WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, July 31.—In spite of the rosy reports which Panama Canal officials

give as to the progress of the work,

there are many persons here in Washington who, having looked into the situation with their own eyes, assert that if the big ditch is to be finished in this generation, it will be by Chinese labor. The Jamaican negro does not thrive under the sanitary conditions of such civilization as exists on the isthmus, and according to many is not so satisfactory, and certainly not so cheap, as the Chinaman. In view of these assertions, information just received in consular reports concerning the wily oriental as a laborer in Samoa

may be of interest.

According to these reports, Samoa is one of the great problems in the security of efficient labor. The other problem, by the way, is the destruction caused to crops by rats. However, of all laborers, the Chinese, of whom there are now some 40,000 in the island, give the greatest satisfaction.

They are brought on from China under contract, the round trip costing the employer about $50 for each man, and engaged for three years at the princely remuneration of two dollars and a half per month, with board, lodging and clothing. It is not so surprising, therefore, to hear that John Chinaman is not entirely satisfied with this pay, and that there is some doubt as to whether he will renew his contract, which, de-satisfaction or no dissatisfaction, he has no thought of breaking at twice present sum. But, compared with what

Uncle Sam is paying on the isthmus, this figure is vast. Moreover, the Chinese laborer is healthy and a hard worker, and with all these facts in mind it is not surprising that many

Canal theorists assert that China will yet furnish the muscle for digging the big ditch, while America furnishes the brains and the money.

Now that Theodore Roosevelt has told Europe that our food products will be produced under sanitary conditions,

William Hohenzollern acknowledges

the fact that America is the greatest same assurance as to German products. This is a question of considerable importance, in view of information

just received by Bureau of Manufactures, showing that however bad conditions may be here, Germany, being tarted with the same stick, is in no way of raising their food products.

In 1905, the last year for which figures are given, there were in Germany over

6000 prosecutions for the adulteration of food products. Many large and reputable German firms, it was discovered, were privately carrying on special departments of their factories where regularly adulterated their food products.

The adulteration of butter in an almost incredible manner has been shown up in Berlin, says the report, as was the manufacture in Strasbourg and elsewhere of sausages from spoiled meats,

colored and doctored with chemicals.

Wines, chocolates, cocoas, and medicines have been found to contain injuriously and dangerous substances used in adulteration, and so the list continues. In view of these revelations, as well as those made in England, Europe's virtuous indignation over the condition of this country's food industries becomes something of a joke.

REGULAR SEASON AT FARWELL.

The regular season at the Farwell

open house opened on Aug. 13 and there is a probability that the Park Theatre may close Saturday, Aug. 11, as the town is hardly large enough to support

two theatrical enterprises at the same time. The regular Park season closes

all over New England two weeks later,

so it would only be two weeks of time

from the regular closing. Edmond K.

Moulton will bring to Rockland one of the largest stock companies ever seen here. The company consists of 20 people. The principals are Walter Woods,

Leigh Delaney and Danny Simonds.

And speaking of Danny Simonds we will state that the management has been promised that Mr. Simonds will appear at the Oakland Park Theatre

during the week of Aug. 6. This company will arrive in Rockland, July 30

for two weeks rehearsing. Mr. Simonds will be well remembered as the centric dancer with the Teddy Roosevelt makeup for the finish of his act.

No better place to go than Oakland for Sunday afternoon and evening.

TO REPUBLICANS:

We are anxious to have every

Republican in close touch, and working in harmony with the Republican National Congressional Committee in favor of the election of a Republican Congress.

The Congressional campaign must be based on the administrative and legislative record of the party, and,

that being so, Theodore Roosevelt's personality must be a central figure and his achievements a central thought in the campaign.

We desire to maintain the work of this campaign with popular subscriptions of One Dollar each from Republicans. To each subscriber we will send the Republican National Campaign Text Book and all documents issued by the Committee.

Help us achieve a great victory.

CALICO

Who Traveled With a Round Top

By SEWELL FORD

Copyright, 1903, by Charles Scribner's Sons

SOMETHING there was about Calico's markings which stuck in one's mind, as does a haunting melody, in a melody, but forgotten. Surely the pattern was obtrusive enough to halt attention, yet its vagaries were so unexpected, so surprising, that even as you looked you might hesitate at declaring whether it was his withers or his flanks which were carrot red and if he had four white stockings or only three. It was safer simply to say that he was white where he was not red and red where he was not white. Moreover, his was a vivid coat.

Altogether Calico was a horse to be remarked and to be remembered. Yet, and again yet, Calico was not wholly to blame for his many faults. Farm breeding, which was more or less responsible for his bizarre appearance, should also bear the burden of his failings. As a colt he had been the marvel of the country, from Orono to Hermon Center. He had been petted, teased, humored, exhibited, coddled, fooled with—everything save properly trained and broken.

So he grew up a trace shirker and a halter puller, with disposition, temperament and general behavior as uneven as his coloring.

"The most good for nothing animal I ever wasted grain on!" declared Uncle Enoch.

For the better part of four unproductive years had the life of Calico run to commonplace. Then, early one June morning, came an hour big with events. Being the high horse in Uncle Enoch's pair, Calico caught first glimpse of the weird procession which met them as they turned into the Bangor road at Sherburne's Corners.

Now, it was Calico's habit to be on the watch for unusual sights, and when he saw them to stick his ears forward, throw his head up, snort nervously and crowd against the pole. Generally he got one leg over a fence. There was a white boulder at the top of Poonoosue hill which Calico never passed without going through some of these maneuvers.

"Hi-lish there! So-o-o! Darn yer crazy quilt hide! Body'd think yer never see that stn afore in yer life. Gee-long a-way!" Uncle Enoch would growl, accenting his words by jerking the lines.

A scarecrow in the middle of a cornfield, an auction block tacked to a stump, an old hat stuffing a vacant pane and proclaiming the shiftness of the Annotok Billings, would serve without anything else offered excuse for skittishness. Even sober Old Jeff, the old horse, sometimes caught the infection for a moment. He would prick up his ears and look inquiringly at the suspected object, but so soon as he saw what it was down went his head sheepishly, as if he was ashamed of having been again tricked.

This morning, however, it was no false alarm. When Old Jeff was roused out of his accustomed jog by Calico's nervous snorts he looked up to see such a spectacle as he had never seen in all his goings and comings up and down the Bangor road. Looming out of the mist was a six horse team hitched to the most foreign looking rig one could well imagine. It had something of the look of a preposterous lay cart, with the ends of blue painted poles sticking out in front and trailing behind. Following this was a great, white swathed wheeled box drawn by four horses. It was certainly a curious affair, whatever it was, but neither Calico nor Old Jeff gave it much heed, nor did they waste a glance on the distant tail of the procession, for behind the wheeled box was a thing which held their gaze.

In the gray 4 o'clock light it seemed like an enormous cloud that rolled merrily forward; not as a cow walks, however, but with a swaying, heaving motion like nothing commonly seen on a Maine highway. Instinctively both horses thrust their muzzles toward the thing and sniffed. Without doubt Old Jeff was frightened. Perhaps not for nine generations had any of his ancestors caught a whiff of that peculiar terrifying scent of which every horse inherits knowledge and dread. As for Calico, he had no need of such spur as inherited terror. He had fear-someness enough of his own to send him rearing and pawing the air until the whiffletrees rapped his knees. Old Jeff did not rear. He started and snorted and trembled. When he felt his mate spring forward in the traces he went with him, ready to do anything in order to get away from that heaving, swaying thing which was coming toward them.

"Whoa, ye pesky tools! Whens, do rot ye!" Uncle Enoch, wakened from the half doze which he had been taking on the wagon seat, now began to saw on the lines. His shouts seemed to have aroused the heaving thing, for it answered with a horrid, soul chilling noise.

By this time Calico was leaping frantically, snorting at every jump and forcing Old Jeff to keep pace. They were at the top of a long grade, and down the slope the loaded wagon tumbled easily behind them. Uncle Enoch did his best. With feet well braced he tugged at the lines and shouted, all to no purpose. Never before had Calico and Old Jeff met a circus on the move. Neither had they previously come into such close quarters with an elephant. One does not expect such things on the Bangor road. At least they did not. They proposed to get away from such terrors in the shortest possible time.

Now, the public ways of Maine are seldom macadamized. In places they are laid out straight across and over the granite backbone of the continent. The Bangor road is thus constructed in spots. This slope was one of the spots where the bare ledge, with here and there six inch shelves and eroded gullies, offered a somewhat uneven surface to the wheels. A well built studebaker will stand a lot of this kind of banging, but it is not wholly indestructible. So it happened that half way down the hill the left hind axle snapped at the hub. Thereupon some 200 dozen ears of early green corn were strewn along the flinty face of the highway, while Uncle Enoch was hurled, and all, accompanied by four dozen eggs and ten pounds of Aunt Henrietta's best butter, into the ditch.

When the circus caravan overtook him Uncle Enoch had captured the runaway and was leading them back to where the wrecked wagon lay by the roadside. More or less butter was mixed with the sandy chin whiskers, and an inartistic yellow smooch down the front of his coat showed that the eggs had followed him.

"Rather lively pair of yours, eh, mister?" commented a red faced man who dropped off the pole wagon.

"Yes, rather lively," assented Uncle Enoch, "specially when ye don't want 'em to be. The off one's stiddy enough. It's this cantankerous skeelward that started the tantrum. Whoa now, blame ye!" Calico's nose was in the air again, and he was snorting excitedly.

"Lemme hold him till old Ajax goes by," said the circus man.

"Thank ye. I'll swap him off fast chance I get, ef I don't fetch him nuth' in but a boneyard skate," declared Uncle Enoch.

As Ajax lumbered by the circus man eyed with interest the dancing Calico. He noted with approval the coat of fantastic design, the springing knees and the fine tail that rippled its white length almost to Calico's heels.

"I'll do better'n that by ye, mister," said he. "I've got a fourteen hundred pound Vermont Morgan, sound as a dollar, only eight years old and ah't afraid nuth' in. I'll swap him even for yer skeelward."

"Like to see him," said Uncle Enoch. "If he's half what ye say it's a trade."

"Here he comes on the hand wagon team." Then to the driver: "Hey, Bill! Pull up!"

In less than half an hour from the time Calico had bolted at sight of the circus cavalcade he was part and parcel of it and helping to pull one of those mysterious wheeled wagons along in the wake of the terrifying Ajax.

"The old party don't give you a very good sendoff," said the boss hostler reflectively to Calico, "but I reckon you'll get used to Ajax and the music chariot before the season's over. Leastways you're bound to be an ornament to the grand entry."

Calico's life with the Grand Occidental began abruptly and vigorously. The driver of the band wagon knew his business. Even when half asleep he could see loose traces. After Calico had heard the long lash whistle about his ears a few times he concluded that it was best to do his share of the pulling.

And what pulling it was! There were six horses of them, Calico being one of the swiftest, but on an uphill grade that old chariot was the most reluctant thing he had ever known. Uncle Enoch's stoneboat, which Calico had once held to be merely a heart-breaking instrument of torture, seemed light as a feather. Often did he look reproachfully at the monstrous combination of gilded wood and iron. Why need band wagons be made so exasperatingly heavy? The atrociously carved pans on the corners, with their scarred faces and broken pipes, were cumbersome enough to make a load for one pair of horses all by themselves.

Calico would think of them as he was straining up a long hill. He could almost feel them pulling back on the traces in a sort of wooden stubbornness. And when the team rattled the old traveling with a rough grade how he hoped that two or three of the figures might be jolted off. But in the morning, when the show lot was reached and the traveling wraps taken off the wagons, there he would see the heavy shouldered Pans all in their places as hideous and as permanent as ever.

It was a hard and bitter lesson which Calico learned, this matter of keeping one's tugs tight. Uncle Enoch had spared the whip, but in the heart of Broncho Bill, who drove the band wagon, there was no leniency. Ready and strong was his whip hand, and he knew how to make the blood follow the lash. No effort did he waste on fat padding. He was in the harness, within it, neither did he wear before a broad pad. By dint of leading and coaxing he was made to understand that his part of the act was to canter around the ring with Mile. Zaretti on his back. Calico was to be allowed to go through as many motions as she pleased.

For a green horse Calico conducted himself with much credit. He did not stumble. He did not shy at the ring-master's whip. He did not try to dodge the banners or the hoops after he found how harmless they were.

"Well, if I cut my act perhaps I can manage, but if I break my neck I hope you'll murder that fool driver," was Mile. Zaretti's verdict, and petition when the lesson ended.

Mile. Zaretti's gyrations that afternoon and evening were somewhat tame when you consider the manner in which she was killed. Calico did his part with only a few feeble blunders, and she was so pleased that he got the apples and sugar plums which usually rewarded the grays.

The galled shoulder healed, but the lame leg developed into an incurably stiff joint. Three nights later Calico, to his great joy, left the band chariot team forever, to find himself on the light ticket wagon and regularly engaged as a ring horse. Now was this all. When the season closed Mile. Zaretti bought Calico at an exorbitant price. He was shipped to a strange place, where they put him in a box stall, fed him with generous regularity and asked him to do absolutely nothing at all.

It was a month before Calico saw his mistress again. He had been taken into a great barnlike structure which had many skylights and windows. Here was an ideal ring, smooth and springy, with no hidden rocks or soft spots such as one sometimes finds when on the road. Mile. Zaretti no longer wore her spangled pink dress. Instead she appeared in serviceable knickerbockers and wore wooden soled slippers on her feet. In the middle of the ring a man who was turning himself into a human playwheel stopped long enough to shout: "Hello, Kate! Signed yet?"

"You bet," said Mile. Zaretti. "Next spring I go out by rail with a three topper. I'm going to do the real barn show, no more broad pads and wagon shows for Katie. Hey, Jim, rig up your Stokes' mechanic."

Jim, a stout man who wore his suspenders outside a blue sweater and talked unskily, arranged a swinging derriker arm the purpose of which, it developed, was to keep Mile. Zaretti off the ground whenever she missed her footing on Calico's back. There was a broad leather belt around her waist and to this was attached a long, very often was the needed during those first three weeks of practice, for, true to her word, Mile. Zaretti no longer strapped on Calico's back the broad pad to which he had been accustomed. As for the derriker, it was more or less a factor in "the grandest aggregation."

If Calico had longed for music and applause his wishes were surely answered, for although Mile. Zaretti had jumped from a wagon show to a three ring combination that began its season

some enough to make a load for one pair of horses all by themselves. Calico would think of them as he was straining up a long hill. Calico was to be allowed to go through as many motions as she pleased.

For a green horse Calico conducted himself with much credit. He did not stumble. He did not shy at the ring-master's whip. He did not try to dodge the banners or the hoops after he found how harmless they were.

"Well, if I cut my act perhaps I can manage, but if I break my neck I hope you'll murder that fool driver," was Mile. Zaretti's verdict, and petition when the lesson ended.

Mile. Zaretti's gyrations that afternoon and evening were somewhat tame when you consider the manner in which she was killed. Calico did his part with only a few feeble blunders, and she was so pleased that he got the apples and sugar plums which usually rewarded the grays.

The galled shoulder healed, but the lame leg developed into an incurably stiff joint. Three nights later Calico, to his great joy, left the band chariot team forever, to find himself on the light ticket wagon and regularly engaged as a ring horse. Now was this all. When the season closed Mile. Zaretti bought Calico at an exorbitant price. He was shipped to a strange place, where they put him in a box stall, fed him with generous regularity and asked him to do absolutely nothing at all.

It was a month before Calico saw his mistress again. He had been taken into a great barnlike structure which had many skylights and windows. Here was an ideal ring, smooth and springy, with no hidden rocks or soft spots such as one sometimes finds when on the road. Mile. Zaretti no longer wore her spangled pink dress. Instead she appeared in serviceable knickerbockers and wore wooden soled slippers on her feet. In the middle of the ring a man who was turning himself into a human playwheel stopped long enough to shout: "Hello, Kate! Signed yet?"

"You bet," said Mile. Zaretti. "Next spring I go out by rail with a three topper. I'm going to do the real barn show, no more broad pads and wagon shows for Katie. Hey, Jim, rig up your Stokes' mechanic."

Jim, a stout man who wore his suspenders outside a blue sweater and talked unskily, arranged a swinging derriker arm the purpose of which, it developed, was to keep Mile. Zaretti off the ground whenever she missed her footing on Calico's back. There was a broad leather belt around her waist and to this was attached a long, very often was the needed during those first three weeks of practice, for, true to her word, Mile. Zaretti no longer strapped on Calico's back the broad pad to which he had been accustomed. As for the derriker, it was more or less a factor in "the grandest aggregation."

If Calico had longed for music and applause his wishes were surely answered, for although Mile. Zaretti had jumped from a wagon show to a three ring combination that began its season

Long before the snow was gone Mile. Zaretti had discarded the derriker arm. Calico, as you now guess, had become a factor in "the grandest aggregation."

some enough to make a load for one pair of horses all by themselves. Calico would think of them as he was straining up a long hill. He could almost feel them pulling back on the traces in a sort of wooden stubbornness. And when the team rattled the old traveling with a rough grade how he hoped that two or three of the figures might be jolted off. But in the morning, when the show lot was reached and the traveling wraps taken off the wagons, there he would see the heavy shouldered Pans all in their places as hideous and as permanent as ever.

It was a hard and bitter lesson which Calico learned, this matter of keeping one's tugs tight. Uncle Enoch had spared the whip, but in the heart of Broncho Bill, who drove the band wagon, there was no leniency. Ready and strong was his whip hand, and he knew how to make the blood follow the lash. No effort did he waste on fat padding. He was in the harness, within it, neither did he wear before a broad pad. By dint of leading and coaxing he was made to understand that his part of the act was to canter around the ring with Mile. Zaretti on his back. CLARION FURNACES

THE CLARION OAK FURNACE, FOR WOOD AND COAL.

WELL MADE

Common furnaces do not do good work because they are poorly planned and carelessly put together. You might as well try to burn fuel economically in a fire-place where most of the heat goes up the chimney. CLARIONS have radiating surfaces liberally proportioned to and in direct connection with their fire surfaces.

Accurate fitting makes absolute control of CLARION fire an easy matter, keeping the house temperature uniform with small consumption of fuel.

A MUSTARD POULTICE.

It Made a Lot of Trouble and Didn't Cure the Cold.

Lord Carrington used to be a great practical joker, but he was once the victim of his own reputation. According to the Dundee Advertiser, he was at a hotel in Cape Town. In the same hotel were a young couple, and the husband having a bad cold, the wife left her room to obtain for him the solace of a mustard poultice. She left him asleep and, thinking she knew her way, descended the stairs and, procuring a particularly virulent concoction, made her way back to her room. But doors are much alike in hotels, and, seeing one ajar, as she had left her own, she entered. Creeping quietly to the bedside, she saw, as she thought, the form of her sleeping lord and master. Hastily bending over him, she placed the fatal irritant upon his chest.

No sooner had she done so than a movement of the sleeper revealed, to her horror, that she had made a terrible mistake. Too frightened to recapture the incriminating poultice, she fled from the room and, rushing down the passage, discovered her own door and bolted herself in. It was but a minute, and the storm broke. The hotel was in an uproar. The mustard poultice had been placed on the chest of the elderly governor general! The explosion of his wrath, his howls of rage as the mustard did its work, brought servants and manager to his bedside. The situation did not permit of an explanation. Furious with indignation, he declared himself the victim of a gross joke, and the efforts of the matron d'hotel to pacify him were in vain. He swore that the practical joker was nobody else than Lord Carrington, and he next day, fuming and indignant, left the place. So did a very contrite young wife and a husband whose cold was no better.

How Much Air We Have.

One hundred and thirty-one miles is the height of the atmosphere as measured by Professor T. J. A. See, who determines the thickness of the air envelope by noting the difference between the time of sunset and the complete disappearance of blue from the sky. The moment at which the blue changes into black can be observed quite easily with approximate certainty by the naked eye when the air is clear, and by trigonometry may be ascertained the distance below the horizon of the sun at the moment of change. By this means may be calculated the height of the smallest illuminated particles of oxygen and nitrogen which give to the sky its blueness of tint by the reflection of the smallest wave lengths of the sun's light. The instant of change from blue to black is possibly a little difficult of exact observation, but the method is not more doubtful than that based on the observation of shooting stars. The shooting star method gives a result not greatly differing from the vanishing blue method. The former gives the height of the atmosphere at 100 miles.

A French Verdict.

All jurists have a way of tempering justice with mercy and strict logic with good or bad sense. French jurists excel in these practices. A Mme. Caron, a French woman, was accused of having forged two prescriptions and of having thereby obtained large quantities of poison, some of which she administered to her husband, who nearly died and was only saved by his doctor.

She was sentenced to five years in prison, but the court, on appeal, reduced the term to three years, on the ground that she had been misled by her husband, who had taken her to the drug store and had shown her the poison.

A Remarkable Fortress.

In the northern part of Madagascar is the most remarkable natural fortress in the world. It is occupied by a tribe who call themselves the people of the rocks. The fortress is a lofty and precipitous rock of enormous size, 1,000 feet high and eight square miles in area. Its sides are so steep that it cannot be climbed without artificial means. Within it is hollow, and the only entrance is by a subterranean passage.

Origin of the Sidesaddle.

The use of the sidesaddle for women riders is traced to the time of Anne of Bohemia, eldest daughter of the emperor of Germany, who married Richard II. of England. Previous to this date all Englishwomen bestrode their horses man fashion, but on account of a deformity this German bride was forced to use a sidesaddle, and the custom became general.

THE FACE ON THE CENT.

It Is Not That of an Indian, but of a Pretty Little Girl.

Mrs. Sarah Longacre Keen, who lived and died in Philadelphia, came nearer being the queen of the American mint than any woman who ever lived. With the exception of Queen Victoria, whose image was engraved on every coin of the British and Indian empires, Mrs. Keen was first in the number of her metal photographs. Her face as a girl of twelve summers to be seen on every American cent issued since 1836 from Uncle Sam's coin factory.

It is usually assumed that the face on the head side of the copper is that of an Indian, but a close look will reveal a Saxon profile. Just borrow a cent and look at it. The setting is that of an Indian.

Between 1828 and 1840 James Barton Longacre was chief engraver in the United States mint in Philadelphia. In 1835 a competition was opened for sketches and engravings for the new copper cent that was to be issued and which has since been in service. There were over a thousand designs offered. The prize was a good one. Longacre racked his brain for some original and singular design that would strike the judges, but for months he failed to satisfy himself.

One morning a number of Indians, with their chief, who had been to pay their respects to the great white chief in Washington, came to the city and were shown through the mint. They were introduced to the white chief's picture maker, who was just then showing his young daughter Sarah the great concern. The old chief was attracted by the sweet faced maiden and her interest in his feathers and net. She childishly wondered how she would look in the feathered headdress. This was told the chief, who solemnly devoted himself of his feathers and net to the girl's head.

The effect was so striking that the father took time to make a sketch of the picture, finishing it afterward for his own amusement.

At the last moment of the period given for sending in engravings he brought forward the sketch of the girl's head, the combination of Indian feathers and Saxon sweetness. He got it in, and much sport was made of the child at the time in the city because of the incident. The sketch passed through the mint and finally reached the last round. By one vote it won, and ever since Sarah Longacre's young face has served for the humblest of coins, than which no single coin in the world has such tremendous circulation.—Detroit News-Tribune.

SAID ABOUT WOMEN.

A flattered woman is always indulgent.—Chenier.

The test of civilization is the estimate of women.—Curtis.

Provided a woman be well principled she has dowry enough.—Plautus.

Beauty is the eye's food and the soul's sorrow.—German Proverb.

Divination seems heightened to its highest power in woman.—Bronson Alcott.

The more women have risked, the more they are willing to sacrifice.—Duclos.

Women are superhuman when present and missed when absent.—Portuguese Proverb.

A termagant wife may in some respects be considered a tolerable blessing.—Washington Irving.

Some cunning men choose fools for their wives, thinking to manage them, but they always fail.—Johnson.

Telling the Time.

One of the accurate ways of telling the time is to use your hand as an hour mark. Nothing simpler. All farmers not possessed of watches or clocks and who have some practical notions of common utilities not invented by man, but given to us by the Creator, know the rule. It is necessary to keep in mind the hour of sunrise and sunset and to hold the arm straight out from the shoulder, with the hand at right angles, bending from the wrist forward. If the sun sets at 7 o'clock and is still high in the heavens close one eye and make three measures of the width of the palm near the thumb. Each measure means one hour. Three measures mean three hours, so the time thus obtained is 7 less 3, or 4 o'clock. With practice you can beat the average watch.—New York Press.

Horses and Oil Cakes.

"Say, did you know anything 'bout horses, boy? I've know they'll eat pork? Well, they will when it's fed 'em an' they have to. The heaves stops subsequent, though they're an all first sign was afterwards. Belle went right onto a most diet, hog root an' oil cakes. Yep, indeed oil'll fat a rail fence. Belle took on weight again. Cur's thing 'bout oil cakes, though. Once a hoss has been fattened on 'em an' then grows pickled agin there ain't nothing in the world'll put flesh onto him a second time. You can try as much as you're mind to; it ain't no use."—American Magazine.

Somnolency.

Talking in sleep is more common than is generally supposed. Of 200 students between the ages of twenty and thirty 41 per cent of the men and 87 per cent of the women talked in their sleep, and most of them could answer questions.—Harper's Weekly.

Earthquakes.

Among the many strange relationships which earthquakes hold to various natural phenomena there is possibly one between the times of their occurrence and of irregularities in the revolution of the world. For many years it has been observed that there are slight but irregular changes in latitude, or, in other words, the axis of our earth does not always point in the same direction. The pole wanders about in a mean position, sometimes in a path that is nearly circular, while at others it appears to be exceedingly irregular and even retrograde. The world top is not spinning truly, but it slightly wobbles. When the change in direction of its axis is sharp large earthquakes have been frequent. If a swing moving body is, so to speak, compelled to turn a corner, that it should be subjected to strains which might result in yielding is easily conceivable. Regarded from this point of view, the times at which strata in seismic strain give way are to some extent governed by erratic movements in the rotation of our sphere. The earthquake and the wobble may, however, be due to a common cause, and the question therefore is one which requires closer examination.—John Milne in National Review.

A Good Horse's Color.

A good horse cannot be a bad color. It is said. It is certain that Derby winners are not drawn from certain colors. Has a gray ever won the race, or a dun or a skewbald or a piebald? Has there ever been a thoroughbred of the latter type? Quite black thoroughbreds are rare, white still more so, gray uncommon even among the less excited of public performers. The "Stud Book" would not bear out these statements where colors uncommon on the race course are described. The explanation is, of course, that the horse is there described as he appeared as a foal. An owner of a bay thoroughbred looked up the "Stud Book" to find his purchase pictured as a chestnut and complained to the men of whom he had bought the horse. The former owner assured him that the description of public performers. The latter, other owners, less certain as to what color may appear when the first coat has been cast, have before now made such singular entries as "gray, roan or chestnut."—St. James' Gazette.

DOCTOR CURED OF ECZEMA

Maryland Physician Cures Himself of Eczema with Cuticura Remedies. Prescribes Them and Has Cured Many Cases Where Other Formulas Have Failed—Dr. Fisher Says!

CUTICURA REMEDIES POSSESS TRUE MERIT

"My face was afflicted with eczema in the year 1897. I used the Cuticura Remedies, and was entirely cured. I am a practicing physician and very often prescribe Cuticura Resolvent and Cuticura Soap in cases of eczema, and they have cured where other formulas have failed. I am not in the habit of endorsing patent medicines, but when I find remedies possessing true merit, such as the Cuticura Remedies do, I am broad-minded enough to proclaim their virtues to the world. I have been practicing medicine for sixteen years, and must say I find your Remedies A No. 1. You are at liberty to publish this letter, or any part of it. I remain, very truly yours, G. M. Fisher, M. D., Big Rock, Md., May 24, 1905."

CUTICURA—THE SET, $1.

LIGHTHOUSE REPAIR SHOP.

Little Building Where Delicate Machinery is Made.

In the reservation of the Lighthouse department at St. George, Staten Island, there is an ugly three story building of brick that is the "department store" of the lighthouse service in this country and its foreign possessions. Practically everything in the nature of a mechanical device used in the service, from the biggest lantern to the smallest order of light, and including the apparatus for blowing fog signals and making the lights flash on gas buoys, is turned out in this place, and not only sent to all the stations in this district, which includes Porto Rico, but also as far away as Alaska, and even to the Philippines.

The mechanics employed are all men of the highest grade, for the objects they are at work on are too delicate, as a rule, to allow of much machine labor, and in addition to this the government has never seen fit to spend sufficient money on the plant to fit it out with such machinery. In a stroll through the workrooms one can see men turning out the delicate brasswork that keeps the flashlights on a gas buoy going for three months at a time, the curious brass cylinders that make the waiting cry of a fog siren, tiny floating vessels that serve to keep the oil from overflowing in the lamps after the manner of a student lamp, and the clockwork that keeps revolving lights turning around hour after hour through the long nights.

The only thing they don't make in this department store are the lenses, which are imported from Paris or London. These are "assembled" in these shops, however, and one can see lanterns of all sizes in the course of preparation. From the smallest size used in the service to ones of the power sufficient to go in lighthouses of the first order. Of course the department has to be ready for emergencies in the way of breakdowns of lights, as well as of lightships, and so they not only keep two light vessels at the wharf always ready for instant service, but they also have in this storehouse an emergency light that can be put up anywhere and fitted to take the place of any light of any description, whether it be fixed or revolving, red and white or all red.

New York Press.

SOME FIRST OCCASIONS.

Cannon and small arms were introduced in 1390.

Spinning wheels came to the rescue of women in 1530.

The first stereotyping was done in 1813 in New York.

Shirts resembling those now worn were in use in 1830.

Phrenology, "discovered" by Franz Joseph Gall, a Viennese physician, in 1796, became a so called science in 1805.

The first submarine telegraph wire in this country was from Governors Island to the Battery in New York, laid in 1842.

Double entry bookkeeping was first used in the mercantile cities of Italy, notably Venice and Florence, in the fifteenth century.

Schwartz invented gunpowder in 1328. But Roger Bacon, a thirteenth century alchemist, gives a recipe for it in a work of his in 1270.

Natural Wells in Yucatan.

Since Yucatan, the Mayas built their strange cities, is a coral limestone formation, it would, says a writer in Records of the Past, have been a barren desert but for its subterranean rivers and the cenotes, or water caverns, which give access to them.

The Mayas noted the courses of the underground streams and built their towns round the cenotes. Many cenotes are now found surrounded by ruins and give indications of the methods employed by the Mayas to reach their cool waters. In Uxmal a cenote about forty feet deep is inhabited by a peculiar species of fish. At Bolanchen there is a cenote having five openings in the rocks at the bottom of the cavern. Ladders made by tying tree trunks together lead down a total distance of 1,400 feet, but the perpendicular depth from the surface to the water is not over 500 feet.

The Mixture in Roumania.

Roumania is inhabited by a bewildering variety of races, but whether of Greek, Slav or Teutonic lineage, the modern Roumanians make it a point of honor to claim descent from the colonists whom Trajan planted in the conquered province of Dacia A. D. 107. Calling themselves Romuni and their language Roumanian, the proud citizens seldom draw out a legal document without some allusion to their founder, whom they style "the divine Trajan."

The Roumanian language reflects the composition of the race and now but faintly suggests the language which Trajan spoke.

Tennyson's Gruffness.

Appropos of Tennyson's gruffness is a story repeated by the London Chronicle. Tennyson, in his last days gave audience to an American, a friend of Longfellow and Lowell, who came armed with credentials. "I hope you don't write," was the cautious old poet's first remark. "No, my lord, and I don't talk!" was the swift reply. This response set Tennyson at his ease, and he at least "talked," to his guest's vast contentment.

Flattered Men.

There is no exaggerated and barefaced compliment a man will not swallow greedily if it is served by a woman. He suspects it from the lips of another man, but is so innately convinced that woman, his inferior, is always secretly worshipping him and longing for him that he will bolt every sugared pill she offers.—M. A. P.

Mozart's Quick Work.

On one occasion Mozart was making merry with his friends at midnight when not a single note was written of the overture to "Don Giovanni" which was to be produced on the following evening. When he had said goodby to his friends he calmly went to bed and slept until 5 o'clock in the morning. Awakening refreshed, he set to work on the overture, dashing off sheet after sheet with incredible rapidity and dispatching them to the copyists. The opera was to begin at 7 in the evening, and a few minutes after that hour Mozart was in his place as conductor, baton in hand, while the parts with the ink still wet on some of them were being handed to the orchestra.

A Wonderful Island of Chalk.

The English island of Thanet, forming a part of the county of Kent, is almost wholly composed of chalk. The island is ten miles in length and about five in breadth and has more chalk exposed on its surface than has any other spot of equal area on the globe. British geologists say that there are not less than 42,000,000,000 tons of chalk "in sight" on Thanet and that it would take 10,000 men and 8,000 horses and carts 20,000 years to move it, providing it were dug up ready to be carted away.
