Every week the canal commission imports no less than two hundred tons of insect powder and two hundred tons of sulphur bars into Panama. These are used in exterminating the mosquitoes. Panama must be an awful mosquito rendezvous—had almost as the Branch brook at the Meadows.

The London Lancet received from Dr. Osler, some time ago, a letter asking to repudiate for him the words that he has been described as using in his farewell address to the students of Johns Hopkins university. He said he referred to a humorous suggestion in a novel, but expressed no views of his own as to the chloroforming of persons who had reached the age of 60 years.

Gov. Douglas of Massachusetts sprang a surprise when he was elected to the position in a Republican stronghold he has sprung another by emphatically declaring that he will not be a candidate for re-election. This disposes of him quite effectually as a Presidential possibility, and incidentally brings dismay to the Democrats who saw in him the saviour of their party.

The pay of the sailor in the American navy, according to L. R. Hamersley of New York, publisher of the "General Navy Register," and other naval works, is fifty per cent higher than that in any other navy in the world. That the United States navy higher wages is indicated by the fact that foreign sailors enlist freely. In the Spanish-American war some of the gunners on the fighting ships had served in the British and other navies. One American fighting officer who offered bonuses, pay higher wages to sailors than the United States.

The czar has been the most active recent ruler in English companies. Up to a week before last Christmas the rate on his life was 5 per cent per annum. On December 29 holders of Russian bonds who insured him with Lloyd's for some tens of thousands of pounds had to pay 15 per cent for a policy running only ten months. After the assassination of Grand Duke Sergius and the terrorist threat to wipe out the imperial family the czar suddenly retired from activity as an insurance risk. Nobody wanted him at the price the underwriters placed on his life.

The Sydney Bulletin tells of a motoring doctor who ran into and capsized a pedestrian. He looked behind him, and seeing the man still prone, made a circuit and ran back, intending to stop beside and help him. But the motor shot a yard or two beyond the mark and hit the man again just as he was getting up. The doctor turned his car once more, and was cautiously crawling near to the prostrate sufferer when an excited spectator rushed from the sidewalk, and shaking the victim, exclaimed: "Look out! He's coming at you again!" whereupon the man scrambled up and started to run.

At a Victoria Day banquet in New York the following toast to President Roosevelt was proposed by Rev. Dr. Arthur H. Judge—a toast to which we may all subscribe: "Here's to the man who is never afraid, who is not afraid of the trusts, who is not afraid of the unions, who is not afraid of the Senate, and who is not afraid of the wild beasts of the Rocky mountains; here's to the man whose strong hand is being felt by all the peoples of the earth; here's to the man who has succeeded as few before him to unite this nation in love and admiration; here's to the man who always knows his own mind, and who will carry it out if he can."

An innovation will be made in the Ninth Annual Maine festival and around the musical program of excellence will be placed an element of sociability. It is proposed to open the festival with a reception which will outrank anything of the kind ever attempted in this state. Organized committees from every county in the state will unite to make the affair brilliant and beautiful. The guests of honor will be Madame Emma Eames, and other solo artists. The governor and his wife, his staff and their wives, the mayors of the cities and their wives, the senators and members of Congress, the presidents of the festival association and their wives will all be invited as special guests on the reception committee.

Only the invited guests, limited in number, from each county shall be permitted on the floor which will be reserved for the festival chorus members. The galleries will be open to the holders of some tickets. The general public will not be admitted and the ticket regulations will be strictly observed. Each county will have its own tea table, appropriately decorated and designated, and here tea will be served to all members of that county after the formal introduction and reception is over.

An opportunity for social pleasure will be afforded to all and the members of the festival choruses will have worked all the season, will compare notes with fellow workers from another town. Each year will serve to strengthen the pleasure and opportunity for improvement. We will not only admire from a distance the great singers who yearly visit us, but will have an opportunity to shake hands and to feel that we are really acquainted with them.

Especially is this a most fitting tribute to pay to Madame Eames, whose home coming has been long delayed, and is eagerly anticipated, and it seems most appropriate that this new feature

HEADED BY MME. EAMES.

A Notable List of Artists to be Heard at the 9th Maine Festival.

The Festival Association and Mr. Chapman announce with satisfaction and enthusiasm the excellent array of talent which they have secured for the ninth annual festival of music next October—Bangor 5th, 6th and 7th, Portland 8th, 9th and 10th. Nearly all the artists will make their first appearance in Maine, although they have won laurels elsewhere. As already announced Madame Emma Eames will be the star attraction. Her recognition all over the world as one of the greatest prima donnas entitles her to public favor, and her former residence in Maine assures her a welcome. She is well known and endeared to all Maine people. A sketch of her career, with wonderful attainments was printed a few weeks ago in these columns.

Evan Williams, the Welsh tenor, has been heard at the festival, and the beauty of his singing is remembered. He has been in London for some time, gaining new laurels and fame. He has been compared to Sims Reeves because of the sympathetic tone of his voice, and the way in which he speaks the word. "He surely has a beautiful tenor voice of rich quality, and his command of breath power enables him to phrase perfectly, while his enunciation is beyond reproach." Mr. Williams, who came from London to sing at this festival.

Mrs. Elder-Kelsey is considered by all critics one of the finest artists of the day. Her voice is rich, round and full, thoroughly well placed, with pure intonation. She sings with exquisite art and most excellent taste, and although she has only been in New York a short time she is a favorite concert singer and has come to the very front of young American singers.

Miss Corinne Welsh was heard at the festival two years ago. Her voice has improved and broadened very much since then, and she is considered the leading concert contralto in New York. On account of her great range and the peculiar richness of her low tones, Mrs. Welsh is particularly adapted for oratorio work and is eminently successful.

George C. Carrie is the tenor, who coming as a stranger to New York a short time ago, has established himself as a favorite. He was for five years one of the leading tenors in St. Louis, but after his return from study in Paris under Sebrillo he came to New York. His voice is of the best quality, strong and true, and he will surely prove one of the features of the festival.

Signor Salvatore Nunzio, the celebrated Italian tenor, will captivate all audiences. His naturally beautiful voice with its pure Italian training mark him as a singer; his temperament shows in his every gesture. His control of breath and wonderful phrasing astonish all who listen and he receives repeated encores after every appearance. He may well be considered the sensation of the concert stage today in New York.

Frank Croton, the bass, has a voice and temperament entirely suited to oratorio music. His voice is of great resonance, and he uses it with precision. He has been a great favorite at all oratorio performances this season, and will sing the bass role in "The Creation."

Mr. Chapman and the committee feel sure that these singers will commend themselves to the music loving public, and that the course tickets will be largely purchased by the regular patrons. The orchestra will be up to the highest standard possible. The choruses will consist of the best of the festival of each member helps to make the great success which attends these festival occasions. A new interest and enthusiasm has arisen since the announcement of Madame Eames' coming, and it is confidently expected that this festival of 1905 will exceed all others in numbers of attendance, and enthusiasm.

Those who have participated in the annual festivals of music in Bangor and Portland will testify to the fact that one of the pleasantest features of the event is the meeting of the singers and friends. One of the dearest has been that time so precious, every moment so filled with rehearsals and concerts that there was little time for sociability. The coming of the great prima donna, Madame Emma Eames, back to her native state for the first time since she attained her world-wide fame, seems a suitable occasion for a combination of the social element with the musical as all will delight to meet and welcome her.

Commissioner Sargent plans to go to New Hampshire and Vermont to study permanent highway construction. He selects these two states in preference to Massachusetts because he believes the conditions more resemble those in Maine.

"What was the first town or city to invite you to visit them and look over the roads?" he was asked.

"Auburn," he replied. "I got the invitation soon after the appointment was made. Since then I have received numerous invitations and shall accept them as fast as possible. The work is important and I shall move slowly so as to make no mistakes. We want to build something in this department that will be appreciated by the people in years to come."

"I shall try to create interest in good roads among people in all parts of the state. This will be done through the newspapers largely."

of the festivals should be inaugurated by her.

Senator Hale will make a speech at the afternoon reception in Bangor, Oct. 5.

THE HIGHWAY COMMISSION

Mr. Sargent First Incumbent of New Office Outlines His Plans.

Paul D. Sargent of Machias, Maine's first state highway commissioner, was in Auburn the other day, and upon being interviewed by the Lewiston Journal, gave his program of action, insofar as he has perfected it. Although a young man, Commissioner Sargent has had wide experience and is well qualified for the work which he is to inaugurate in this state. Gov. Cobb selected Mr. Sargent because of his ability and his fitness for the position.

Commissioner Sargent has been located in his Augusta office at the capitol for sometime and his clerk is busy doing the work outlined by the commissioner.

One of the things which his office is now doing, is securing figures showing the amount of money spent in this state for road repairing and the number of miles of highway on which it is expended. He does this by communicating with the town directly. The board of assessors has secured the amount of money expended on highways heretofore.

According to their report one and one-quarter millions of dollars was spent last year on the highways of this state," said Commissioner Sargent. "That is a large sum of money and it seems if there ought to be some showing to show for it, but there isn't. The figures will be equalled if not exceeded this year and unless the road authorities can be interested in making some permanent improvements, the money will be buried with only a temporary result."

"I believe and shall urge upon the road commissioners that the building of a small piece of permanent road, each year, even if the other highways are allowed to go unrepaired, is better than putting all of the money into temporary repairs. If we build a short strip this year and button a piece onto the end of it next year, it will be only a short time before we shall have a complete system of good roads."

"The customary method of road building in this state is to go over the highways in the spring with a road machine, turning up all the mud in the gutters into the center of the road. This makes an even coating and a good road while it lasts, but the fall rains and frosts carry it all back into the gutters again and it is ready to turn back into the middle of the road next year."

"A principle that I shall always keep in mind is, 'do what we can and do it right.'"

"What do you think of the plan to use jail labor on permanent highway construction?" was asked of Commissioner Sargent.

"That is an important matter and I should not want to say without giving the subject more study. I find there are many different opinions about the advisability of it."

"The law creating the state highway commissioner gives him very little power. His duty is to give advice when it is solicited, and not to run over the subject matter. I find there are many different opinions about the advisability of it."

Three handsome deer-heads mounted by Crosby of Bangor for Libby Paladino, have been on exhibition at the Kalkhof Furniture Store this week. One of the deer was shot by Libby on his hunting trip last fall.

C. E. Goulding has gone to Stockton Springs to see what can be done about cornering some building contracts. It is a certainty that there is to be a building boom in the up-river town and Mr. Goulding is gunning for his share of the work.

Grand Master Leon S. Merrill of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows has appointed Tuesday, June 13, as Memorial Day for the order. All subordinate and Rebekah lodges which have suffered loss of membership by death are requested to assemble on that date.

The steamboat from Boston Wednesday morning brought a large quantity of materials to be used by the state in transposing the Widow's Island hospital into a home for convalescent insane. Among the material was a large engine to be used in furnishing power for the electric light plant, etc. The changes in the hospital are to be made by the W. H. Glover Co. and will be under the direction of M. S. Campbell of Augusta.

One of Thorndike & Hix's horses, attached to a coal wagon, did a quick sprint around the corner of Main and Lindsey Sts. Thursday forenoon, separating himself from the wagon and sliding into a delivery team commanded by Jesse Shepherd. Jesse was indulging in peaceful day dreams when the climax arrived, and his famous leap for life brought him into The Courier-Gazette office doorway on four feet. The runaway was stopped at the Brook.

The Elton hotel in Waterbury, Conn., was opened last Saturday evening, and over 2000 persons were present at the brilliant inauguration. The new hotel is one of the best in the New England states and that it is to be a success seems guaranteed from the fact that the manager is Almon C. Judd, who will be pleasantly remembered here as the manager of the Samoset a few seasons ago. Here's wishing the Elton and Mr. Judd a prosperous future.

There are 18 inmates at the almshouse, including a woman and four children who are to be cared for otherwise as soon as arrangements can be made. The family came from New York state some time ago, and the husband has steady employment here. The couple separated on account of some domestic trouble, and the wife and children went to the almshouse, where they are proving an unlooked for burden upon the city. The spring planting is nearly completed at the poor farm. The prospects are that there will be an exceptionally fine hay crop.

A number of Italians, said to be members of the Lineworkers' Union, attacked a house on Lime street, Tuesday morning, when some of the foreigners employed at the Point kilns made their home. The windows were smashed and the rally did not adjourn until the non-union foreigners sallied forth and discharged firearms. No one was wounded, and the first clash of the strike had more comedy than tragedy in it. It was indicative, however, of what might happen if the gentlemen from Italy's sunny clime should happen to get "beered up."

Frank German and Frank Larrabee, two of the lime strikers, were arrested Wednesday night on the charge of threatening and intimidating a kindergarten named Edward Crouse. The complaint alleges that Crouse was told he would not come out alive if he went back to work for the Rockland-Rockport Lime Co. Neither side was ready for trial Wednesday night, but in order that the men might have an opportunity to get bail, Judge Campbell obligingly had them arraigned. Bail in the sum of $500 each was furnished by William J. Frye and Lucinda C. Foss. Judge Campbell read the statutes bearing on this matter and offered a word of personal caution. He said that the strikers must be guided by the advice of their leader, Mr. Harriman, and refrain from any form of violence. "If a man wants to work for five cents a day, he has that privilege," said Judge Campbell. "This is a free country and no man has a right to interfere with another on that ground. If you violate this law you will certainly be punished." The formal trial of German and Larrabee was assigned for 9 o'clock this Friday forenoon. The hearing was then postponed to 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon, in order that Senator Staples might be present as counsel for the men.

The Shaw Sisters have moved their millinery stock to Spear block, over O. E. Blackington & Son's. The store they vacated is now being fitted up for the fruit and confectionery business by A. B. Stevenson.

Friends of Miss Martha B. May who are saving votes for her in the Boston Herald contest will be interested to know that in one of the daily issues to be published between now and June 11 each copy of the paper will be good for five votes, while one of the Sunday editions will be good for 10 votes.

The Herald takes this method of adding a little gaiety to its great school contest. The date of the bargain day extra is kept dark.

The U. S. Cruising Squadron is now expected to rendezvous in Rockland harbor during the months of July and August. The Rickers of the Samoset are said to be using their efforts to induce the warships to come here, and the officers are likely to need a deal of coaxing as they have only the most enjoyable recollections of their former stay here.

In business circles the news is greeted with much enthusiasm, for the presence of the warships adds to the gaiety of the city and the size of the business treasury. No class of people in the world spends money more freely than Uncle Sam's sailor lads, and Rockland stands ready to give value received.

SELLING ADULTERATED CREAM OF TARTAR.

A. B. Ryan was fined $25 by Judge Adams in the Boston police court for selling impure cream of tartar. The stuff was put up in packages and labeled "pure." State Analyst Lythgoe found that it contained calcium phosphate, calcium acid phosphate, and other matter. The analyst stated that while calcium acid phosphate mixed with soda would give off some leavening gas, and thereby mislead the user, the other ingredients were simply makeweights. Calcium sulphate is ground gypsum, which is plaster of Paris. Ryan had been disposing of this mixture for cream of tartar, and while, and had been fined once before for the same offense.

A great deal of this kind of material is sold throughout New England under the name of cream of tartar, which it resembles so closely in appearance as to deceive any one who cannot analyze. Housekeepers use it with soda to raise biscuits, cakes, etc., in ignorance of the fact that it carries to the food a substance unfit for the stomach, plaster of Paris, and that its leavening property is slight.

We are told that there is but little pure cream of tartar sold at the shops. It is safer, as well as more economical, for the housewife to procure a reputable brand of tartar baking powder for raising her biscuits and cakes, as the official analyses show that the ingredients used in them are chemically pure.

Miss Grace Taylor caught two salmon and a large pickerel in Mirror Lake, Wednesday, being the only member of the party who caught anything.

Pire was set to a pile of rubbish on Railroad Street last night, but was discovered by boys in season to avert heavy damage.

Rev. E. H. Chapin went to South Hope Thursday, where he officiated at the funeral of the late Mrs. Clifford Payson. A week ago that day he officiated at the funeral of Mrs. Payson's husband.

The summer train service, which goes into effect Monday morning, will be exactly the same as last year. The week-day trains will leave at 8 and 10 a. m., 1:40 and 3 p. m., 5:35 and 8:35 p. m.

At the meeting of Claremont Commandery Monday night, the St. John's Day committee will make its report. The Commandery will also consider the matter of entertaining the Houlton Commandery, which will be in the city over Sunday June 25. A full attendance of the members is requested.

Col. E. K. Gould, who was the Memorial orator in Pittsfield this year was listened to by an audience that completely filled the large hall, and he was given a very flattering reception which was marked at the close of the exercises by three hearty cheers in his honor. Col. Gould made a side trip to Newport where he was met by a brass band and the Sons of Veterans camp.

He made a brief address in connection with the speaker of the evening. Col. Gould is a great favorite with the Grand Army veterans and Sons in that part of the state.

While the complete itinerary of the St. John's Day pilgrimage has not been arranged, it is settled that Claremont Commandery will leave this city on a special train at 7 a. m. being joined by Dunlap Commandery in Bath at 9 o'clock. The special will then continue its journey to Lewiston where the visiting Sir Knights are to be guests of the day. An outing at Lake Grove and a big banquet in Masonic hall are among the attractions outlined by Lewiston Commandery. The sojourning Sir Knights will leave their headquarters at 10:40, arriving in Rockland on the early morning pullman.

Members of the Waymouth celebration committee, and all others interested therein, are urged to attend a meeting in Watts hall Thomaston, Saturday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock. J. E. Moore, chairman of the committee, states that British Consul Keating will be present at the celebration with his yacht, and Dudley E. de Chair, naval attaché at Washington has also announced his intention of being present. The British consular representative, undoubtedly, by a warship. Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain will speak at the unveiling of the Waymouth tablet, together with Gov. Cobb.

Quite a number of the lime strikers are securing employment in other cities and towns, and the result is noticeable in the decreased attendance at the union meetings in Jones block. Other members are making deep-sea fishing expeditions with profitable results, the product of their trips being distributed among the needy members. Vice President Caldwell is quoted as saying that the prospects for the strikers look brighter every day and that there will speedily be a settlement, but it is not stated upon what authority this is based. The lime manufacturers are operating nearly all their kilns and are getting satisfactory results.

"Seven years ago today we went into camp at Chickamauga," said agent Weeks of the Eastern Steamship Co., Wednesday, referring to the experience of Co. H, in the Spanish war. The boys departed with every expectation (and, it may be added, with hope) that they would see active service at the front. This privilege was denied them, but on the famous southern battleground many of them fell victims to a disease which still mangles and maims, and two were sacrificed on the altar of patriotism. The seven years have passed away rapidly, eradicating many of the unpleasant memories and leaving the happier recollections of that memorable summer.

There was an unusual amount of interest around the Abbott wharf Tuesday due to the launching of a handsome power boat built by Johnson Staples Sons for Frank M. Randall, a wealthy New York furniture manufacturer. The launch is equipped with a 15-horse power Jager motor, and has the following dimensions: Length 35 feet, beam 9 feet, depth 4 feet. She is finished in mahogany, oak and cypress, and the excellence of the builder's skill is well demonstrated by their work on this craft. The boat has a house 12 feet long, toilet room, etc., and can accommodate a pleasure party of eight. She will be taken to New York by Capt. John Stearns and Harry T. Rising, who may leave on their journey Saturday. The first of the week Johnson Staples Sons shipped two ship's boats, 15 and 12 feet respectively, to Capt. S. G. Hopper of the schooner William J. Leonard.

It is now generally admitted that the interests of our city will be greatly improved by the influence of the gospel supported at the north, that the city needs a church there is conceded. It has become a common interest. It will be a free home with welcome to all. Now one of the strongest helps to secure this modern and convenient church, is to remember the services now held there. To stay at home or go elsewhere is to defeat the best interests for any church work. We commend the loyalty and interest that has led so good congregations to support the interest by their presence in winter. Let us work for Jesus summer.

This is the order of services in the Methodist church next Sunday: At 10:30 a. m. Rev. Robert Sutcliffe will give an address on "A Memorable Meal." The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered at 11:30. It is hoped that every member of the church will make a special effort to be present. Sunday school at 12 o'clock. A Record Breaker on Gas Stoves for R. H. House Superintendent of Gas Co.

Mr. House is an expert on electric line construction. He has also proved himself an expert gas man. Since March 1, 1905, he has received orders for 69 gas ranges. He has received orders for 24 gas ranges on Camden street, between Achorn street and Waldo Avenue. People are fast learning that a gas range is a household necessity as well as a luxury. Well may be said: "What is a home without a gas range?"

One of the hinds from the village coming around the corner of the house in their direction caused Margaret to pause, the unspoken words on her lips. Much embarrassed at coming upon the person of Sir Godfrey La Fabienne so unexpectedly, the boy hesitated, pulled his forelock bashfully, then stood still, uncertain whether to advance or retreat. Margaret, seeing his confusion, beckoned him to approach.

"What is this errand, good lad?"

"This thy trinket, Mistress Mayland, that my granther, Adam Browdie, the goldsmith, hath mended for thee, an' with your leave, mistress"—timidly giving her the parcel—"he did instruct me to say that he would ha' mended it before had it not been for the inconvenience of a sprain."

La Fabienne, who had unfastened the wrappings, was now examining the workmanship critically.

"This finely wrought and jointed together skillfully, Margaret," he said. "Here, lad," throwing Christopher a gold piece; "here's a coin for thy granfather's trouble."

The boy, much pleased, caught the gold piece, doffed his cap and walked away. Just then a flash of lightning streaked the sky that by now was thickly covered with black clouds, followed by a low, rumbling sound of thunder, causing the boy to pause and look about him doubtfully.

Margaret, who had risen, called to him to remain; to go back and wait in the kitchen with the maid until the storm was over, but Christopher shook his head and, muttering if he delayed, the lightning would be angry if he delayed, ran hurriedly to the stable, sprang over it and, running to the path, followed the way home would be the quickest way home, plunged into the thicket. Hardly was he under the shelter of the trees when a pattering sound was heard, and the rain beat down in great drops. Then the wind rose in a wild fury, the tall trees bent and swayed, rustling with its rough strength, and the grass and vines were swept down even with the earth.

Christopher, holding his jacket close about him, with his cap in his hand, walked on quickly, inwardly congratulating himself upon the fact that he had been wise enough to seek the sheltered path through the woods instead of the open roadway that was unprotected by high trees. Little, sharp flashes of lightning appeared constantly, and the thunder was incessant, low, threatening, ominous. Innocent of his danger and not understanding the harsh, growling sounds of warning from the heavens, Christopher proceeded on his way. Now the clouds had grown so thick and black that the forest was almost as dark as night, and the rain fell in blinding torrents. Soon a sharp flash of lightning ran zigzag through the sky, then a clap of thunder louder than the report of a cannon resounded from end to end of the village.

Christopher gave a wild scream of terror and stood still, uncertain whether to advance or go back. Although the forest was familiar playground to him, he appeared to lose his way and staggered on blindly until, a long, vivid flash of lightning illuminating his path, he found his bearings, and, remembering the cave on the other side of the precipice now near at hand, he resolved to seek safety and shelter there. With the wind and rain beating him backward, he climbed the steep ascent, clinging with his hands and feet to the roots and bushes in his way until he reached the top, where was a precipice, with water rushing in wild turmoil fifty feet beneath. Now the lightning was so near it seemed to be playing through the forest in long flashes of brilliant light, and the dark clouds almost touched the tops of the trees. Suddenly, with greater intensity, the wind rushed shrilly over the mountain.

The boy, pale with terror, on the edge of the precipice, wound his arms about the trunk of a tall oak tree, clinging to it for support and protection. He dared not move another step, and all thought of reaching the cave was abandoned. Another blinding flash, followed by two more in quick succession! The poor young lad, alone on his high height in the midst of the awful disturbances of the elements, frantic with terror, sent forth screams of agony as the wind and rain defied human ears to hear about their boisterous noise and din. Then the clouds opened, showing light like the blast from a furnace, and—oh, God!—a peal of thunder so loud that the village people with prayers on their lips fell on their knees, raising their white faces to heaven.

The tall oak tree was struck and rent asunder; flames shot up, were put out by the heavy rifts of rain, and clouds of steaming smoke filled the forest. The large tree staggered, then fell with a sharp noise of cracking branches that drowned the sickening sound of the dull thud of Christopher's body as it fell lifeless from the edge of the precipice into the swirling, tumbling rapids.

CHAPTER XV.

SOON the storm was spent, and the sun, weary of hiding its hot face, burst forth through the drifting clouds that even now were dark and moved away with low, thunderous growls.

Margaret, who, with Sir Godfrey, had remained in the sitting room, was now alone during the awful outbreak of the elements, now rose from her seat and, crossing to the window, threw open the lattice, saying with a little shiver: "Heaven be thanked! 'Tis over, with no harm done. That last peal of thunder had a murderous sound that filled my soul with apprehension. God keep all travelers and dumb animals safe!" she added seriously.

La Fabienne came to her side.

"If my bird is afraid of storms," he observed smilingly, "she should not have made her nest on the topmost peak of a mountain, so high that when the clouds grow angry and fall low she is in peril in the midst of the commotion."

"Godfrey!"—Margaret turned her sweet, serious face to his—"thou knowest that thy bird rests not lightly in her mountain nest. Although she is free to fly hither and thither as she listeth in all the air about her. Oh, bonny Paris," she exclaimed, throwing out her hand with a swift, dramatic gesture, "right willingly would I exchange the freedom of my village nest for captivity in a cage were it hung in the sky's blue!"

La Fabienne smiled tenderly at her earnestness as he encircled her with his arm.

"Sweet love, by my faith, thou wilt exchange," he said. "Alas! a cage, not of gilt bars, but a huge pile of stone and mortar, with doors and windows, is in readiness for thee. From it thou art ever free to come and go, the only bars that will ever seek to restrain thee being these two arms that now intertwine so lovingly about thee."

"And prithers, happily will I stay close to thy strong protection. Oh, my dear love," she cried, with soft eagerness, "dost know how much thou art to me? Who else in all this world have I? I love thee, Godfrey!"

For answer he clasped her closer to his heart.

His steps were heard and, looking from the window, they saw Hetty Taunston, a white sunbonnet in her hand, running up the path. With a cry of pleasure, Margaret advanced to meet her and, taking her hand, led her into the room.

"Hetty! Stranger! Welcome!" she cried gayly. "Methought thou hadst forsaken the coast."

Hetty made a shy courtesy to La Fabienne, who bowed in his most stately fashion, and said in a low, breathless voice, "Mother hast grown strangely stout of late, dear Margaret, and forbids me to visit thee, for what reason I know not."

The smile on Margaret's face faded.

"An' thou didst come now with her consent?" she asked.

"Nay, sweet cousin. In the cool of the morning mother rode down the mountain to Brother Haggott's, there to spend the night, so—with a little loss of her head and a light laugh—"me thought not to lose the chance to get a glimpse of the unknown to her."

"I truth, sweet"—Margaret stroked her soft hair fondly—"as thy disobeience has discovered I will put thy people against thee sorely."

Hetty sighed.

"I wot not why my mother is so hard with me. Happen I put a small dower in my hair she is greatly angered. Dost think such ornament sinful, Margaret?" she asked wistfully.

Her cousin smiled, and La Fabienne broke into a hearty laugh of amusement.

"Poor little Mistriss Hetty!" he exclaimed. "Dost never have other pleasure than slinging palms in the church?"

"Nay, unless 'tis walking home from prayers o' nights," she replied innocently.

Then, as he laughed again, this time more loudly, Hetty became conscious, blushed and hung her head. The sight of her pretty confusion touched Sir Godfrey.

"Here, Margaret, string thy lute," he cried, "and Mistriss Hetty and I will tread a measure."

Margaret, smiling, touched the cords gently, and La Fabienne, bowing low, offered his hand to Hetty, who when she understood his meaning shrunk back in alarm, with white face and parted lips.

"Nay, nay, sir," she stammered. "I must refuse thee. In our belief dancing is a sin that sends the soul to eternal punishment, for so our preacher hath ever taught us, and my brother Josiah would cast me out of the house an he heard I indulged in such practices."

Sir Godfrey, inclining his head courteously, walked away, and Margaret thrust down her lute, interposing hastily to cover Hetty's embarrassment.

INTERESTING LETTER

WRITTEN BY A NOTABLE WOMAN

Mrs. Sarah Kellogg of Denver, Colorado, of the Woman's Relief Corps, Sends Thanks to Mrs. Pinkham.

The following letter was written by Mrs. Kellogg, 1625 Lincoln Ave., Denver, Colo., to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.: Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

I was troubled with a tumor, which kept growing, causing me intense agony and general depression. I was unable to attend to my house work, and life became a burden to me. I was confined for days to my bed, lost my appetite, my courage and all hope. I could not bear to think of an operation, and in my distress I tried every remedy which I thought would be of any use to me, and reading of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to sick women decided to give it a trial. I felt so discouraged that I had little hope of recovery, and when I began to feel better, after the second week, thought it only meant temporary relief; but to my great surprise I found that I kept gaining, while the tumor lessened in size.

The Compound continued to build up my general health and the tumor seemed to be absorbed, until, in seven months, the tumor was entirely gone and I a well woman. I am so thankful for my recovery that I ask you to publish my letter in newspapers, so other women may know of the wonderful curative powers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

When women are troubled with irregular or painful menstruation, weakness, leucorrhea, displacement of the uterus, inflammation of the ovaries, backache, flatulence, general debility, indigestion and nervous prostration, they should remember there is a certain and true remedy. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once removes such trouble.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles. Refuse to buy any other medicine.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Health is too valuable to risk in experiments with unknown and untried medicines or methods of treatment. Remember that it is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that is curing women, and do not allow a druggist to sell you anything else in its place.

What all these men, that thou wouldst ask a Puritan maid to dance? Thou must excuse him, Hetty, as he knows not the pious customs of our mountain people. Come, dear Godfrey, read to us from thy new volume of Will Shakespeare. 'Twill delight sweet Hetty, who hath great love for poetry, and as for me," she added, with a smile, "thou knowest the sound of thy voice is ever music in mine ears."

In reading and pleasant converse the afternoon passed so rapidly that it was after milking time when Hetty bethought herself of the lateness of the hour. Hurriedly saying her farewells, she ran down the roadway to the fence, sprang over the stile and went hastily in the direction of the pasture, where the cows, unaccustomed to such irregularity, had assembled at the gates, bellowing low plaintive calls for release.

Breathless and panting, Hetty let down the bars, picked up a stick, proceeded to urge the cattle to a greater rate of speed than was usually necessary. If her mother had returned unexpectedly she was lost! Frightened at the thought, she gave the first cow in the line a sharp prod with the stick, who, not accustomed to such rough treatment, looked back at her reproachfully, then galloped awkwardly ahead of the others. The cows once in the barn, it was a matter of a few moments to collect the pails and stool for milking.

Other evenings Hetty sat down to this occupation cheerfully, usually singing lightly to the accompaniment of the soft sound of the milk straining into the pail, but tonight the task was distasteful to her. She took her seat with a jerk and exclaimed irritably when the cow, in order to brush a fly from its back, whisked its tail behind her face. "Keep still, I want mine eyes scratched out of my head!"

Although under the skillful manipulations of her hands the pails filled rapidly, Hetty's thoughts were not upon her occupation, but were over the meadows at the Mayland farmhouse, with La Fabienne and Margaret. The wistful and romantic vein that ran deep in this girl's nature had been touched by the afternoon's entertainment. The handsome dress of Sir Godfrey and his gallant bearing, combined with the exquisite beauty of Margaret in her soft flowing gown of white linen, caused Hetty's little heart to ache with sympathetic yearning.

"Was ever seen such a bonny pair o' lovers?" she thought. "Such trust, such evidence of love in every action! Ah, lackaday, woe is me!"

She sighed hopelessly.

"No lover more gallant than a Puritan farmer, and instead of a lute a milk pail!"

At last her task finished, she carried the heavy pails to the dairy.

"Methought Sir Godfrey regarded me with a pleasant gaze," she said to herself as she rested on a churn near the door.

Then as a sudden thought seemed to strike her she raised her face quickly, her eyes burning with brightness.

"As I had had the roses in my hair, and had worn my new lace tucker, mayhap he would ha' admired me more," she said. "As 'tis perchance, he might speak o' me to a comrade high in favor at the French court who would fall in love with his description and come bravely here to woo me."

The thought was so pleasant to the imaginative, romantic soul of little Hetty that, forgetting to pour the milk into the pans and set them away for the cream to rise, she sat on the edge of the churn, her head resting against the wall, lost in her rosy dream of the future.

With her hand in her imagination, Hetty's who were so full of light blue velvet trimmed with silver braid, she was just making a low courtesy before the king of France when her illusions were roughly dispelled by the loud, hearty voice of Simon Kempster, who having seen his adored Hetty enter the dairy, followed in her wake to have a chat with her. From the excessive heat and the exercise of carrying a sack of potatoes a long distance Simon's face was red and perspiring; his rough suit of homespun, unbuttoned at the throat, soiled and shabby, hung loosely on his sturdy figure, and his broad forehead had made of reds was torn and broken at the edges. He laid down the sack and entered.

Startled from her brilliant dreams by Simon's appearance, Hetty's thoughts fled from the court of the king of France and fastened themselves upon matters of the present, the most important of which were the full milk pails. Springing off the churn and returning Simon's pleased grin with an absent smile of greeting, she proceeded to fill the row of pewter pans with the white foaming milk.

Fanning himself with his broken hat, Simon watched her from his place at the door with admiring eyes. It occurred to him that Hetty had never before looked so pretty. The red color in her cheeks had heightened; her eyes were brighter; she held her little head higher, and in his estimation went about her homely task in the same manner as would have a queen. Looking over his white throat, he thought of the silver belt lying on her fair bosom that he had given her and that she had received with so much pleasure—a sweet secret safe between him and Hetty—and his honest heart gave a great throb.

Stepping to her side, he asked her for a cup of milk. Hetty's pleasant after-dinner mood, however, was not in sympathy with her delay and angry at the sight of the unfinished chores, he paced up and down the room restlessly, pausing at frequent intervals to look out of the doorway with nervous anxiety toward the forest footpath.

"This passing strange," he muttered. "The lad's never done the like before. If he'd a thought of fear I'd say the storm delayed him, but such things as thunder showers, 'ud ne'er bother Christopher. Nay," shaking his head, "the lad's willful and careth not that the chores are undone."

Just then a shadow fell across the threshold. Adam came forward expectantly.

"Ah, bless me, Mistriss Taunston!" he exclaimed in surprise. "Methought 'twas Christopher. Happen didst see that good for naught as thou didst come through the forest?"

"I saw him not, good Adam," the dame replied. "I walked rapidly, and I am in haste to reach the house of Sister Henning, that my son brought me word an hour since had been visited by the Lord with an affliction of numbness, so I bethought me that my prayers and services might be of use at the bedside. Did thy lad stay away?"

"'Twas after the hour of noon that I sent him to the Mayland farm with a trinket that I mended for the young mistress," he replied. "I truth I wot not ha' been in good good haste to send it had not thy good son Josiah warned me of possible evil contained in the packet, symbol of the golden cross."

The woman threw out her hand in a manner that suggested hopeless resignation at the rashness of the old man's act, addressing him harshly with tragic earnestness, said: "Thou didst send thy lad with that emblem of the black art, Adam Browdie. Forsooth," with a solemn shake of her head, "I am in haste to reach the house of Sister Henning, that my son brought me word an hour since had been visited by the Lord with an affliction of numbness, so I bethought me that my prayers and services might be of use at the bedside. WAGES AND PRICES.

Good Wages of Greater Importance Than Low Cost of Living.

Secretary Shaw's speech at Wilmington lends itself easily to misrepresentation. A local Democratic paper put over it the headline, "Living Expenses Should Be High." Secretary Shaw said nothing of the kind. What he did say was that "employment for all our people at a given wage, with living expenses high, is preferable to employment for only one-half our people with living expenses however cheap." Will any Democratic paper dispute that?

Secretary Shaw's speech was useful for its emphasis upon the community of interests. It is the habit of superficial or partisan observers to argue that the prosperity of the farmer has nothing to do with the well being of the artisan, and vice versa. But Secretary Shaw wisely insists that the two are interdependent. If the workman earns higher wages, he can afford more and better food, better clothes and a more comfortable home, and he furnishes, therefore, a better market for the farmer. On the other hand, higher prices for the farmer's cattle and corn mean more lumber for farm buildings, more barbed wire for fences and better clothes and furniture, and this again means more work and better wages for the artisan.

The American policy of protection is impracticable because the American people understand this. They cannot be fooled by free trade orators or Democratic platforms. They know that the protective tariff promotes the welfare of the whole people by stimulating and steadying the market for American products, and that those interests which do not appear in the schedules are nevertheless encouraged and strengthened by it.

It takes a good while for even so plain a truth as this to percolate the consciousness of Democratic leaders. But there is evidence that it is doing so in the comparatively mild and halting declarations of Democratic platforms this year upon the tariff issue.—Boston Journal.
