OXFORD, ss.

To the Honorable Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court next to be held at Paris within and for the said county, on the second Tuesday of October, A. D. 1904:

Maud O. Fillmore of Bethel, in said county, wife of Gordon Fillmore, respectfully represents that her maiden name was Maud Odlin; that she was lawfully married to the said Gordon Fillmore at Bayonne, in the State of New Jersey, on the fourth day of October, A. D. 1898, by J. A. Bonlan, a Justice of the Peace; that they lived together as husband and wife at said Bayonne eight months, then at Portland, Me., six months, and then at said Bethel the time of their said marriage until the thirtieth day of March, A. D. 1901; that your libelant has always conducted herself towards her said husband as a faithful, true and affectionate wife; that on the said thirtieth day of March the said Gordon Fillmore deserted your libelant without cause and went to parts unknown to her, since which time she has not seen or heard from him, or received any support from him; that she has made diligent inquiry, but has not been able to ascertain and does not know the residence of the said Gordon Fillmore; that there is no collusion between your libelant and the said Gordon Fillmore to obtain a divorce; that your libelant believes it reasonable and proper, conducive to domestic harmony, and consistent with the peace and morality of society that the bond of matrimony between her and her said husband should be dissolved by divorce.

Wherefore she prays that such divorce may be decreed, and that she may have the custody of the minor child, aged six years and eight months, and named Bertha B.

August 31, 1904. MAUD O. FILLMORE.

Then personally appeared the said Maud O. Fillmore, subscribed and made oath that the above allegations are true and especially the allegation touching her ignorance of and inability to discover the residence of the said Gordon Fillmore.

Before me,

To the Honorable Justice of the Supreme Judicial Court next to be held at Paris within and for the said county, on the second Tuesday of October, A. D. 1904:

Laura A. Saunders of Bethel, in said county, wife of Frank U. Saunders, respectfully represents, that her maiden name was Laura A. Morgan; that she was lawfully married to the said Frank U. Saunders, at said Bethel, on the fourteenth day of May, A. D. 1891, by the Rev S. T. Records; that they lived together as husband and wife at said Bethel two years; then at Berlin, in said county, then at Berlin, county of Coos, and State of New Hampshire, from the time of their said marriage until the tenth day of August, 1901; that your libelant has always conducted herself towards her said husband as a faithful, true and affectionate wife; that on the said tenth day of August the said Frank U. Saunders deserted your libelant without cause and went to parts unknown to her, since which time she has not seen or heard from him, or received any support from him; that she has made diligent inquiry, but has not been able to ascertain and does not know the residence of the said Frank U. Saunders; that there is no collusion between your libelant and the said Frank U. Saunders to obtain a divorce; that your libelant believes it reasonable and proper, conducive to domestic harmony, and consistent with the peace and morality of society that the bond of matrimony between her and her said husband should be dissolved by divorce.

Wherefore she prays that such divorce may be decreed, and that she may have the custody of the minor child, aged six years and eight months, and named Bertha B.

The Craze to Live in Town.

THE RESULT, IN THE MAIN, OF RESTLESSNESS AND INDOLENCE—A FEW PICTURES DRAWN FROM LIFE.

On one of the back streets of a country town is a vacant lot. This lot is unimproved, covered with brush and stumps. Hard at work upon this lot, chopping and grubbing, is a man about forty years old. I ask him if he has bought the lot, and he informs me that he has not bought it, but has rented it for a garden. He pays a dollar and gets all he can raise there this season. He says he cannot afford to buy potatoes and other vegetables, they come so high. I can conceive no harder task than grubbing and clearing this lot, and the saddest part of the task must lie in the fact that he is not clearing it for himself, but for another. This man owns a small, cheaply constructed house on a small lot in the worst part of the village. Four years ago this same person owned sixty acres of good land, mostly improved, with good buildings and a fair orchard. He had his own fuel, water handy and fine land for gardening. To-day he buys his fuel, carries water forty rods and pays a tribute for the privilege of clearing another man's lot. One year in a grocery store, one year in a restaurant, one year working out and this year picking around getting a living any old way he can. But he and his wife wanted to come to town. They wanted to be where they could see something, and they wanted less work. Well, they are in town now, they can see something—the back end of a livery stable and two saloons, a pile of old boxes and barrels and the front of an old blacksmith shop. Their children play in the streets and their neighbors' pigs and chickens play in the back yard. This man was worth $4,000 and out of debt four years ago; to-day I would not give $500 for all he has.

Last night I drove by his former residence, a handsome, comfortable farm home, with schoolhouse and neighbors near by. In my mind I compared this man's surroundings as they were with the same as they are now, and I wished I could show them upon canvas to some of my friends who read The Tribune Farmer. Surely some of them would be made to appreciate the advantages of a country home.

Every night about five o'clock I meet or see passing and going toward the village scores of farmers, their sons and hired men. In wagons, in buggies, upon wheels, and on foot, all in a mad haste to get to town. Who does their chores, who cares for their stock I do not know; but there they go, and I wonder what they find to compensate them for leaving the farm at this hour of the day. But from 5 to 7 there is a general rush for the village. Twilight is the pleasantest part of the day in the country. The early evening, the cool, delightful atmosphere, the beautiful sunset, the content, the peace, the rest. And yet hundreds of farmers, their wives and children miss it all, and for what? For an hour in the throng, for a few minutes' idle gossip, for a glass of beer or an evening's carousal.

And consider the loss. Calves, pigs, cows and horses half cared for or even neglected; money lost, odds and ends of work put off and many an important job left uncompleted. Money foolishly and hastily spent, bad companions annexed and bad habits formed. Could a merchant do a successful business that way? Does the business man desert his place of business during the most important hour of the day? I know a man who makes it a rule never to go to town in the evening except upon important business or to some promising and specified entertainment. A good sermon, a good lecture, concert or theatrical entertainment will occasionally call this man and his family to town in the evening; but the occasions are rare when he is not at home as dark comes on. This man reads and studies; his place is in good repair and his livestock shows good care. He and his family are well dressed, the table is supplied with good food, the library contains good books, and all have time to read, and really do read the best farm journals. Now, who is likely to be "green," this man and his children or some of these people we see night after night standing around the streets of our villages?

The farmer needs an office. Let that office be at home. Let him make the evening his office hours. Let the children learn business habits. Let these habits be learned at home. Such boys and girls will not be half so green when they go out into the world as those who stand yelling around a pool table or trapesing up and down the streets of a country town.

The evening hours are the pleasantest hours of country life. The evening hours are the most profitable part of the day to the real farmer. The gadding habit once started makes us dissatisfied with the farm, and it is easy for me to recall instance after instance of those who have become dissatisfied, made great sacrifices and moved to town, who are now total failures, living from hand to mouth upon the back streets of little one-horse villages. These people wanted to be "in it," where they could "see somebody," and where they would not "have to work so hard." One such man is working upon the streets to-day shovelling dirt, and as I look at him I wonder why it was so much harder to work for himself than it is to work under a boss.

Fashions change. Even now people of the better class are looking for country homes. Let the change go on. As these dissatisfied, restless and lazy people leave the country a class of better, brighter, and more intelligent people from the city will come to take their places, and then, oh! how the country will boom and how some of our poor, disappointed old neighbors will long to get back to the beautiful homes they are now abandoning!—Cor. in Tribune Farmer.

An apple buyer of the middle west writes that no apple of his knowledge is so well adapted to his trade as Baldwins grown in New England. He has purchased in New York and various parts of the country but prefers New England fruit. No fault can be found with his judgment, for the flat, alluvial country from which he hails can produce corn and other cereals, but a "breath of New England air" and her rock-ribbed soil is needed to perfect flavor and finish in the apple.—Maine Farmer.

A superior farm never yet made a good farmer, but a good farmer will make a first class farm out of any on which he remains. It is more in the man than in the land, and an active, intelligent man knows how or learns how to handle his land according to its requirements. A man has to know something in order to be a good farmer.—Maine Farmer.

There is no ordinary feed which has a definite effect on the quality of milk. If a cow gives rich milk at one time, she will always do so under good care, and if she naturally gives poor milk, the kind of feed will not change the per cent of fat. Food has a much greater influence on the quantity of milk than on the quality.

The slipshod poultryman is the first to raise the cry that the poultry business is a failure.

To Raise a Good Crop of Clover.

WHY SPRING IS PREFERABLE TO FALL SOWING—CAREFUL PREPARATION OF THE SOIL NECESSARY.

A good catch of clover is often secured without a nurse crop when sown in the spring and the season is favorable, which means plenty of moisture. Fall sowing of clover is not considered good policy in the Eastern states, where conditions are more favorable than those usually encountered in the fall of the year in Nebraska; therefore, we could not in the face of this recommend a plan that, to say the least, would be courting failure.

One reason for the unpopularity of fall sowing is clover being a plant that requires a great deal of moisture, especially in the first three months of its existence, which is demanding a condition that cannot be looked forward to with the same amount of assurance in the fall that is held out to us in the spring. Then, again, it is necessary for clover to be well rooted to withstand the severity of winter and be in a healthy state when spring opens, a condition that would be the exception rather than the rule with fall sowing.

If one is very desirous of trying fall sowing of clover, under no circumstances would we recommend plowing, providing the ground has been put in a proper state of cultivation within a year. If it be stubble or stalk ground, by all means use a disk and pulverize the surface sufficiently to form a fine mulch, which will arrest evaporation. When this dirt mulch is properly made it will hold the moisture in the ground for a long time; then by drilling the clover seed just beneath, which is always moist, caused by what is known as capillary attraction, and added to this the firm seed bed, an essential to plant growth, perfect germination is assured.

If ground is prepared as above described for clover, and sown this fall to alfalfa, success, we feel sure, would follow.

The subject, "Clover Culture," one of the most valuable studies in agriculture, would occupy a great deal of space before it was exhausted. Therefore, the few words we are about to give concerning seeding, seeing this topic is being discussed, will be so little, comparatively, as to be nothing more than enough to start some thinking.

Many times the cause of failure in starting clover in the lighter soils of the Western states is the practice of surface sowing on newly ploughed ground. In case we may not be fully understood, a description of this method of sowing perhaps will not be out of place.

There are several plans for surface sowing, two or three of which we will cite. One plan, when a crop of clover is expected to be grown without a nurse crop, is to first plough and thoroughly harrow the ground; then sow the seed and cover it by using either a homemade brush harrow or a slant tooth harrow with brush or a plank attached to the back. This smooths the surface of the ground and covers the seed at the same time. When a spring sown nurse crop is used, all the work needed for growing this grain is finished before the clover is sown, after which harrow as above.

Another method of surface sowing, and a very successful one, is to sow wheat or rye in the fall; then sow the clover very early the next spring, on the last snows of winter preferred. The seed then will settle into the soft mud, caused by frequent freezing and thawing, is properly covered and ready to germinate at the earliest opportunity, or just as soon as all the conditions necessary to the life of the plant are present, which allows the roots to get a good start, and frequently enables the clover in its early stage to withstand a short drouth. Sowing on late snows has also proved very successful in getting a catch in wornout pastures.

Surface growing on newly ploughed ground is held in high favor, both with and without a nurse crop, in some of our Eastern states, where the soil is a heavy clay and they have an abundance of moisture. But in the lighter soils of the West, and especially in localities where the rainfall some years is hardly sufficient to raise a full crop, surface sowing on newly ploughed land at any time of the year has been more or less a failure.

A good catch of clover may be obtained for the hog pasture by adopting the method we have described of sowing in the spring on a nurse crop of fall rye, and allowing the hogs to pasture off the rye.—Cor. in Tribune Farmer.

The U. S. as a Horse Breeder.

(John Gilmer speed in world's work)

A shipload of horses and mares has been sent from this country for breeding purposes, with the idea of grading up the Filipino ponies and at the same time keeping a supply of light bred American horses, so that breeders can get stallions to continue and broaden this work of improvement.

It is interesting to note that this is the first time our government has taken any part in horse breeding. And even now it may not be proper to say that it is taking a part, for the present experiments are made by the civil government of the Philippines, and the expenses are to be paid out of the Philippine revenues. If the experiments succeed, however, it will not be wonderful if the federal government should establish a breeding plant of its own, so that cavalry and artillery horses of uniform types could be obtained. France, Germany and Russia breed horses for military use, and also to foster horse-breeding.

I was chosen to select the horses that have been sent out. In a general way I will say that I selected only such horses and mares as seemed to me to have a similarity of blood with the Filipino ponies. All reproducing horse types are founded on the Arab and Barb. So specimens of any of these types not made utterly dissimilar by reason of size—the Percheron for instance—appeared suitable. Available in America were the Morgans, the Denmarks and the Thoroughbreds. I secured stallions of these three types and also a few Arab stallions which had come to this country by way of England. The brood mares were all bought in the blue grass region of Kentucky, while some work and brood mares for the agricultural experiment stations were bought in Missouri. The immediate purpose is to breed Filipino stallions to American mares, and American and Arab stallions to Filipino mares, keeping, however, a supply of strictly American mares and horses as a kind of parent stock on which later to draw.

Of course this mingling of American and Filipino horse blood is an experiment and no one can tell with absolute certainty what the result will be. That the progeny as individuals will be an improvement over the native horses is tolerably sure; but the experiment cannot be considered entirely successful unless the mingling of blood aided by infusions of Arab blood results in a reproducing type of sturdy horses suitable for work on the farms and fit for use by the army and constabulary. This can, no doubt, be accomplished in time.

The latter part of August and early in September is the time for sowing clover on sandy soils. A good "catch" is difficult in the spring on such soils, but many farmers are successful with fall-sown clover who have made failures of such attempts in the spring. No other crop should go in with the clover, as it needs no shading. With a fair season the roots will make good growth and the plants push ahead rapidly in spring.

Even with fattening hogs a better appetite can be maintained by feeding a variety than by depending upon any one article even though it be good sound corn.—Live Stock Journal.

FEATHERING THE NEST

By LWELLEN TETERS

Copyright, 1904, by Lwellen Teters

"You see," Young went on confidentially, "Tom's income is very small, but when two people fall in love what else can they do but marry? He works from 8 to 6 every day and can't attend to feathering the nest himself, and she lives way up in the country. He wants me to select a four room flat and get all the furniture. Would you help me? I'd be so grateful."

She glanced away from the eagerness of his face. The open piano reminded her of the pupils coming for lessons in the morning. Some stockings stuffed tightly in her workbasket near by warned her of necessary darning. There was a hat to trim over so she could go to church on Sunday. Countless other petty duties arrayed themselves silently before her in stubborn protest.

It had required a veritable pocketing of pride for her to apprise Goring of her arrival in town, because of his forgetfulness of her in the time following their last meeting. Had he not been the only one she knew in the big, throbbing city doubtless the dainty little missive would never have been sent. But fate pends on trivialities, and May Carlton feared solitude more than she feared the past. A distasteful suitor was wooing her with all of the gilded persuasiveness of his wealth, championed by her aunt. But Goring did not know of this. He knew only that May Carlton was temporarily domiciled at a chilly, stuffy boarding house which breathed of frying meats at no matter what hour he called and that there was wistful pleading in her eyes.

"We will go to lunch first," Goring put in insinuatingly; "that is, if you will?"

"Thank you, but I am afraid I cannot possibly go until afternoon," she said firmly, with inward sacrifices. The hat could go until next week; surely there were greater sins than not attending church.

It was much easier selecting a flat than the furniture, as they discovered after weary pilgrimages through department stores trying to perform that miracle commonly known as buying what one wants at the price one can afford, for the flat, provided over by a smoky, generously whiskered janitor who insisted on taking them for his prospective tenants and asking them at disconcerting intervals the size of their family, was decided on almost at first glance merely because Miss Carlton liked the parlor mantel and Goring admired the size of the ice box.

But each time she returned from the cheerful little home that they were so engrossed in preparing for the bride and groom it was to sink aghast at the loneliness of her own life as she climbed up the three interminable flights of stairs to her room. Her few scholars barely sufficed to meet the exactions of her landlady. The thought of the little flat uptown mocked her with its insinuating air of home and domesticity. The instinct was strong within her for a nest of her own. It was only because of the inherent fondness for the home, as the bird builds its nest and feathers it tenderly for its mate, that she had been interested in the labor.

When Goring called for her that afternoon to complete the final arrangements in the little home, there was no trace of the grief she had endured the previous evening. As he was announced she was even beginning a letter to her distasteful suitor, and she thrust it into her pocket in her haste to accompany Goring.

"Do you think they'll like it?" she asked anxiously.

"Like it? They'll be crazy over it! Wouldn't you?"

"Yes, I would like it." She stifled a sigh that echoed in her heart.

She had been about to sign her name to that bit of paper which would mean for her a splendid mansion, horses and all the accessories of affluence, but her heart yearned for the tiny nest in which she stood and the one man to share it with her. Something suffocating arose in her throat.

"I'm sorry it's finished," Goring broke in. "I had no idea it was so interesting. Tom left three days ago for the wedding; they ought to be here tomorrow. I suppose they won't have a house warming."

May Carlton looked at him impulsively; tomorrow was her last day in town; she had resolved to seal her fate and go back to that other man, afraid to pit her puny strength longer against the world. She longed for one more taste of happiness, reluctant to take the decisive step.

"Why couldn't we arrange it as a surprise?" she cried eagerly. "It will be awfully cheerless for a bride, coming to a dark house without one light to greet her. Oh, please!"

Goring glanced into her flushed, wistful face, thinking of that summer time past and the man who rumor said had robbed him of her love.

"Well, we will. I'll see a caterer"—

"A caterer? When I can bake the most poetical biscuit and make ambrosia from mere coffee. Oh, what do we want of any ignorant, expert food maker?" she cried.

"In your hands then," he bowed in mock gravity.

Sundry mysterious parcels dispatched by Goring kept arriving all afternoon after May reached the flat, each breathing its own delectable secret. She donned a huge white apron and began her preparations early, for Goring had telephoned her that he thought the couple would arrive at 6 and he would drive up with them.

But he stepped in alone, unannounced, for he had retained one of the keys, and entered an atmosphere of delicious, savory odors. A bright light radiated from the kitchen, and he stood silently in the doorway, unseen by her, admiring her as she stooped to baste the golden brown fowl in the oven. Goring said nothing. There was a telegram in his pocket, and he hesitated to mar her pleasure all at once.

"Oh!" She nervously dropped her cooking spoon as he crossed the threshold.

"It's better than an Alma-Tadema," he commented, drinking in the homelike suggestions.

"I hope they'll be happy." She gave the fowl an undeserved prick with the fork, flattering at something indefinable in his manner.

"Would—you be—here?" he asked unsteadily and with abruptness.

A piercing whistle at the dumb waiter interfered with her reply. It was the ice cream coming up with convulsive movements and noisy creaking, sent by an overpunctual confectioner. Metaphorically Goring received it as a cold douche to his hopes.

"Isn't it almost time for them?" she inquired anxiously, regretting the lost opportunity which had rudely interrupted the hovering sentiment. "I thought you were going to meet them?"

Slowly he took the telegram out of his pocket, extending it toward her.

"What is it? Nothing serious I hope!" she cried in alarm.

"No! Only Tom has been ordered west by his firm to manage a branch house. It means the making of his future. They're not coming here, after all."

"Oh, and the turkey so beautiful!" She sank weakly in a chair, tears filling her eyes. "I'm so sorry"—

Goring crossed the room and placed his arm around her.

"Look here, you're not crying?" he said, peering into her face. "There, there! It is a shame, I admit. But you and I can enjoy that dinner just as much as they."

"Yes, but what about the flat? Will they sell everything? And we fixed it up so pretty"—

She was sobbing quietly now.

"Can't—can't—we pretend that it's our home for always?" he asked softly, with a tremendous beating of his heart. "And—and can't you—make it come true, dear? I love you—you must have known that; but I heard you cared for some one else. Tell me, May"—

She tried to steal her handkerchief from the bloused front of her shirt waist, but something white and diminutive and square tumbled out with it. It was her answer to that other man, in which she had so nearly signed away her happiness. She took out the letter, forcing him to read it, and taking infinite relish in his visible symptoms of agitation. The futility of his love stared at him uncompromisingly. It was as he had feared; he was too late.

The cheer and coziness of the toy house taunted him. He turned away from it and away from the woman he loved.

"Well?" said Miss Carlton sharply, compelling his attention. Her lips were quivering, her eyes mutinous at his easy defeat.

"You've ruined my life—for the second time," he said, unsmiling.

She grasped the letter from his hand and tore it into innumerable tiny pieces which scattered over the floor like snow.

"That's my answer," and her voice trembled happily.

How the Athlete Escapes Falls.

The circus man spread his hands. "You see, we have no use for a man who endangers his life. What we want is a man who can do acts that appear appallingly dangerous, but can do them without any risk to himself. That is what all these men can do and are paid for doing—that and nothing more."

An English bareback rider undertook to explain:

"It is all done with the shoulders," he said. "The shoulders are the center of gravity in the air. It is with the muscles of the chest that the lift and turn are both made. For example, in a back somersault you do not throw yourself over with the kick from the ground. You merely leap into the air, and then, with the muscles of the stomach and chest, whip your legs up over you, revolve around your shoulders and come down on your feet. That is the reason why all circus performers are widest under the arms and smallest around the waist. They are built like greyhounds."—Success.

The Last Note.

A prominent musician recently told a little anecdote which will be appreciated by musicians and perhaps by laymen as well.

He was teaching his young son the piano keyboard by the inductive system, and the boy, having learned all the notes, both white and black, the teacher began to review the lesson by asking, "And now, Henry, show me A flat."

Henry soon figured it out.

The next question was, "Where is G sharp?"

That also proved easy.

After asking the boy several more questions about sharps and flats, the teacher said, "Where do you think we shall find C flat?"

Henry looked at the keyboard long and curiously; he put his finger on C, and next on B, then he got down close to the piano and after examining it carefully replied, "I don't know, papa, but I guess it's gone down that crack between B and C."

Rise Above Your Troubles.

No matter what cares, anxieties or sorrows may vex or sadden you, do not prove yourself a weakling by going down before them, but show yourself noble in rising above them and molding them to life's purpose. Rather bear an insult than give one; rather dry a tear than cause one to be shed. How many celebrities we would have if men would be as anxious to make their own fame as they are to unmake the fame of others.

Nothing Left.

"I have had lots of friends who were guilty of mutilating books they had borrowed from me, but my latest experience was the most novel of all."

"What was it?"

"I lent Mrs. Blanks my dictionary a few days ago, and yesterday she returned it without a word!"—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Its Beauties.

"Do you now appreciate the beauties of civilization?"

"Yes," answered the barbarian. "Civilization is a great institution. But, as in the case of other large enterprises, it's usually best to be one of the promoters and get in on the ground floor."—Washington Star.

He Was Afraid.

The Bride—Tell me now, dearest, when you proposed weren't you a little nervous for fear I should say "No?" The Bridegroom (who has married for money)—I should think I was. Why, I owed nearly $5,000, and my creditors were getting awfully pushing.

He Knew.

LIFE'S GRAB BAG

By KEITH GORDON

Copyright, 1904, by Keith Gordon

"Life," meditated Cynthia as she tucked in the ends of her veil more neatly, "is nothing more than a grab bag on a huge scale. Day by day you put your hand in and grab something, but until you take it out and unfold it you never know whether it is a joy or a sorrow!"

With a droll smile at the idea, she picked up her gloves and card case, took a last comprehensive survey of herself in the cheval glass and then passed down the stairs and out into the street filled with the gentle exhilaration that her view of life induced.

One did not know, for instance, what charming adventure might befall, even in the pursuit of so banal a duty as a round of formal calls. Musing thus, she turned into Fifth avenue, her face alight with eager expectancy of the next thing and trying to imagine what it was going to be.

This might be the great day of her life—one couldn't tell. Perhaps before the afternoon was over she would meet the man—that godling of her dreams who moved in the time honored Olympian manner, enveloped in a mist that hid his face from view. Apparently the afternoon held nothing more than a pleasant stroll, broken by a half dozen calls, but the beauty of the thing lay in the fact that one couldn't be sure! Perhaps on that very afternoon—

These pleasant speculations suddenly came to an abrupt end. Her card case—where was it? She felt blindly in her muff, thrust her hand into one side of her coat and then the other, but in vain. It was gone—lost—just as numberless purses, opera glasses, boas, muffs and umbrellas had gone before it, until she was a byword among her friends and the gifts of her intimates were invariably accompanied by a beseeching: "Don't lose this, Cynthia. Do try to be a little bit careful."

And now her new card case, a gift on her birthday a few weeks before, had gone in the usual way, just when she was expecting the very best of life too! Her optimism disappeared like the sun behind a cloud, and, with an aggrieved sense of misplaced trust, her steps slackened and she came to a standstill, wondering if it would be worth while to go back and try to find it.

"Scarcely," she decided, as the moving crowd of pedestrians slowly filed past her, and, with a sigh, she resumed her way northward once more, a little comforted by the reflection that, after all, some honest person would probably find it and return it to her.

Meanwhile a tall, athletic young man who was swinging up the avenue in the same direction a block or so behind her, unconsciously rejoicing in his mere physical vigor and not philosophizing at all, found his attention attracted by a small, dark object ornamented with a gleaming disk of silver that was lying near the edge of the sidewalk.

Picking it up, he glanced in this way and in that, but the handsomely gowned women who were making their way in both directions gave no indication of distress, so he examined the monogram on the clasp, with a grunt of masculine disdain for such devices.

Then he bethought him that it might be a good idea to open it, and, suiting the action to the impulse, he discovered in one compartment a latchkey and in the other a bunch of cards. "Miss Willliar, No. 4 West —th street," he read, taking out one of the cards. And, having thus satisfactorily established the ownership of his find, he tucked it into his pocket and strode on toward the University club, idly wondering if this Miss Willliar could be related to the little Cynthia Willliar he had known in his boyhood. It was this wonder that impelled him to wait to see Miss Willliar personally when, just before the dinner hour, he stopped at the address given on the card.

He had not long to wait. A tall girl with a look in her eyes that said plainly that life was an interesting experience entered the room, and he found himself face to face with what seemed to him a larger, older and greatly glorified copy of the small, freckled girl upon whom in moments of rare generosity he had sometimes bestowed his boyish approval.

"Why, Jack Mayhew," she exclaimed with unfeigned gladness, extending her hand, "where have you dropped from?" while his hearty "Jupiter, Cynthia, if this isn't luck!" uttered with enthusiastic heartiness while he conscientiously wrung her hand as if it had been that of another man, placed them at once on the plane of good fellowship where they had parted ten years earlier.

In their delight and surprise at the meeting they talked volubly and sometimes both at once, asking about boy and girl friends and referring hilariously to the pranks of those dear old days. But if their tongues were busy their minds were doubly so.

"He's magnificent," Cynthia was saying over and over to herself, with a thrill of delight, though ostensibly she was listening with rapt attention to his account of himself since he left Elmwood and had grown up, while he, filled with admiring wonder at this new Cynthia, suddenly lost the thread of his story and floundered helplessly, after the manner of persons who try to think about one thing and talk about another.

"As I was saying," he observed impressively, making a frantic but ineffectual attempt to recall what he had been saying, "as I was saying—that is—oh, hang it all, Cynthia, I was so busy looking at you that I forgot what I was saying. Don't know where I'm at."

At this plain avowal they both laughed, and he went on with masculine frankness:

"I say, you've done yourself proud. You're ripping, you know!" And he gazed at her with so much of the old boyishness in his face that the reproof that rose to her lips was suppressed. Then a black thought suddenly clutched at her.

"You aren't married, are you?" she demanded so abruptly and intensely that she winced the moment the words were out, while his prompt negative was tempered with a certain shame as he recalled some events of the previous year. Cynthia was so direct that she inspired him with a desire to meet her on her own ground.

"No, I'm not married, but I am afraid that I should have been except for the firmness of the young lady's mother," he acknowledged honestly. "She had other views for her daughter. You see, I wasn't rich enough, and I'm mighty glad I wasn't—now," he added with a fervor that was beyond suspicion.

Still, Cynthia's manner seemed to take on a slight coating of ice. "So you're a blighted being!" she said thoughtfully, her chin resting on the back of her hand and her eyes fixed upon his face speculatively.

They parted a few minutes later, reluctantly, it is true, yet with the feeling that the fine glow of the meeting had suddenly faded.

"He's mourning for that horrid little thing with the mercenary mother," reflected Cynthia scornfully and without any compunction whatever anent the injustice of calling an unknown damsel "a horrid little thing," while Jack Mayhew, his eyes dazzled by the fine, open face of his old playmate, wondered how he could ever have fancied pretty little pink and white Dorothy.

As he remembered Cynthia's mouth, with the little curlycues at the corner that looked like baby smiles, his face grew gloomy.

"Depend upon it, old fellow, you'll find there is some man in the background," he confided to himself darkly on the way homeward. "Don't get the idea that there's any chance for you. A girl like that"— Here he gave up at loss for words to express his convictions on the subject.

But in spite of this mutual cynicism Miss Willliar and Jack Mayhew were seen together very frequently during the next three months. They affected palm rooms and art galleries and such places where a certain soft splendor and quiet made for sentiment and low toned conversation.

It was upon one such occasion that a patron of art who had closed the book of romance before the young people in this story were born overheard the following extraordinary bit of conversation. He was sitting with one eye screwed up critically in the effort to form a judgment of a Claude Monet on the wall before him when he heard the young man murmur anxiously:

"You don't suppose your mother will say that I'm not rich enough, do you?"

"Indeed, no!" replied the girl at his side confidently. "My mother is not that kind. Besides, didn't our mothers know each other before we were born?"

The patron of art looked slightly puzzled. From the tail of his cool estimating eye he sent furtive glances at the pair, vainly endeavoring to follow the young lady's reasoning.

There was an ecstatic silence for a second, during which the patron of art found the two decidedly interesting from an artistic standpoint. It was an eloquent moment—and paintable. It was really a pity. Then the girl's face dimpled and she began to speak.

"Oh, Jack," she said, and her tone was a caress, "isn't it lucky that I got you out of the grab bag after all?"

The patron of art moved away, shaking his head as if the times were getting beyond him. "Got him out of the grab bag," he murmured, just to see how it would sound—"got him out of the grab bag!"

A Bill That Never Passed.

Congressmen sometimes adopt queer expedients to gain the good will of their constituents. Years ago a member from a western state was very much afraid he would be knocked out in the approaching campaign. He had not managed to make himself a power in congress. In fact, his constituents had never heard of him doing anything besides voting with his party when his name was called and drawing his salary. He was desperate. Something must be done to please his people at home or he would be buried out of sight. A bright young woman to whom he had described his troubles said to him:

"You live near the center of the United States, don't you?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you introduce a bill to have the capitol moved to the principal town in your district?"

"The very thing."

And he introduced the bill. It worked to a charm. The people of his district at once concluded he was a great man and with much enthusiasm sent him back for another term, so that he might press his removal bill and secure its passage. In the next congress he reintroduced the same measure, and, though it was promptly pigeonholed in the committee room and of course he never got a chance to make a speech on it, his people stood by him and gave him a third term as a reward for his genius.

Between the Horns of a Dilemma.

He was walking to and fro on the station platform, and his anxiety was so marked that a friend inquired:

"What's the matter, Tibbs? You look as if you had something serious on your mind."

"I have," he replied. "I'm worried; badly worried. I've just found a dollar in my trousers pocket."

"You're the first man I ever saw that worried over finding money he didn't know he had."

"But you don't understand. I can't make up my mind whether I forgot the dollar or whether my wife slipped it in my pocket to try me. You see, she has been accusing me of keeping things from her. Now, if I were to blow this bill in without saying anything to her about it and it should turn out that she had played a trick on me my finish would be worth writing up. On the other hand, if I go to her and confess that I found it she'll simply take the dollar. I haven't been so worried in a month."—New York Press.

An Ancient Foe

To health and happiness is Scrofula—as ugly as ever since time immemorial.

It causes bunches in the neck, disfigures the skin, inflames the mucous membrane, wastes the muscles, weakens the bones, reduces the power of resistance to disease and the capacity for recovery, and develops into consumption.

"A bunch appeared on the left side of my neck. It caused great pain, was lanced, and became a running sore. I went into a general decline. I was persuaded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, and when I had taken six bottles my neck was healed, and I have never had any trouble of the kind since." MRS. K. T. SNYDER, Troy, Ohio.

The Sheriff Overturn.

The surprising thing about the election in Oxford County is the success of Mr. McIntire, the Democratic candidate for sheriff, who received the votes of about a thousand Republicans who otherwise voted the straight Republican ticket. It is also said that he got the votes of a few Prohibitionists, though the inconsistency of such a vote, when it is considered that Mr. McIntire was the only member of the Oxford County delegation in the last legislature to vote for resubmission, is so glaring that the statement may well be questioned.

The causes of this overturn are elusive. No charge was made against Mr. Elliott, the Republican candidate. Throughout the campaign the Democrat has known of only one man who had anything to say derogatory to him, while many of the bolting Republicans have emphatically declared that they had nothing against him. Mr. Elliott has been an efficient officer for several years, not to be scared or bought, and has won the enmity of no one except violators of the law.

Only two tangible reasons are given for their action by those concerned in the movement. One is a dislike for some of the present deputy sheriffs, though it is by no means certain that they would have been reappointed under Elliott. The other reason is the undoubted personal popularity of Mr. McIntire. Taken together these two causes do not account for the magnitude of the bolt, some of which must be attributed to a sort of abstract enthusiasm.

The unpleasant feature of the situation is the interpretation put upon it in some sections, especially by papers outside the state, who reckon it as in the same class with the Democratic victories in the cities of the state, by which Pennell, open mullifier of the prohibitory law, is re-elected sheriff of Cumberland County, and Cummings, who has strictly enforced the law, is defeated in Androscoggin County. Such an interpretation is not justified. While it is undoubtedly true that about every man who favors an "easy" enforcement of the prohibitory law voted for Mr. McIntire, it was not those votes or that issue which elected him. Oxford County has not proved false to her reputation for temperance and law-abidingness and taken her place beside those cities where open saloons are tolerated by either officers or people. The result in Oxford County does not mean that, and the false impression regarding it should be corrected.

The Democrat has faith enough in Mr. McIntire to believe that he is a man of honor, and would in any event faithfully enforce the laws which are on the statute book. But he is especially committed and pleged to such enforcement. In the Democratic county convention he introduced the following resolution, which was on his motion added to the resolutions reported by the committee: "We favor a careful and impartial enforcement of every law of the state of Maine." He is thus directly pledged to a careful and impartial enforcement, and that we believe he will give.

Kicked in the Head.

Lewis Foster of Gray got a serious blow from his horse's heels while at the fair Wednesday. Mr. Foster had taken the bridle off the horse, hanging it on the saddle, and hitched the horse by a halter. He and his sister, who accompanied him, were sitting in the carriage eating their lunch about noon, when the reins slipped down over the dasher. Mr. Foster leaned over the dasher to reach them, when the horse kicked, one foot striking Mr. Foster in the side of the face. There were bad cuts above and beside the eye, and the eyeball was pushed inward by the force of the blow. Dr. Littlefield, who attended him, says that it came very near killing him. He did not recover full consciousness for several hours. He was taken to the house of Aaron Babb, where he is now being cared for. His injuries are doing well, and it is thought the sight of the eye will be saved.

Dangerous Shooting.

The hunting season is on, and reckless people are popping indiscriminately around the woods. On Friday Elmer Campbell, son of Cyrus P. Campbell and twelve years of age, started down the Oxford road from South Paris. When in the woods a short distance below the village, in the road, he heard the report of a gun, and a bullet went through his hand near the knuckles. It was evidently a 22-calibre bullet, and made a wound which is not dangerous, but it was a close call. It is not known who fired the shot, but whoever it was may consider himself lucky that the consequences were no worse. It is impossible to make the warning against such carelessness in shooting too emphatic.

Covenant Meeting the last Friday before the 1st Sunday of the month at 2:30 P. M. All not otherwise connected are cordially invited.

Universalist Church, Rev. J. H. Little, Pastor. Preaching service every Sunday at 11 A. M. Sunday School at 12 M.

Percival J. Parris, Esq., of Philadelphia, is the guest of his mother, Mrs. Columbia Parris, and other relatives here.

Hon. George D. Bisbee and Mrs. Bisbee of Rumford Falls and Mrs. E. R. Josselyn of Portland were guests at George M. Atwood's last week.

Hon. Waldo Pettengill of Rumford Falls was a guest at the Hubbard House last Tuesday. Mr. Pettengill attended the Oxford County fair on Wednesday.

Charles L. Case, Esq., and Miss Clara C. Case returned to their New York home last Tuesday. They will open the house preparatory to the return of the other members of the family who go soon.

Mrs. Clayton K. Brooks returned Wednesday to her home in Cambridge, Mass.

The George L. Mellen place was sold at auction Saturday forenoon. The purchaser was John Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Bailey of Washington, D. C., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Chase of Portland are at the Hubbard House for a few days.

Among the arrivals at the Hubbard House are F. A. Neal and Miss C. G. Neal of Boston.

Mrs. Jackson and Mrs. Hubbard gave the tea at the golf links Saturday afternoon. It was well attended and a very pleasant occasion. Mrs. Chas. Bailey of Washington poured tea.

Recent arrivals at White Mountain View House are:

Miss E. G. Critchfield, Portland.
Major Bouve, Boston.
Mrs. F. B. Cummings and two sons, Harold and Raymond, of Portland.

Rev. E. O. Taylor of Littleton, Vt., has preached at the Baptist church the last two Sundays.

C. W. Parker of the New England House, Boston, with his friend, F. E. Perley, and J. J. Pooler of the Columbia, Portland, were the guests of John Pierce three days of the county fair.

Miss Jeannie Hubbard returned to Boston last week.

The medal play contest at the golf links Saturday was won by Miss Adelaide Case for the ladies and Fred Shaw for the gentlemen.

Loren B. Merrill opened up a valuable pocket in his mining operations at Mount Mica Saturday.

WHITTEMORE DISTRICT.

Chandler Garland and wife, and Mr. Sanders and wife, daughter of Mr. Garland, are stopping with Mrs. Garland's sister, Mrs. Christina Drake.

Arthur Batson has returned to New York from a visit to his aunt, Mrs. Drake.

Mr. Joseph Briggs died very suddenly, Sept. 14th, at South Paris, where he had gone to spend a day at the fair. He will be greatly missed by all that knew him. He was a good Christian man and respected by all, a kind husband and father. He has gone where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

Bryant's Pond.

A big crowd attended the fair on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stowell, who have been the guests of Mrs. Lizzie Day, have returned home.

Mrs. Wiske and son Prescott returned to Paterson, N. J., Tuesday.

A few of the summer boarders are still in the village.

Mrs. Marcus Allen and son Mason returned home from Jonesport Sunday.

Percy Bowker arrived at his home from Wakefield Saturday for a week's stay.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bowker went to West Paris Wednesday evening to attend the marriage of their son, Irvin Bowker, and Miss Lulie Tuell. After the ceremony the newly wedded couple took the 10:30 train for a short wedding trip, and will then return to Portland, where they will reside, Engineer Bowker having bought a nice house in that city.

There has been work in the corn shop a few days since Thursday morning of last week.

Work is booming again at the spool mill.

Dora York has gone to Oxford.

Rev. E. A. Davis, state missionary, is in town and will preach at the Baptist church Sunday.

Miss Stevens, a book agent, is stopping at Mrs. Alonzo Felt's.

There was much rejoicing Tuesday night when the returns gave McIntire the majority for high sheriff. Cannons and guns were fired and there was a big racket generally to celebrate the event.

On Saturday night, about 11 o'clock, the sleepy people were awakened by music and strange sounds, which was kept up for some time. Upon inquiry the next morning it was learned that Fred Farnum and Ida McCullum were married, by Rev. Mr. Nelson, of West Paris, at the home of the bridegroom's brother, James Farnum, Jr., and the music was caused by some of their friends giving them a big serenade.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer H. Waterhouse and son Jamie, of Portland, are stopping at Arthur Ricker's. Mr. Waterhouse had a clam bake at his boat house and invited Jefferson Lodge. About fifteen attended and reported a nice time.

Miss Lena Felt has gone to Oxford as stenographer.

East Brownfield.

Mrs. E. A. G. Stickney and daughter, Isabel, attended the W. C. T. U. state convention at Augusta, last week. Miss Stickney came directly home but Mrs. Stickney will visit Boston and vicinity before returning.

The Congregational circle held a meeting at Mrs. Mary Spring's last Wednesday. A picnic supper was served.

The W. C. T. U. held its regular meeting Sept. 9, at Mrs. Julia Bean's, with quite a number present.

Mrs. E. A. G. Stickney has been entertaining Sara V. Rice. Miss Powderly, who was also at Mrs. Stickney's the first of the season, is now at Dr. Marston's. Miss Powderly was stenographer for Miss Frances Willard for eight years before her death, after which she filled the same office for Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens until her health became so impaired that she was obliged to seek rest and outdoor life for which purpose she is here.

Oxford.

Rev. Mr. Ericsson preached his farewell sermon to his people Sept. 11th. He has been here four years and has been much esteemed for his Christian character and faithful work. Much regret is felt at his departure.

At the morning service at the Congregational church, Rev. Mr. Newport preached an able and timely sermon on "Christian Responsibility in Citizenship."

Harvest Sunday will be observed Sept. 18th.

The schools are in session. Prof. Ernest Pratt, principal of the High School; Miss Lena Perkins, assistant; Mrs. Alma Pendexter Hayden, Intermediate; Miss Kate Wight, Primary. The room in which the primary school is held has been enlarged, a hard wood floor laid and more windows put in. A much needed improvement.

Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Seliger, and Miss Loring attended the W. C. T. U. convention at Augusta.

Rev. Mr. Ericsson administered baptism by immersion Sunday to two sons of Elmer Twitchell.

Everett Cook has returned to Bates College.

Ethel Cook is teaching at Scribner Hill.

Arthur Hayes is at Hebron.

Bessie Newport is teaching at East Oxford.

Mrs. Lena Jackson of Portland is visiting friends here.

Born Sept. 8th, to the wife of Augustus Hale, a daughter.

Died Aug. 25th, Mrs. Abbie McAlister, wife of Levi McAlister, aged 68 years.

Dr. Farris is improving and is able to ride out.

Dr. Gehring of Bethel was called here last week.

West Paris.

A quiet home wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Tuell, Wednesday evening, Sept. 14, when their daughter and only child, Lulie Etta, was united in marriage to Mr. Irvin L. Bowker. The ceremony was performed by Rev. B. S. Rideout of Norway, and only the parents of the bride and groom were present. After the service a dainty lunch of harlequin ice cream and cake was served, and following this Mr. and Mrs. Bowker left on the evening train for a short trip to the mountains. Mrs. Bowker is one of our most popular young ladies and will be much missed by her friends and associates. For years she has been organist for the Baptist society here, and also has had a class in instrumental music. She is an efficient bookkeeper and for the last few years has been extra assistant at the Norway National and Savings Banks. Mr. Bowker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Bowker of Bryant's Pond. He has been employed for some time by the G. T. R. R. and now has a good position in the Grand Trunk yard at Portland. He has purchased a new house in Portland which has been conveniently fitted up and prettily furnished for them to at once go to housekeeping. We extend congratulations and best wishes.

There was quite a delegation from here to the town meeting Monday of last week.

Charles W. Dunham of Brattleboro, Vt., visited his parents two or three days a short time ago and took many acquaintances in this vicinity to a ride in his automobile. It is a fine machine of Stevens-Duryea make and makes as nice an appearance as any we have seen. Mr. Dunham is an enthusiastic admirer of the auto and says it is easier to drive than a horse. He made the trip from Brattleboro here via Littleton, N. H., a distance of 228 miles in 18 hours, making several calls by the way. Now who will invent a practical flying machine?

W. G. Hammond and son, Horatio, are going to pack apples for R. L. Cummings. Almon T. Washburn has gone to Mr. Hammond's to board and care for the stock.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Shaw of Rockland are visiting relatives and acquaintances in this vicinity.

Mrs. F. E. Wheeler and Miss Nellie Marshall have both returned home and both are reported to be gaining in health.

Mrs. Julia B. Kimball has gone to Portland but will return here for a short time the last of the month. Rev. Dr. E. C. Bolles, Mrs. Bolles, and the daughter, Miss Margaret, are in Bethel at present.

Wirt McKenney has gone to Norridgewock High School. He will make his home with his aunt while there. Arthur Cummings from Milan takes his place in the drug store for S. T. White.

Rev. and Mrs. A. K. Baldwin from Winthrop are visiting at A. E. Marshall's.

Of conrse H. C. Loveland was gratified that West Paris Creamery butter took first prize at the Oxford County fair.

Nearly 250 tickets were sold from this station for the fair, beside all those who went in other ways.

Dr. Sullivan L. Andrews, wife and little son, of Clinton, are guests at the home of C. Howard Lane.

Mr. Willard Whittle and daughter, Carrie, of Lynn, Mass., have been spending a few days visiting friends and relatives here.

H. G. Brown exchanged poultry with Mrs. Marilla Ray last week, obtaining over 70 fair sized Plmouth Rock pullets for 38 broilers ready for the Boston market. Mr. Brown now has over 200 birds, and of these 175 are pullets which he intends to keep through the winter. Mrs. Ray has had quite a poultry farm on Curtis Hill, but as she is going to Portland to live this winter is disposing of nearly all her stock.

Mrs. Almeda Richardson is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Churchill.

The Starbird and Andrews relatives in this vicinity and South Paris will have a reunion at Grange Hall, South Paris, Thursday, Sept. 22d, all day and in the evening. There will be a picnic dinner and supper.

Mrs. C. H. Young and son, Roy, are visiting Mrs. Anna C. Young.

Bethel.

Dr. King of Portland was in Bethel Tuesday, called here professionally.

One hundred and twenty-five tickets were sold at this station Wednesday morning for the Norway fair.

The wife and son of Rev. Baman N. Stone of Fryeburg were visiting Mrs. Brackett last week.

Prospect Inn has closed for the season.

Mr. Chauncey Bryant and son Will are making an addition to their store, corner of Main and High Streets. It will be much larger on the lower floor and a nice tenement will be finished on the second floor. The business will be enlarged when the store is completed.

Mr. Furbush, who recently purchased the G. P. Bean store, will make repairs upon the store before putting in his fall stock of goods. Among the improvements will be a new steel ceiling.

The corn shop is working steadily now and if the frost does not injure the corn for another week there will be a good pack.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Grover have been to Orono to attend the wedding of their son Archer to Miss Florence Abbott. Mr. Grover is physical director in Orono and is one of Bethel's successful young men, and many friends will extend congratulations.

Thursday evening, Miss Elsie Livermore of Portland entertained an interested audience in Odeon Hall in her capacity as monologuist. The entertainment was under the auspices of the Universalist society.

The St. Louis party under the supervision of Mr. E. C. Bowler will start Monday, Sept. 19th. Among the Bethel people to join the party are Mr. and Mrs. Eben Kilborn, Mr. Fred Edwards, Miss Rose Kimball, Mrs. Bowler and son and several others.

Rev. E. C. Bolles occupied the pulpit of the Universalist church Sunday.

Rev. Mr. Potter has been in North Bridgton the past week, being called there by the serious illness of his father.

Buckfield.

Mrs. Wilfred Senior of Sanford is the guest of Miss Laura Z. Dean.

N. E. Morrill is confined to the house by stomach trouble.

Geo. Dunham of Boston and sister, Mrs. Stover of Auburn, are visiting their mother, Mrs. Dunham.

Master Charlie Atwood of Rumford Falls is visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Atwood.

Lewis Irish came home from the "war" pretty well dragged out. He was with Payne's Second Regiment Band.

Sept. 13th was observed by the Baptist church, it being the fiftieth anniversary of its organization. Historical reminiscences and roll call were the exercises in the afternoon. The evening exercise was an address by Rev. A. K. P. Small, D. D., of Portland, he being the first pastor.

Hebron.

The funeral of Mr. Joseph Hibbs on Tuesday was largely attended. A delegation of Odd Fellows from South Paris was present.

Mrs. Fred Sturtevant is at home from New Sharon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sturtevant are visiting his mother in this place.

The academy opened Tuesday with a large number of new students.

Ira Bearce went to Concord, Mass., Tuesday, where he is to teach.

Mrs. Shepard and little daughter Marion and Mrs. Goodman with Master Kippie Goodman returned to their home in New York this week. Mrs. Ralph Whitney, their sister, accompanied them.

Herbert Bowman goes to Baring this week as principal of the high school and Henry Bearce returns to Orono at the same time.

Brownfield.

Weather is cold and rainy.

Arthur L. Pendexter, who died in Portland Sunday, was brought here for burial on Tuesday last. He leaves many friends in the village to mourn his loss.

Election was quite exciting here.

Dance at Bradbury's Hall Friday evening.

Edith Swan is in town on a visit.

The Brownfield Cadet Band will furnish music at the Fryeburg fair.

Mrs. Carl Blake has been on the sick list.

E. Gilpatrick is working for Staples.

Dixfield.

The Republicans of Dixfield turned out in great force at the state election last Monday and gave Hon. William T. Cobb, the Republican candidate for Governor, 208 votes against 62 for Hon. Cyrus Davis, the Democratic candidate. The largest vote ever cast before for a Republican candidate for Governor was 123, and Dixfield naturally feels proud of her vote. Samuel Smith, residing nearly ten miles from the polls, a life long Republican and 93 years of age, as also Harvey Kenney, 82 years of age, were at the polls early and their many friends hope that they may live to come many years more. Both are highly respected farmers and men of character.

Wilson's Mills.

Geo. B. Fox of Boston and a friend, Rev. Eugene Shippen, are spending their vacation at Wilson's Mills. They are tenting out, D. York cook and guide.

E. S. Bennett returned home Monday with a pair of work horses and a driving horse. He has a crew at work preparing the foundation for a barn.

Mrs. Grace Tuck returned home from her New York trip Friday accompanied by an aunt.

Parmacheenee Club members are plenty and every available man is guiding. The president, H. W. Poor, and two sons, are at Camp Caribou.

NORWAY.

Wednesday eight automobiles were in front of Beal's Hotel. Those who eat good things know they are to be found at John A. Woodman's.

Mrs. Alice R. Woodsum retired from the position of librarian of Norway Public Library, Saturday. Miss Gregg becomes librarian on Tuesday, Sept. 20. The library will be closed every Monday.

Frank Seavey of Portsmouth, N. H., visited his mother, Mrs. James Smith, during the week.

V. W. Hills has been appointed watch inspector for this division of the Grand Trunk Railway.

Mr. and Mrs. Hal R. Eaton have returned to their home in Belfast. They have been stopping with Mrs. Eaton's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Sargent, during the summer vacation.

The very attractive sign in gold letters on Cummings & Sons' office platform, the first of the week attracted much attention. It is for the cottage, and is "Sat-o Wishou." Just what it means is not clear.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Gayton and family started for Tulare, Col., Wednesday. They will make that place their new home.

H. L. Horne and wife were at Rumford Point several days last week, guests of Dr. and Mrs. Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Hayes.

Jessie M. Warren of Cornish is stopping with her sister, Mrs. Geo. A. Brooks, for a few days.

Helen Cutting Hamlin.

Helen Cutting Hamlin, wife of Dr. Augustus C. Hamlin of Bangor, died suddenly at Paris Hill Wednesday morning of heart failure.

Mrs. Hamlin was the daughter of Judge Jonas Cutting of the Supreme Court of Maine, whom many of the older attendants of court will remember, and since her marriage to Dr. Hamlin in 1857 has been well known here.

Dr. and Mrs. Hamlin had two children, Helen, wife of Edward C. Hamlin of Boston, (whom Longfellow called "Beautiful Helen of Maine" in his poem The Iron Pen) who died in 1901, and Frederick Cutting, whose death occurred in 1891, and in whose memory Hamlin Memorial Hall was established.

Mrs. Hamlin was a woman of wonderful character and sweetness of disposition, as well as beauty of person, and was dearly loved by all with whom she came in contact. Her sorrows she had borne bravely, and forgetting herself always had comforted others.

The greatest sympathy is felt for Dr. Hamlin, whose only remaining tie is the little granddaughter Elinor.

The remains were taken to Bangor Thursday, Dr. Hamlin being accompanied by his son-in-law, Mr. Edward C. Hamlin of Boston. Services were held Friday in the St. John Episcopal church of which Mrs. Hamlin was a member, and the burial was at Mt. Hope.

Hollow—Elsie M. Bolster.
Whittemore—Stanley Wheeler.
Mountain, Nina F. Bradford.
Tubbs—Lottie Giles.
King—Ruth I. Stearns.

The Paris Hill Grammar School will not open until Sept. 26th owing to the fact that no satisfactory candidate has been found for the place since it became vacant. The Webber school is postponed to the same date owing to a delay in the shipment of new desks.

Joseph Briggs.

Joseph Briggs of Paris died quite suddenly Wednesday. He had come down from his home on the farm Tuesday afternoon, and went to the house of Lafayette Waterhouse in the western part of the village. Mrs. Waterhouse was brought up in the family of Mr. Briggs. On the way down Mr. Briggs was taken ill, and died before noon of Wednesday. It was pronounced by the physician a case of acute Bright's disease. Mr. Briggs was one of the old residents of the town, a mason by trade, though he worked some in other lines. He was a member of the Methodist church, a good citizen, and an upright man. He leaves a widow, one son, Frank A. Briggs, and a daughter by a former wife, Mrs. Leroy B. Abbott. The funeral was held at the Methodist church Friday afternoon, attended by Rev. H. A. Clifford. Interment was in Riverside cemetery, where the burial service of the order was performed by Mount Mica Lodge of Odd Fellows, of which Mr. Briggs was a member.

ITS SIXTY-SECOND FAIR.

Exhibition of the Oxford County Agricultural Society.

EVERYTHING UP TO STANDARD.—MORE HORSES AND BETTER HALL EXHIBIT THAN EVER.—ONE DAY'S POSTPONEMENT FOR RAIN.

The sixty-second fair of the Oxford County Agricultural Society has become history, and was a worthy successor to those that went before. In some respects this year's fair was better than ever before. More horses were on the grounds than ever, and the display of cattle, while not quite equal in number to the phenomenal show of last year, completely filled the large accommodations of the society which were enumerated by President Wheeler in last week's Democrat.

Four granges made exhibits in the upper hall, and this combined with the fruit and flowers, the art exhibit and the domestic manufactures and fancy work of the ladies' department, made the show on the second floor excel anything that was ever seen there before. Only in the lower hall, where the vegetables and crops and the canned goods are displayed, was the showing any less than in previous years. Here a portion of the space was not well filled.

The Democrat desires to speak particularly of the work done by the officers of the society in behalf of the fair. There is no perfunctory performance of their work, as something that must be got out of the way, but every man takes hold and works as if he was forwarding a business enterprise of his own. This and the way in which the officers are backed up by the citizens generally are two of the powerful reasons why this fair ranks at the top of the county fairs of Maine, and goes but little behind the state fair.

Dubious weather interfered somewhat with last week's fair. Tuesday was an ideal day, but the crowd is always small the first day. Wednesday morning it was threatening, and probably two thousand people were deterred from starting. Through the day it rained a little occasionally, though not enough to interrupt the programme at all. The pour of Wednesday night and Thursday forenoon left no doubt as to the postponement of the third day's programme. Friday was a fine day, and the programme was fully carried out. The attendance throughout was fair, but undoubtedly much less than it would have been if three good days in succession could have been had.

THE BABY SHOW.

An innovation is the baby show, which was held on Tuesday afternoon, and the entries came in slowly until the day of the show, when a total of forty-nine appeared in the two classes, and the audience had little apprehension of race suicide in this immediate section. The baby show was a great success, the only difficulty about it being the want of a place to arrange the infants where they could be collectively seen by everybody with comfort.

Each baby was given a present, and cash prizes were awarded as follows:

Babies 15 months and under, Stanley Greene, South Paris, $5; Lena Richardson, Greenwood, $4; Ruth Crooker, Norway, $3; Bruce Hosmer, Norway, $2; Lottie B. Libby, Norway, $1.

Babies between 15 months and 2 years, Gwendoline Record, Woodstock, $6; Roland Andrews, Norway, $5; Irene Lewis, Norway, $4; Violet Maxfield, Greenwood, $3; Gerald Stillman, South Paris, $2; Odile King, Berlin, $1.

The names of the babies 15 months and under are as follows:

Ruth F. Crooker, Norway, daughter of A. T. Crooker.
Bruce C. Hosmer, Norway, son of H. H. Hosmer.
Rebecca C. Bubier, Norway, daughter of Frank S. Bubier.

Irene O. Lewis, Norway, daughter of W. A. Lewis.
Birchard Earl Lowe, North Paris, son of B. C. Lowe.

SOME OF THE CATTLE.

In amount, the show of cattle was not quite equal to the record breaker of last year, but the stalls and tie-ups of the society were all filled, and in quality the exhibit was fully up to previous years.

One of the first lots to show up was the Hartford string, which came in Monday night. Of the fifteen yoke of oxen and steers, eight belonged to Moses Young, six to Oscar Turner, and one to Mr. McPherson. They were a handsome lot, as usual, most of them white faces, and carried off the blue ribbon in the town team contest.

The herd from Morey Farm of Mechanic Falls was early on the grounds. This farm is owned by Boston parties, and Herbert M. Tucker, formerly of Paris, is general manager, and was on hand with several assistants. The herd consists of fifteen head, all registered A. J. C. C. Jerseys except one grade cow.

From the Holmes Farm, Oxford, thirteen of the Herefords for which this farm is noted were shown.

A. W. Gerry of Norway exhibited a pair of handsome 3-year-old Dutch Belted steers.

E. L. Pike of South Waterford exhibited fourteen head of Holsteins, thoroughbreds and grades, and two yokes of oxen.

James Thomes of Harrison, three yoke of oxen.

John P. Penley of Paris, a yoke of heavy oxen.

Abbott Brothers of Norway had a yoke of oxen which were here this year for the eighth time, and which have pulled in the drawing match every year since they were three years old; also another yoke of oxen and a yoke of steers.

D. S. Brackett of Oxford showed 6 Sussex cows and heifers, and five Ayrshire heifers, all thoroughbreds.

C. A. Richardson of Greenwood, a Devon bull and a yoke of 3-year-old steers.

L. F. Everett, West Paris, six head, a thoroughbred Devon bull, a grade calf, and two yoke of oxen.

E. W. Penley of Greenwood, a good pair of 3-year-old steers.

From J. F. Howland's Mountain View Farm, South Paris, six head of thoroughbred Ayrshires were shown.

E. E. Chapman of South Paris showed a herd consisting of ten cows and a pair of steers just under a year old.

H. A. Robbins of Norway exhibited a handsome string of Herefords, including five yoke of grade steers, and eight cows and heifers.

S. H. Millett of Norway showed a long and good string of Herefords, in fact, the largest number of cattle shown by one exhibitor, comprising twenty-four head.

V. H. & G. H. Dunn of Norway, nine Ayrshires, a thoroughbred bull and grade cows and heifers.

F. W. Noyes, Norway, a thoroughbred Ayrshire bull, seven grade cows and heifers, and two calves.

F. L. & A. J. Millett, Norway, a Durham bull, and eight cows and heifers, Durhams and Guernseys and grades.

J. S. & J. H. Millett, Norway, a yoke of oxen, a registered Durham bull 2 years old, and eight cows and heifers.

C. H. Brett, Otisfield, four thoroughbred and seven grade Holsteins.

Almon Churchill, South Paris, four cows and heifers, including two especially handsome 2-year-olds.

Thayer Brothers, Paris, two yoke of steers and two heifers.

B. F. Richardson, South Paris, a grade Jersey cow and a yearling heifer.

John Martin of South Paris exhibited his cow which has been here regularly for a number of years, and

The Oxford Democrat.

SOUTH PARIS.

Miss Olive M. Stuart is in Boston after her fall stock of millinery.

A. J. Knight of Rumford was a guest at Rev. H. A. Clifford's last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Noble returned from a visit to Rumford Falls Saturday.

Arthur Dascomb and wife of Auburn spent Sunday with Mrs. N. F. Strickland.

Mrs. Lettie Thayer of Bethel has been a guest at Theodore Thayer's a few days.

Mr. Olin Chase returned last week from a trip in the Northwest where he has been since last May.

Mrs. Ansel Swift returned home last week from Barton Landing, Vt., where she has spent the summer.

L. E. Pulsifer of Natick, Mass., who was at one time in the shoe business here, is in town for a few days.

Fremont P. Penley and wife of Portland, formerly of South Paris, were in town last week to attend the fair.

Archie Page, Jose Lyman and Elmer Hood visited the family of George Giles and other relatives during the fair.

The subject of the afternoon discourse next Sunday in the Universalist church will be "The Blessings of Poverty."

William Cushman, the well known Hartford correspondent of the Democrat, is visiting friends in town for a few days.

More or less local matter is unavoidably omitted from this issue of the Democrat, for reasons which should be obvious.

Miss Alma Linder, who has been at George A. Briggs' during the summer, started for her home in Mankato, Minn., Thursday.

The Epworth League will meet Wednesday evening with Mr. T. M. Davis on Main Street, and expect a very interesting programme.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wise have been visiting their sons, Dwight and Frank, in Gardiner, and their niece, Mrs. Will Haynes, of Richmond.

Rev. Howard Clifford went to Portland today to meet the committee of the State Sunday School Association of which he is a member.

Meeting of Good Cheer Wednesday afternoon. A large attendance is desired as business of importance will come before the meeting.

George H. Cummings and wife of Mechanic Falls and George Stevens and wife of Rumford Falls were guests at Wirt Stanley's during the fair.

Evening meeting at the Universalist church at 7. Subject: Reverence. For whom, for what? How to cultive it. References: Matt. 6:9, Phil. 4:22.

All the hose companies, and the hook and ladder company, are requested to come out Tuesday evening, Sept 20, for practice, by order of the engineers.

The usual fair dance was held in the hall Wednesday evening. Music by Stearns' Orchestra. Although the night was rainy, there was a good crowd out.

The Relief Corps will give a supper and sociable in Grand Army Hall, Saturday evening, Sept. 24th, at the usual prices. Come one, come all! It is been time again.

Mrs. Susan Preble and Miss C. A. Preble of Auburn, Mrs. Elizabeth Waitt of Roxboro, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Jason Rowe have been the guests of N. M. Rowe recently.

Mrs. Ethan Willis is still with relatives at West Paris, her health not permitting her to go to Massachusetts, where she will spend the winter, for a few weeks yet.

The ladies of the Good Cheer society will have their first supper and entertainment for the season in the hall connected with the church, Tuesday evening, Sept. 27th, at the usual prices.

George R. Morton, who was about to sail for England last week, was recalled from Boston by the illness of his little daughter Barbara. She has been seriously ill, but is now hoped to be improving.

The Rev. Martin L. Hall of Chicago, Ill., has been visiting Mrs. Nathan F. Strickland and W. B. Strickland. Mr. Hall is the great-great uncle of Merton and Louise Sumner, on their mother's side.

Mrs. Mary Chandler, who has been in Maine for about two years, started on her return to Denver, Colo., Monday morning. She was accompanied by her son, Fred P. Chandler, who will be gone a number of weeks, visiting the St. Louis fair on his way home.

A Christian Endeavor mass meeting will be held at the Congregational church Monday evening, Sept. 19th, at 7:30. Rev. C. D. Crane will preside and a model Christian Endeavor meeting will be conducted and various methods of work will be discussed. All are invited.

There will be a sociable after the regular meeting of Mt. Pleasant Rebekah Lodge next Friday evening, and every lady member who attends is asked to bring two hard boiled eggs and a teaspoon. It is hoped there will be a good attendance as lots of fun is expected.

Mrs. Elvira Barrows died Thursday morning at her home on Main Street near the river, at the age of 88 years, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Barrows was an aunt of the late Charles F. Morse, who some ten years since came to care for her, and since his death two years ago she has been cared for by Mrs. Morse.

Mrs. William Mason and daughter Annie of Baltimore, Md., Mr. and Mrs. Hatch and nephew of Biddeford, Mrs. Herbert Cole of Lynn, Mass., Barney Gunn of Berlin, N. H., and Mr. and Mrs. Seymour Brooks and son, Clarence Cole and Lottie Bryant of Bryant's Pond were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Dunham during the fair.

The correspondent of the Lewiston Journal is astray in his arithmetic, as may readily be seen, when he figures that 342 Republicans in Paris voted for McIntire. As Cobb received 580 votes and Elliott 466, it will be seen that the boit was less than half what the Journal correspondent states. In point of fact, just 158 otherwise straight Republican ballots bore McIntire's name.

The committee in charge of the lecture course at the Methodist church have secured Hon. W. W. Stetson, State Superintendent of Schools, President W. F. Berry of Kent's Hill, and Rev. B. C. Wentworth of Old Orchard. The lecture by Mr. Wentworh will be on "A Trip to California." Rev. Howard Clifford will probably give "A Ramble in Europe," a lecture already heard in over fifteen towns and cities.

Wednesday evening the news spread around the village that Angus Bridgham, the 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. L. Bridgham, was lost. Early in the afternoon, at the fair grounds, his father gave him some money to go to a stand near by and buy some ice cream, and that was the last he saw of the boy. When this became known about 9 o'clock, a party of men with lanterns started for the fair grounds. There they searched the grounds quite thoroughly, and inquired of about every one who was spending the night there, also called at all the houses in the immediate vicinity of the grounds, without getting any real trace of the boy. As they were about to start back to the village at 10 o'clock, Mr. Bridgham appeared at the gate and told them that the boy had been located at Gorham, N. H. It seems from all that was learned about the matter that the boy came to his home about 3 o'clock in the afternoon. No one was there and the village was of course nearly deserted. Probably he started back up the street, and reaching the station about the time of the afternoon train, followed the crowd on board. He is always extremely reticent, and the conductor, though he tried all the way from here to Gorham, was unable to get any information. On arrival at Gorham the conductor left him in charge of the station agent there, and the next morning he was at home again, apparently none the worse for his extended journeying.

The Norway Cadet Band played all three days of the fair, and strangers on the grounds inquired with much interest where the band came from. It is unusual to hear a band hailing from a country town making such music.

THE RACES.

The three days' races taken as a whole were very satisfactory and fully up to the average of those usually given at this fair. The Wednesday races were especially exciting and close, while those of Friday were less so, and the free-for-all, which carried the largest purse and was naturally the fast race of the fair, was something of a disappointment, narrowing down to only two horses. It was evident from the first heat that Commodore Dewey had that class at his mercy. The best heat, however, was done in under 2:20, which is good speed for this track.

The famous little pills.

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy, After years of backache suffering, Days of misery, nights of unrest, The distress of urinary troubles, To find relief and cure? No reason why any reader Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble, but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

THE PUZZLER

No. 260.—Floral Arithmograph.

An old fashioned flower. A word of ten letters.

My 5, 9, 6, 7 are a female relation.
My 10, 9, 6 are a great light.
My 10, 2, 5, 1 are a cleansing substance.
My 8, 9, 7 are a poor little house.
My 10, 5, 3, 7 are a common and useful mineral.
My 8, 5, 7 are an article of attire.
My 7, 2, 1 are a toy.
My 10, 3, 5, 4 are to kill with violence.
My 10, 8, 9, 7 are to close.
My 10, 5, 1 are the juice of plants.

No. 261.—In the Woods.

[Find the names of twelve trees.]

In the woods, O, a knoll I know,
And I pine for the trees and to roam.
Kindly let us spruce up and go,
For my ma pleads for me to come home.

The sewing is done; yes, the hem.
Lock the door and come quickly; now, do!
We'll pass the cedar grove, dear Lem,
And rest 'neath the still arches of yew.

Now we're off, and we must not stop;
'Tis the first time for you and for Dash.
Good dog! Woods are fine. Guns will pop.
Larches beneath. In the streams we'll splash.

No. 262.—Postman's Puzzle.

An ardent admirer received a letter which made him a maker of gloves.

A favorite child received a letter which made him a maker of verses.

A poor person lost a letter which made him a medium for writing and printing.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

Everything is in the name when it comes to Witch Hazel Salve. E. C. DeWitt & Co. of Chicago discovered some years ago how to make a salve from Witch Hazel that is a specific for Piles. For blind, bleeding, itching and protruding Piles, eczema, cuts, burns, bruises, and all skin diseases, DeWitt's Salve has no equal. This has given rise to numerous worthless counterfeits. Ask for DeWitt's—the genuine. Sold by F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

Cleopatra dissolved the pearls. "Did you ever see a costlier banquet?" she asked.

"Yes," answered Antony, scornfully, "I once tipped the waiter".

Seeing her pains had gone for naught, the lily of the Nile wept bitterly.

Westward the orb of glory takes its way,
Wisconsin is the state, you hear everybody say,
It's made itself famous by one great stride;
Rocky Mountain Tea has made its name world wide.
Orin Stevens; F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

Knicker—"Did Hardup bull or bear the market?"

Bocker—"Neither. I think he only monkeyed with it."

A POWER FOR GOOD.

The pills that are potent in their action and pleasant in effect are DeWitt's Little Early Risers. W. S. Philpot of Albany, Ga., says: "During a bilious attack I took one. Small as it was it did me more good than calomel, blue mass or any other pill I ever took and at the same time the effect was pleasant. Little Early Risers are certainly an ideal pill." Sold by F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

HOMEMAKERS' COLUMN.

Correspondence on topics of interest to the ladies solicited. Address: Editor HOMEMAKERS COLUMN, Oxford Democrat, Paris, Maine

Bachelor Maids.

So much has been said and written with regard to those women who have been styled "bachelor maids," that one would imagine there was nothing further to be stated in connection with them. There are still people in existence who imagine that the state of "bachelor blessedness" is not the desire of the sex; others there are who wax severe on the cheeriness displayed by the modern maid in the often self-chosen solitary lot. Some girls prefer not to marry; others, by force of circumstance, do not get the right opportunity; others, again, may have loved too absolutely to care to replace the lost ideal. No hard and fast rule can, in fact, be applied to "bachelor maids," who, whatever the cause of their celibacy, are in a far better position than those sad old maids of former years, those "unclaimed treasures" to whom, in some instances, romance never came, and who had to live their narrow lives too often on inadequate means just because self-support was decried for women. The bachelor maid is a brighter specimen of humanity than the "old maid," and younger by reason of her many interests and her status in the ranks of the world's workers.—Ex.

Wasteful Indulgence.

We desire that our children shall have every advantage in life which we can possibly obtain for them; and so tenderly, so dotingly do we regard them that, not content with educating them carefully and at great expense, we also undertake to give them rich dainties, diurnal rations of candy, really elegant clothing, furs, jewelry, and trinkets and luxuries innumerable, suitable only to persons of mature years. Here we might take a lesson from the English, whose daughters are kept in "brown Hollands" and "pinafores" to an incredible extent, while Uncle Sam's little girls possess fans, bracelets and kid gloves to their heart's content. Children with their bright eyes, clear pink skins and abundant hair, are beautiful objects without external aids, and it is certain that most mothers spend far too much on their adornment.

But this matter of clothing is so vital that any reasonable disbursement for it must not be inveighed against. A child must early acquire the habit of wearing good things, and of taking care of them. In seeking a situation much depends on the applicant's appearance, while an employee in out-of-date and faded garments is felt to reflect discredit on an establishment and stands in danger of being suddenly "turned down." Truly, "the apparel oft proclaims the man," and it is not in personal attire that retrenchment is either practicable or advised.—Good Housekeeping.

Advice to Housekeepers.

Inexperienced housekeepers and even those who think they are too successful to need advice, will do well to remember these simple rules when buying meat.

To test beef press it down with the thumb. If it rises quickly, the meat is good.

Beef should be fine grained, of a bright red color, with streaks of clean, white-looking fat. The meat will be tough unless there is plenty of fat.

When beef is of the best quality, the fat is always a fresh-looking white. Good mutton should always look dark, except where it is freshly cut. Flabby, unwholesome-looking meat must never be bought.

A housekeeper should always bear in mind, in ordering meat, that beef, when boiled, loses one pound weight in every four; and when roasted, eighteen ounces. Mutton loses even more than this, and the fact must be taken into account where much meat is eaten.

To understand how to choose game and poultry is quite a liberal education of itself. Young tender chickens, that are a pleasure to eat, have quite smooth legs. Avoid the horny-legged ones, unless you only wish to boil them down for broth.

Geese and ducks should have their feet and bills a bright yellow color, and with no hair on them. But don't reject an otherwise irreproachable duck just because he has red feet, because that only proves him to be a wild creature and not brought up in a farm yard. The breast must also be firm to the touch.

As to fish, it is always stiff in the body, clear red in the gills, and bright in the eyes when newly caught, and should not smell unpleasantly. Avoid the dull, sunken-eyed fishes, as they have not freshly left their homes.

Fruits must be firm and free from specks of any kind whatever. And all small fruits should be separate the one from the other, not all crushed up together anyhow, as we too frequently see.

Lobsters should be chosen by their weight. The male is the heavier, and is the better to boil. The female is not so heavy, but is better for sauces and salads. She may be known by her being the possessor of a broader tail, and has the two uppermost fins within the tail less stiff and hard than those of the male.

Vegetables should always look and feel firm, and not flabby. Lettuce must be crisp, not in the withered condition it is too often offered for our inspection.

When canned provisions are bought, the cans should be quite round and shapely. If there are any dents, see that they go inwards; that is only the effect of an outward blow. An outward bulge in any part of the tin is, however, fatal, as it shows that decomposition has set in inside, and the contents of such cans are unfit for food.—Ex.

To Make an Oil Stove Burn Satisfactorily.

Thoroughly clean and refill every time after using. If you allow oil and dirt to accumulate on it, it is sure to smell unpleasantly when lighted. Don't cut the wick, but rub off the charred parts with a rag or piece of paper. Always turn the wick down before extinguishing it, and leave turned down till you are going to light it again. Remember that the top of the part up and down which the wick runs needs to be kept thoroughly clean. Give it a rub both inside and out every time you clean the stove, and, if a crust forms around the top scrape it occasionally.

Where closet room is at a premium—and what woman in these days of cramped houses and elaborate wardrobes ever has enough closet room?—it is a good plan to have a pole arranged in the clothes closet, right down the center, the ends resting in sockets, the same as are used for curtain poles. If the closet be of any length whatever, a number of dresses, coats, waists and skirts may be supported on this pole by means of coat hangers. If the ordinary style of hanger is used, a separate one is required for each waist and skirt, but there are improved types, which easily accommodate both skirt and waist. In such a closet it is easy to keep the clothes in good condition.

If you wish to keep your weight down don't drink water at meals. Take tea and coffee. Rise early, walk at least five miles every day, and don't take a nap after exercising. Shun fresh or hot bread. Flee from potatoes, peas, macaroni, olive oil, cream, alcoholic drinks, sweets and pastry.

For foot sprains, slide the fingers under the foot, and, having greased both thumbs, press them successively with increasing force over the painful parts for about a quarter of an hour. The application should be repeated several times, or until the patient is able to walk. This is a simple remedy for a very frequent accident, and can be performed by the most inexperienced.

When a child burns him or herself, cover the place at once with common kitchen whiting mixed with sweet oil to a thick paste. If you have no oil, use water. If whiting is not at hand cover the burn with flower from the dredger. Always cover up a burn with cotton wool, flannel, or a silk handkerchief so as to exclude the air.

Five necessary things for children. Plenty of milk, plenty of flannel, plenty of fruit, plenty of fresh air and plenty of exercise. If a mother will see her children gets these things, she may be almost certain of her little ones keeping well and strong.

Would Trust Michael Angelo.

Two members of the Rolling Stone Club of Medina, N. Y., have written a book telling how to "do" Europe on $4 a day. "Florence is a dream," they say. "We came for three days and stayed five, and dragged ourselves away unwillingly. Yet it can be done in a day, and we saw it being done that way more than once. The Baptistery is noted for its beautiful bronze doors. We were standing one day before the pair by Ghiberti, when a fine equipage whirled up. Two exceedingly prosperous looking Americans, with their wives, occupied the seats.

"'These are the doors,' droned the guide on the box seat, 'that Michael Angelo said were good enough for heaven.'

"'All right,' said one of the jovial tourists, looking at his watch. 'We'll trust his judgment. Let 'em run!'

"And as they were whisked away, after just five seconds before one of the most artistic creations in Europe, we saw the man who sat with his back to the driver nearly dislocate his neck as he twisted around to ask:

"'Who'd you say said that?'

"And the Limited having passed, we resumed our leisurely enjoyment of the masterpieces."

City of Millionaires.

"There are more millionaires in the little city of Uniontown, Pa., in which I live, than in any of the smaller towns of the United States, with the possible exception of Colorado Springs," said William T. Lewis to a Washington Post reporter.

"In fact millionaires are so common in Uniontown that they excite no reverence or especial regard. We have plutocrats in such abundance that they cut no more ice than the average citizen. A Uniontown plutocrat, moreover, has never been known to have a swollen head and citizens who could cash in for from $2,000,000 to $3,000,000 mix in with their brethren in the same every day raiment they wore prior to their acquisition of wealth.

"Our location in the great field of Pittsburg coking coal is the source of Uniontown's pecuniary plethora. It is an impressive spectacle to see this big district with its thousands of coke ovens, by the glare of which the nocturnal wayfarer may pursue his journey as easily as under the noonday sun. By day the smoke hangs like a pall over the land, blackening trees, grass and fences and making of our town a miniature Pittsburg. It isn't a beautiful landscape but people who prefer the utilitarian to the esthetic seem to like it."

"Life insurance," said the man who was disposed to argue, "is nothing but a game of chance. It's based on averages and probabilities. There isn't an element of certainty in it, from first to last."

"Oh, yes, there is."

"Just name it, will you? If you can I'll take out a policy."

"The certainty is that the man that's insured will die some day," said the life insurance agent, taking a blank application out of his pocket. "What amount do you want to carry?"

THE GOOD OLD WAY.

A severe cold or attack of the grippe is like a fire, the sooner you combat it the better your chances are to overpower it. But few mothers in this age are willing to do the necessary work required to give a good old-fashioned reliable treatment such as would be administered by their grandmothers, backed by Boschee's German Syrup, which was always liberally used in connection with the home treatment of colds, and is still in greater household favor than any known remedy. But even without the application of the old fashioned aids German Syrup will cure a severe cold in quick time. It will cure colds in children or grown people. It relieves the congested organs, allays the irritation, and effectively stops the cough. Any child will take it. It is invaluable in a household of children. Trial size bottle, 25c. Regular size, 75c. For sale by F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

Fond Papa—Johnny, the stork has brought a new baby to our house; would you like to see it?

Little Johnny—No; but I would like to see the stork.

FROM 148 TO 92 POUNDS.

One of the most remarkable cases of a cold, deep-seated on the lungs, causing pneumonia, is that of Mrs. Gertrude E. Fenner, Marion, Ind., who was entirely cured by the use of One Minute Cough Cure. She says: "The coughing and straining so weakened me that I ran down in weight from 148 to 92 pounds. I tried a number of remedies to no avail until I used One Minute Cough Cure. Four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me entirely of the cough, strengthened my lungs and restored me to my normal weight, health and strength." Sold by F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

"He's got the most self-conceited superior airs about him."

"Of course. He's a New Yorker."

"But he's the worst of all the New Yorkers I ever met."

"Yes, he only moved there recently from Hoboken."

THE STOMACH IS THE MAN.

A weak stomach weakens the man, because it cannot transform the food he eats into nourishment. Health and strength cannot be restored to any sick man or weak woman without first restoring health and strength to the stomach. A weak stomach cannot digest enough food to feed the tissues and revive the tired and run down limbs and organs of the body. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests what you eat, cleanses and strengthens the glands and membranes of the stomach, and cures indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles. Sold by F. A. Shurtleff & Co.

New Use for the Auto. Mrs. Johnson—I wish I could think of something to keep my husband at home nights.

Mrs. Smithson—Give him an automobile.

"Matrimony knows no lucky day."

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., New York.

EXPERIENCE PROVES IT

Best of all Spring Medicines—More Acceptable to the Stomach and Gentler in its Action

"With my own and my family's experience we consider 'L. F.' Atwood's Bitters the best medicine in the market. For a spring medicine it is certainly the best. It is better than pills, oils, salts or other disagreeable medicines and is more easily taken, more acceptable to the stomach, more gentle in its action, and more beneficial in its effects. I would prefer one bottle of 'L. F.' Atwood's Bitters to two doctors."—R. H. SEARLES, W. Farmington, Me.

The True "L. F." is a Time-Tested Remedy of Reliable Efficacy

MISFIT GLASSES.

Every person who wears glasses should consider the importance of wearing only those that are perfectly adapted to their EYES. Self-fitted or improperly fitted glasses are generally worse than none at all. Many EYES are injured by wearing such glasses. If your EYES tire, blur, water, ache, or are
