Nearly sixty years ago the commandant of a British frigate wrote him a letter from Aberdeen, the Premier of Great Britain, that Oregon was not worth a hang in that the Columbia River salmon would not rise to the fly line. The Premier's words were passed on to that part of Oregon lying north of the Columbia River as the true line for the boundary between the two nations. It was found that the Columbia salmon that would not rise to the fly have since made Oregon famous.

A story is told in the New York Tribune of Gen. Sir Alfred Horsford who believed in a celibate army. A soldier once sought his permission to marry, saying he had two good reasons for wanting to do so. "The first," he said, "is the savings bank. 'Well, go away,' said Sir Alfred, 'and if you come back this day year in the same mind you shall marry. I'll keep the account open for you.' The second," suggested the soldier, "is my wife's mother, Mr. Reuben. By mary?" "Yes, sir, very much so," he replied. "I am a very busy man. Yes, you may marry. I never believe there was so much constancy in man or woman. Right face; quick marriage. As the man left the room, turning his back to the woman, she asked him, "Is that the same woman?"

The Isthmian canal commission has decided to call for bids to build, equip and operate by the turn-of-key method a new 100,000-ton freight barge. The lowest bidder will be required to take over all the work of construction, including the purchase of materials and equipment. Any contracts that may have been made by the contractor prior to the bidding will be null and void.

The commission's principal reason for this change of plan is the labor problem, as it is believed that the private contractor will be less hampered by the labor situation than the government. Nevertheless the commissioners insist that the government will not relinquish the responsibility for the construction of the barge. It may be operated by one individual or corporation, which, however, may be composed of several subcontractors, each of whom will be required to furnish a bond for the work. The companies bidding must have a capitalization of $5,000,000 over all debts and encumbrances, and the successful bidder must furnish a bond of $300,000. The compensation for the contractor will be on the percentage plan, and to the lowest bidder the contract will be awarded, the total cost of the barge to be shared by the engineers, two of whom will be appointed by the bidder and three by the government. The competition is now open, and bids are due on May 15. Shonts says that it would take many years for the government to get an adequate force of competent engineers and experts, because these men are not plentiful in the United States. Consequently it is short cut so utilize the trained forces

Two cabinet officers will travel to Kansas City, Mo., early next month to speak from the same rostrum. The speaker will be the big drawing card, and they will be the big drawing card of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, which meets in the Missouri city on November 19. Special interest attaches to the speaker because he is governor of the State. Although he has not given any outline of what his speech will be, the topic announced is "The Possibilities of Commerce Between the United States and South and Central America."

Inducing the Federal, District or police authorities to help him celebrate forty-fourth anniversary of his military service. The young man, a Springfield, who is a clerk in the Springfield, claims to have been the young drummer who ever rattled the "dickie" in the parade of the 1890s. To prove that he is still as good as he was when he stepped out to the front, he attempted to celebrate the anniversary this week by starting an inspiring drum movement on Pennsylvania Avenue marching to Fort Myer, drumming continuously. He didn't want to travel alone, however, and asked for a squad of police to accompany him. None of the marshals seemed impressed with the idea and neither was their command. Then the police were appealed to.

IN view of the recent troubles in Cuba, officials of the government are watching with interest the progress of the work on the Key West extension of the Florida East Coast Railroad. The extension is being pushed forward on the keys, or islands, that run out from Florida, and when completed Key West, troops easily could rush there by train and be within a few days of the island of Cuba. It is said that a regular ferry service between Key West and Havana will be established, thus putting Cuba direct under the benevolent and watchful eye of Uncle Sam.

his big Uncle, Henry H. Flagler, at the head of the railroad company, has advised the authorities that the work probably will be completed and the Panama Canal within two years. Secretary Taft is said to be especially interested in the scheme.

The President received, at the White House, a demure Washingtonian this week who dared him to his teeth with impunity. This daring person was a dentist named M. Street. The President didn't. The attack was a dentist on M street, and he kept Mr. Roosevelt in the torture chair for one long hour, when a doctor called in to see what was the matter. The President carried home. When the President emerged he wasn't looking exactly pleasant. He managed to essay a smile, but it was a little like the shrill creak of a couple of hundred school children, who had gathered. Then he drove home.

If the United States were wiped off the face of the globe, it is a question whether the civilized world would not regret it. Through the efforts of a purveyor for mankind, the Bureau of Statistics of the Department of Commerce and Labor this week issued a statement showing that this country in the past year had exported 30 million tons worth $43,697,654 more breadstuffs this year than in the same time last year. The total amount of bread-lands during those nine months was just $130,667,719. It is doubtful if any nation in the history of the world ever has been able to act so generous.

Lady Houston.

The decision of the government authorities to have the work of digging the Panama Canal by contract has caused no surprise in Washington where it has been well understood for a long time that such a course should be followed. The decision is in line with the inside story of developments at Panama from the beginning, the announcement has brought a sense of relief. Friends of the canal have long predicted that the work would be done within a reasonable time and the decision carries some promise of the realization of their hopes. Opponents of the canal, however, are pointing out the fact that the government has practically been forced to have recourse to the contract plan, carrying out this great constructive undertaking as another proof of the fact that in this country, at least, there is no artificial municipal and municipal carry on pure business operations so successfully as private capital and enterprise.

THE variety of clearly differentiated garments that will be fashionable during the incoming fall and winter season is so great that every man, whose taste is not positively bad, will easily be able to find among them several of every type, from ulster to dress coat, that will please him; and those of our readers who are fond of new things and new expressions of familiar effects will be delighted by the many, unexceptional in every way, on which Dame Fashion has stamped her seal of approval, and which will undoubtedly be very popular. The trade and the general public are to be congratulated on the fact that the craze for absurdly wide shoulders and for the lady-like bottom flare of the sack is either dead or dying everywhere in the country, and that sanity promises to be a leading feature in men's clothes for a considerable time to come.

TWICE-A-WEEK

Legal action against the Holy Ghosts is making haste slowly. In Androscoggin county supreme court this week five cases against Rev. Frank W. Sanford, head of the Society, were not pressed on advice of the Court. One of the charges against Mr. Sanford was manslaughter and four were cruelty to children. The expense that would be incurred in getting witnesses, to say nothing of the ability to find them, was assigned as the chief cause for wiping them from the criminal docket. Regardless of these cases and their futility, there seems to be an increasing demand for the abatement of certain conditions at Shiloh. Perhaps the remainder of the colony will join those pilgrims who are now journeying to the Holy Land.

The government is finding it an easier matter to create warships than it is to get the crews to man them. Wednesday's despatches say that the cruisers Minneapolis and Newark are to be put out of commission with a view to utilizing their officers and crews in filling the complement of the armored cruisers Washington and Tennessee. The latter are to be employed as convoys to the battleship Louisiana on the occasion of the President's visit to the Canal Zone.

It is reported that Samuel Gompers may abandon his political campaign on account of the small audiences he is having and the fact that the laboring men are not giving him the support he expected. This is somewhat surprising in view of "the great moral victory" which Mr. Gompers claims to have achieved in Congressional Littlefield's district.

The government is in need of additional docking facilities on the Atlantic coast. Under the present naval plans the United States will soon have 28 battleships. As each of these must go into dock twice a year, the present accommodations are not adequate. Why not build one in Penobscot where all the ships are having their trials?

Hazing still exists at Annapolis, but in much milder form, it would appear. The charge against one "hazer," who has actually been placed under arrest for it, is that he compelled a fourth class boy to be known by a silly nickname. The evil will be reduced to a minimum if that sort of thing continues.

In Democratic Texas, where Senator Culberson made a speech against Bryan's scheme of government ownership, the other day, the cheering of the speaker's remarks amounted to a demonstration. Mr. Bryan does not appear to have struck 12 on this proposition.

The proposition to build the connecting link of railroad between Rockland and Belfast was immediately dubbed "another hot air scheme" by the cynics. Hold your horses, gentlemen. Give the company a chance to organize.

In the New York and Massachusetts campaigns the lie is given with a freedom that makes the recent Maine contest look like 30 easy lessons in etiquette.

THE LATE J. W. CLARK.
It is due to the late James W. Clark and his co-workers in the spiritual field, that a fitting allusion be made to his life-long belief in the truth of spirit communion. The knowledge of this truth has been his "magic staff" for many years. Upon it he leaned and from it drew the inspiration which made his whole life one of noble endeavor, business honesty, genuine integrity, and made him a lover and well-wisher of humanity in general. His mortal tenement had become unfit for the habitation of his progressive spirit and he gladly vacated, to enter one imperishable, in a land of unending beauty, to mingle with loved ones gone before.

COLLECTING CUSTOMS.

It Is Expensive Work In Some of Uncle Sam's Districts.

The fight for the abolition of a large number of customs houses where the expenses largely exceed the receipts will be resumed in Congress next winter. Many of these are in New England. The delegations from those states sidetracked the bill last session. Representative Payne will find another excuse to offer his pet measure in the report just compiled upon the receipts at various ports.

It cost the Government but three cents to collect a dollar at Boston, whereas Uncle Sam has to hand over $126.27 to collect the same amount at Little Egg Harbor, N. J., where during the last fiscal year the receipts were only forty cents and the expenses $96.81. At Barnstable, Mass., it cost $4.55 to collect one dollar, and at York Me., $28.27.

It costs forty-six cents to collect one dollar at Aroostook, where the receipts were $41,790. At Bangor the receipts were $305,333, and the rate of collection 74 cents; Bath, $47,355, rate 12 cents; Belfast, $4045, rate 78 cents; Castine, $275, rate 31.95; Frenchman's Bay, $418, rate $5.51; Machias, $1108, rate $4.22; Eastport, $30,275, rate 27 cents; Portland, $225,816, rate 25 cents; Waldoboro, $6043, rate $1.20; Wiscasset, $619, rate $5.27; York, receipts $5, rate $28.27 per $1.

LEGISLATORS' VIEWS.

Repeal of Sturge's Law Opposed By Only Four Who Have Expressed Themselves.

A Democratic interview of Maine legislators-elect is thus reported in the territory of Meddybemps:
The forty who define their position, on at least one question submitted, includes twelve senators and twenty-eight representatives. They are divided by counties as follows: Aroostook eight, Androscoggin four, Cumberland sixteen, Kennebec four, Knox four and Washington four. Politically, they include sixteen Democrats and twenty-four Republicans. On the question of re-submission, twenty-four favor a re-submission resolve, twelve are opposed to it, and four are undecided. Of the twenty-four favoring such a measure eight are Republicans and sixteen Democrats. It will be noticed that the number favoring falls far short of the necessary two-thirds, although the margin of undecided Republicans would, if added to the friends of the measure, be sufficient to carry it.

On the repeal of the Sturge's law, the sentiment is more one-sided. A repeal is favored by thirty-two, opposed by four and a matter of indifference to the remainder. We find twenty-four in favor of increased taxation of wills, with no one opposed to it, and sixteen giving no opinion. There are twenty votes in favor of an initiative and referendum act, four opposed and twelve indifferent. On the question of a state real estate system, only eight are decidedly in favor, four are opposed, eight are in doubt, and twenty express no opinion. One gentleman writes in favor of exempting mortgages from taxation.

MADE NINETEEN KNOTS.

Battleship Minnesota Exceeded Her Requirements By Over One Knot.

In her trial over the Rockland course, Wednesday, the first class battleship Minnesota made one mile at the rate of 19 knots an hour, and averaged 18.87 knots in her five runs at top speed. In the performance of this feat the Minnesota not only exceeded the record of her sister ship Louisiana by many points, but confirmed the opinion of naval experts that the ships of the 16,000 ton type will not rank far below the 19 knot class. The Minnesota and Louisiana were both built at Newport News, Va. and W. A. Post, general manager of the shipbuilding concern, was very jubilant over the fine records which have been established. Among the prominent naval men who shared in his rejoicing Wednesday were Capt. John Hubbard, who will command the Minnesota when she is in commission; Lieut. Com. Miller, who will be the executive officer; Lieut. Com. Hone, who will be chief engineer; Lieut. Com. Buchanan, inspector of equipment; Lieut. Com. Moffatt, of the Washington bureau of equipment; and Assistant Naval Constructor Williams. Capt. W. G. Melvin was the navigating officer. The naval trial boards were made up as follows: Board of inspection, Admiral J. N. Hemphill, chairman; Capt. H. C. Osterhaus, Commander I. S. K. Reeves, Commander C. C. Marsh, Lieut. Com. E. W. Eberlee and Naval Constructor R. H. Robin; engineering trial board, Commander Reeves, chairman; Commander W. W. White, Lieut. Com. Strother Smith, and Lieut. Com. George McElroy.

The Minnesota left her anchorage Wednesday morning at 6:30 o'clock and at 7:15 with the smoke pouring volumes from her stacks the signal was given for a run at full speed. When she had crossed the measured mile it was found that the distance had been covered at the rate of 19.42 knots per hour. The official speed, with tidal corrections made, was 19.06. The number of revolutions producing this fast mile was 125.21. The number of revolutions necessary to produce the contract speed of 18 knots was found to be 114.5. In the trial of the Louisiana the maximum number of revolutions was 125 and it required 119 to give the contract speed. The two ships differ in the respect that the Louisiana is a turbine screw steamer, while the Minnesota is an out-turning screw. The latter is found to possess many advantages for maneuvering qualities.

The trial was without a marring feature, and the ship showed little or no vibration when running at top speed. The trial boards have another busy week next week, when they will superintend the final acceptance trials of the battleships Virginia and New Jersey. The final acceptance trial is a very rigid test. All the batteries are fired, crews are drilled, the ships are run at full speed four hours, and there is a 35-hour run in which they must maintain 75 per cent of their horse power. These trials will take place during the week of the 10th to the 14th of December. The next trial on the Rockland course will be that of the battleship Vermont, early in December.

In her endurance run Thursday, under adverse weather conditions, the Minnesota averaged 18.851 knots per hour.
When the peddlers call to sell you an improved gas burner, it will be well to remember that A. Ross Weeks will sell you the best burner made for 75 cents, all complete and put in place. It will give you 25 per cent more light with an equal consumption of gas, it will have a concealed adjustment that will not catch dust and require skilled attention. It will not be self-lighting.

There is no self-lighting attachment that works satisfactorily after a little use. There have been several of them placed on the market but all are abandoned after a short time. They are sold only by peddlers. Why? Ask those who buy them. If you need a new burner A. Ross Weeks will install one on thirty days trial with the guarantee that there is none better and will remove the same if not satisfactory.

AN OLD ENDORSEMENT OF THE McPHAIL.
[From "The Music Trades", June 12, 1906.]
An interesting coincidence connected with the recent sale of a McPhail piano by the Maine Music Co., of Rockland, Me., to Governor W. T. Cobb, of Maine, and his giving of a strong endorsement of the fine quality of the instrument is that it is the second time that a McPhail piano has been sold to the Governor of Maine. In looking over some old files Mr. Owen recently found the following letter written by Joshua L. Chamberlain, at that time governor of Maine:
Brunswick, Me., Nov. 15, 1875.
"Messrs. A. M. McPhail & Co.,
"Gentlemen: After more than two years' trial, the pianoforte from your house fully justifies the high expectations with which it was selected. It is a superb instrument, and has been so pronounced by guests who would be recognized everywhere as competent judges. I feel that this commendation is fairly due and I give it freely and cordially.
"Yours most respectfully,

THANKSGIVING, NOV. 29.

President Roosevelt Issues Proclamation to People, Naming the Date.

Washington, Oct. 23. The President today issued a proclamation naming Thursday, Nov. 29, as a day of thanksgiving. The text of the proclamation is as follows:

A PROCLAMATION.
"The time of year has come when, in accordance with the wise custom of our forefathers, it becomes my duty to set aside a special day of thanksgiving and praise to the Almighty because of the blessings we have received, and of prayer that these blessings may be continued. Yet another year of widespread well-being has passed. Never before in our history nor in the history of any other nation, has a people enjoyed more abundant material prosperity than is ours; a prosperity so general that it should arouse in us no spirit of reckless pride, and least of all, a spirit of heedless disregard of our responsibilities, but rather a sober sense of our many blessings and a resolute purpose, under Providence, not to forfeit them by any action of our own.

"Material well-being, indispensable though it is, can never be anything but the foundation of true national greatness and happiness. If we build nothing upon this foundation, then our national life will be as meaningless and empty as a house where only the foundation of individual and national life lived in accordance with the laws of the highest morality, or else our prosperity itself will in the long run turn out to be a curse instead of a blessing. We should be both reverently thankful for what we have received and earnestly bent upon turning it into a means of grace and not of destruction.

"Accordingly, I hereby set apart Thursday, November 29, next, as a day of thanksgiving and supplication on behalf of the people of the United States, and their churches, devoutly acknowledging all that has been given them, and to pray that they may in turn receive the power to use these gifts aright.

"In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.
"Done at the city of Washington, this 22d day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and six, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and thirty-first.

(Seal) "THEODORE ROOSEVELT."
By (Signature) "Elihu Root, Secretary of State."

The school board held a special meeting Tuesday night to discuss the advisability of closing the public schools on account of the scarlet fever epidemic. The members of the board of health were present by request. It was learned that there were 19 cases of scarlet fever in the city but that only four or five of the patients were school children and only 12 houses were quarantined. The board decided not to close the schools but there is to be a daily inspection of the schools and the inspection of the teachers, assisted by Miss McMaster, formerly superintendent of Knox hospital. It was reported that there was not a case of diphtheria in the city, and that the scarlet fever, the general health of the city is excellent. The scarlet fever cases are mild ones.

People who frequent the markets will find change in the appearance of some of the products of the packing houses, especially in the line of boneless ham and frankfurters. These two products have always been distinguished by their bright red color, which gave to them an appearance which was certainly attractive, and probably not one person in a hundred ever gave a second thought as to what gave the sausage and ham that color, but now their glory has departed, so to speak, likewise the coloring for the pure food laws have stepped in and stopped the use of the coloring and it has been decided not to be good to be taken into the human stomach. As the goods are now placed on the market they are probably just as wholesome as before, but do not look so well, for while the frankfurters closely resemble in color the home-made article, the boneless hams look as if it had been given a good soaking in muddy water.

Bangor people who are lovers of the succulent mushroom have been delighting in their favorite food for the last few days. The rain and continued mild weather have combined to start the growth of the long delayed crop of cryptogams and many pastures are dotted with the shining white caps. Mushroom hunters were out Sunday and Monday in abundance.

The Courier-Gazette's exclusive article in regard to the likelihood of having the naval trial course removed to Provincetown, Mass., has given rise to many expressions of regret. The members of the trial boards who were here this week hope that the land owners will be induced to offer reasonable terms. They say that the Rockland course is much superior to the Provincetown course, because there is much deeper water, but the beacons now in use are but flimsy wooden structures that easily discerned from the ship and likely to blow down in any heavy gale. A member of the trial board said to a Courier-Gazette reporter Wednesday: "If the government can get the land on which to erect permanent beacons it will be a great thing for Rockland as it will mean that ships in commission will come here regularly to standardize their propellers. The advantage of having commissioned ships here will be readily seen for they have 700 or 800 men on board while on the occasion of a builder's trial there are only about 350, mostly mechanics who do not have convenient opportunities of getting ashore. Every new ship that comes here is the means of bringing several thousand dollars to Rockland and if commissioned ships come here they are apt to remain several days giving more or less shore liberty to the men on board." It seems too bad to let a plum like this slip from our hands.

Manager Bird was present in behalf of the company and made a convincing argument in favor of the proposition to bury the wires. He stated that the work would be done this year if possible but there had been so many delays in getting the permit that cold weather was at hand. He promised that the work should be completed before the expiration of the coming year. The order passed by a vote of 3 to 2. Aldermen Littlehale, McLean and Hart voted in favor of granting the permit, and Alderman Blackington, who occupied the chair in the absence of Mayor Thompson did not vote.

In clothing, as in other trades, the prime requisite of success is character. Before a store can command a large trade for any length of time, it must secure the confidence of the public by a straightforward and honest representation of the goods they have to sell. We try to give our patrons the sort of service to inspire their confidence and the rapid rate that we are increasing our business speaks for our success in this direction. Our great source of supply ought to attract every man who appreciates good clothing at fair prices.

George N. Harden, who is rapidly acquiring a national reputation as a marine photographer, made some pictures of the battleship Minnesota Wednesday, one of which was obtained by the actual risk of life. When a battleship coasts down the street at the rate of 20 or 25 miles an hour she kicks up a bow wave and leaves a wake that forbids close acquaintance on the part of the small boats that hover in the vicinity.

Mr. Harden obtained one picture at very close range when the cruiser Colorado came near to test the course over a year ago. At that time his launch (and a reporter of The Courier-Gazette was with him) approached within 300 feet of the big and fast-moving warship. With Mr. Harden's familiarity has bred contempt. He has taken pictures from the crow's nest and squinted his camera from every imaginable range, but still unsatisfied he determined Wednesday to go a step farther, or rather a step nearer. So when the Minnesota came down the coast at the rate of about 19 knots he caused the launch to be set almost in her pathway and met by the spray that was thrown up by the craft he made a hasty snatched from a point almost directly under her bow. The launch then scooped for dear life and the venturesome photographer obtained a picture that will put conclusively in the shade anything made by the high priced Boston picture taker who came here for the company.

Mr. Longan was a member of the Gloucester city council three years and is now a member of the Republican State Central committee for the 3d district. As Mr. Randall's guest he is securing the best the city has to offer.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—At daybreak an assistant keeper of the lighthouse, pacing the gallery, discovers in the distance a ship in distress. Stephen Brand agrees to swim to it. Upon reaching the ship he comes in contact with a shark, fishes and kills it and goes aboard. He finds the body of a dead man and a strange bundle beneath the sail. Jones, the lighthouse keeper, discovers a basket and hauls Brand and his strange bundle safely up.

CHAPTER II—The bundle contains a live baby, of which Jones assumes the care. On a part of the child's clothing are the initials E. T. The little one is placed in care of the nurse who has charge of Stephen Brand's child in Penzance. They call the child Enid Trevillion.

CHAPTER III—Eighteen years later Constance Brand, daughter of Stephen Brand, and her adopted sister, Enid Trevillion, go to the lighthouse with an old fisherman, Ben Polard, in a sailboat named Daisy. They are caught in a storm, during which they hear the signal for help coming from the rock. They reach the lighthouse in safety and find that two of the men, Jackson and Bates, have been hurt. Brand sends the men back with Ben.

CHAPTER IV—Jackson and Bates are lowered into the boat, and Polard starts for Penzance. The Daisy is met by Lieutenant Stanhope, who is devoted in love with Enid. He has strayed out for the lighthouse in answer to the signal for help. On meeting the Daisy he turns back to assist with the injured men.

CHAPTER V—From a lighthouse window Enid spies a boat approaching the rock. It is the Lapsing, owned by a man named Lawton. Brand discovers that it is sailed by Stanhope. He signals for them not to land, and Stanhope returns to Penzance. The girls spend the night at the lighthouse.

CHAPTER VI—During the night a furious storm renders sleep impossible. At dawn from the lighthouse gallery Brand makes out a ship in great distress.

CHAPTER VII—Charles A. Pyne, a young man on board, throws a rope from the foremast to Brand, and by means of a pulley seventy-eight people are saved before the ship sinks.

CHAPTER VIII—Mrs. Vansittart, Pyne's aunt, is strangely moved at sight of Constance.

CHAPTER IX—Mrs. Vansittart inquires about Stephen Brand and his daughter and seeks to meet Brand, but fails.

CHAPTER X—Stanhope in the Falcon approaches the lighthouse at daybreak in an attempt to land, but Constance, but is unable to land on account of high seas. Brand signals news of the disaster. Constance and Pyne become well acquainted.

CHAPTER X—Continued.

"Here, Mamie, you carry the cup and go shares in the tea."

"I don't like tea," protested Mamie.

"If I can't have coffee I want some milk."

"Well, now, you wait a little bit, and you'll be tickled to death to see what I'll bring you. But drink the tea. It's good and hot. Skip inside, both of you."

He held the door partly open, and they vanished. He heard Mrs. Taylor say:

"Didn't I tell you those two little dears would do their own business best?"

He regained the service room to find Brand sleeping the remains of his biscuit in an almost empty cup. The lighthouse keeper greeted his young friend with a smile.

"I suppose that you, like the rest of us, never had such an appetite in all your days," he said.

"Oh, I'm pretty well fixed," said Pyne, with a responsive grin.

"Then you are fortunate. There is usually a wretched little fiend lurking in a man's inner consciousness which prompts him to desire the unattainable. Now, I am a poor eater, as a rule yet this morning I feel I could tackle the toughest steak ever cut off a su perannuated cow."

"I don't deny," admitted Pyne, "that the idea of a steak sounds good. That is, you know," he went on languidly, "it might sort of appeal to me about 1 o'clock."

"I should have thought you could do with one now, especially after the hard night we have gone through. Perhaps you are a believer in the French system and prefer light breakfasts."

Brand finished the last morsel of biscuit and drank the cup dry.

"It's a first rate proposition—when you are accustomed to it," said Pyne. "But talking about eating when there's little to eat is a poor business anyway. Don't you find that?"

"I do indeed."

Brand rose and tapped the barometer, adjusting the sliding scale to read the tenths.

"Slightly better," he announced. "If only the wind would go down or even change to the northward."

"What good would a change of wind do?" inquired Pyne, greatly relieved himself by the change of topic.

"It would beat down the sea to some extent, and then they might be able to drift a buoy, with a rope attached, close enough to the rock at low tide to enable us to reach it with a cast of a grappling iron."

"Do you mean that we could be ferried to the steamer by that means?"

"That is absolutely out of the question until the weather moderates to a far greater extent than I dare hope at present. But, once we had the line, we could rig up a running tackle and obtain some stores."

"Is it as bad as all that?" said the younger man after a pause.

They looked at each other. The knowledge that all true men have of their kind leaped from eye to eye.

"Quite that bad," answered Brand. Pyne moistened his lips. He produced a case containing two cigars. He held it out.

"Let us go shares in consolation," he said.

Brand accepted the gift and affected a livelier mood.

"Come along, Elsie."

oils can be isolated by treatment with steam superheated to about 600 degrees F."

Brand threw out his hands with a little gesture of helplessness. Just then Constance appeared.

"Dad," she cried, "did not Mr. Pyne tell you of my threat?"

"No, dear one. I am not living in terror of you, to my knowledge."

"You must please go to sleep, both of you, at least until 10 or 11 o'clock. Mr. Emmett is sending a man to keep watch here. He will not disturb you. He is bringing some rugs and pillows, which you can arrange on the floor. I have collected them for your special benefit."

"At this hour? Impossible, Connie."

"But it is not impossible, and this is the best hour available. You know quite well that the Falcon will return at high water, and you must rest, you know."

She bustled about with the busy air of a housewife who understood the whole art of looking after her family. But something puzzled her.

"Mr. Pyne," she inquired, "where is your cup?"

"I—er—took it down," he explained.

For some reason Constance felt instantly that she had turned the tables on him since their last encounter. She did not know why. He looked confused for one thing; he was not so glib in speech for another.

"Down where?" she demanded. "Not to the kitchen. I have been there since you brought up your breakfast and dad's on the same tray."

"I breakfasted alone," remarked Brand calmly. "Mr. Pyne had feasted earlier."

"But he had not," persisted Constance. "I wanted him to."

She stopped. This impudent American had actually dared to wink at her, a confidential, appealing wink which said plainly, "Please don't trouble about me."

"You gave your tea and biscuit to somebody," she cried suddenly. "Now, who was it? Confess!"

"Well," he said weakly, "I did not feel—er—particularly hungry, so when I met those two little dears fooling around for an extra supply I—er—thought nobody would mind if—er—"

"Father," said Constance, "he has not had a mouthful!"

"Then take him downstairs and give him one. You must have found my conversation interesting, Mr. Pyne, while I was eating, but before you go let me add a word in season. Stand or fall, each must abide by the common rule."

Pyne, with the guilty feeling of a detected villain, explained to Constance how the cup might be rescued.

"I shall keep a close eye on you in future," she announced as they went below.

"Do," he said. "That is all I ask for."

"I am a very strict person," she went on. "I had always encouraged Mr. Pyne in the sailor's idea of implicit obedience."

"Kick me. It will make me feel good," he answered.

Entering the second bedroom, where Elsie and Mamie were seated contentedly on the floor, she stopped and kissed them. And not a word did she say to Enid as to the reason why Mr. Pyne should be served with a second breakfast. She knew that any parade of his unselfishness would hurt him, and he, on his part, gave her unspoken thanks for her thought.

Conversation without words is an art understood only by master minds and lovers, so these two were either exceptionally clever persons or developing traits of a more common genius, perhaps both.

CHAPTER XI.

THE tribulations which clustered in beehive swarm in and around the Gulf Rock lighthouse during those weary hours were many and various. Damp clothing, insufficiency of food, interior temperatures ranging from the chill draft of the staircase message and stairways to the partial suffocation of rooms with windows closed owing to the incursions of the rising tide—this unpleasant aggregate of physical misery was seriously augmented by an ever increasing list of sick people, an almost total absence of any medical comforts and a growing knowledge, on the part of those not too despondent to think, that their ultimate relief might be deferred for days rather than hours.

No mere man can understand, and a woman of ordinary intelligence can but dimly imagine, the difficulty and arduousness of the task undertaken by Constance and Enid.

To cook and supply food for eighty-one persons with utensils intended for the use of three, to give each separate individual an utterly inadequate portion so skillfully distributed that none should have cause to grumble at his or her neighbor's better fortune—here were culinary problems at once complex and exhaustive.

By adopting fantastic devices, bringing into service empty tin cans and sardine tins, they found it was possible to feed twenty at a time. This meant the preparation of four distinct meals, each requiring an hour's work. Long before the last batch, which included themselves, was lamenting the absurd discrepancy between appetite and antidote in the shape of anything to eat, the first was ravenous again.

The women complained the least. In the occupants of the two bedrooms the girls encountered a passive fortitude which was admirable. It was an extraordinary scene which met their eyes when they entered either of these stuffy apartments. Many of the rescued ladies had not given a thought to changing the demitoe of evening wear on board ship for more serviceable clothing when the hurricane overtook the vessel. They all it is true possessed cloaks or wraps of some sort, but these garments were still sodden with salt water and therefore unwearable, even if the oppressive warmth in each room rendered such a thing possible. Their elegant costumes of muslin, cotton, silk or satin were utterly ruined. Lucky were the few whose blouses or bodices had not been rent into tatters.

Some of the worst sufferers in this respect were now the best provided. Blankets and sheets had been ruthlessly torn up and roughly stitched into articles of clothing. Mrs. Vansittart, for instance, who first suggested this via media, wore an exquisite Paris gown and a loose dressing jacket arranged of yellow blanket, the component parts of which she persuaded two other women to sever utterly.

The model provided by her own elegant figure.

A few quick witted ones who followed her example exhausted the available stock, and pillowcases and rugs would have undergone metamorphosis in the same way had not Constance come to the rescue by impounding them, declaring that they must be reserved for the use of those sufferers who needed warmth and rest.

The men passed their time in smoking, singing, yarning and speculating on the chance of the weather clearing. Ultimately, when the banging of the waves again and again smote the granite, a small section began to plan petty attempts to pilfer the provisions. It is the queer mixture of philosopher and beast in the average human being that makes it possible for the same man in one mood to risk his life voluntarily to save others and in another to organize a party to pilfer.

After an ingenious seaman had been detected in an attempt to pick the storeroom lock, and when a tray of cold ham was deliberately upset while a football scrimmage took place for the pieces, Mr. Emmett stopped these ebullitions by arming the watch with a small section of the food supply and issuing stern orders as to their use in case of need.

Here again the warring elements which form the human clay were admirably displayed. On duty, under the bonds of discipline, the coarse grained foreman hand who had gobbled up a sardine lunch, if fat and full, was the first successful scuffle would brain the daring rascal who tried to better his condition by a similar trick a second time. Discipline sometimes converts a skulker into a hero.

When the state of the tide permitted, storm shutters were opened and a free draft was allowed to enter through the door. Then all hands eyed the sea anxiously. The wind was strong and piercing, and the reef maintained its ceaseless roaring. Whenever a window opened toward the land there was a small crowd waiting to peep through it. The last sense of orderliness gradually permeating the inmates of the lighthouse actually resulted in the formation of queues, with stated intervals for moving on. There was a momentary relief in looking at the land. The cliffs, the solitary white houses, the little hamlets half hidden in cozy nooks, seemed to be so absurdly near. It was ridiculous to imagine that help could be long deferred. The seaward passing of a steamer, carrying flowers from the Scilly Isles to Penzance for Covent Garden, caused a flutter, but the sight of a Penzance fishing smack scudding under jib and close reefed foresail between the rock and Guthebras point created intense excitement. Noah, gazing across the flood for the return of the dove with the olive branch, could not be more pleased than when the falling sails of the granite ark when the brown sailed boat came within their view.

The window in the coal cellar opened fair toward the Land's End, and the grimy occupants of this compartment could look their fill at the messenger of life. A rich New Yorker in vain offered $100 to any man who gave up his place in the line after he himself, by the operation of the time limit, was removed.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain specific Nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was this fact that first correctly led Dr. Shoop in the creation of that now very popular Stomach Remedy—Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success and cure to Dr. Shoop and his Restorative. With out that original and highly vital principle, no such lasting accomplishments were ever to be had.

For stomach distress, bloating, biliousness, bad breath and sallow complexion, try Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend.

lessly sent away from the narrow loop-hole. Dainties and pounds sterling have a curiously depreciated value under such circumstances.

The men of the watch were always questioned for news by the unemployed majority. They related the comings and goings of the Falcon, carried sympathy from story to story, promiscuous passing to and fro being forbidden owing to the narrowness of the stairs, and seized every trifling pretext on their own part to reach the top-most height and feast their eyes on the extensive panorama visible from the stout-girl's gallery. Had they watched the coast line less and the reef more their observations would have had value.

Quite early in the day the purser handed to the occupants of each room a full list of passengers and crew, with the survivors grouped separately. In only three instances were husband and wife both saved. The awful scene in the saloon accounted for this seeming discrepancy. Dazed men and senseless women were wrenched from each other's clasp either by the overwhelming seas or during the final wild fight for life at the head of the companion stairway. A wreck, a fire in a theater, pay little heed to the marriage tie.

The third and last meal of the day was eaten in silence and gloom. All the spare lamps were diverted to the kitchen, because Brand, during a further detailed survey of the stores, made in company with Mr. Emmett and the purser, discovered that there was an alarming deficit of fresh water in the cistern.

In the hurry of the earlier hours a serious miscalculation had been made. It became an instant necessity to use every heating appliance at command and start the distillation of a drinkable fluid.

The Gulf Rock light did not possess a proper apparatus. The only method that could be adopted was to improve the distillation of sea water into a tube. The exterior was varnished and wrapped in wet cloths to assist the condensation of the steam; hence, every kettle and pot being requisitioned for this paramount need, cocoa could be supplied to the women alone, while the taste of the water even when disguised was nauseating. No more potatoes could be boiled. Raw, they were almost uneatable. And potatoes happened to be the food most plentiful.

The genuine fresh water, reduced to a minimum in the cistern, was only a better in condition than it was when filtered, and Brand decided that it ought to be retained for the exclusive use of those seriously ill. Patients were multiplying so rapidly that the hospital was crowded, and all fresh cases as they occurred perforce remained where they were.

Neither Constance nor Enid felt the time hang heavily on her hands. Both were too busy, though the new ordinance regarding the food supply transferred their attention from active cooking to the replenishing of utensils, which must be kept full of salt water at boiling point.

Pyne was an invaluable assistant. In the adjustment of refractory canvas tubes over hot spots, in the manipulation of the condensing plant so that it might act efficiently, in the trimming of lamps and the stoking of the solitary coal fire he insisted on taking to himself the lion's share of the work.

He always had a pleasant quip or funny story to brighten their talk.

"You can conquer trouble with a grin," he said. "Worry doesn't cut ice."

Enid, of course, chaffed him about his American accent, which she protested, she would acquire after a week's practice.

"It is so quaint to our ears," she went on. "I never before grasped the reason why Mark Twain makes me laugh. All he does is to act as a phonograph. Every American is a born humorist."

"There's something in that," admitted Pyne. "We do try to disinter a joke. Say, have you girls ever heard how an English professor explained the Yankee drawl?"

"No?" they cried.

"He said it represented the effort of an uneducated man to make a speech. Every time his vocabulary gave out he lifted his voice to show he wasn't half through with his ideas."

"Oh," said Constance, "that is neither kind nor sure."

"Well," agreed Pyne slowly, "that is the view a friend of mine took of the remark. So he asked the professor if he had a nice agreeable sort of definition, all ready for use, of the way Englishmen clipped their syllables. The other fellow smiled and said he hadn't pondered on it. 'I guess,' said my friend, 'it represents the effort of an educated man to talk English.'"

Though the laugh was against them, they were forced to snigger approval.

"I think," said Constance, "that our chief national failing is pomposity, and your story hits it off exactly. In one of our small Cornish towns we have a stout little mayor who made money in cheese and bacon. He went to see the Paris exhibition, and an Exeter man, meeting him unexpectedly at the foot of the Eiffel tower, hailed him with delight. 'Hello, Mr. Mayor,' he began. 'Hush,' said the mayor, glancing around mysteriously. 'I'm 'ere incog.'"

None who heard these light hearted young people yelling with merriment would imagine that they had just dined off a piece of hard baked bread made without yeast and washed down with water tasting of tar and turpentine.

"Now, Miss Enid, your turn!" cried Pyne.

Her eyes danced mischievously. "Unfortunately, it's the accident of birth, I am deprived of the sense of humor," she said.

"It seems to be in the family all right," he hazarded, looking at Constance.

"Alas," said Enid, "I am an American."

"I'll smile now, if that is all," said Pyne.

"But, please, I am not joking a little bit. When you go ashore you will probably hear all about me, so I may as well take the wind out of the sails of gossip. I am a mere waif who came sailing in out of the west one day in a little boat which must have come from the new world, as no one appeared to have lost either me or it in the old. Dad picked us both up and adopted me."

Pyne did not know whether to take her seriously or not until he sought confirmation in a pair of tranquil eyes, which he gazed into at every opportunity.

"It is quite true," said Constance gravely. "I suppose that the mysterious affinity between parents and long lost children which exists in story books is all nonsense in reality. No family could be more united and devoted to each other than we are, yet Enid is not my sister, and my father is hers only by adoption. He found her, half dying, drifting past this very rock, and before he could reach her he fought and killed a dreadful shark. We are very proud of Mr. Pyne. You see, he is our only relation. Enid knows neither her father nor mother, and my mother died when I was a baby."

"Great Scott!" cried Pyne.

He turned quickly toward the door. Mrs. Vansittart, very pale, with eyes that looked unnaturally large in the faint light, stood there. For an instant he was startled. He had not seen Mrs. Vansittart since they came to the rock, and he was shocked by the change in her appearance. He did not like her. His alert intelligence distrusted her, but it was out of his business in life to select a wife for his uncle, as he put it, and he had always treated her with respectful politeness. Now, owing to some fleeting aspect which he could not account for, some vague resemblance to another which he did not remember having noticed before, he viewed her with a certain expectant curiosity that was equally unintelligible to him.

She held out a scrap of paper.

"Mr. Trill is here," she said quietly.

"Here?" he repeated, wondering what she meant and perplexed by her icy, self contained tone, while he thought it passing strange that she had no other greeting for him.

"Well," she said, "that is the best word I can find. He is near to us—as near as a steamer can bring him. Mr. Brand has received a signaled message. He went out and sent it to you by a man. I inquired where you were and was told you were engaged in the kitchen."

For some reason Mrs. Vansittart seemed to be greatly perturbed. Her presence put an end to the gaiety of the place quite effectually.

The young man took the paper in silence.

He read:

Dear Madam—A signal just received from the Falcon runs as follows: "Mr. Cyrus J. Trill is on board and sends his love to Enid and Charlie. He will make every preparation for their comfort ashore and trusts they are bearing up well under inevitable hardships. Yours faithfully, STEPHEN BRAND."

Pyne strode to the door.

"I must see if I can't get Mr. Brand to answer the old boy," he cried. "Perhaps you have attended to that already."

She did not make way for him to pass, but he went.

"No," she said. "I came to seek you on that account. If not too late, will you tell your uncle that I do not wish to delay a moment in Penzance? He will please me most by arranging for a special train to await our arrival at the station."

"What's the hurry?" he demanded.

"A woman's whim, if you like, but a fixed resolve nevertheless."

"Will you travel in that rig-out?" he asked quizzically.

"It is a matter to call at a shop if we reach shore by daylight. Then I can purchase a cloak and hat to serve my needs; otherwise it is matterless how I am attired. Will you do this?"

"Why, certainly."

She gave a little gasp of relief. In another instant Pyne would have gone. But Enid, who happened to glance through the window which opened toward the north-west, detained him.

"There is no hurry now, for sure," she said. "The Falcon is halfway to Carn du by this time. I do not suppose she will return until it is too dark to do more than signal important news very briefly."

"But this is important," cried Mrs. Vansittart shrilly. "It is of the utmost importance to me."

"Fraid it can't be helped, ma'am," said Pyne civilly. "Anyhow, we're not ashore yet, and I can't see that any time will be wasted."

The electric bell jangled in the room, causing Mrs. Vansittart to jump visibly.

"Oh, what is it?" she screamed.

"My father is calling one of us up," explained Constance. "It may be a message from Jack. You go, Enid."

Enid hurried away. She had scarcely reached the next door before Mrs. Vansittart, who seemed to have moods in full compass, said sweetly:

"Convey my deep obligations to Mr. Brand, won't you, Charlie? Indeed, you might go now and write out the text of my message to your uncle. Some early opportunity of dispatching it may offer."

"All right," he said in the calm way which so effectually concealed his feelings. "Shall I escort you to your room?"

"By no means. I came here quite unassisted. Miss Brand and I can chat for a little while. It is most wearying to be out all day and all night in one little room. Even the change to another little room is grateful."

A HASTY MARRIAGE

He held his arm about her in the saddle for a moment, trying to say something, but he did not say it. He turned and untethered his own horse, vaulted up, and the two rode quietly away over the grass. Suddenly Bird drew rein.
Her dog was following.

"Go back—oh, go back, dear Jack!"
she said sorrowfully.

The animal lay down on the ground, whining. The girl's lip quivered in the darkness; the old dog was all she had to leave. The gate was open. They passed out and rode swiftly down the road.

"Faster!" said Childreth suddenly.
She heard it, too, that faint stroke of a horse's hoof. In her fear she was mad enough to touch Don with her wrist. He plunged and kicked in a passion of anger and then stood still in stately defiance.

"Don, for God's sake!" she pleaded.
In that fearful moment she heard a fall. She turned her head. Childreth's saddle was empty. She heard him moan upon the ground.

In an instant she was on her feet down among the wet grass.
"My leg is broken. Your horse kicked me," he said. "I am helpless, and you must go alone."

"Where?"
"To a log house on the banks of the Stranger. An old man lives there who will take care of you. Send me help.
Oh, my God!" in agony.

"Oh, Childreth!" she sobbed.
"You can find it, for the road is straight until you come to the river," he went on, commanding himself.

"Then show Don the rein. He has been there a hundred times with me.
Oh, my child, be quick! This is dreadful!"

She sprang up and vaulted into the saddle. They sped forth like an arrow.
When the wretched girl heard once again that pursuing footstep, she sat silent, knowing that her only helper was doing all that could be done.

The great cottonwood trees flew by them.
Don's breath grew labored. Never once had he faltered, and though growing sick in the saddle, Bird dared not detain him. From behind she heard a measured lope. As it drew nearer it came close to cutting her off from every happiness in life.

They thundered over a bridge. It was but a moment before the horse in the rear struck the bridge also. Looking back, Bird could see her pursuer.

She knew then what was almost inevitable. Gordon Churchill was mounted on a white horse which was the pride of his stable. His pace and endurance were indeed wonderful.

"God help me!" said Bird in despair.
At the sound of her voice Don broke his pace and returned. To her horror, he rushed straight toward her foe. He raised himself and towered above the great, gleaming white horse, who threw himself upon his haunches. Don seized the rider. He grasped him by the shoulder, tore him from the saddle and, throwing himself back, literally shook the life out of him. The man dropped from his mount to the ground, senseless forever.

And Bird looked down on the black heap in the road, knowing that the man was dead. He was her half brother.
As a child he had struck her bare shoulders with his riding whip. He had knuckled her down. And yet, as her guardian, he would have saved her to marry him. She loathed the very air he breathed, so she looked down at him and said from her heart, "I am glad you are dead!"

Two miles more and she reached a house. Old Allen came. He was the owner. "Is it you, honey, all alone?"
"It is Miss Donaldson. Mr. Child-reth is hurt and is lying in the woods on the turnpike. You must go to him instantly." He put up his arms to her.
She dropped into them in a swoon.

In the gray light of morning she raised her head from the bed of hurt er's blankets where she lay and saw from the window old Allen leading two horses up to the door. One of them was Churchill's white horse, and he helped her the litter on which Child-reth lay all but dead. They brought him in, ghastly and senseless, and "Shake up a good bed, wife," whispered the old man to the crone of a wife. "He'll lie by for weeks."

Bird heard. She stood silent, looking down on the man who had been her half brother.

CANADA'S GREATNESS.

The population of the dominion is

Canada is 3,500 miles wide and 1,400

Canada's seacoast equals half the earth's circumference.

Canada contains one-third of the area of the British empire.

Canada is larger than the United States by 250,000 square miles.

Canada has a boundary line of 3,000 miles between it and the United States.

Canada extends over twenty-three degrees of latitude, from Rome to the

PITH AND POINT.

Every man knows a lot of fool things
he would do if he had the money.

Some people make a specialty of answering questions before they are asked.

The average man wastes a lot of time wondering why he isn't making more money.

It's a draw between the man who parades his vices and the one who boasts of his virtues.

Politeness forbids people telling you that you are a fool every time they have occasion to think you one.

One can't put a bushel of potatoes into a peck measure, but it is possible to get a peck of trouble out of a pint flask.—Chicago News.

RUNNING SORES COVERED LIMBS

Little Girl's Obstinate Case of Eczema—Instantaneous Relief
By Cuticura—Little Boy's Hands and Arms Also Were a Mass of Torturing Sores—Grateful
Mother Says:

"CUTICURA REMEDIES A HOUSEHOLD STANDBY"

"In reply to your letter I write you my experience, and you are privileged to use it as you see fit. Last year, after having my little girl treated by a very prominent physician for an obstinate case of eczema, I resorted to the Cuticura Remedies, and was so well pleased with the almost instantaneous relief afforded that we discarded the physician's prescription and relied entirely on the Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Pills. When we commenced with the Cuticura Remedies her feet and limbs were covered with running sores. In about six weeks we had her completely well, and there has been no recurrence of the trouble.

"In July of this year a little boy in our family poisoned his hands and arms with poison oak, and in twenty-four hours his hands and arms were a mass of torturing sores. We used only the Cuticura Remedies, washing his hands and arms with the Cuticura Soap, and anointed them with the Cuticura Ointment, and then gave him the Cuticura Pills. In about three weeks his hands and arms healed up; so we have lots of cause for feeling grateful for the Cuticura Remedies. We find that the Cuticura Remedies are a valuable household standby, living as we do twelve miles from a doctor, and where it costs from twenty to twenty-five dollars to come up on the mountain.

Respectfully, Mrs. Lizzie Vincent
Thomas, Fairmount, Walden's Ridge, Tenn., Oct. 13, 1905."

AFTER-EFFECTS OF THE GRIP

Cause Decline That May Be Fatal.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Meet This Condition.

They Build Up the System, Restore Lost Flesh and Bring Good Health.

"About three years ago," says Mrs. Jennie Coon, of 715 N. Henry street, West City, Mich., "I caught a severe cold, which ran into the grip. I was confined to my bed for two weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about, but was completely run down. I was so weak I could hardly stand, my cheeks had no color and I felt faint. My heart would flutter and it was difficult for me to breathe at times. Neuralgia settled in the back of my head and stomach and I suffered from rheumatism in my shoulders."

"I had the care of the best doctor in town but became no better until a friend told me one day how she had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and I decided to try them. I soon felt better and continued taking them until I was entirely cured. They built me up again to perfect health and I use them now whenever I feel at all sick and they always help me."

The after-effects of the grip are generally worse than the disease itself. The health of the body is badly shattered and oftentimes there seems to be no way to restore it. The blood is poor, the breathing difficult and there is loss of weight. The sufferer becomes nervous and irritable and the system is powerless to resist the attacks of such diseases as bronchitis, pneumonia and consumption.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are invaluable in this condition, as well as in other blood diseases, because by acting directly on the blood, purifying and enriching it, they not only drive off the germs of the disease but build up the system. The pills have cured anemia, rheumatism, after-effects of fevers, neuralgia, many other severe disorders of the blood and nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Fales entertained at whist last Tuesday a party of six tables. After the refreshments were served the guests surprised their hosts with a "show" of 40, it being within a few days of the tenth anniversary of their marriage. Souvenir post cards of Rockport were used as favors.

In Theatrical Circles.

The next popular priced attraction booked for the Farwell opera house will be the Fenberg Stock Company, with all new plays and seven big specialties, including the three Keatings, one of the best vaudeville acts now being given on the stage.

"HUMAN HEARTS"
"Human Hearts" comprises all of last season's favorites, and wherever a part could be improved upon, the change has been made. "Human Hearts" gives a pure, wholesome lesson that touches the heartstrings in the pathetic scenes and excites the risibilities in the humor-

MAIL ORDERS.

The engagement of "The Lion and the Mouse," which takes place at the Farwell opera house on Tuesday, management will give special attention to mail orders from suburban towns, when accompanied by the full price of the seats ordered. Experience everywhere this season has proved the wisdom of mailing orders well in advance, as the company is playing to all the people the theatres will hold and in the instances turning hundreds away.

"THE LION AND THE MOUSE"

What will prove a genuine dramatic treat will be the presentation here on Tuesday evening, Oct. 26, by Henry B. Harris, of the phenomenal success of the play "The Lion and the Mouse," which is now in the second year of an unbroken fortune of a thousand millions during his life-time is argued in Mr. Klein's play to be impossible and honestly done. John Burckett Ryder, the central character of the play believes that no one has a right or liberty to interfere in any way with his colossal schemes and because a Judge of the Supreme Court renders decisions unfavorable to his interests, Ryder removes him from the bench. Tampering with the honesty of a Supreme Court judge brings forth a complication of circumstances which Mr. Klein has woven them holds the interests of the audience at fever pitch until the last curtain falls. ## A CHILD WITH CRAMPS should have immediate attention, as cramps are positive proof that there is some foreign substance in the stomach or bowels that nature cannot get rid of unassisted, and in most cases the trouble proves to be worms.

Worms are the cause, either directly or indirectly, of the majority of childhood ills, and in a great many cases adults are also sufferers.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

the only safe, sure, entirely vegetable worm remedy ever compounded, has been working wonderful cures for over half a century, and stands without a peer in all complaints of the stomach, liver or bowels—especially constipation and worms. The familiar symptoms of worms are disturbed health, deranged stomach, furred tongue, variable appetite and bowels, increased thirst, itching of the nostrils, bed-wetting, wind colic, irritability, restlessness, grinding of teeth, slow fever and often in children, convulsions. When any of these symptoms are noticed, do not delay, but give Dr. True's Elixir at once and restore the patient to perfect, robust health. A few drops of the Elixir taken occasionally will guard against worms, and if present will expel them.

Sold by all dealers, 35c, 50c, $1.00. Write for free booklet, "Children and Their Diseases." DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me. Established 1811. Special treatment for tapeworms. Free pamphlet.

THANKSGIVING TURKEYS.

Maine Will Contribute But Few of Them—The Reason For It.

Our readers who have begun to plan for a turkey dinner on Thanksgiving Day and incidentally wondering how stiff the prices will be, little know the difficulty which farmers experience in breeding that noble bird.

Maine raises very few turkeys, not enough to come anywhere near covering the demand and each year thousands of birds are shipped into the state from New Hampshire, Vermont and the West. Aroostook farmers raise a few fine birds and they are much sought after by people of this city where many of them are sold.

Throughout New England and the country at large the New England bird heads the list, that of Rhode Island at the top, because of the prestige given it by one Rhode Islander who annually for many years has sent a turkey to the White House, and the next that of Vermont.

As the raising of turkeys has been growing more difficult year by year, the prices have advanced in proportion until today it is necessary to pay 35 cents a pound for a fowl which a decade ago could have been bought for 15. The increasing scarcity of these royal birds is due to the ravages of the blackhead disease. So destructive has this disease proved in New England that whenever not many years ago many farmers marketed each No. 1 turkey of several score turkeys, thereby adding materially to the never too plentiful cash income of their farms, today there is probably not a farm in the state of Rhode Island which can show a flock of 100 birds, while most farmers have discontinued altogether their efforts to bring turkeys to maturity.

At this juncture a beneficent government has stepped in to co-operate with the state which takes greater pride in its gallinaceous product, and the experiment station at Kingston, R. I., is conducting a series of adventures in a hitherto untrodden field of farm science. Dr. Cooper Curtice is the man who has undertaken to learn what the blackhead disease really is, how it is transmitted, and how it may successfully be combated.

He has met with a degree of success in the year and a half he has devoted to the question, and although he has not solved the whole mystery, there is a reason for hope that before long turkeys will flourish as they did in the past, and may be marketed at a price which will enable every table to boast one.

Turkeys are, despite their magnificent proportions, apparently sturdy creatures by far the most delicate fowl the farmer has ever domesticated. Their first month of life is as critical a period as the second summer of a baby—more so, and for every one of the hundred of a dozen such proportion of babies ever succumbed to their circumstances as of turkeys in the care of the average farmer.

The first great menace to the health of a young turkey is moisture. If a chick up to four weeks old wets its feet its grave may as well be dug without delay, for it is a half he has devoted to the question, and although he has not solved the whole mystery, there is a reason for hope that before long turkeys will flourish as they did in the past, and may be marketed at a price which will enable every table to boast one.

At two months old the turkey is a lusty, long-legged fellow, able to hunt his own grasshoppers and learning to roost high. At three months he is a good-sized broiler. And it is to the broiler that many turkeys are going nowadays, as the result partly of a new taste which has pronounced a broiler turkey chicken a dish befitting an epicure's table, and partly because of the farmer's conviction, bred of costly experience, that he can never get the turkey to maturity.

It is at the broiling stage that the dread blackhead disease appears. Examination of diseased birds under the microscope revealed the fact that blackhead was caused by a minute protozoan. The common name arose from the appearance of the turkey affected, its head actually becoming black. The scientists have decided that the proper name of the disease is infectious entero-hepatitis. It is indicated not only by the black head, due to the suspended circulation, but by intestinal sores and by white spots on the liver. It is an ailment very similar to appendicitis.

Early experiments demonstrated that most of the chicks died within 12 days of the hatch, and that most of them died in from four to six weeks. It was learned also that the protozoan which caused the disease gained access to the intestines through the food.

The next step was the formulation of a theory, not yet altogether established but well on the way to it, that if turkeys are kept on ground which has not been devoted to turkey raising and are not provided with food which has not been contaminated they will be free from the disorder. To this end birds hatched artificially have been placed in the incubator, and within 12 days of the hatch, and that most of them died in from four to six weeks. It was learned also that the protozoan which caused the disease gained access to the intestines through the food.

So carefully was this plan carried out that even the eggs, before they were placed in the incubators, were washed in an alcohol solution so that by no possibility could the protozoan be transmitted unless it were contained within the egg, which is considered impossible. The result of this experiment has surpassed expectation. In one case of one flock of 100 only two were lost from blackheads, when from two to three months old.

In another instance in which equal care was taken the mortality was 90 per cent, and it was thought the germ of disease were carried in a guile. In still another case in which the loss was great it was traced to the food, which was furnished from a common stock. It is believed at the experiment station that the investigators will soon be able to tell the farmers of Maine how to restore the turkey to its former economic place and that the almost forgotten gobble will again be sweet music in agricultural ears. If this end is accomplished it will no longer be necessary to pay 35 cents a pound for the adornment of the Thanksgiving table.

Valparaiso appears to have been hit harder by the earthquake and the subsequent conflagration than even San Francisco. In an account sent to a large New York firm by its Valparaiso manager, the mortality is set at fully 2,500, and the injured at between 4,000 and 5,000.

The estate of Thomas Brackett Reed, ex-Speaker of the House of Representatives has nearly tripled in value since the death of Mr. Reed in 1902. At that time, the approximate value of the estate was about $200,000. This week Augustus C. Paine, who was an intimate friend of the ex-Speaker sent to Mrs. Susan P. Reed, the widow over $500,000 which represented the original investment holdings of the estate, and the profits from these and other investments in the past four years. The widow is living in the old Reed homestead in Portland, Me. It will be remembered that Mr. Reed when he retired from public life, did so a comparatively poor man. He said at the time that he retired to go into the business in order to make a little money.

FOUND RELIEF BY TAKING PE-RU-NA

Suffered Thirteen Years With Pelvic Troubles. Unable to Find Relief.

AN OPERATION ADVOCATED.

Pe-ru-na, Taken as a Last Resort, Brings Health and Strength.

ANNA MUNDEN, Brinkley, Ark., writes:

"I suffered with female troubles for thirteen years, and tried the best doctors in Louisville, Ky., without relief. I spent thousands of dollars at the Springs.

"The doctors desired that I have an operation performed to remove my ovaries, which I would not consent to. I saw an advertisement of your Peruna and bought one bottle and before I had taken it all I could get out of bed and walk about.

"After taking three bottles I was as well and hearty as ever. I gained in flesh. From 118 I increased to 186 pounds. If it had not been for your great and wonderful medicine, I would now be in my grave.

"I would advise all women sufferers to try it. I would not be without it for the world."

A WOMAN'S LETTER TO WOMEN.

Mrs. Caroline Kramer, Fort Collins, Col., writes:

"The majority of women who are suffering from disordered periods and other troubles, have such strong faith in doctors that they allow them to experiment on them for kidney, liver, or stomach troubles, until they become discouraged and their money is gone. This was my unfortunate experience for nearly two years, when my attention was called to Peruna.

"I hardly dared believe that at last I had found the right medicine, but as I kept on using it and was finally cured I could only thank God and take courage."

"I have had most satisfying results from the use of your medicine and have advised dozens of women who were suffering with women's ills to use Peruna, and let the doctors alone, and those who have followed my advice are better to-day and many are fully restored to health."

SATISFACTORY RESULTS FROM PE-RU-NA.
