badly rusted or pitted is absolutely useless. There is no method by which it can be made available for its regular ammunition.

2. As to the gun referred to above, could I have the whole barrel drilled down to make a .22-20 or .25-20?

Ans. It would be of course possible to rebore the barrel for a slightly larger cartridge, but the action would not handle it and it would not be worth while.

Ed. W., —, Thiensville, Wis.

1. What is the muzzle energy of the 38-40 calibre black powder cartridge, and high velocity at muzzle and at 100 yards?

Ans. The muzzle energy of the 38-40 cartridge, black powder, is 701 ft. lbs.; the high velocity type gives 1,159 ft. lbs. At 100 yds. the muzzle energy of the 38-40 black powder is 460 ft. lbs., and of the high velocity 663 ft. lbs.

2. Is the 38-40 large enough for such game as deer, moose, bear and elk, and at what ranges is it effective on such game?

Ans. While a large number of rifles of this calibre are used for bear and deer, I would recommend a more powerful cartridge.

3. What is the muzzle energy of the 44-40 black and high velocity, and the velocity of the 38-40 and 44-40?

Ans. The figures for the 44-40 cartridge, black powder, are: Muzzle energy, 752 ft. lbs. High velocity, 1,516 ft. seconds, 1,081 ft. lbs. The 38-40 cartridge has a muzzle velocity of 1,325 ft. seconds and with the high velocity load has a muzzle velocity of 1,703 ft. seconds.

R. S., Silver City, S. D.

1. What will keep a .22 calibre rifle from leading?

Ans. Keeping the bore of a rifle absolutely clean will prevent leading to a great degree, also do not use greaseless ammunition as this will invariably cause leading.

2. What will remove leading from same?

Ans. If the barrel is in good condition or not rusty or pitted, a brass bristle brush will remove leading and when used with a good nitro solvent is the best way to clean a rifle anyway.

3. Which has the higher velocity, the 25-20 or the 25-35?

Ans. The muzzle velocity of the 25-20 cartridge is 1,380 ft. seconds with the black or low power smokeless loading, and 1,711 with the high velocity loading. The 25-35 has a muzzle velocity of 2,030 ft. seconds. The 25-35 is of course very much more powerful, as it has a muzzle energy of 1,070 ft. lbs., as compared with the 25-20 high velocity which has a muzzle energy of 560 ft.

4. Which is the better make of guns, the Marlin or Winchester?

Ans. This is a question for you to decide.

C. L., Winfred, S. D.

Kindly tell me the names of some companies that handle the Maxim Silencer?

Ans. The Maxim Silent Fire Arms Co., Hartford, Conn.

D. H., Ogden, Utah.

1. Is the .315 Automatic rifle big enough for elk, moose or grizzlies?

Ans. I would recommend a more powerful rifle.

2. How does the .35 Rem. auto compare with the .401 and the .351 auto? Which kills the best and at what range?

Ans. The best way to answer this question is to give the ballistics: .401 auto, muzzle velocity 2,141 ft. seconds; muzzle energy, 2,037 ft. lbs. .35 Rem. Auto, muzzle velocity, 2,000 ft. seconds, muzzle energy, 1,776 ft. lbs. .351 auto, muzzle velocity, 1,875 ft. seconds, muzzle energy, 1,405 ft. lbs.

3. Is the Winchester auto very popular, and are they used as much as some other makes?

Ans. I cannot answer a question of this sort.

4. My Savage 1914 .22 does not pull the shell out of the chamber when I use long rifles if I shoot very many shots previously. Is there a remedy? I use Rem. "Lesmok."

Ans. The peculiarity you notice, i. e., trouble in using long rifle cartridges after using shorts is common to all makes of rifles which are chambered for the .22 long rifle cartridge. There is only one remedy, and that is to stop using .22 shorts. If you wish to get the very best possible results from your rifle, it is poor policy to use .22 short cartridges if the rifle is chambered for the .22 long rifle cartridge. This statement applies with equal force to all makes of rifles.

5. Is the .303 good for big game? Is it considered a big game rifle?

Ans. Yes.

THE ROAD BOOK FOR 1915 ISSUED

The Maine Automobile Road Book for 1915 was issued this week and is now being sent out to members of the Maine Automobile Association and to tourists all over the United States. The new road book undoubtedly is one of the finest which has been issued by any State Association in the country. It contains 166 routes, covering every part of Maine and most of New Hampshire, much of eastern Massachusetts with the border routes in New Brunswick and the principal highway between the New England states and the city of Quebec. In addition the book contains the latest automobile laws of Maine including those passed at the last session of the Legislature which go into effect in July, the new fish and game laws of the state, the new forestry laws, rules for campers, a complete summary of a table facts about Maine, a list of the standard through routes of travel in the territory covered by the road book including statements regarding some of the work which will be in progress during the summer as well as the best ways to go from place to place; the new regulations for automobilists entering Canada including the special war tax now in effect, the announcement of the opening of Mt. Desert Island to automobilists, and a scientific statement on the reason why the Maine coast is cool, a complete description of the points of interest along the routes contained in the book, as well as many other features.

The book this year has three new road maps completely revised and redrawn and printed in colors as a noteworthy feature of the volume. These include a general road map of all the automobile routes in the territory covered by the road book, a sportsmen's map showing the location of every sporting camp in Maine, together with the lakes, rivers and streams, and a Pine Tree Tour map. There are also city and other maps giving details about entering the cities and the best routes between points.

The book is so arranged this year that every route can be immediately found. The first part of the volume contains the Pine Tree Tour, the next the routes given in both directions. These are followed by the one way routes and the reverse information of some of the Pine Tree Tour runs, and then comes the Canadian section with the automobile routes across the border, the series of indexes which this year are the finest to be found in any road book in the country making its contents easily accessible. The book this year is bound in a waterproof, flexible binding. The paper is tinted so that it may easily be read in bright sunshine without affecting the eyes, and the maps are contained in a pocket inside the back cover, a new feature which will be much appreciated. The book is being distributed through the Maine Automobile Association Touring Information Bureau, 12 Monument Square, Portland, Maine.

BRIDAL COUPLE AT "HERMITAGE"

(Special Correspondence.)

Bemis, Me., May 31.—With the passing of the spring days, all look for the coming of warm weather. This morning is one of the ideal summer days, with a clear sky, and the crisp mountain air laden with the perfume of spruce and pine. The lake is as smooth as glass, and in the early morning the fishermen are trolling and casting the fly here in the cove. The many birds are giving a free concert and fortunate are those who from the noisy city are enjoying this restful spot.

The log camp some distance above the main camp, amid the evergreen trees on the lake shore, is called the "Hermitage" and this is where a Boston bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. G. Williams are spending their honeymoon days. Mr. Williams is connected with the Youth's Companion Company.

Rev. Fr. Thomas J. McLaughlin of Farmington, who passed Sunday at Bemis and celebrated Mass in the schoolhouse, is accompanied by William Giblin of New York, who has come to the Rangeleys for his first fishing trip and to-day will go to The Barker and try his skill with hook and line.

Otis W. Everett and son, Lewis W. Everett of Worcester, Mass., who have been coming to Bemis for fifteen years for the spring fishing are accompanied by Charles E. Holland of the same city and the Wigwam Cabin will be their home this week. Yesterday they brought in a 4½ pound trout as a sample of what they intend to catch before the middle of June. A 4-pound trout and several smaller trout and salmon were all that were reported Sunday, as "the fish were not biting well."

Elmer H. Young and F. B. Goodwin of Bethel were here several days

the past week and had good fishing.

This morning the International Paper Company start up their mill for the summer, and before they commence to saw the big booms of logs in the lake, they will load onto the cars and ship to their paper mill at Rumford, the huge pile of blocks, 20,000 cords of pulp wood that will be made into paper, for some of the leading magazines and newspapers printed in the United States. Later the beautiful trees from the wilderness of Maine are nothing but waste paper, and, when as an old newspaper seen tossed about the city streets, seems little like a bit of the Maine forest on the shore of the Rangeley lakes.

On one of the side tracks near the railroad station Jack Dodd, the boss of a crew of Italian workmen, with his crew are stationed for two weeks while working on the main line. Mr. and Mrs. Dodd in their private car, which, from a passenger car has been made into a cozy and pretty home, live on the Maine Central Railroad wherever the work is being done. The Italians seem happy as in their own sunny land, and at this time are glad to be in America. Each crew lives in a car by themselves and cook their own spaghetti. They sing and chat in their own language, are content and accomplish a great amount of work. In a few days they will be moved to some other place on the line.

a good plan to carry a cheap but fairly accurate watch. The nickel case watches costing from a dollar upward are quite good enough. The watch is best carried in the breast pocket and secured with a leather thong to the buttonhole of the shirt. When the sun is seen the watch may be made to serve as a crude compass by pointing the hour hand to the sun, when south will be found half way between the hour hand and the XII on the dial. However, it is a good plan to carry a small compass. The most dependable kinds are those contained in a watch case, and provided with arrow shaped needles, as the blued bar needle is difficult to read in a dim light.

The hunting or sheath-knife is called upon to serve many uses, and no woodsman would think of venturing far without a stout bladed knife at his belt. In choosing the hunting knife, the hard tempered blade should be passed by, likewise the soft steel affair. A medium temper is by all odds the most dependable, for it is preferable to have the edge turn rather than break off short like a carrot. A five or six-inch blade is the most useful length, and a good knife may be picked up, with or without hilt, and with leather sheath, for one dollar and a half. A medium large jackknife with three blades is also handy for making repairs; the "easy opening" kind, with thumb hole in handle, is a good companion.

For carrying a supply of matches any one of the waterproof boxes sold for this purpose is good. The metal boxes are waterproof and durable, but the screw top boxes of hard rubber or vulcanite are fairly tight and will float if dropped; fuses will be found handy for lighting the pipe or fire in the wind or rain.—Stillman Taylor in Forest and Stream.

pound salmon, also one 4½ pounds and several 3 pounders. Mr. Harrington brought in a trio of salmon 3 pounds each, a 4-pound salmon and a 3-pound trout. Mr. Heath counted only the three trout, each weighing 3 pounds.

One of the parties who are always "happy to come again," Mr. and Mrs. J. Mosser of Boston have this week been joined by their friends, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Helnitz of Boston, and the rain and wind do not prevent them from having a most delightful time here in camp.

J. O. Thompson, Jr., with Geo. York guide records a 4-pound salmon, and Mrs. S. D. Sherwood of Springfield, Mass., one of 3¾ pounds.

Miss Faye Worthley of Rangeley is a week-end guest of Mrs. Burns.

Several parties have engaged rooms for over Memorial Day and if the much wanted warm days come there will be a merry company entertained at Mooselookmeguntic House.

KEEP THE BALANCE UP.

It has been truthfully said that any disturbance of the even balance of health causes serious trouble. Nobody can be too careful to keep this balance up. When people begin to lose appetite, or to get tired easily, the least imprudence brings on sickness, weakness, or debility. The system needs a tonic, craves it, and should not be denied it; and the best tonic of which we have any knowledge is Hood's Sarsaparilla. What this medicine has done in keeping healthy people healthy, in keeping up the even balance of health, gives it the same distinction as a preventive that it enjoys as a cure. Its early use has illustrated the wisdom of the old saying that a stitch in time saves nine. Take Hood's for appetite, strength, and endurance.

"Back to Nature" Artist Has Thrilling Experience in California.

Joe Knowles of Maine, who won fame as the "back to nature" artist and who visited Lewiston and other cities in this State on his way out to "civilization," recently had a thrilling experience in Oroville, California. A special dispatch from that place to the San Francisco Examiner says:

"Joe Knowles the nature man, lies seriously injured at Belden, in the Feather river canyon, as the result of an accident that occurred on Sunday. Knowles has been having moving pictures taken depicting his life in the wilds. On Sunday he was showing how he forded streams on improvised rafts. His raft broke up on the rapids of the Feather and he was hurled into the water. He was dashed from rock to rock and was saved only by the heroic action of D. M. Wiley and G. W. Johnson who managed to get ropes to the drowning man. He was so badly battered and cut by the rocks that his life was at first despaired of. Reports from Belden tonight, however, were that he was still alive."

The SPIRIT of '61

GERTRUDE MORRISON

HAD it been for the coronation of a king, not more care could the two have bestowed on the selection of that suit. Ripton, the easy-going, he of the shambling gait, untidy linen, green socks and dingy brown tie, suddenly critical, corrective, a veritable connoisseur.

"Something nobby," suggested the well-meaning Shelby, selecting from his samples a pronounced plaid and forgetting that what well became his old good-natured, tubby style might set differently on his elderly friend.

"Something less ostentatious," Ripton would insist. "Nothing bizarre nor rococo." Shelby guessed the new words from the rejection of his samples.

"Gray, exactly to match."

"Of course, now, it's your funeral," Shelby would acquiesce in cheerful regret. Ripton consented to a handkerchief bordered with color.

Shelby began that day he started leisurely up the hill to find Ripton. It was spring—real spring.

"Whew!" he panted, dropping heavily into a chair that commented

"Shelby, We're None of Us—Derelicts—Because We Set Out to Be—or Because We Want to Be."

on his 200 pounds. "What you got there, Bill?"

"Warm for April," agreed Ripton, hastily shoving into his pocket a square white envelope. His drooping, shy defenselessness suggested failure, and glasses stood on the table.

"Takes the ginger—out of a man—to climb a hill—summer weather—winter clothes."

"Billy," he finally continued, teetering back his chair, "how about that letter you chucked when you saw me coming? Looks aristocratic, somehow. Society editor short o' material?"

The older man flushed and smiled sheepishly under the raillery. "They're not inviting me now." In the rebound of the admission he drew himself up into a semblance of military dignity. "Young man," he said sternly, "time was when I danced with the belle of them all."

Shelby nodded briefly.

"And a more slender waist, or a trimmer foot—" he stopped under the other's curious gaze. "Shelby, we're none of us—derelicts—because we set out to be—or because we want to be."

The weak, loose mouth, the hand shaking in its effort to steady a newspaper turned Shelby away in pity. Striking out at random, in kindly absence of his former chaff, he coaxed: "What is the letter, Billy? Can't I help?"

"No. It's—nothing. Just a little fun the boys are planning."

"Well?"

"I mean—the boys—my boys. Company B!"

"You—in command?"

"Yes." Years concentrated their bitterness in that word. He handed over the letter.

"Now, do you know, they never told me that."

"And you never guessed? Oh, I know I've pretty well concealed it. Even my walk's mellowed now." The crunch of the paper in his hand accentuated his crackling mirthlessness.

It roused Shelby to sudden determination. "See here, you're going."

"Going! Going—where?"

"Why, to this here Memorial week reunion they've asked you for."

"I—I'm—" his eyes wandered over his flimsy, faded clothes. "I'm not fit."

"You bet you're going," slapped down Shelby. "Don't you want to go?"

He had selected and rejected half a dozen suits before he got Ripton's reply. "They would be—my own kind—once more."

His glance wandered to the glasses and bottles. "They don't know. Each time I've pleaded illness or business. I shouldn't want them to know. D'you s'pose I could?"

Their eyes met doubtfully. "It would be a week." Shelby was less jubilant. "But see here, Bill," summoning all his own buoyancy and enthusiasm, "you can, and you must, and you shall."

Ripton caught up the air of unsuccessful that had partially slipped from him. "A week's a long time—for me." A thought loosed again the drab drape. "Shelby, d's'pose," lowering his voice, "she'd be there? She married one of the boys?"

"Who? Oh! the belle? She of the slim waist and the slimmer ankles?"

"George," said Ripton, in his voice a touch of gentle dignity new to his friend, "we'll just not mention—her ankles. They don't—among my kind."

Shelby buried his amusement and his smart, to follow eagerly in the wake of this chance straw. "She'll be there. The women are great on reunions. Bet you'll find her on the train." He rose. "Oh, you're going all right, old man. See you tomorrow about fixing you out."

As they walked the platform, waiting for the train to pull in, his quiet suit and plain tie according well with his iron-gray hair, Ripton looked the part of a prosperous country gentleman, albeit one with a touch of sporting blood, as was evidenced in the gay border of his handkerchief. Not his the nervousness and the uncertainty. His bearing was dignified, his tread firm, and more noticeably accented on the right foot, as became one who was going back to keep step with "the boys." Back farther yet, to things inherited and conventional.

Shelby, who, for the last few weeks, had in turn steadied him, sobered him, cajoled, flattered, browbeat and inspired him, poured every ounce of his own vigorous will into the other's vacillating temperament, found himself undistanced, unable to approach this quiet, self-contained man by whose side he trotted, and was dimly aware that the change was inward as well as outward. His last words of counsel and pleading clove to his tongue as he gazed helplessly at his own handiwork. Perplexity wrote her beady sign across his forehead. He could only rasp out, as he helped his friend mount the steps: "Not a drop, not a drop, mind."

"Look! There He is!" She Cried.

Understanding what the other would do for him, Ripton wrung his fat clammy hand and, as the train pulled out, carefully replaced the gay handkerchief with a white one, its 'R' fastidiously arranged to view.

Three days passed. Thursday Shelby surreptitiously hung around the station. Friday he met the trains openly and took the bar-room crowd into his confidence. "Bet Bill's full," they sniggered, "of the spirit of '61."

Martial sounds hurried him to the main street. There they came—a big flag leading, another down the line, the beginning and the end of all Memorial days. Two rode in front, the horse of one refractorily impatient of the band's big, booming drum; the little girls, clad in white and bearing wreaths; the local boys' brigade; the long line of carriages, noticeably fewer than last May, with their precious, sad remnants; the young men of the Spanish war; the bands; and, in the rear, as in the van, the flag whose stars had been kept intact.

Shelby scanned the faces in the carriages; once in sudden hope because of a wave of the hand. It was answered by a slip of a girl beside him whose feet kept time on the curb. He turned away from the last carriage in sharp disappointment. Ripton's failure dragged him down a little, and all that gaping crowd; even the young thing beside him whose skirts the skirting wind blew back from slender ankles. It shook out over their heads, the passing flag.

"Look! There he is!" she cried.

An iron-gray man in quiet suit and plain tie, the feet within his dusty shoes marking time despite their weary lag; his face drawn in a suffering beyond weariness or weight of flag-pole; but about his mouth the look of the grandfather who fought under Perry, and of the ancestor who fell on Lexington Common one April morning; his eyes full of the spirit of '61.

Shelby beamed on the girl, her own pride glowing his heart.

"Mother knew him," she explained shyly, glancing at her black frock, "and father—that was he who waved—father and I found him on the train. He wanted to go back three days ago. But we asked him to carry the flag."

A Bit of Advice

First—Don't Delay. Second—Don't Experiment.

If you suffer from backache; headaches or dizzy spells; if you rest poorly and are languid in the morning; if the kidney secretions are irregular and unnatural in appearance, do not delay. In such cases the kidneys often need help.

Doan's Kidney Pills are especially prepared for kidney trouble. They are recommended by thousands. Can Phillips residents desire more convincing proof of their effectiveness than the statement of a Phillips citizen who has used them and willingly testifies to their worth? "About ten years ago I had rheumatic pains and I suffered a great deal," says John A. Fraser, of Phillips. "The pains were in my back and limbs and sometimes I thought I could not endure them. The secretions from my kidneys were in bad shape. I tried many ways to get relief, but nothing helped me until I got Doan's Kidney Pills at Cragin's Drug Store (now Preble's Drug Store), and began using them. It didn't take them long to rid me of the trouble." Price 50¢, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Fraser had. Origin of the Slavs.

The Slavs belong to the "Indo-European" race, although it is a question these days as to whether the Aryans, as the race is sometimes called, had their original home in Asia (around the Caspian) or in Europe. At any rate, the Slavs appear in Europe contemporaneously with the other Indo-European families to which they are related.

Only A Few Can Go.

Those who do not have to consider expense are now going to health resorts to get rid of impurities in the system that cause rheumatism, backache, aching joints and painful muscles. If you cannot go, yet feel you need relief from pain and misery get Foley Kidney Pills. They restore the kidneys to activity and make you feel well and strong. R. H. Preble.
