Re-Visits Scenes of Youth.

John W. Thomas Journeys to Canton, Mass., and Sees the Sights of New England's Metropolis En Route.

"I wish those old cars would stop so I could go to sleep," remarked Mrs. T. Tuesday night, or rather Wednesday morning, for the hands of the clock had long since passed the midnight hour. It was our first night in Boston for quite a while, and the change from the quietness of a Rockland night to the rumbling of electric, roaring of the elevated, the clattering of heavy wagons over the cobbles, the chattering of almost as many people as at midday, coupled with a weariness and nervousness of a day of tramping, sight-seeing and elbow-bumping, was not a pleasant one. Quite a saving when one lives in the town and works in the city.

Blue Hill is the highest elevation in Eastern Massachusetts. It is 625 feet high and from its summit one catches a glimpse of the ocean and Boston on the north, Mt. Wachusett on the west, and on all sides many towns, lakes and rivers. Blue Hill is now a state reservation. Fine roads have been laid out and the drive to the summit is quite easy. It is four miles from Canton Village and many times when a boy have I walked the four (eight there and back) and then to the summit. It was not so easy a climb then, no, sir! On the summit is a government observatory, and it is from here we get our weather reports. On pleasant Sundays Blue Hill is the mecca for thousands of people seeking an outing and cool breezes.

At the foot of Blue Hill nestles the charming, historic village of Ponkapoog, the home of the celebrated author, Thomas Bailey Aldrich, the philanthropic millionaire, Augustus Hemenway, the Hortons, the Fishers, the Fennos, and other families, descended from the original settlers. On the Fennos estate still stands the original Fennos homestead, built about 1654, in a good state of preservation. This is one of many places of historic interest. It was here that the apostle John Eliot preached the gospel to the Indians, and where he made the first Indian translation of the bible. Eliot was a good man and his influence among the Indians was wonderful.

Monday night was an ideal one for travel on the water. Not a cloud to be seen and a full moon cast its silvery rays across the surface of the deep. The atmosphere was not cold, although invigorating, and a promenade on the outside with wrap or overcoat was a pleasure. The twinkling lights along the shore and the steady gleam of the lighthouses made a fascinating picture. The boarding house on High Island with lights in its hundred windows had every appearance of a summer hotel rather than the abiding place of hundreds of Finns, Swedes, Italians, Americans and representatives of a number of other nationalities. With the passing of White Head we retired, and as the ship plowed her way over the ocean highway that was as smooth almost as a mill pond we slept and dreamed of the pleasures that awaited us on the days to come.

In the city we put up at the New Lexington on Boylston street. We selected this hotel because Proprietor Fanning, with his well known business acumen recognizes The Courier-Gazette as a medium of advertising, and because of this knew that his house must be all right. It is. The Lexington is centrally located, being practically within a stone throw of the leading theatres and the shopping district. Mr. Fanning is making his house one of the best known in Boston and although he has been in possession but a short time he is being compelled to keep his weather eye open for additional room. The appointments are rich, the comforts many, the staff courteous and painstaking and one is made to feel at home. It is a place where a lady can go unaccompanied, with safety. The rates are moderate.

As soon after breakfast as possible I took the electric for my old home in Canton, while Mrs. T. started for a visit to friends. This road has been in operation but a short time and is being money for its backers. The fare is five cents from any part of the city to the city limits, and ten cents from the limits to Canton, a distance of thirteen miles. The road runs through Mattapan and Milton, along the base of Blue Hill, through Ponkapoog to Canton, Sharon, Norwood and Stoughton. Milton is the terminus of the line.

Back again to Boston in the early afternoon. Business in Boston is not over good, the advertising men say—the business men got caught heavily in steel and copper and have not yet thoroughly recovered, but the crisis is over and they will never do so any more.

As for politics, you couldn't get anyone to talk about them. The Boston did have a rally in Tremont Temple Wednesday night. The papers stated the next morning of the large number of men in line, how thousands were turned away from the hall and of the boundless enthusiasm. But no one could see these things except the reporters on the end of their pencils. Politics is a tabooed question of conversation. It is simply a question of the size of the Republican majority, or all signs fail.

We met Sam Graves Thursday morning. He was dressed in his best and his face was flushed. He had just returned from a visit to Gov. Bates and had received a promise from that honorable gentleman that he would be present at a reception of the Knox Club on the evening of Nov. 29. Gov. Cobb and W. O. Fuller, Jr., who are guests of honor on this occasion, so Sammy informed me. Sam is still selling stocks and bonds, and I guess he is selling them for he looks prosperous.

C. E. Tuttle was in town rummaging around the old book stores and Evered Spear was up on a matter of business. Coming down Beacon Hill Friday we ran into Edith Ash, Ernestine Davies and Clara McLeod, nee Thomas. Miss Grace Blake was taking in a week and I collided with John Bird on Washington street Thursday afternoon. John was buying a full-blooded Japanese Spaniel for Mrs. Bird. Tom Donahue had been around for a week and returned to Rockland Friday night. We went into Keith's Theatre Wednesday afternoon and hadn't been seated more than five minutes when Arthur Baker was ushered in and sat next to us. Two rows in front was F. S. Walls of Vinhaven. George Brown went up Monday night to take a position on the electric road. This is indeed a small world.

And how the world does change. In the shoe windows were displayed shoes made of calf skin, with the hair left on—and in the stores devoted to ladies were muffs, scarfs, etc. of calf skin, also with the hair left on. This kind of wear is very faddish this year. Another fad now is allowing smoking in dining-rooms of many of the best hotels and restaurants. The ladies don't seem to mind it at all.

There were many good things at the theatres last week and we took in all we could. On Tuesday evening we went to the Colonial and had the pleasure of seeing Fritz Scheff in the comic opera "The Two Roses." This is a new role for Miss Scheff, as she is better known in grand opera, but that she has made a hit is unquestioned. Music lovers flock to the Colonial and fill it from pit to dome each night. Miss Scheff is a most vivacious young lady; she acts with a daintiness and fascinating grace that is peculiarly her own and sings with the same purity and brilliancy that made her a favorite in grand opera. "The Two Roses" is an adaptation from Dr. Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," but the author has taken only the outline and adapted it for modern audiences. The new version makes a sweet, refreshing love story, set against a background of picturesque surroundings. The stage settings are delightful. The first act representing an orchard in full bloom is a poem of beauty. Miss Scheff is supported by a company of more than ordinary ability. Endowed by that prince of comedians, Louis Harrison. If you should get the opportunity do not fail to see "The Two Roses." The engagement ends on Saturday of next week.

Wednesday we went to the Tremont to see Parsifal, Richard Wagner's sacred festival play. It was grand, but not being a musical critic, a criticism of the play is beyond me. Although the curtain went up at 5:30 for the first act and at 8:30 for the second act the two weeks' engagement was successful from every standpoint. Society was out in all her regalia, and it was worth the price of admission to see the many beautiful gowns. The stage settings were beautiful, the acting superb and the singing delightful, the whole making a performance uplifting in its character. The credit of producing this stupendous production belongs to Henry W. Savage. I had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Perry, the press agent, and spent a half hour talking over Maine matters with him. Mr. Perry is a native of Portland, and when a young man more than 30 years ago he was on the Lewiston Journal staff. He prizes very highly a letter written by the late Congressman Dingley in 1867 to his father, in which the work of the young man was warmly commended. I had the pleasure of reading the letter.

Thursday evening we went to see Wright Lorimer, in "The Shepherd King," a romantic drama in four acts and five scenes, at the Majestic theatre. This is a magnificent presentation of a romantic Biblical play and has created even more of a furore than "Ben-Hur." The scenes are laid in the home of David, the shepherd boy, near Bethlehem; the camp of Saul in the Vale of Elah; the palace of Saul at Gibeath, cave of the Witch of Endor and the court adjoining the palace of Gibeath. The engagement will end next week. The play seems to please all sorts of people which undoubtedly is the reason why the standing room sign is hung out at nearly every performance. The stage settings are especially notable for their artistic value. The settings in each act are a triumph of harmonious color, or magnificent effects, and costumes rival them in gorgeousness. Mr. Lorimer's speech will end next week. Every detail goes into the making of the play, with the result that even the armour worn by the soldiers of Israel are exact reproductions of that worn in the days of David and Saul. Mr. Lorimer is supported by a strong cast, the work of Miss Buckley and Nettle Reed as Saul's daughters, Edward McKay as Jonathan, Charles Kent as Saul and Margaret Hayward as David. The play is a masterpiece of its kind. If you are in Boston you should not fail to see "The Shepherd King." If you see it I can assure you that you will go out of your way to thank me for my advice. The Majestic is one of the most beautifully appointed theatres in the world and is under able management.

But I have already made this letter too long. Frank Packard came home Friday night after a week of sight-seeing and Tom Donahue from a week of business, and the last person seen on the wharf as the boat swung off was Walter Dismore, who is now employed by the Swift Provision Co. and who is frequently at the wharf to see and shake hands with old friends. John W. Thomas.

Chats on Books.

An estimate of the late Senator Hoar from the pen of Dr. Talcott Williams appears in the Review of Reviews for November. Dr. Williams had been a close observer of Mr. Hoar's public career from the time of his entrance to the Senate.

The last adventure of Sherlock Holmes which Sir Conan Doyle will chronicle, positively the last, is to appear in the Christmas number of Collier's Weekly. Its title will be "The Adventure of the Second Stain." In the holiday season, we presume, all of the later Holmes stories may be expected in a book.

That monumental "Survey of London" on which Sir Walter Besant was working when he died was left by him in such a state that his literary executors are now convinced of their ability to bring out the whole work as it was originally planned. A third volume in the series is soon to be issued and five more are ultimately to be printed.

Doubleday, Page & Co. publish a new and cheaper edition ($5 instead of $10) of Mr. Wallihan's remarkable series of photographs of deer, elk, mountain lions, etc., which he gathered together under the title of "Camera Shots," and reproduced in photogravure. These pictures were all taken in the animals' native haunts, and the time is now passed when they can possibly be duplicated. There is an introduction by Theodore Roosevelt.

A new life of Balzac is to be published this winter. Mary F. Sandars has prepared it, and it is said that she will bring forward much new material. From the essays on the novelist which she recently contributed to "The Fortnightly," we judge that her book will be interestingly written, but it is hardly fair of those commentators who have alluded to her enterprise to speak of it as the first of any importance in English. Miss Wormeley's admirable "Memoir" should not be forgotten.

Mr. Kipling's new book of short stories, "Traffic and Discoveries," contains among other tales that remarkable story entitled "They," which has excited more attention than anything that Mr. Kipling has written for a long time. Another story of a totally different sort, but equally characteristic, is called "The Captive," and relates the experiences of an American in the Boer War, who attached himself to the Boer side in order that he might use a rapid-firing gun which he had invented. When Henry James comes to the end of his tour through this country and returns to his English home, he will, of course, make a book about his experiences, calling it, it is stated, "America Revisited." In the meantime, according to "The London Chronicle," he has written from America to his friends in England "letters" which would make very good reading if only they could be published. "The gist of the letters, we are told, 'is an expression of pleasure with all he hears and sees 'home.' The devoted friend, the old friend, the return of the prodigal, has given him no indignation."

A Mrs. Jessie Broadfoot died the other day in Dunfrieshire. Carlyle used to call her his "hereditary maid," as she, her mother and other members of her family had been in the service of the Carlyles for many years. Grave commentators on the life and career of this exemplary person state that her testimony as to the disposition of the Carlyles was all in his favor, that she declared him to be the easiest man in the world to serve. "She always indignantly refused statements alleging infidelity in the Carlyle home life, and she used to testify that she never saw anything but the most affectionate regard between the two."

With the publication of "New France and New England" in sumptuous form, Houghton, Mifflin & Co. complete the edition of John Fiske's writings dealing with the history of the American Colonies from the settlement of Virginia to the adoption of the Constitution. The set comprises Old Virginia and her Neighbors (2 vols.), the Beginnings of New England, The Dutch and Quaker Colonies (2 vols.), New France and New England, The American Revolution (2 vols.), The Critical Period of American History. Each volume, beautifully printed from new plates, and copiously illustrated with about 200 portraits, maps, facsimiles, contemporary views, prints and other historic material.

The November of McClure's concludes with some interesting comment "On the Making of McClure's Magazine," which discusses the work of McClure's famous staff writers, both in the words of the editors and those of the press. Ida M. Tarbell, Ray Stannard Baker, Lincoln Steffens, Samuel Hopkins Adams, and William Allen White, all receive special mention, and brief statements concerning their work and abilities are made for each. The great reading public which enjoys the resulting magazine itself month by month will be glad of this opportunity to look behind the curtain and see how it is made as well as to see and learn from its own pages something of the people who make it. Some very interesting side-lights are thrown on the operation of the McClure machine, notably that on the cost of the special articles contributed by its staff writers, which ranges from $1,000 to $3,000 each, fully half of them costing as much as $2,500. This the editor assures us, is the most expensive reading matter furnished in the magazine world, but they state that they know of no other way of securing for McClure's that high degree of truthfulness, accuracy, and interest which they require, and for which it is known.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

The Struggle.

Say not the struggle taught valletth,
The labor and the wounds are vain,
The enemy falls not, nor fleeth,
And as things have been they remain.
If hopes were dunes, fears may be dunes;
It may be, in you smoke-cooled,
Your candles flame on how the flies,
And but for you, possess the flies.
For while the wild waves, vainly breaking,
Scum here no painful such to gain,
Far live, through creases and holes making
Cones sleek, floating in the main.
And not by Eastern windows only,
When daylight comes, comes in the light,
In truth, the sun climbs slow, how slowly,
But westward, look, the land is bright.
—Arthur Hugh Clough (1839-61).

TWICE-A-WEEK

FOR PRESIDENT,
HON. THEODORE ROOSEVELT
Of New York.

VICE PRESIDENT,
HON. CHAS. W. FAIRBANKS

In this section the exciting political campaign culminated in September. We view the conflict that has since raged in other states, the results of which are to appear in the final arbitrament of the ballots, next Tuesday. The voters of Knox county will go to the polls and register their opinions, whether they wish to continue the policies of the Republican party, under the leadership of that superb American Theodore Roosevelt, or to take on the Democracy headed by the untitled and narrow-gauged Parker. The Republican ballot will say that the people believe in:

Theodore Roosevelt.
A Republican House of Representatives.
Sound money.
A protective tariff.
Just pensions.
An efficient postal service in cities and in the rural districts.
Building the Panama Canal.
Having a navy adequate for defense.
Continuing peace and prosperity, so that our own nation may be blessed and the whole world benefited by our influence. We believe the Republicans of Knox county will declare themselves in this direction. There will be no concerted attempt to fetch out the voters. If anything of this sort is done it will be by the Democrats, who we hear are still hustling in some localities with this end in view.

Judge Parker's public utterances seem to be specially ill timed. He not only fails to speak when he ought to, but he speaks when he ought not to. The greatest mistake he has yet made was to revive the old anti-imperial agitation in favor of scuttling out of the Philippines. It is the only subject on which he has spoken plainly and unmistakably, and he is plainly and unmistakably wrong. That subject was thrashed out four years ago. The islands are progressing favorably and rapidly toward self-government, they are enjoying self-government in a much larger degree than most people think now. W. L. Pepperman made the statement at the Lake Mohonk Conference last week that in the general government civil service in the islands there are 2,500 Filipinos to 1,500 Americans, while in the provincial and municipal governments of the islands there are over 15,000 Filipinos and only about 100 Americans. He and other philanthropic citizens who are familiar with affairs there declare that if any criticism is to be made, it is that we have gone too fast in bringing these people into the management of governmental affairs. It would be the greatest mistake in the world to interrupt this peaceful progress by a new agitation of independence, and the greatest folly in the world to promise what nobody is asking for and what, when the time comes, it is more than likely nobody will want.

LONGEST JUMP EVER MADE TO ROCKLAND.

The longest jump ever made by a repertoire company takes place next week when Miss Florence Corbin and her company of 20 people will leave Coatesville, Pa. on Monday, Nov. 7, coming direct to this city. The company is scheduled to arrive here with their car at 3.30 Wednesday night, opening a three days' engagement at the Farwell opera house the following evening, Thursday, November 10, with matinee on Friday and Saturday. The Florence Corbin Stock Company is considered one of the best popular priced attractions before the public. The plays are all new, never before seen in this section of the country at cheap prices. The opening play is "The Soldier's Daughter." "The Fatal Command." "The Black Pool." "The Midnight Curse." "The Emblem of Ireland." "The Child of the Forest." "The Creole's Revenge." A number of startling specialties of the highest order are introduced between acts. The management has arranged for Ladies' Night, Thursday. Owing to exceedingly poor business in Pennsylvania Miss Corbin, as well as some others, has decided to try other sections of the country, hence the long jump as stated above.

THE ELECTION OUTLOOK.

How the Presidential Contest Looks a Week in Advance of the Voting—Over 300 Electoral Votes Seem Sure For Roosevelt.

On the last week of the campaign but one result of the Presidential election appears probable. That is the election of Roosevelt and Fairbanks by a majority in the electoral college greater than that received by any candidate for President since Grant overcame Greeley in 1872. The present prospect is that Theodore Roosevelt will have at least 300 electoral votes and perhaps 19 more. That may seem an astonishing prophecy, but all political signs must point correctly if such is not to be the result. To be sure the campaign has not been characterized by that lively interest and intense excitement which is customary to note in Presidential contests. For want of political enthusiasm the campaign has been said to resemble that of 1892. This is the only thing that affords any hope to the Democrats, who are talking to keep up their courage of a political revolution, which will give them the states of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, West Virginia, Indiana, Maryland, Colorado, Montana, Utah and Idaho. There is, of course, a possibility of such a political revolution, but there is certainly nothing to indicate it.

There are decided differences between the campaign of 1892 and that of today. Cleveland then stood for a distinct issue, tariff reform. He had the prestige of a comparatively successful administration four years before. Labor was discontented. Harrison had made many enemies within his own party, and had the reputation of being cold.

This year the Democratic candidate stands for nothing. His personality has made no impression upon the country. He has been a grievous disappointment to his party from the beginning. The campaign of tariff reform was tried by the Democrats after 1892 with disastrous results to the country. Prosperity prevails and the personality of Roosevelt has captured the country. The Roosevelt administration stands for accomplishment. It has not been successfully assailed on any one point. The young men are with the President. Labor regards him as its special friend. In general the people know what to expect from him and for what he stands, and have not heard one logical sustained argument against his election.

The Democrats have raised no living issue. They are lacking in harmony and courage. Their campaign has been mismanaged and their candidate a failure. In all these circumstances, having managed their campaign quietly and efficiently, with favorable reports from all quarters, except from the solid South, the Republicans are confident. Three days before the Presidential election of 1900 the New York Tribune printed a forecast of the result, giving McKinley and Roosevelt 303 electoral votes. They received 292. In preparing this forecast the Tribune followed an entirely novel method, securing the forecasts of leading newspapers in the various states and basing its figures on their estimates. The forecast proved so accurate that a similar course has been followed this year and the results tabulated above were secured from scores of the leading newspapers of the nation, supplemented in a few cases by the estimates of the Republican state chairmen in states unquestionably Democratic or Republican. In the so-called doubtful states, however, the figures of the press have been depended upon without exception. The Tribune says:

"The results obtained and included in the forecast show a picture of significant indications, not the least important of which is the apparent certainty that Parker will be beaten worse than Bryan. The census of 1900 added 29 to the electoral total vote, raising it from 417 to 476. In 1900 Bryan carried seventeen states, receiving 155 electoral votes. If Parker should carry the same states this year his vote would give 164 in the Electoral College. But conceding him the two states which may be fairly considered doubtful, Maryland and Nevada, his total will reach only 162, even if he carry fifteen states. The change lies entirely in the Rocky Mountain states. Of these Bryan carried Idaho, Montana, Colorado and Nevada. This year Parker may carry Nevada. Maryland, which gave its vote to McKinley, shows some signs of a trend back to the Democratic column. Thus it is clear except for these two states Parker and Davis will carry no states outside of the 'solid South,' and it is not unlikely that they may be beaten in these states and reduced to the unlucky number of thirteen.

"The election of 1904 promises to show other noteworthy features. At the outset of the campaign, New York, New Jersey, Maine, New Hampshire, West Virginia and Indiana were designated as doubtful states and both parties concentrated their efforts on these states. Wisconsin, also, because of a Republican split, was cheerfully included in the list by the sanguine Democrats, despite its immense Republican majorities in late years. But the collapse of the Democratic national campaign several weeks ago fully shattered any hope they may have actually cherished about any of these states. The Tribune canvass, furnished by the press in all these states, shows that the tide is setting toward the Republican ticket in an overwhelming majority. New York, New Jersey and Connecticut have long ago passed out of the doubtful column. West Virginia and Indiana were longer in doubt, but indications from both states make the Republican ticket certain there. The state of Tennessee, which was never in danger in Wisconsin, and the most conservative estimate gives Roosevelt and Fairbanks 50,000 in that state.

The collapse of the Democratic national campaign brought about another interesting result—in a half dozen of the doubtful states, to use the Democratic estimates, the state contest entirely obscured the national. In New York, New Jersey, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Colorado, and even Washington, the Democrats began to strain every nerve to carry their state ticket, and in New York, as elsewhere, did not hesitate at early day to offer votes for Roosevelt in return for votes for their state candidates. The result has been the same in all these states; even in Indiana, where the efforts of Tammart have been concentrated on the election of John W. Kern as Governor, the state fight has obscured the opera bouffe support of Parker. There is a tendency noticeable in the replies to the Tribune's request for estimates to make the state doubtful. In the state campaign, and there will be a difference of some thousands of votes in many cases. This is due in nearly every instance to two factors—first, the overwhelming popularity of President Roosevelt, and second, the peculiar local conditions and local issues, on which the state campaigns are to be decided.

"None the less, the outcome of the state election in the majority of the states has been decided by the failure of the Democratic national campaign. In New York, where the fiercest sort of a struggle has been waged, the Republican gubernatorial ticket has steadily gained strength and its election is assured by at least 25,000, and the estimates of its plurality range as high as 60,000, based on the evident tidal wave for Roosevelt and the general disgust at the campaign of scurrility and slander that has been carried on, as well as the judicial record of the Democratic nominee. In New Jersey, Connecticut, West Virginia and Washington a similar result is now well-nigh certain. In Indiana, Wisconsin and Colorado there seems to be more doubt, and the count on the state ticket will be close.

"The change in the situation since 1900 cannot better be exemplified than in the case of Nebraska, the state of William J. Bryan. Carried by Bryan in 1900, this state was tabulated as doubtful in the Tribune's estimate in 1900, and Mr. McKinley carried it by only a slender majority. This year the success of the Republican national ticket is assured, and even the effort of the Democrats to carry the state by fusion with the Populists on the local nominees seems certain to fail. Here, as in every other state of the Union, it is absolutely clear that the larger element of the vote of the personal friends and political followers of Bryan will be cast for Roosevelt, rather than Parker, and it is the possibility that this vote may be cast in the Democratic column on state tickets that gives even interest to the campaign in half a dozen states."

A former Rockland man, who now resides in New York, and who takes a deep interest in national politics, gives The Courier-Gazette a "straight tip" in regard to New York state. It is dated Nov. 1, and is as follows:

Up to Saturday everything seemed to be coming our way. The Democrats apparently were making little effort and seemed to be thoroughly discouraged. The trend of matters can be judged most closely by watching the bets made "on the curb." Early in the campaign the presidential bets were running about even money that Roosevelt would carry the state. As the campaign progressed the odds were in favor of Roosevelt 2 to 1, then 3 to 1, until the middle of last week Parker money was hard to find at 6 to 1. Herick started the pronounced favorite over Higgins, but steadily declined in favor until the first and middle of last week the betting stood 10 to 9 in favor of Higgins. Saturday the tide came out with a "frontal vote" and figured from it that both Parker and Herick would carry the state. They only had about 7000 "votes" cast, and the Republican papers and committees simply ridiculed their deductions. Nevertheless, it had its effect and the betting became a little more in favor of the Democratic candidates.

Another feature which has sent up Democratic stock has been the advent of Parker upon the platform. It seems to me too early to tell just what the effect of his speaking will be, whether it will strengthen or weaken them. Personally I believe the latter, although it has apparently given them some courage. Unquestionably, they had a great

By the Hand of Providence

Jenny was explaining to Amelia: "This is the way you make a horseshoe: You get a big book with no print in it, and then paste it full of weeds and flowers and grass and little bits of bushes, and you have to dry, dry, dry 'em. Sicus is Latin for just as dry as a bone."

"I wonder could we put in Benjamin Byram, Esq.?" Bess speculated plausibly. "Heaven knows he's dry enough just as he stands. Then think of the relief if he was once where you could shut him up and off at will."

"Prue giggled outright. 'He does talk thirteen to the dozen,' she said. 'But who wouldn't, with all his chances? Nature made him a fool of the first water, and fate chipped in by giving him a fortune and a doting family.'"

"Benjamin the Blatant, Tom Rodman calls him," Bess began, still plausibly. Jenny came charging at her, with Amelia hot upon his heels, and shouting: "You lush, Aunt Bess! You want lose me my pony! Mister Byram says he'll give me a Shetland if I don't let nobody say a word against him in this house."

"I believe he wants to fight with Mister Tom Rodman," Amelia interrupted sagely, her head the least bit aside. "And I ain't got to help him there," she added pointedly, "cause Mister Tom says I'm his sweetheart. He's got to wait for me to grow up. He thinks I'm a heap prettier'n Aunt Bess right now."

"How about me?" Prue asked, giggling more than ever. Amelia looked reflectively, but Jenny stuck his hands in his pockets, set his feet far apart and said, sticking out his chin after the manner of his model, Benjamin Byram, "Why, Prue, you know nobody will ever look at you so long as Aunt Bess and Amelia are around."

"Won't they, indeed?" Prue queried, drawing down the corners of her mouth meekly, although her eyes twinkled. Jenny swung on his heel, saying magisterially: "Course not. Why, you're all freckled same as a turkey egg and haven't hardly got meat enough to wrap up your long bones."

"Upon my soul," said Miss Prue, "I'll take him out and drown him!" Tom Rodman asked, coming through the door as he spoke. But Jenny only grinned at him—Jenny was nine and Prue eighteen. They were the best of comrades, despite his brutal frankness. Prue made a dash at him, stood him upon his head, then swung him by an arm and a leg, chanting:

"There he goes! Fingers and toes! Up the chimney when the wind blows!" ending in a feint of flinging Jenny upon the open fire. Amelia improved the opportunity to pull her brother's hair until he howled. They were twins and pretty badly spoiled, as was but natural, since they had grown up motherless in their grandfather's house.

"I'll swing you by your legs, Prue, when I'm a man," said Jenny, if I don't. Jenny said, trying to scowl, but grinning in spite of himself. Tom Rodman picked the boy up and swung him across his shoulder, saying gravely: "I hate to do it, but there's nothing else for it. Jenny, I've been telling you this ever so long I'd carry you to the gypsies if you did not behave better. Top wriggling. You can't get away. But I'll let you kiss Mella and the others goodbye. Be quick! You won't ever see them again."

"Kiss 'em all yourself, that's what you're after," Jenny, the astute, piped huskily as Tom carried him close to Aunt Bess. His arms were free. Impulsively he laid hold of the two heads and yanked them together, locking his arms behind the two necks and holding them tight, laughing uproariously all the while. Tom was a giant of a fellow. He could do no less than kiss Bess, if all his heart did belong to sweet Miss Prue. And just as he kissed her who should come in to them but Mr. Byram, the rich distant cousin, who had been for three weeks a guest at Fairlaw.

Mr. Byram had come there exploring. He felt the need of a wife rather than the want of one. Bess, who was tall and twenty and the very model of gracious stateliness when she chose to be, had captivated him out of hand. He would have proposed to her the second day of his visit, never doubting what answer she would make, but that his sense of propriety forbade. Besides, it would not do to dazzle her too suddenly. He must let the great prospect break gently upon her as dawn broke over the world. So he had been nobly impartial in his devotions, so much so he had twinges of conscience whenever he thought of Prue. She was hardly more than a schoolgirl, to be sure, but quite mature enough to break her heart over loss of him if she once felt herself seriously believe she had a chance of being Mrs. Byram.

Of Tom Rodman he had taken no more account than to set him down as an impertinent puppy, with a knack of coming in at all hours, especially when Mr. Byram least expected or wanted him. To discover him kissing Bess in the face of everybody made Benjamin the Blatant simply furious. All the more furious that Jenny cried out gleefully: "Mister Byram! Mister Byram! Come help me hold 'em! They tried to sneer me, but I'm beatin' 'em at their own game!"

"Let loose, you little varmint! Shut up!" Tom commanded. Prue made a dash at the tangle and deftly untwined Jenny's fingers, letting Bess escape. Mr. Byram stood speechless in wrath and amazement until Amelia, sidling up to him, slid her hand within his and said, with the least tinge of the head: "They ain't beavin' ugly. Mister Tom will be Aunt Bess' nephew when he marries me, and the Fairlies always kiss their kinfolk, if they ain't too far off and great big stuffs into the bargain. Prue and Aunt Bess said so the first night you came."

"Indeed!" Mr. Byram exploded. "With my coming, I suppose, for a text. Well, young ladies, I see in all this the hand of Providence. A just and ever watchful God would not permit me to fall victim to your mercenary designs. No doubt you were tempted by my wealth and position, although you are so wholly incapable of appreciating a man of my character."

"Kindly come outside with me before you say any more," Tom Rodman interrupted, setting Jenny down with a thump and putting himself in front of Bess, who had grown very white and had eyes of scorching flame. Prue, contrarily, had flushed so scarlet it hid all her freckles. Tom reached a hand to her and drew her toward him, while he went on steadily: "Your talk needs a man to hear and answer it, I'm that man. Bess and Prue have no brother, and Mr. Fairlie is past fighting age. But Prue belongs to me, and that gives me the right to stand up for 'em. So you come along! We'll settle this minute we strike the turnpike and neutral ground."

"Hush, Tom! Remember he's our guest!" Bess pleaded. Prue gave her sweetheart a roguish and heavenly smile. Amelia looked fit to cry over the toppling of her air castle, but Jenny turned a handspring by way of showing his joy in the "melley." As he came up standing, he stepped in front of Byram, swelled out his chest and said stoutly:

"Don't you try no crawfish games! You know you wanted to marry Aunt Bess! You told me so and said I must court her for you. I ain't very big, but if you try to go back on her I'll let you know I can shoot my little gun, and that's more than you can do. We won't have a regular duel, like grandpa tells about. Let's try a button match instead, and if I butt you over, like David did Goliath, you'll propose to Aunt Bess same as ever and gimme that Shetland you've been talkin' so much about."

"Ladies and gentlemen, goodby," Mr. Byram began in his most ceremonious voice. He got no further. Jenny went at him like a catapult and bowled him down and out of the door, only stopping when his enemy lay prostrate upon the hall threshold. There the grownups came to the rescue and so managed it that Mr. Byram went off an hour later, somewhat bruised in his person and self esteem, but as to his outer man whole and speckless. When the carriage rolled away with him Tom Rodman drew a long breath and said: "Your sweetheart is coming home by the next steamer. Had a cable this morning. You see, I have been writing him things. He will agree with me and the late Byram that in all this there is unmistakably the hand of Providence."

Talent Promptly Recognized.
The businesslike young man approached the man at the desk.

"I'll ask only a minute of your time," he said. "I want to know if you wouldn't like to subscribe for a copy of this book. I've sold 150 of 'em in this building in the last three days."

The man at the desk took the book and looked at it. He noted its utter worthlessness from a literary point of view, its tawdry binding and the cheapness of the paper on which it was printed. Then he said:

"Young man, do you mean to tell me seriously that you have sold 150 copies of that book in this one building?"
"Yes, sir. Here's my order book. You can look at the signatures yourself. Every one of them is genuine."

"I see. Young fellow, I don't know how much you are making out of this business, but I'll give you twice as much, whatever it is, if you'll take hold of a patent nose ring I was fool enough to drop a lot of money in a few years ago and help me to dispose of a stock of 2,000 dozen of 'em I've still got on hand."—Chicago Tribune.

Ivory Carving in China and Japan.
In China and Japan ivory has been carved, the ivory balls inclosed inside one another being specially noted. Many theories have been formed as to how these balls have been cut. Perhaps a probable one is that a ball of ivory was taken, around the upper and lower ends of which four small holes were carved out, gradually diminishing in size toward the center until the axis of the one hole met the axis of the center of the ball and that then small tools were inserted and a thin layer of ivory forming a part of a circle from one hole to its lower corresponding one was cut and loosened from the whole mass. So, gradually cutting from one hole to the next one, a complete inner circle was eventually loosened, the circles themselves afterward being cut into the required pattern.—Chambers' Journal.

The Dictionary Habit.
"Yes, it's a good thing for a man to refer to the dictionary, but this practice can often be carried to excess," said a well known magazine writer. "Why, I've seen many men get so much addicted to this habit," he continued, "that he could not write an ordinary letter without turning to the dictionary three or four times in order to ascertain some big words that he could use. This, I think, is a very great waste of time, as he does not express his meaning a bit better than if he had used some shorter and really English words."

Careless of Honors.
Pastor Kneipp, the famous discoverer of the "barefoot cure," who was appointed chamberlain by the pope, cared little for the honor. He did not even take the trouble to open the letter announcing the appointment and the first learned of the honor conferred upon him by the arrival of a deputation at the Woerschofen cloister to congratulate him. He declined to be addressed, however, as "monsignore." It was with difficulty that he was persuaded to leave his retreat to go to Rome to thank the pope.

Miss Nettie Blackmore, Minneapolis, tells how any young woman may be permanently cured of monthly pains by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"Young Women:—I had frequent headaches of a severe nature, dark spots before my eyes, and at my menstrual periods I suffered untold agony. A member of the lodge advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I only scorned good advice and felt that my case was hopeless, but she kept at me until I bought a bottle and started taking it. I soon had the best reason in the world to change my opinion of the medicine, for each day my health improved, and finally I was entirely without pain at my menstrual periods. I am most grateful."—NETTIE BLACKMORE, 28 Central Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. She will hold your letter in strict confidence. She can surely help you, for no person in America can speak from a wider experience in treating female ills. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass.; her advice is free.

ENGINEER'S LAST RUN.

His Story of How He Lived His Life All Over in a Flash.

"Drowning is not the only experience that causes a man to read his own biography in the flash of a second," said F. C. Roberts, a locomotive engineer.

"I was running on the passenger train between Atlanta and Macon several years ago, and I was to meet the northbound train at a certain station on the road. Well, it was all my fault. I hadn't slept any for five nights, and the only rest I had was in my cab. The last stop that we made before this experience of which I speak the fireman had to wake me up when the signal to go ahead was received. I had gone to sleep in my cab.

"As we approached the next station the conductor may have signaled me, as he claimed he did, but we dashed through the town at about forty miles an hour before I heard the down break signal. The minute I heard it I saw the headlight of the northbound train less than 300 yards away, coming around a curve. I threw on the air brakes and reversed, but it all looked too late. The fireman jumped, but I was paralyzed. The two great engines, one bearing a special train, rushed to gether like angry bulls, and I was frozen there, and while those trains rushed together I saw every incident of my life just as plainly as the day it happened. That's all I know about it."

"They took me to the hospital, and nine days later I woke up after a spell of brain fever. The trains stopped so close together the pilots were sprung out of place, but otherwise there was no damage. They had to get a new engineer before my train pulled out, though, and that was the last time I ever pulled a throttle."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Rival Nightingales.
A writer on birds, Edmund Selous, describes a song contest between two male nightingales. "Jealousy," he says, "did not seem to blind them on the merit of each other's performance. Though often one, upon hearing the sweet, hostile strains, would burst forth instantly itself—and here there was no certain mark of appreciation—yet sometimes, perhaps quite as often, it would put its head on one side and listen with exactly the appearance of a musical connoisseur, weighing, testing and appraising each note as it issued from the rival bird. A curious, half suppressed expression would steal over or seem to steal for fancy may play her part in such matters—over the listening bird, and the idea appeared to be, 'How exquisite would be those strains were they not sung by—' and yet I must admit that they are exquisite."

The Tomb of David.
The tomb of David, king of Israel, is still pointed out to travelers in Palestine and, despite its age, is in a remarkably good state of preservation. David died in 1015 B. C. and was buried in the "city of David." His tomb became the sepulcher of several subsequent kings and one of the sacred places of the kingdom. It stands on Mount Zion, at Jerusalem, just outside of the city wall.

In Social Circles

Arrivals and departures from this city and all incidents in social life make legitimate and interesting items of news. Readers of The Courier-Gazette will confer a favor by sending to this column items of this character.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Farrington left Wednesday night for Philadelphia, where they are to spend the winter.

Mrs. Florence Meader and two children left Wednesday morning for Annapolis, Md., where they will join Capt. Meader of the schooner Cactus; and will sail for the South. She was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. E. A. Wiggin and aunt, Miss Sylvia Stanton.

The former will spend the winter in Worcester with her son, George, and the latter will accompany Mrs. Meader.

A number of high school scholars gave Raymond Greene a surprise party Halloween night, it also being his 15th birthday. Music, both vocal and instrumental, refreshments and popular games were indulged in.

Mr. and Mrs. George T. Holt entertained friends Thursday evening with diversions of whist, music and refreshments. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Whiting of Worcester and Messrs. Knout and Wiscasset of Portland.

Miss Catherine Lynn, who has been visiting in Boston the past six weeks, as the guest of her brother, returned home Tuesday morning by boat.

Miss Emma Cobb entertained the S. P. Club at her home on Beech street, Monday evening.

Mrs. C. C. Hills has gone to Fall River, Mass., where she will visit her daughter, Mrs. Jefferson Borden, Jr.

Go to the Congregational fair, and have your silhouettes taken Wednesday afternoon and evening.

A new sewing club called the Seaguest met with Miss Bertha Hall, Park street, Thursday evening. After a social hour refreshments of candy and fruit were served. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Will Cook, Masonic street.

Jacob Judehohn, proprietor of the Portland Remnant Store, is in Portland on a business trip.

Miss Minnie Coughlan has resumed her position in E. B. Hastings & Co.'s dry goods store.

Rev. W. O. Holman has returned from a visit in Boston. Mrs. Holman is the guest in Jackson, Mich. of Rev. and Mrs. Robert W. Van Kirk.

Roy Knowlton has returned from the world's fair.

Rev. C. A. Moore's mother, who has been residing in Ohio, has recently come to Rockland to make her home with him.

A large and cultured audience, representative of the city and surrounding towns, greeted Nance O'Neil, the noted tragedienne, at her first appearance in Rockland Thursday evening. In her presentation of the difficult part of "Magda" in Sudermann's play of the same name. The play itself is of the problem order, with much that is sombre and some things that are unpleasant, but the lesson of the play is of great interest and the part taken by Miss O'Neil makes one of the most effective presentations that the American stage has seen.

Beautiful, stately, the impersonation of grace, she plays the gamut of human emotion with a mingled gentleness and force. In her youth Miss O'Neil presents such powers of acting to what heights of her profession may she not hope to advance? Her supporting company was of great excellence and uniformity. Miss O'Neil's triumph was shared by that veteran of the boards, McKee Rankin, who made of "Schwartz" a figure notable in the gallery of stage portraits.

The artists were given recall after recall and must have enjoyed their reception at the hands of an appreciative Rockland audience. The opera house management is to be congratulated upon giving their patrons so notable an evening.

The Annual Fair under the auspices of the Congregational church will be held in the vestry Wednesday afternoon and evening and Thursday evening of November 9 and 10. The ladies in charge of the various departments have been untiring in their efforts to secure the most useful and attractive articles for their tables. As the "little folks" are best served early, do not fail to take them at once to the table in charge of Mrs. W. T. White, who will have a fine display of dolls and other toys. Mrs. W. W. Spear will be pleased to wait upon you at her table where linen in varied forms can be bought.

Mrs. Calvin Burrows will exhibit a fine line of kimonos, while Mrs. Evelyn Sawyer cannot fail to attract by the variety of fancy articles at her table. "Kitchen comforts" will be dispensed by Mrs. H. W. Pales, and of Miss Anna Butler can be had "sweets after the sweet" at her candy table.

"There's never a Fair can be had without cooks," so go to Miss Hattie Bird's table where you will find delicious cake; and as "There's never a man can live without dining," extensive preparations have been made by Mrs. A. C. Philbrick to furnish supper on the European plan at 5.30 o'clock, Wednesday. Mrs. M. May Hitchcock will superintend the dining rooms where all will be well and promptly served. Mrs. A. D. Bird has arranged a programme which cannot fail to entertain, both afternoon and evening of Wednesday. Madame Cote-Howard will furnish entertainment Thursday evening.

One of the principal attractions will be the Silhouette Gallery, where for a small sum the artist, Merchant, "The gift will give you."

To see yourself as others see you." Miss Vina Blackington will preside at the well where "The Old Oaken Bucket" will furnish refreshment to the thirsty.

The boys and girls will be interested in the mystery surrounding Mrs. E. D. Spear's tulip garden.

Do not fail to find the table in charge of Mrs. George St. Clair and take home from there a quotation "From the sermon you heard when you last went to church."

William Blaboe expects to leave Monday for Virginia, where he will engage in his regular winter occupation of getting out vessel frames. He has the contract to cut a frame for Cobb, Butler & Co., and will probably cut one other frame, besides getting out considerable promiscuous timber. His son, Benjamin Blaboe, will follow him a week or so later with seven or eight horses. Mr. Blaboe is to be accompanied by his wife and son, and by Nelson U. Blackington, wife and daughter Martha. Their headquarters is Tunstall's Station, and they expect to remain in Virginia until May.

Evangelists Hatch and Taylor will be present at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon meeting.

A number of the barbers met in Union Labor hall Tuesday night for the purpose of forming a union. The attendance was not sufficiently large to take the necessary steps, and another meeting will be held at some date in the near future. One of the principal purposes for forming a union is to enforce the rule against keeping the shops open on Sundays and Tuesday nights. The charge is made that this is now openly violated and that some barbers have a tacit understanding with their patrons that the shop will be open Sunday for 25 cent shaves. No more 15 cent hair-cuts is said to be another rule which will be enforced when the union is formed.

HAD ITS USUAL SUCCESS.

Universalist Fair Did a Land Office Business and Had Some Good Weather.

The Universalist church held its annual fair Wednesday afternoon and evening, and enjoyed the novel experience of having absolutely perfect weather. Ordinarily the Universalist fair brings on a line gale or a blizzard, but this time the sun did not go out of sight until schedule time, and the atmosphere was not disturbed by a gentle zephyr. Small wonder then that there was a steady stream of ladies marching in the direction of the Universalist church, there to revel in the delights of beautiful decorations, dainty refreshments and all the other attractions which go to make up the church fair of the 20th century.

The Universalist ladies may always be counted upon to furnish something unique in the way of decorations. This year it was a "butterfly fair," and the booths, together with the bunting which furnished the background, were resplendent with gorgeous butterflies, which, but for their somewhat exaggerated size, looked as though they might have been captured in some midsummer field or garden. The orange grove, which was one of the most attractive features of the fair, lent a dash of color to the general decorations. The grove was confined to two trees but they were very majestic ones, reaching to the ceiling of the vestry, and every branch laden with what looked to be natural fruit. A surprise awaited the purchaser of the oranges for there was a rose with every package.

In the afternoon a short musical program was furnished by A. T. Crockett, Albert Averill and George Redman. Supper was served as usual on the European plan and a very dainty menu was provided. The cake committee comprised Mrs. C. M. Tibbets, Mrs. Arthur Shee, Mrs. L. R. Campbell, Mrs. Frank Lamb, Mrs. Harry Tozier, Mrs. Cottrell and Mrs. Ralph L. Smith. In charge of the kitchen were Mrs. C. B. Greenhalgh, Mrs. G. W. Palmer, Mrs. L. E. Moulton, Mrs. Joseph Veazie, Mrs. S. G. Prescott, Mrs. George Palmer and Mrs. Martha Spear. The following smart waiters attended to the wants of the supper patrons: Daniel Lamb, Ethel Weeks, Ethel Clifton, Grace Hicks, Fanny Tibbets, Alice Fuller, Helen Wise, Hazel Hix, Daisy Belden, Mary Harrington, Bessie Manson, Angie Butman, Cora Johnson, Della Taylor and Idella Keane.

In advance of the fair a little silk sock had been sent to every member of the parish with the request that each contribute as many pennies as they cared to. These socks were returned to the gift table Wednesday afternoon, and the pennies emptied into a large sock. The coins accumulated very rapidly and the proceeds from this source amounted to nearly $5. The charge ladies in charge were Miss Elsie Chapin and Miss Lena Thorndike. The other departments were under the charge of the following ladies: Grocery Store—Mrs. Edw. Crooker, Mrs. W. G. Eutman, Mrs. Frank Payson, Mrs. Asa P. St. Clair and Mrs. G. M. Hicks. In this department was found everything from vegetables to silver polish.

Pastry—Mrs. Lucia Burpee, Mrs. T. E. Tibbets, Mrs. A. G. Hunt, Mrs. Harry Tozier, and Mrs. W. H. Kittredge.

Art Table—Mrs. E. S. Farwell, Mrs. Edna Rose, Mrs. H. W. Thorndike and Miss Lorea Adams. At this table the ladies also took many subscriptions to the Woman's Home Companion, upon which they received a liberal percentage.

Bag Table—Mrs. Warren Williams, Mrs. Clara Johnson, Mrs. John R. Probst, Mrs. Henry Pearson and Mrs. Rawson.

Candy Table—Miss Faith Greenhalgh, Miss Mabel Lamb, Miss Vivian Billings, Miss Beulah Lawry and Miss Ethel Clifton.

Mrs. Orel E. Davies appeared in the fair cast as Madame Hermal, fortune teller, and had extensive patronage. Mrs. Eliza Keene had charge of the ice cream department. A grab basket was under the charge of Mesdames Cottrell, Cushman, Packard, Willoughby and Clifton. The decorating committee comprised Mrs. W. H. Glover, Mrs. C. M. Tibbets and Mrs. Arthur Shee. The chairman of the fair was Mrs. E. S. Kittredge.

ROCKLAND INDUSTRY EXPANDS.

Livingston Manufacturing Co. Buys Two Lots of Land On Lime Street, and Will Erect a Large Fireproof Building.

The Livingston Manufacturing Co., which has long been recognized as one of Knox county's leading industries, is expanding to meet the demand of a rapidly growing business. Within a few days the company has bought two important pieces of land on Lime street, one being the Timothy Driscoll property, which borders the plant on the north, and the other the Hiram Burns property, which adjoins the Driscoll lot. The former has an area of 70 feet square, and the latter an area of 70x150 feet. The buildings which occupy the Driscoll lot have been moved elsewhere but those on the latter lot will not be troubled for the present.

These purchases, with the property it previously owned, gives the Livingston Manufacturing Co. a frontage on Lime street of 210 feet. It has a depth of 70 feet for a distance of 140 feet, and a depth of 150 feet for the remainder of the length.

Cramped for stock room, and spurred by the desire to get its valuable machinery into safer quarters, the company is to build an addition about 72 feet square onto the northern end of the present plant. The proposed structure will have a somewhat peculiar shape, one story high for half of the width, and two stories high for the other half. The posts will be 14 and 22 feet high, respectively.

The new building will be used as a storage room and machine shop, and will be a strictly fireproof structure, according to present plans. The company needs the additional plant at once but it is doubtful if it will be built until next spring, owing to the difficulty of erecting a cement structure in cold weather. With its new acquisition the company will not be cramped for space in some years to come. It is not a matter of surprise that land values have greatly advanced in that section of the town and while the terms of the deal are private it is admitted that the price paid was considerably larger in proportion than for the land already occupied by the company.

The Livingston Manufacturing Co. was organized in 1893 and has been a success from the very outset. The forges have been kept warm every day since the company was incorporated, and the product of the plant now finds a market in all parts of this country, even as far west as the Pacific coast. One shipment was made to Scotland not long ago.

The company manufactures every kind of tool used in quarrying and cutting stone, and all kinds of masons' and contractors' tools. The payroll numbers 18 men and more will be employed just as soon as the company has the added accommodations.

The general manager of the company is F. J. Bicknell and to his ability and foresight is due much of the credit for the company's advancement, and the deserved success. Charles W. Livingston, for whom the company is named, is superintendent, and in him the company has an energetic, capable and faithful man. Messrs. Bicknell and Livingston have held their present positions since the company started.

While there will be no local football Saturday of this week there are plenty of big games to hear from, in which the Rockland sports have considerable interest. The Maine College games for instance. Bowdoin and the U. of M. play in Bangor, and while the indications point to victory for the Brunswick eleven it is by no means certain. Bates plays Colby at Waterville, and there's another problem which the experts will find embarrassing to settle in advance. On the strength of previous games Bowdoin and Bates should be the winners, but football is a very freaky sport.

Among the big games to be played Saturday are the following: Harvard vs. Dartmouth in New Haven; Yale vs. Brown at New Haven; Princeton vs. West Point at West Point; University of Pennsylvania vs. Lafayette at Philadelphia; Amherst vs. Holy Cross at Amherst.

William M. Cullen of Thomaston, who is attending Brown University, writes to enquire if anybody has heard "what happened to Brown" in the recent game with Bowdoin. The happy answerers to have been all on the other side.

A scientific catch-as-catch-can wrestling contest will take place at Elmwood hall, Friday evening Nov. 11, between Black Fitzsimmons of Hartford Conn., and Herman Lissok, the "German Hercules." Fitz has never been defeated on the wrestling mat and claims the colored championship of New England. Lissok is the middle-weight champion of Germany and has defeated some of the best American wrestlers since coming to this country. The winner of next Friday night's bout will earn the wrestling championship of Maine. There will also be a preliminary contest between Luther Belote of Philadelphia, known as Loop-the-Loop, and an unknown. The wrestling begins at 8.15 sharp.

I write this to show how well the remedy is spoken of here." Kodol Dyspepsia Cure was discovered after years of scientific experiments and will positively cure all stomach troubles. Sold by Wm. H. Baltimore Families Experience Points a Moral to Residents of Rockland.

The visitor to Baltimore to-day scarcely realizes that less than a year ago the city was almost destroyed by a memorable fire. A similar comparison might be made by George W. Nally, one of the leading citizens of Baltimore, as to the change in his own looks.

A short time ago, Mr. Nally, writing from his home address, 2213 Barclay St., says "I have been troubled for years with catarrh and had resorted to all remedies that could be thought of. My wife was also afflicted with this terrible disease, but all the treatments we used were an absolute failure until we tried Hyomel. It worked like a charm and has made a complete cure in both of our cases. There is no disagreeable stomachic action in using Hyomel. We breathed it, and its fragrance, so clean, pure and bracing, killed all the catarrhal germs in the head, throat, and lungs."

The experience of Mr. Nally and his wife certainly points a moral to all readers of The Courier-Gazette who are suffering from catarrh. It shows how they can be cured of this frightful disease, without dangerous stomach dosing.

C. H. Pendleton, the local agent for Hyomel, has so much faith in the treatment that he gives you personal guarantee to refund the money in case it does not benefit. A complete outfit costs one dollar, the extra bottles are fifty cents. Ask to see the strong guarantee under which Hyomel is sold.

Edward Blondell this Saturday Afternoon and Evening
—Next Week, "Why Girls Go Wrong"

Virginia Norton, the central character around which clusters the intensely exciting scenes and incidents that have given such widespread reputation to "Why Girls Go Wrong," conceded to be the strongest melo-dramatic offering of recent years, is a character well worth a careful study on account of the fine example of strenuous womanly fortitude. The trials and tribulations endured by this stage heroine are many, however there is a wonderful lesson taught by the struggle which leads to a climax of well merited joy. There are other characters which add materially in rounding out a series of cleverly conceived dramatic and humorous situations. The M. W. Taylor Amusement Company, whose remarkable success has already among the standard offerings, will present "Why Girls Go Wrong" at the Farwell opera house next Tuesday evening, November 8, in a manner becoming a reputation based upon a conscientious desire to furnish a meritorious play with a superior cast and proper scenic equipment. Hickey Ann, a role of exciting quality, is especially well portrayed by Minnie Church.

Matinee this Saturday afternoon—"A Lost Boy" with Edward Blondell.

So far this season only one minstrel company has been booked for the Farwell opera house, Quinlan & Walls, one of the largest now on the road. Manager Crockett has been trying to arrange with Mr. Cahn for one performance of the great Primrose Minstrels, one hundred people, some time in February, but at present nothing definite has been decided upon. Quinlan & Walls date here will be Thursday, Dec. 1. The company numbers over forty people.

Every man, woman and child who admires a good play ought to see "The Lost Boy," the best comedy drama before the public, which will be seen at the Farwell this Saturday afternoon and night. This play is one of the season's big hits, and it is said plays to large houses everywhere. Edward Blondell, who is known as one of the finest comedians on the stage, and who, by the way, is also the author and producer of the play, assumes the principal part, and this in itself a sufficient guarantee that the fun will be enjoyed. The dramatic part has not been neglected, there being enough scenes and incidents to make it interesting to every one.

"David Harum" is announced as the attraction at the Farwell opera house Tuesday evening, November 15, and theatre-goers will have an opportunity of seeing this admirable play at popular prices. There will be matinees, Julius Cahn's company, in the production with William H. Turner as "David Harum." In making up for the role Mr. Turner devoted a great deal of study to the man's appearance. The result is that the actor is entirely lost sight of when he steps before the footlights. It is "Harum" that is seen, the stout, medium sized, shrewd old chap with the cunning yet kindly eye and the mouth that is so expressive. Turner makes Harum more or less bald with a thick fringe of reddish hair, neglecting his old fashioned runabout collar. There is the wart on his cheek and the ruddy complexion of a man used to being out a great deal in the open air. "David Harum" is successful because it is a clean, wholesome drama.

Many people have spoken in the highest terms of the Farwell opera house orchestra this year, saying that Prof. Clark has the best theatre orchestra he ever had and without doubt one of the best in the state. The music this season rendered by this orchestra includes a beautiful and most up-to-date repertoire obtainable.

Two performances will be given this year by Mr. Blondell at Farwell opera house, matinee and night, this Saturday, November 5. The matinee prices are 15, 25, 35, 50 cents; evening prices 35, 50, 75 cents. Afternoon performance at 2:15, night 8:15. Seats ready for both performances.

Matinee and night this Saturday at Farwell opera house by Edward Blondell, presenting his new and best play, "A Lost Boy."

The full half dozen vividly portrayed scenes of vigor and originality which do conspicuous work in helping along the exciting interest in that strongly recommended play, "Why Girls Go Wrong," which is to be seen here next Tuesday evening, Nov. 8 at the Farwell will opera house owe their effectiveness to a desire for background to a story of vice, iniquity and reward, which should clearly point out the moral lesson aimed at, with such positive success.

For the Thanksgiving week attraction Manager Crockett has arranged for the Kelley & Bates Stock Company in high class repertoire, introducing popular vaudeville between acts. This company will be at the Farwell the entire week of the 21st of November with matinees on Wednesday, Thursday (Thanksgiving day) and Saturday. Monday night ladies night. Popular prices.

One of the largest and best companies to be seen at the Farwell opera house during the month of November will be the great rural comedy "Sly Farm," that ran for so long at the old Boston Museum and was one of the successes of several years ago. "Sly Farm" will be interpreted by a strong company and produced with all special scenery and effects.

MRS CARLTON'S WONDERFUL STORY
Maine Woman's Thrilling Experience Duplicated in Rockland.

There are scores of families in Rockland and near by towns who will read with interest the wonderful experience of Mrs. A. L. Carlton, one of our best known women. Her statements are confirmed by the physicians who treated her and by G. H. Pendleton, the druggist who sold her Mi-o-na, nature's cure for dyspepsia.

Mrs. Carlton says: "I suffered with stomach trouble for eight years, growing worse all the time. The doctors gave me the best doctors in Maine diagnosed my case as cancer of the stomach and declared I could not live two months. Utterly discouraged by their treatment, I began using Mi-o-na and commenced to gain at once. At this time, I was reduced to almost skin and bones, as I had lost nearly 100 pounds during my sickness, but when I began to take Mi-o-na, my flesh was built up and I gained 22½ lbs. the first month. When I discharged my physicians, I was suffering great pain and distress, and vomiting from two to six times a day, but after the first use of Mi-o-na, the pain ceased and the vomiting stopped entirely. I have taken only six packages of these wonderful tablets, but my health is about restored and I firmly believe that Mi-o-na saved my life."

C. H. Pendleton is local agent for Mi-o-na, which sells for 50 cents a box, and offer it under personal guarantee that if it does not cure the worst form of stomach trouble and resulting disorders, the money will be refunded.

THOMASTON

Since the G. I. Robinson Drug Company introduced Mi-o-na in this town a good many people have been cured of dyspepsia by this remarkable remedy. It costs 50c for a two weeks' treatment and is absolutely guaranteed to cure dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

If Mi-o-na does not do all that is claimed for it, the Robinson Drug Company stands ready to refund the money on request.

DEBATING SEASON OPENS.

Our Y. M. C. A. Orators Make Excellent Arguments On Merits of the Present War

The Y. M. C. A. Debating Society embarked upon another season last Thursday, Oct. 27, with some stirring and eloquent remarks upon the following subject: "Resolved, That the great powers of the world should unite in using every diplomatic means to terminate the Russia-Japanese War." Frank B. Miller and M. W. Weymouth championed the affirmative and Gen. J. P. Cilley and Alan Bird the negative. Frank B. Miller: When it is found impossible to settle grave questions between nations by diplomatic or other means, an appeal then is taken to the arbitrament of war. I think that as nations develop in the line of civilization and Christianity that there has been a tendency to settle their differences, if possible, by peaceable means. The last few weeks have witnessed a tremendous struggle between Russia and Japan. I think that in the loss of life and of property it is equal to any battle that has ever occurred between nations in the last century, and the civilized world stands appalled and horrified at the result. As we have entered upon the 20th century, those who live peace rather than war and the settlement of questions between nations by peaceful methods instead of employing all the agencies of warfare, have called peace congresses, or have taken steps to have them, and have that these nations may arrive at some method by which their difficulties may be adjusted, instead of rushing into war, with all its attendant and deplorable results.

The history of the war between Russia and Japan, since its inception, goes to show that Russia has met a foe worthy of her steel, Russia, on account of her immense territory and large population, was looked upon as invulnerable by the other great nations of the earth. But we have found that Japan, a small island nation, by successful training of her men, and by making ample preparations to meet this great onslaught from the northern country, has worsted her in every battle, whether on sea or land, which has taken place. These hostilities commenced. We have read of the masterly retreats of Gen. Kuropatkin, and of the assaults made upon Port Arthur. I believe a few weeks will see the fall of that port. When that fort does fall and another battle has been fought, I believe that conditions will then be such that the nations of the world should combine and do all in their power to prevent a continuance of hostilities.

Nothing can be gained if this continues. I believe that the result will be the exhaustion of both nations; it will retard the industrial development of both empires. That war between Russia and Japan will not be attained by her; I think that she will be so exhausted in men, money, and means, that she will be unable, if she does best Japan in the end, to get the territory which she is craving. Russia at the present time will not listen to any advances on the part of any nations towards a termination of hostilities. She wishes to be successful in one engagement, at least, before she will attune her ear to any proposals for peace.

Japan, I think, under the present circumstances, would be willing to listen to such overtures, but if the matter continues as it has the last few months, I believe that in the interests of Christianity and of civilization there should be a halt called, and that the nations back to the paths of peace. I believe that this war is going to work for peace in this: that the people will see that war, carried on as it is at present, is of such a nature, that it destroys property and lives in such immense numbers and quantities that the whole industrial interests of the world are jeopardized, and when this war is over, whether it crowns the efforts of Russia or Japan with success, will make for peace, and that the nations will be more than glad to come together into a peace congress and make such arrangements that peace can be secured with honor and that war shall be regarded as the most barbarous thing that can befall any nation.

Gen. Cilley: War is the highest court of appeal, and the highest court of appeal should be entirely without respect. War will never cease to excite the spirit of men who believe in truth and integrity and who stand for their rights. So long as man has courage, so long as man has conviction, so long will war be necessary, because he must be true to his convictions.

Women as Well as Men
Are Made Miserable by Kidney Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased. Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

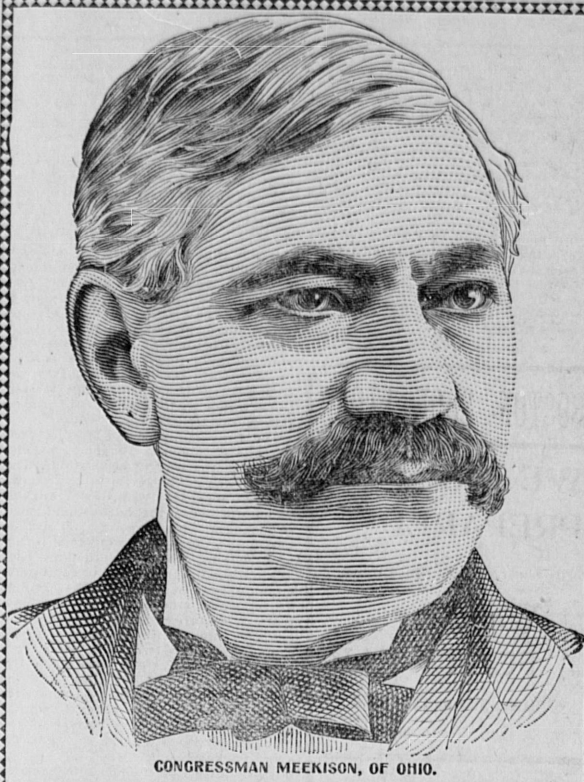

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. Mrs. R. B. Flanders spent Friday with her sister, Mrs. Viola Stone, at Broad Cove. Herbert Moore went to Thomaston Friday, returned home Sunday. Mrs. Raymond Combs of Rockland is stopping with her parents, G. A. Davis and wife.

FOR THIRTY YEARS

Congressman Meekison Suffered With Catarrh—Read
His Endorsement of Pe-ru-na.

CONGRESSMAN MEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh of his insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Peru-na came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Peru-na and I feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be fully able to eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing."—David Meekison, ex-Member of Congress.

Over fifty members of Congress endorse Peru-na as a catarrhal tonic. Men of influence the world over praise Peru-na.

A TONIC is a medicine that gives tone to some part of the system. There are different kinds of tonics, but the tonic most needed in this country, where catarrh is so prevalent, is a tonic that operates on the mucous membranes. Peru-na is a tonic to the mucous membranes of the whole body. It gives tone to the capillary circulation which constitutes these delicate membranes. Peru-na is a specific in its operation upon the mucous membrane. It is a tonic that strikes at the root of all catarrhal affections. It gives tone to the minute blood vessels and the terminal nerve fibres. Catarrh cannot exist long where Peru-na is used intelligently. Peru-na seeks out catarrh in all the hidden parts of the body.

A. J. Ikord, an employee of the C. B. & Q. R. R., West Burlington, Ia., writes: "I had catarrh of the stomach and small intestines for a number of years. I went to a number of doctors and got no relief. Finally one of my doctors sent me to Chicago and I met the same fate. They said they could do nothing for me, that I had cancer of the stomach and there was no cure. I almost thought the same, for my breath was something awful. I could hardly stand it, it was so offensive. I could not eat anything without great misery, and I gradually grew worse."

"Finally I got one of your books, and concluded I would try Peru-na, and thank God, I found a relief and a cure for that dreadful disease. I took five bottles of Peru-na and two of Manalin, and I now feel like a new man. There is nothing better than Peru-na, and I keep a bottle in my house all the time."—A. M. Ikord. Catarrh of the stomach is usually called dyspepsia. Catarrhal dyspepsia cannot be cured by peppin powders or any other temporary relief. The only cure for real dyspepsia is a removal of the catarrh from the mucous membrane of the stomach. This Peru-na will do. This Peru-na has done thousands and thousands of times.

Congressman Botkin, of Kansas, was cured of catarrh of the stomach of many years' standing. Hundreds of other cases have been reported to us through unsolicited testimonials. Peru-na is only internal systemic remedy for catarrh yet devised. Every one afflicted with catarrh in the slightest degree ought to take a course of Peru-na.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.
