To the Automobile Trade

We have, after weeks of careful consideration and research, decided to take the agency for the RAMBLER Car. As we have looked at the proposition from a mechanical point of view, we find it contains many features that are wonderfully interesting to the purchasing public, namely: Simplicity, Accessibility and Reliability. The construction of the Car is so simple and easy to get at that it will be impossible for the inexperienced to damage in operation or of taking apart to get the few parts mixed.

At the Boston Show it was universally acknowledged that RAMBLER had the most improved doable-composed motor of any 1907 model. All we ask is a close and fair comparison with any Car of or near the same price.

The battleship Georgia is sustaining her reputation for speed established by the builders' acceptance trial on the Rockland course. In her final acceptance trial off the Virginia coast last week she averaged 19.05 knots for four hours, and 17.92 knots in her 24 hours' endurance run.

Here's a record for school attendance for which the Ellsworth American is going to claim the state record, unless proof to the contrary is forthcoming. Miss Lena Maddocks, of Bluehill, has an exceptional record for school attendance. She has not been absent even a half-day for thirty-three terms, having attended school three terms a year for eleven years.

Under the heading "Prohibition an Act of Treason," the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "The prohibition forces in the Oklahoma constitutional convention won a decisive victory Monday, when the provision separating the question of prohibition from the people of the new state was adopted by a vote of 17 to 12. On the same day the Arkansas state senate defeated a measure which provided for the submitting to the people at the next state election the question of license or no license."

From a small tenement in a four-family house in a mill village, to mistress of a large and fine residence in Londonderry, is the story which Emma Tomlinson, a blind woman soon will tell. She is to wed ex-Governor L. F. C. Garvin, one of the most prominent Democrats in Rhode Island. The ex-governor is 66 years old, well preserved, and accustomed to the best society; she is 33 years old, the daughter of a mill operative, an accomplished musician, and has been totally blind since she was seven years old.

Mayor Daggett of Spokane, Wash., has appointed April 6 as the city's second annual arbor and cleaning day, under the direction of the "city beautification" committee, which now has under strict organization 50,000 men, women and children ready to join in the movement to clean the city and plant trees and shrubs. Not a dollar will be raised to hire labor, all being done voluntarily by the people, regardless of their station in life. Last year not less than 20,000 persons took part, it being the first movement of its kind in the history of any American city.

The latest invention to protect telephone companies from long winded users of their lines and at the same time to prevent their patrons from being charged a fortune, is the "Philadelphia Record." Although the new attachments have not yet been placed in the ordinary pay stations, they will most likely be introduced in the near future, as they are rapidly being perfected. The device is fastened in place before he can get the central office, and he talks to the operator over one wire. Then, when the operator gets the connection completed, she switches him to another wire, over which he talks to the person called. The instant he begins talking on the second wire a clock starts and at the end of five minutes breaks the connection, but it can be renewed with another nickel without bothering central. If central fails to connect the patron with a chute in front of him as the operator calls, "They don't answer."

In the effort to remove some of the objectionable features of the are lamp as at present constructed it has been discovered that "magnesium" is a desirable substitute for carbon, being incombustible at all temperatures. It is as good a conductor as carbon and gives a white arc of high brilliancy. Says J. L. R. Hyatt, vice president of the subject in Cassier's Magazine: "In this new are lamp steadiness and white color of the light are combined with a high efficiency and long life of the electrodes. It is four times the are lamp which carries the current is fed by the negative terminal only. It shoots out from this terminal almost in the form of a blast flame. The positive terminal takes no part in the production of the flame, and its material is, therefore, unessential. It is necessary only that the positive does not get so hot as to burn or melt off. To avoid this the positive is made large and of a metal which is a good conductor of heat, thus carrying away the heat. For the negative electrode magnetite alone can be used. The life of a magnetite electrode 3 inches long and half an inch in diameter is about 100 hours; that is, much longer than that of an are lamp electrode." The lamp mechanism, we are told, is essentially different from that of the carbon are lamp. The lamp gives a distribution of light that makes it especially suitable for street use, the greatest amount being thrown in a direction slightly below the horizontal and only a little directly downward. There are none of the glaring bright spots separated by darkness so noticeable under the ordinary carbon are.

FOR THE BUSY MAN

Constant Reader Tells What He Missed In Last Week's Papers.

"Did the railroad presidents go to Washington last week to ask the President to restrain the states from adopting anti-railroad legislation?" asked Busy Man, as he pulled up his chair and handed Constant Reader a cigar.

"No," replied Constant Reader, as he clipped off the end of the cigar and lit a match. "President Mellen of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad went down and submitted a proposition which he thought would solve some of the more serious problems connected with the relation of the government to the railways. President Roosevelt is keeping whatever he thinks about the poor railroads to himself. The railroad presidents are talking less about paucity and retrenchment since the flurry in the stock market a week and a half ago. The government has had something to think about besides flurries in the stock market."

"What was that?" inquired Busy Man.

"It seems that there really has been some blood shed in the war between Nicaragua on one side and Honduras and Salvador on the other," said Constant Reader. "Nicaragua captured Trujillo, a Honduran port. At about the same time troops of the three countries met in the fortified hills known as the Perillos de Namasque and slides claim the victory. The United States has several gunboats patrolling both coasts of the warring Central American countries and a score of American marines have been landed at each of the three Honduran ports. Trujillo, Caba and Puerto Cortes, to protect American interests. Our efforts to help Santo Domingo out of her difficulties do not seem to be prospering as they ought. After the long fight to get the treaty with that debt beleaguered country approved by the Senate, the Dominicans are angry at us because of this action. They think the United States, under the guise of aiding their country, is trying to make their republic a fief. The people believe that in many creditors there is more safety than in one. In consequence of the hubbub the Dominican Congress may not act favorably upon the treaty. A new insurrection against Castro has broken out in Venezuela."

"Is it true that there have been serious anti-Jewish riots in Russia?" asked Busy Man.

"The riots were in Moldavia, northern province of Rumania," said Constant Reader. "Moldavia is separated from Bessarabia, Russia, by the river Pruth, a tributary of the Danube. Thousands of peasants have risen against the great farming trust, which has leased half of the productive land of Moldavia. The absentee landlords, controlling the trust have been Jewish, and the peasants, who are anti-Semitic, their estates have been sacked as a penalty for the merciless exactions of their agents, who ground the peasants down to starvation wages. Many peasants have been killed by the Rumanian troops which have been called out. Practically all of Moldavia is affected, and four villages are ruined. Thousands of Jews are fleeing across the Austrian border."

"Is the new Russian Duma going to accomplish anything?" inquired Busy Man.

"The chances seem to be more favorable for the accomplishment of something definite and practical in this session," said Constant Reader. "The Duma certainly has something to keep it occupied," commented Busy Man. "The Thaw trial is still hanging on, I observe," he continued.

"And taking a new turn nearly every week," broke in Constant Reader. "There is a possibility that a commission will be appointed to decide if Thaw is insane and therefore ought to be shut up in the state asylum. This phase of the trial cross from a suggestion made by District Attorney Jerome. He said that for some time he had been persuaded that Thaw was unable to advise with his counsel. The testimony of Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton, an alienist, that Thaw is insane, brought the subject before the court. Mr. Jerome has submitted the affidavits of his six alienists and a newspaper man in support of his contention."

"Is Kelley, the State Insurance Superintendent, going to be dismissed?" asked Busy Man.

"The charge of inefficiency made by Governor Hughes has not been acted upon by the Senate yet," replied Constant Reader. "It is likely that the subject can be sidetracked to make way for important legislation appears to be the programme of himself and his friends. Senator Badnes, the leader of the majority in the Senate, took a sick day and staggered to a meeting of the Judiciary Committee which was considering the Governor's charge, for the purpose of assisting in securing delay. The committee, in executive session, vetoed his unexpected efforts against the Governor's wishes, and on Friday Kelley was heard in his own behalf. The hearing was long drawn out, and is to be continued this week. Among other statements made by Mr. Kelley to the committee was one that Senator Armstrong, the head of the famous insurance investigating commission, had accepted a fee from him for services as special counsel."

"What subway is it that is soon to be opened?" Busy man inquired.

"It was announced a few days ago," said Constant Reader, "that the Steinway, or 42d street, tunnel about the validity of the franchise of which there has been so much discussion, was practically completed and that it would be open to traffic by August 1. Steel cars like those in the subway have been ordered for it. They will run between Grand Central Station and Long Island City, being accessible to subway passengers by descending a stairway from the express station at 42d street. A Cleveland syndicate, according to a dispatch, has secured a franchise from the commissioners of Nassau County to operate a trolley line from Manhattan to Rockaway. It expects ultimately to build over a hundred miles of line connecting all the important towns on the North Shore, and to run its cars across the Blackwell's Island Bridge into Manhattan. The taxpayers have reason to be glad for the signs of approaching spring. Snow removal this winter has cost the city about $2,500,000. Among the signs is the unexpected rush of immigrants."

"The shame of the cities' does not seem to have been entirely wiped out," remarked Busy Man.

"I suppose you refer to the indictment of Abraham Ruef, the San Francisco boss," remarked Constant Reader. "The grand jury last week, brought in seventy-five indictments, of which sixty-five were against Ruef, charging him with bribing the Board of Supervisors to grant franchises to the United Railroads, the Home Telephone Company, the San Francisco Gas and Electric Company and the so-called 'prize-fight' trust. The remaining ten are against V. Halsey, formerly general agent of the Pacific States Telephone and Telegraph Company, who is charged with having bribed the supervisor not to grant a franchise to a rival company. Ruef was held under bail of $50,000 and Halsey under bail of $25,000. Halsey was taken into custody in the Philippines."

"Mrs. Sage made other gifts this week," continued Constant Reader, changing the subject. "She has contributed $750,000 for the building of the Salter's Home and Infirmary and $5,000 to the Syrian Protestant College, of Beirut, Syria. She has also promised a building to the Association for the Relief of Respectable and Indigent Females in the city of New York, and an annex to the building for the sailors of the navy, lately erected by Helen M. Gould."

"President Roosevelt has disapproved the findings of a capital in the case of Captain Lewis H. Kocher, 4th Cavalry, who was tried in the Philippines on charges of making capricious remarks against General Leonard Wood."

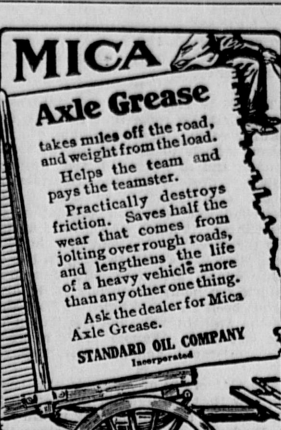

"Mr. Bryce, the new British Ambassador to the United States, has gone to Canada to study the questions at issue between the Dominion and this country."

"Hudson Maxin, the inventor has announced the invention of a safety detonating fuse which will enable a gunner to send a shell through armor and cause it to explode at exactly the distance behind desired by the gunner."

"The names of Grover Cleveland was added last week to the list of notable Americans who have recently attained the Psalmist's three-score and ten. Like the others, he shows no signs of having passed into the decrepit state."

"Among those who died last week were Thomas Bailey Aldrich, the poet and one of the group of septuagenarians; Count Lamond, formerly Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs; Senator Berthelot, the famous French chemist, who was foreign minister in the Bourgeois Cabinet who died suddenly upon hearing of the death of his wife in a neighboring apartment; and Brigadier General Theodore J. Wint, U. S. A."

SIMMONS, WHITE & CO.

The Nugget, published in Helena, Montana, pays the following tribute to the superintendent of schools in that city, a native of Friendship and well known in Knox county:

Often the introduction of the new elements is brought about so gradually and with such a nice adjustment of the new plans to the existing conditions that the public is not cognizant of the force at work and is insensible to the changing tone of the community. This situation is the one that surprises us when we come to consider the results accomplished by the present Superintendent of Schools, Randall J. Condon.

A mere list of what he has brought to Helena in way of higher civic ideals, a broader touch with the world at large through the personality of some of the leading men of the nation would of itself be impressive, to say nothing of the immense gains in methods, efficiency, and in humanity in that department of which he is the executive head—the city schools. Coming to Helena in 1902 he found the city divided into bitter warring factions on matters pertaining to school questions and elections. In the short space of two years harmony was restored, confidence established, and an efficient administration introduced throughout the entire school system. Intelligent co-operation is the expression that tells the secret of his success. Co-operation between superintendent and teachers, between teachers and pupils and parents, co-operation of citizens in the establishment of a new and substantial pride in Helena; co-operation among the citizens of Montana in bringing to the commonwealth men of thought and power for betterment; co-operation among the boys in the establishing of the Helena Boys' Club; co-operation among the lovers of music in founding the Choral Union.

To have brought to the city such inspiring speakers as Jacob Rills, Miss Maud Summers, Judge Ben Lindsay, Mrs. Brantley, Professor Clark, Mrs. Bertha Kuntz Baker, Dr. Vincent, Henry Turner Bailey, William Jennings Bryan, Father Vaughn, and those who are to follow in the course this year, has added immeasurably to the culture and permanent betterment of the people of Helena. To have created in a city where lectures had been signal failures such a demand for the talent of the platform that the audiences averaged fourteen hundred people is an accomplishment of no mean order. To have made it possible for any one, in no matter how humble circumstances, to profit by the inspiration of these gifted speakers is a matter for grateful thanks on the part of every resident of Helena.

To have led the way among the cities of the United States in educational advances and to have kept the schools in close touch with the best movements in education throughout our land shows an alertness and a clear appreciation of the signs of the times. That Mr. Condon has been able to raise the scholarship of the schools so that those who go away from here are on an equal footing with the best in the land, and that a cordial recognition is vouchsafed by the leading educational institutions of the country is something for Helena to be proud of.

It is these such as these for which Mr. Condon stands; not merely the ideals of the school man, although in those lines he stands pre-eminent; but the ideals of the educator—the one who draws out public opinion, who crystallizes sentiment into custom, who utilizes the schools through oratory, music, manual training, athletics, the sciences and industries, and all the manifold activities of school and civic life to give a more free, more spontaneous, and more perfect self-expression to the individual. It is not the man that takes wealth out of the community, but the man that adds to the common wealth who is honored, beloved, and remembered.

To this last class belongs Randall J. Condon, who has brought to our city not political partisanship and sectional strife, but civic pride and united action; who has increased not so much the cash assets as the assets of kindness, good fellowship, united action, and intellectual power. For these additions to the sum total of the common wealth he will be honored and beloved in the present and remembered in the future.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Easter.

When dawn on earth the Easter sun
The day's salute feel an answering thrill,
With whistling flowers their hands they fill,
And, singing all in unison.

Unto the battlements they press—
The very marts of heaven show near!
And bend, and look upon us here
With eyes that rain down tenderness.

Their roses, brimmed with fragrant dew,
Their lilies fair, they raise aloft and cry:
"Rejoice! the Lord is risen!" they cry;
"Christ is arisen; we prove it true!"

Bend low, beloved, against the blue;
Lift higher still the lilies fair,
Till, following where your treasures are,
We come to join the feast with you.

CHAPTER V.

WITH Fritz von Tarlenheim and Colonel Sapt close behind me, I stepped out of the buffet on to the platform. The last thing I did was to feel if my revolver were handy and my sword loose in the scabbard. A gray group of officers and high dignitaries stood waiting me, at their head a tall old man, covered with medals and of military bearing. He wore the yellow and red ribbon of the Red Rose of Ruritania, which, by the way, decorated my unworthy breast also.

"Marshal Strakenetz," whispered Sapt, and I knew that I was in the presence of the most famous veteran of the Ruritania army.

Just behind the marshal stood a short, spare man in flowing robes of black and crimson.

"The chancellor of the kingdom," whispered Sapt.

The marshal greeted me in a few loyal words and proceeded to deliver an apology from the Duke of Streisau. The duke, it seemed, had been afflicted with a sudden indisposition which made it impossible for him to come to the station, but he craved leave to await his majesty at the cathedral. I expressed my concern, accepted the marshal's excuses very graciously and received the compliments of a large number of distinguished personages.

No one betrayed the least suspicion, and I felt my nerve returning and the agitation of my heart subsiding. But Fritz was still pale, and his hand shook like a leaf as he extended it to the marshal.

Presently we formed procession and took our way to the door of the station. Here I mounted my horse, the marshal holding my stirrup. The civil dignitaries went off to their carriages, and I started to ride through the streets with the marshal on my right and Sapt, who, as my chief aid-de-camp, was entitled to the place on my left. The city of Streisau is partly old and partly new. Spacious modern boulevards and residential quarters surround and embrace the narrow, tortuous and picturesque streets of the original town. In the outer circles the upper classes live, in the inner the shops and stalls, and behind their prosperous fronts the hidden populous but wretched lanes and alleys filled with a poverty-stricken, turbulent and (in large measure) criminal class. These social and local divisions corresponded, as I knew from Sapt's information, to another division more important to me. The new town was for the king, but to the old town Michael of Streisau was a hope, a hero and a darling.

The scene was very brilliant as we passed along the Grand boulevard and on to the great square where the royal palace stood. Here I was in the midst of my devoted adherents. Every house was hung with red and bedecked with flags and mottoes. The streets were lined with raised seats on each side, and I passed along, bowing this way and that, under a shower of cheers, blessings and waving handkerchiefs.

The balconies were full of gayly dressed ladies, who clapped their hands and curtsied and threw their brightest glances at me. A torrent of red roses fell on me. One bloom lodged in my horse's mane, and I took it and stuck it in my coat. The marshal smiled grimly. I had stolen some glances at his face, but he was too impassive to show me whether his sympathies were with me or not.

"The red rose for the Elphbergers, marshal," said I gayly, and he nodded. I have written "gayly," and a strange word it must seem. But the truth is that I was drunk with excitement. At that moment I believed I almost believed—that I was in very truth the king, and with a look of laughing triumph I raised my eyes to the beauty laden balconies and then I started.

For, looking down on me, with her handsome face and proud smile, was the lady who had been my fellow traveler, Antoinette de Mauban, and I saw her also start, and her lips moved, and she leaned forward and gazed at me. And I, collecting myself, met her eyes full and square, while again I felt my revolver. Suppose she had cried aloud, "That's not the king!"

Well, we went by, and then the marshal, turning round in his saddle, waved his hand, and the cuirassiers closed round us, so that the crowd could not come near me. We were leaving my quarters and entering Duke Michael's, and this action of the marshal's showed me more clearly than words what the state of feeling in the town must be. But if Fate made me a king the least I could do was to play the part handsomely.

"Why this change in our order, marshal?" said I.

"It is more prudent, sire," he murmured.

I drew rein.

"Let those in front ride on," said I. "I'll be fifty yards ahead. But do you, marshal, and Colonel Sapt and my friends wait here till I have ridden fifty yards. And see that no one is nearer to me. I will have my people see that their king trusts them."

Sapt laid his hand on my arm. I shook him off. The marshal hesitated.

"Am I not understood?" said I, and, biting his mustache again, he gave the orders. I saw old Sapt smiling into his beard, but he shook his head at me. If I had been killed in open day in the streets of Streisau Sapt's position would have been a difficult one.

Perhaps I ought to say that I was dressed all in white, except my boots. I wore a silk helmet with gilt ornaments, and the broad ribbon of the Rose looked well across my chest. I should be paying a poor compliment to the king if I did not set modesty aside and admit that I made a very fine figure. So the people thought, for, when I, riding alone, entered the dingy, sparsely decorated, somber streets of the old town there was first a murmur, then a cheer, and a woman, from a window above a cookshop, cried the old local saying:

"If he's red, he's right!" Whereat I laughed and took off my helmet that she might see that I was of the right color, and they cheered me again at that.

It was more interesting riding thus alone, for I heard the comments of the crowd.

"He looks paler than his wont," said one.

"You'd look pale if you lived as he did," was the highly disrespectful retort.

"He's a bigger man than I thought," said another.

"So he had a good jaw under that beard, after all," commented a third.

"The pictures of him aren't handsome enough," declared a pretty girl, taking great care that I should hear. No doubt it was mere flattery.

But in spite of these signs of approval and interest the mass of the people received me in silence and with sullen looks, and my dear brother's death remained most of the brilliant which was an ironical sort of greeting to the king. I was quite glad that the king's hand very well for him. So I continued, and what I said was perfectly true:

"I assure you, my dear cousin, that nothing in my life has affected me more than the reception I've been greeted with today."

She smiled brightly, but in an instant grew grave again and whispered:

"Did you notice Michael?"

"Yes," said I, adding, "He wasn't enjoying himself."

"Do be careful," she went on. "You don't—indeed you don't—keep enough watch on him. You know—"

"I know," said I. "That he wants what I've got."

Then, and I can't justify it, for I committed the king far beyond what I had a right to do—I suppose she carried me off my feet—I went on:

"And, perhaps, also something which I haven't got yet, but hope to win some day."

This was my answer—had I been the king I should have thought it encouraging:

"Haven't you enough responsibilities on you for one day, cousin?"

"Bang, bang! Blare, blare! We were at the palace. Guns were firing and trumpets blowing. Rows of lackeys stood waiting, and, handling the princess up the broad marble staircase, I took formal possession as a crowned king of the house of my ancestors and sat down at my own table, with my cousin on my right hand, on her other side Black Michael, and on my left his majesty the cardinal. Behind my chair stood Sapt, and at the end of the table I saw Fritz von Tarlenheim drain to the bottom his glass of champagne rather soberly than he decently should.

I wondered what the king of Ruritania was doing.

thought that I had best do. Then I drew her to me and kissed her twice on the cheek, and she blushed red, and—why, then his eminence the cardinal archbishop slipped in front of Black Michael and kissed my hand and presented me with a letter from the pope, the first and last which I have ever received from that exalted quarter!

And then came the Duke of Streisau. His step trembled, I swear, and he looked to the right and to the left, as a man looks who thinks on flight, and his face was patched with red and white, and his hand shook so that it jumped under mine, and I felt his lips dry and parched. And I glanced at Sapt, who was smiling again into his beard, and, resolutely doing my duty in that station of life to which I had been so wonderfully called, I took my dear Michael by both hands and kissed him on the cheek. I think we were both glad when that was over!

But neither in the face of the princess nor in that of any other did I see the least doubt or questioning. Yet had I and the king stood side by side they could have told us in an instant, or at least on a little consideration, that neither they nor anyone else dreamed or imagined that I could be other than the king. So the likeness served, and for an hour I stood there, feeling as weary and blasé as though I had been a king all my life, and everybody kissed my hand, and the ambassadors paid me their respects, among them old Lord Topham, at whose house in Grosvenor square I had danced a score of times. Thank heaven, the old man was as blind as a bat and did not claim my acquaintance.

Then back we went through the streets to the palace, and I heard them cheering Black Michael, but he, Fritz told me, sat biting his nails like a man in a reverie, and even his own friends said that he should have made a braver show. I was in a carriage now, side by side with the Princess Flavia, and a rough fellow cried out:

"And when's the wedding?" and as he spoke another struck him in the face, crying, "Long live Duke Michael!" and the princess colored—it was an admirable bit—and looked straight in front of her.

Now I felt in a difficulty, because I had forgotten to ask Sapt the state of my affections or how far matters had gone between the princess and myself. Frankly, I had been the king the further they had gone the better should I have been pleased, for I am not a slow blooded man, and I had not kissed Princess Flavia's cheek for nothing. These thoughts passed through my head; but, not being sure of my ground, I said nothing, and in a moment or two the princess, recovering her equanimity, turned to me.

"Do you know, Rudolf," said she, "you look a different today?"

"The fact was not surprising, but the remark was disquieting."

"You look," she went on, "more sober, more sedate. You're almost careworn, and I declare you're thinner. Surely it's not possible that you've begun to take anything seriously?"

The princess seemed to hold of the king much the same opinion that Lady Burlesdon held of me.

I braced myself up to the conversation.

"Would that please you?" I asked softly.

"Oh, you know my views," said she, turning her eyes away.

"Whatever pleases you I try to do," I said, and as I saw her smile and blush I thought that I was playing the king's hand very well for him. So I continued, and what I said was perfectly true:

"I assure you, my dear cousin, that nothing in my life has affected me more than the reception I've been greeted with today."

She smiled brightly, but in an instant grew grave again and whispered:

"Did you notice Michael?"

Then, and I can't justify it, for I committed the king far beyond what I had a right to do—I suppose she carried me off my feet—I went on:

"And, perhaps, also something which I haven't got yet, but hope to win some day."

CHAPTER VI.

WE were in the king's dressing room—Fritz von Tarlenheim, Sapt and I. I flung myself exhausted into an armchair. Sapt lit his pipe. He uttered no congratulations on the marvelous success of our wild risk, but his whole bearing was eloquent of satisfaction. The triumph, aided perhaps by good wine, had made a new man of Fritz.

"What a day for you to remember!" he cried. "God, I'd like to be a king for twelve hours myself! But, Rassendyll, you mustn't throw your heart too much into the part. I don't wonder Black Michael looked blacker than ever. You and the princess had so much to say to one another."

"How beautiful she is!" I exclaimed.

"Never mind the woman!" growled Sapt. "Are you ready to start?"

"Yes," said I, with a sigh.

It was 5 o'clock, and at 12 I should be no more than Rudolf Rassendyll. I remarked on it in a joking tone.

"You'll be lucky," observed Sapt grimly. "If you're not the late Rudolf Rassendyll. By heaven! I feel my head wobbling on my shoulders every minute you're in the city. Do you know, friend, that Michael has had news from Zenda? He went into a room alone to read it, and he came out looking like a man dazed."

"I'm ready," said I, this news making me none the more eager to linger.

Sapt sat down.

"I must write us an order to leave the city. Michael's governor, you know, and we must be prepared for hindrances. You must sign the order."

"My dear colonel, I've not been bred a forger!"

Out of his pocket Sapt produced a piece of paper.

"There's the king's signature," he said, "and here," he went on after another search in his pocket, "is some tracing paper. If you can't manage a 'Rudolf' in ten minutes, why—I can."

Your education has been more comprehensive than mine," said I. "You write it."

A very tolerable forgery did this versatile hero produce.

"Now, Fritz," said he, "the king goes to bed. He is upset. No one is to see him till 9 o'clock tomorrow. You understand—no one?"

"I understand," answered Fritz.

"Michael may come and claim immediate audience. You'll answer that only princes of the blood are entitled to it."

"That'll annoy Michael," laughed Fritz.

"You quite understand," asked Sapt again. "If the door of this room is opened while we're away you're not to be alive to tell us about it."

"I need no schooling, colonel," said Fritz, a trifle haughtily.

"Here, wrap yourself in this big cloak," Sapt continued to me, "and put on this flat cap. My orderly rides with me to the shooting lodge tonight."

"There's an obstacle," I observed.

"The horse doesn't live that can carry me forty miles."

"Oh, yes, he does—two of him; one here, one at the lodge. Now are you ready?"

"I'm ready," said I.

Fritz held out his hand.

"I'll come with you, and we shook hands heartily."

"Hang your sentiment!" growled Sapt. "Come along."

He went, not to the door, but to a panel in the wall.

"In the old king's time," said he, "I knew this way well."

I followed him, and we walked, as I should estimate, near two hundred yards to exhibit on a horse again. Then we came to a stout oak door. Sapt unlocked it. We passed through and found ourselves in a quiet street that ran along the back of the palace gardens. A man was waiting for us with two horses. One was a magnificent bay, up to any weight; the other a sturdy brown. Sapt signed to me to mount the bay, and without a word to the man we mounted and rode away. The town was full of noise and merriment, but we took secluded ways. My cloak was wrapped over half my face; the cap hid every lock of my tawny hair. By Sapt's directions I crouched on my saddle and rode with such a round back as I hope to exhibit on a horse again. Down a long, narrow lane we went, meeting some wanderers and some rosters, and as we rode we heard the cathedral bells still clanging out their welcome to the king. It was half-past 6 and still light. At last we came to the city wall and to a gate.

"Have your weapon ready," whispered Sapt. "We must stop his mouth if he talks."

I put my hand on my revolver. Sapt halted the doorkeeper. The stars fought for us. A little girl of fourteen tripped up.

"Please, sir, father's gone to see the king."

"He'd better have stayed here," said Sapt to me, grinning.

"But he said I wasn't to open the gate, sir."

"I'll be your dear," said Sapt, dismounting. "Then give me the key."

The key was in the child's hand. Sapt gave her a crown.

"Here's an order from the king. Show it to your father. Orderly, open the gate."

I leaped down. Between us we rolled back the great gate, led our horses out and closed it again.

"I shall be sorry for the doorkeeper if Michael finds out that he was there. Now, then, lad, for a center. We mustn't go too fast while we're near the town."

Once, however, outside the city we ran little danger, for everybody else was inside merrymaking, and as the evening fell we quickened our pace, my splendid horse bounding along under me as though I had been a feather.

It was a fine night, and presently the moon appeared. We talked little on the way and chiefly about the progress we were making.

"I wonder what the duke's dispatches told him," said I once.

"Aye, I wonder!" responded Sapt.

We stopped for a draft of wine and to bait our horses, losing half an hour thus. I dared not go into the inn and stayed with the horses in the stable. Then we went ahead again and had covered some five and twenty miles when Sapt abruptly stopped.

"Hark!" he cried.

I listened. Away, far behind us, in the still of the evening—it was just half past 9—we heard the beat of horses' hoofs. The wind, blowing strong behind us, carried the sound. I glanced at Sapt.

"Come on!" he cried and spurred his horse into a gallop. When we next paused to listen, the hoof beats were not audible, and we relaxed our pace. Then we heard them again. Sapt jumped down and laid his ear to the ground.

"There are two," he said. "They're only a mile behind. Thank God, the road curves in and out and the wind's our way."

We galloped on. We seemed to be holding our own. We had entered the outskirts of the forest of Zenda, and the trees, closing in behind us as the track zigged and zagged, prevented us seeing our pursuers and them from seeing us.

Another half hour brought us to a dilapidated house. Sapt drew rein.

"To the right is our road," he said. "To left, to the castle. Each about eight miles. Get down."

"But they'll be on us!" I cried.

"Get down!" he repeated brusquely, and I obeyed.

The wood was dense up to the very edge of the road. We led our horses into the covert, bound handkerchiefs over their eyes and stood behind them. "You want to see who they are?" I whispered.

"Aye, and where they're going," he answered.

I saw that his revolver was in his hand.

Nearer and nearer came the hoofs. The moon shone out now clear and full, so that the road was white with it. The ground was hard, and we had left no traces.

"Here they come!" whispered Sapt. "It's the duke!"

"I thought so!" he answered.

It was the duke, and with him a burly fellow whom I knew well and who had cause to know me afterward—Max Hoff, brother to Johann, the keeper, and body servant to his highness. They were up to us. The duke reined up. I saw Sapt's finger curl lovingly toward the trigger. I believe he would have given ten years of his life for a shot, and he could have picked off Black Michael as easily as I could a barn door fowl in a farmyard. I laid my hand on my arm. He nodded reassuringly. He was always ready to sacrifice inclination to duty.

"Which way?" asked Black Michael.

"To the castle, your highness," urged his companion. "There we shall learn the truth."

For an instant the duke hesitated.

"I thought I heard hoofs," said he. "I think not, your highness."

"Why shouldn't we go to the lodge?"

"I fear a trap. If all is well, why go to the lodge? If not, it's a snare to trap us."

Suddenly the duke's horse neighed. In an instant we folded our cloaks close round our horses' heads and, holding them thus, covered the duke and his attendant with our revolvers. If they had found us they had been dead men or our prisoners.

Michael waited a moment longer. Then he cried:

"To Zenda then!" and, setting spurs to his horse, galloped on.

Sapt raised his weapon after him, and there was such an expression of wistful regret on his face that I had much ado not to burst out laughing.

For ten minutes we stayed where we were.

"You see," said Sapt, "they've sent him news that all is well."

"What does that mean?" I asked.

"God knows," said Sapt, frowning heavily. "But it's brought him from Streisau in a rare puzzle."

Then we mounted and rode fast as our weary horses could lay their feet to the ground. For those last eight miles we spoke no more. Our minds were full of apprehension. "All is well." What did it mean? Was all well with the king?

At last the lodge came in sight. Spurring our horses to a last gallop, we rode up to the gate. All was still and quiet. Not a soul came to meet us. We dismounted in haste. Suddenly Sapt caught me by the arm.

"Look here!" he said, pointing to the ground.

I looked down. At my feet lay five or six silk handkerchiefs, torn and slashed and rent. I turned to him questioning.

"They're what I tied the old woman up with," said he. "Fasten the horses and come along."

The handle of the door turned without resistance. We passed into the room which had been the scene of last night's bout. It was still strewn with the remnants of our meal and with empty bottles.

"Come in!" cried Sapt, whose marvelous composure had at last almost given way.

We rushed down the passage toward the cellars. The door of the coal cellar stood wide open.

"They found the old woman," said I. "You might have known that from the handkerchiefs," he said.

Then we came opposite the door of the wine cellar. It was shut. It looked in all respects as it had looked when we left it that morning.

"Come, it's all right," said I.

A heavy oath from Sapt rang out. His face turned pale, and he pointed again at the door. From under the door a red stain had spread over the floor of the passage and dried there. Sapt sank against the opposite wall. I tried the door. It was locked.

"Where's Josef?" muttered Sapt.

"Where's the king?" I responded.

Sapt took out a flask and put it to his lips. I ran back to the dining room and seized a heavy poker from the fireplace. In my terror and excitement I rained blows on the lock of the door, and I fired a cartridge into it. It gave way, and the door swung open.

"Give me a light," said I, but Sapt still leaned against the wall.

He was, of course, more moved than I, for he loved his master. Afraid for himself he was not—no man ever saw him that—but to think who might lie in that cellar was enough to turn any man's face pale. I went myself and took a silver candlestick from the dining table and struck a light, and as I returned I felt the hot wax drip on my naked hand as the candle swayed to and fro, so that I cannot afford to despise Colonel Sapt for his agitation.

I came to the door of the cellar. The red stain, turning more and more to a dull brown, stretched inside. I walked two yards into the cellar and held the candle high above my head. I saw full bins of wine; I saw spiders crawling on the walls; I saw, too, a couple of empty bottles lying on the floor, and then, away in the corner, I saw the body of a man lying flat on his back with his arms stretched wide and a crimson gash across his throat. I walked to him and knelt down beside him and commended to God the soul of a faithful man, for it was the body of Josef, the little servant, slain in guarding the king.

I felt a hand on my shoulder and, turning, saw Sapt's eyes, glaring and terror-struck, beside me.

DR. TRUE'S ELIXIR

As a reliable family tonic, in all complaints of the stomach, liver or bowels, especially constipation, Dr. True's Elixir stands without an equal. It is a pure vegetable compound with a wonderfully successful record since 1851. Adults as well as children are troubled with worms. The symptoms are: Indigestion, with a variable appetite; foul tongue, offensive breath, hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel; eyes heavy and dull, itching of the nose, short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth, starting during sleep; slow fever, and often in children, convulsions and bed wetting.

A few doses of Dr. True's Elixir will expel the worms if there are any. If not, it acts as a gentle laxative tonic, clearing the stomach and bowels of all waste matter, leaving the organs sweet and clean. It increases the appetite, causing pure life-giving blood to flow through the body, thus invigorating the whole system with vigor, robustness, and health.

It is sold by druggists, 50c. per bottle. Write for booklet, "Children and Their Diseases." DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me.

WEST WASHINGTON

Ben and Hotel York of Danvers, Me. attended the funeral of their uncle, Wm. Turner, Saturday.

W. V. Nash went to Augusta Saturday returning Monday.

Charles Turner and sister, Orville Oliphant, of Waterville, were in town Saturday to attend the funeral of their uncle, Wm. Turner.

Bela Andrews of Providence, R. I. is spending a few weeks with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Andrews.

G. W. Jackson and wife have gone to Danvers, Mass., where they have a position in the insane hospital.

The sudden death on Wednesday, March 29th of William Turner brought sadness to more than one home in this place. Mr. Turner was 70 years old and his home has always been in Palermo until some nine weeks ago. He was boarding at Mrs. Bertha Mason's of this place where he had the best of care until the last. Mr. Turner was a kind neighbor and loving father and won friends wherever he went. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at Advent chapel. The funeral was conducted by Elder Abbott of Palermo. The floral tributes were lovely. He leaves one son, Myron, who has been employed by W. V. Nash as clerk for 8 years. The interment was in Turner cemetery.

Miss Nellie Keene has gone to Rockland to attend school.

SEMI-MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP.

Partnerships Between Cities and Companies Are Sued.

Whenever in these days an electric light company is unfortunate enough to have a street lighting contract expire in a city where the municipal ownership of the street lighting plant has been established there sometimes comes forth out of the chaos of ideas as to how the municipal ownership business should be handled some proposition from a private company which purports to have the welfare of the city rather than any private gain at heart.

This company, with great love for the commonwealth, either real or assumed, usually comes forward with a proposition for a kind of "semi-municipal ownership," the company to perform the work of lighting the city for a number of years at a good round sum and at the end of the contract the lighting plant to be turned over to the city free of cost and payment for the plant to be made out of the regular monthly payments of the city for its lighting, such monthly payments being invariably a good round sum per lamp. Now, such propositions as this may be made in good faith by a company of public spirited but misguided citizens who really wish to serve the city, and there are usually some respectable names connected with an enterprise of this kind when it is launched. However, there is usually an African somewhere in the woodpile or at least a strong possibility that there will be one before the game is through.

It seems remarkable that any municipality in this day and generation can be deluded into the belief that any such scheme of semi-municipal ownership can compare for a minute with a good, straight, short contract at reasonable rates with a corporation already in the lighting field. After all, a redeeming feature to this scheme is that at the end of a term of years it is fairly certain to bring home forcibly to a municipality the depreciation due to the advance in the art as well as the depreciation caused by wear and tear—Electrical World.

ITS INFLUENCE ON BRIBERY.

Municipal Ownership Would Modify, but Not Abolish It.

One of the truest statements made by advocates of municipal ownership is that it would put an end to bribery of city officials by public service corporations. It certainly would wherever that is practiced. But it wouldn't put an end to bribery of officials, and unless the city should manufacture its own engines, machinery, street cars, electric lamps and other supplies the quality and price of these would be largely regulated by such officials. Every one who is familiar with the school trade knows that orders for school books and supplies are in many cities obtainable only by crossing the palms of members of school boards with a liberal supply of gold and that a change of textbooks is frequently ordered merely because of these itching palms.

Municipal ownership will not change human nature, and venal officials can hold up manufacturing companies just as easily and profitably as they can lighting and traction companies. Did it ever occur to you that a corporation isn't anxious to get rid of its money that way? But when it comes to a holding company, the money is the "long run" to "public servants" who are zealous, not for the public welfare, but for their private purse.

No Intimation of Graft.
A dispatch from Wilkes-Barre in regard to the municipal electric light plant of Easton, Pa., the breakdown of which has left that city in temporary darkness, says:

"There is no intimation of graft. The condition is due apparently to the fact that city employees, appointed by men holding political office, cannot be expected to have the same knowledge of the electric lighting business that skilled employees of private corporations have."

As a member of our city council some years ago I investigated this question of municipal ownership before we contracted for our electric lights and found that in every instance where the cost of municipal lighting was reported below that offered by independent contractors the difference and more appeared on the general taxes, and in most places it was frankly admitted that the light and water plants were built by the city, but used by the politicians.—Homer E. Stewart in Warren (O.) Chronicle.

A Glimpse of the Millennium.
Government ownership of railroads and telegraphs and municipal ownership of public utilities may come some time, but we never come without damage to the public welfare until every phase of the same is put on a strictly nonpartisan merit system and through business principles.—Mansfield (O.) News.

A Pertinent Question.
It seems to us well to ask ourselves not whether we propose to run railroads, telegraphs, street cars, water and gas works, electric light plants and all the rest of it, but whether we intend to keep the same sort of government that we have had for more than a hundred years.—Editorial in Indianapolis News.

Municipal ownership is an experiment not lightly to be ventured upon at the alarm call of politicians who want to be elected to office.—New York Sun.

Saved Her Son's Life.
The happiest mother in the little town of Aya, Mo., is Mrs. S. Ruppee. She writes: "One year ago my son was down with such serious lung trouble that our physician had him unable to him; when, by our druggist's advice I began giving him Dr. King's New Discovery, and I soon noticed improvement. I kept this treatment up for a few weeks when he was perfectly well. He has worked steadily since at carpenter work. Dr. King's New Discovery saved his life." Guaranteed best cough and cold cure by Wm. H. Kittredge, Druggist, Rockland, Me. 100-1000 Drug Co., Thomaston, Me. and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

EFFECT OF THE FOOD LAW.
Driving Many Worthless Catarrh Medicines Out of Existence.

The Pure Food and Drug Law, which went into effect the first of January, has already shown the good that will follow its enforcement.

Many worthless remedies, that have been devised for the cure of catarrh of the bladder, are now being driven out of existence by the Pure Food Law.

The effect of this is to increase the sale of remedies that are valuable and that fulfill the provisions of the law. Hyomel, for example is meeting with a larger sale than ever before, and C. H. Pendleton, druggist and optician, and W. H. Kittredge are still selling it under a guarantee that it will cure catarrh or the money will be refunded. Hyomel is a scientific treatment that is recommended by the best physicians. It cures catarrh without stomach dosing, through inhaling medicaments that go right to the affected spots.

By breathing Hyomel three or four times daily through the neat pocket inhaler that comes with every outfit, its medicated, healing air penetrates to the most remote parts of the nose, throat and lungs, searches out and kills all catarrhal germs, and soothes and heals any irritation in the mucous membrane.

This complete Hyomel outfit costs $1. extra bottle if needed, 50c, and is sold by C. H. Pendleton, druggist and optician, and W. H. Kittredge under the guarantee that it will cure or cost nothing.

GREEN ISLAND.
The sheep on this island have suffered greatly from hunger and cold the past winter and many have died.

School commences April 8 to be taught by the same teacher, Miss Nettie Grey.

Erin Bray still continues quite sick and ill but her friends hope as spring advances and warm weather comes that she will improve.

E. Morton, who has been quite ill during the winter, is much improved. Mr. and Mrs. Marchant returned to their home on Saturday last. They spent the winter in Rockport.

The News—No Pure Food Cough Cure Laws would be needed, if all Cough Cures were like Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. It is a pure, safe, and effective remedy. The National Law now requires that if any poisons enter into a cough mixture, it must be printed on the label or package.

For this reason mothers, and others, should insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. No poison-marks on Dr. Shoop's labels—and none in the medicine, else it must be law by the National Law. And it's the only safe, but it is said to be by those that know it best, a truly remarkable cough remedy. Take no chance, particularly with your children. Insist on having Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Compare carefully the Dr. Shoop package with others and see. No poison marks there! You can always be on the safe side by demanding Dr. Shoop's Cough Cure. Simply refuse to accept any other. Sold by Titus & Hills, Rockland, Me. L. Robinson, Drug Co., Thomaston; Chandler's Pharmacy.

Heart Strength
Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. Possibly not one weak heart in a hundred is, in itself, actually diseased. It is almost always a hidden tiny little nerve that really is all at fault. This obscure nerve—the Cardiac, or Heart Nerve—simply needs, and must have, more power, more stability, more controlling, more governing strength. Without that the Heart must continue to fail, and the stomach and kidneys also have these same controlling nerves.

This clearly explains why, as a medicine, Dr. Shoop's Restorative has in the past done so much for weak and ailing hearts. Dr. Shoop first sought the cause of all this painful, palpitating, suffocating heart distress. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—this popular prescription—is alone directed to these weak and wasting nerve centers. It builds; it strengthens; it offers real, genuine heart help. If you would have strong hearts, strong digestion, strengthen these nerves—re-establish them as needed, with Nelson Davis, brother of the bride was the best man. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Taylor. The bride was becomingly gowned in a light traveling suit. At the conclusion of the ceremony refreshments were served and congratulations were offered. Capt. Young and bride are spending a portion of their honeymoon at Vinahaven where he formerly resided. He is commander of a large schooner sailing from New York to Southern waters. The bride is one of St. George's most highly esteemed young ladies.

TO THE LADIES.

For the present the Art & Wall Paper Co. will make the biggest cut in prices of Wall Papers they ever made. This applies to Wall Papers above five cents a roll.

The Kentucky Republican state convention, which is to be held in June, is expected to have an important bearing upon the Presidential nomination next year, inasmuch as there is a strong tendency among leading Republicans to endorse Secretary Taft for the Republican nomination. As this will be the first state convention to start the Presidential ball, its indorsement will play a great part in political affairs.

THE NARRAGANSETT'S EASTER.

The Easter dinner at the Narragansett hotel Sunday marked the resumption of food service there. The hotel has been fortunate enough to secure the services of such an expert caterer as Charles W. Combs of Belfast, who has just moved to Rockland and rented the house on Union St. next the hotel. It is the plan to serve table d'hôte dinners at noontime, while for breakfast and supper there will be special combinations suitable to the patron's appetite or purse. The Easter Sunday dinner will have the patronage of many of our citizens, who will be given an excellent opportunity of forming an opinion of Caterer Combs' ability. The menu is as follows:

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH.

In the Boston Traveler appeared some verses written by Edgar L. Robbins, a former Rockland boy, son of Levi M. Robbins, based upon the last words of Thomas Bailey Aldrich:

"In spite of all, I am going to sleep; put out the lights."

Put out the lights; he sleeps;
And let the twilight linger and caress him;
Up from the West the sunset radiance creeps,
Like the hushed songs of children, gently creeps,
And hovers o'er his boyish brow to bless him.

The boy's soul rests; and yet
He was not time; the whole wide world will miss him.
Those who have sung his songs cannot forget
The lingering music of gone worlds bent to kiss him.

In spite of all, in spite
Of pain or grief, of sorrow and of sighing
He sang and made the gray world young again.
He dreamed and faded flowers bloomed again
And then passed onward; with the winter daying.

BOWDOIN A BENEFICIARY.

The first distribution by the General Education Board since it received John D. Rockefeller's most recent contribution of $2,500,000 was announced Tuesday when conditional gifts totaling $625,000 were made to five educational institutions. Bowdoin is to receive $50,000 providing it will raise $250,000.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

"Waiting at the Church" and "Poor John" have become very familiar airs in and about Boston during the past year, but those who go to Keith's next week will hear them sung for the first time as they should be sung, or as they were sung to make them famous, for on Monday, April 1st, Vista Victoria, the famous English comedienne is to commence her engagement at the hotel-known vaudeville theatre in America. A year ago Miss Victoria was practically unknown in this country, although possessed of a great reputation as a singer of catchy songs on the other side. Her first appearance in New York was a triumph, and she stands today as the highest salaried vaudeville artist in the world. She will sing in all of her great hits during her engagement at Keith's.

The surrounding bill will be headed by George W. Wilson of Boston Museum fame) and company, in a new sketch recently written by Will McCressey and Mrs. Dodge. "My Old Kentucky Home" is its title and the role played by Mr. Wilson is that of an old Southern Colonel.

"Motoring," that very old travesty; some expert bicycle riding by the Jackson Family; Rae and Broschke, in a merry talk; the Quaker City Quartette, in their musical comedy; "The Village Blacksmith"; a series of novel tricks on parallel wires by the Three Livers, wonderful acrobats; Black and Jones, a clever pair of real ragtime; Harry Brown, monologist; the Green Brothers, who do new stunts in the juggling line; Pearl and Diamond, dancers; and the Kinetograph, will complete the bill.

Jason put up a fine game Wednesday night and got every rush from his opponent. At one time he caged the ball in five records.—New Haven Herald.

BILLIARD TOURNAMENT.

The extreme interest manifested in the Y. M. C. A. billiard tournament is shown by the fact that 68 tournament games had been played up to Wednesday night and the contest had been only about a week. Wilson, with 21 victories out of 22 games played, has a long lead at present, but Howard, who has thus far played but four games, may give him a very close call.

Hyler, McLain, Gay and Weymouth are well tutched and probably will be at the close of the tournament as their playing is of a very even caliber. Marshall and Philbrick are both due to make a better showing as the tournament grows older. Black is comparatively a newcomer in the arena of three-ball billiards, but is making a very creditable showing in all his games. Brown is tightening his grip on last place, but in justice it should be added that he makes no pretensions at being a player of his associates' class, and only entered the tournament for the purpose of making the required number. The standing published herewith was made up Wednesday noon, and does not include the standing of Lamb, who entered the contest upon his return from Boston.

SAWYER'S BEST FIGHT.

Tommy More Than Held His Own With Belfield Wolcott—Other Fast Bouts and Other Sporting Notes.

Although the Knox county sports have no boxing match for which limits a sparring match to six rounds, they were obliged to confess that they got their money's worth at the Arcade Wednesday night. There were no knockouts, but on the other hand there were no pillow fights. In all three bouts the scrappers mixed it good and vigorously and all eyes were glued to the ring.

The curtain-raiser was a six-round bout between Young Handy of Camden and Elly Pusie of Auburn. Pusie was the heavier man by a considerable number of pounds, otherwise Handy's vicious left maul has put him to the bad. The Auburn boy was knocked down twice in the first round, and in the second Handy went after him hammer and tongs. The third round was about even. In the fourth each man played for a knockout, without much apparent progress. The fifth round came and went, with but little change. In the sixth Handy was very groggy, and one fell looked to be all right, but he made a splendid rally, and in the last of the round was giving Pusie fully as much punishment as the latter sent. The Camden boy got an occasion when he left the ring, and deserved every bit of it. His stock, which was temporarily depressed by the knockout Doherty gave him, is rising again.

An old-time favorite in the Maine boxing arena was behind Pusie during the fight. It was Allie Brown of Lewiston, but grown so stout that few were able to recognize him. A few feet away stood Joe Doherty, with whom Brown once had a battle royal for the middleweight championship of the state. Both men have had their day, but both enjoy a good bout as much as they ever did and have just as keen an eye for good material.

When Dave Sawyer and Bob Lewis came into the ring for the second preliminary bout they were greeted with loud cheering. Dave in a previous battle had shown that he was still a whiffler, and among the spectators there were not a few who thought he would let daylight into a dozen portions of his opponent's anatomy. He failed in this mission, but the negro's head must be lined with India rubber to stand the soaking it received. There was a claim of foul in the third round because Sawyer struck Lewis while the latter was on his knees. The referee allowed the fight to go on, and Sawyer at the close of the contest apologized for his act.

Then came the main bout between Belfield Wolcott of Boston and Tom Sawyer of Rockland. Belfield is a brother of the famous Joe Wolcott, and the sports looked him over with a degree of interest. The young negro is splendidly put up but is surmounted by a head and face that were never intended as a badge of beauty. Wolcott's weight was given as 135 pounds and Sawyer's as 142 pounds.

Sawyer had promised his friends that they would see six of the fastest rounds he ever put up, and he proceeded to make good. He did practically all the leading in the first two rounds and sent left and right to the negro's head very often. The third round saw honors pass to Wolcott, who was practically assumed the aggressive and ripped left uppercuts for Sawyer's wind in fine style. He can hit with about twice the force that Young Sidney can, and had Sawyer not been in the finest form for a fourth round would have seen the beginning of the end. Threatened with the loss of prestige that the earlier rounds had given him, Sawyer fought faster than ever in the fifth and had a shade the better of it. Wolcott went to the floor once but was on his feet before the referee had a chance to begin the count. The sixth round was the climax of a rattling good bout. Sawyer landed more blows than his opponent, and when the gong sounded he walked from the ring virtually a victor. It is the unanimous opinion that it was the best showing the Rockland boy has made in any contest yet.

The bouts were refereed by "Spin" Mahoney of Lewiston, who seems remarkably well qualified for the work. He is quick and cool and his announcements are all made so as to be heard.

As yet there are no indications of a Knox County League; this summer, but it should be remembered that baseball sentiment does not crystallize down in this way until the high school series is at its height.

The Powloin baseball team left today for Boston, where it will go into training. Coach John W. Irwin owns an island in Boston harbor on which the team will establish a training ground. This will enable the men to get into shape before they open the season next week, and it will also give an opportunity for team work. It would be almost impossible for a team with almost an entirely new infield to play a ball game that would do credit to the college.

"Chick" Stahl, the well known ball player, committed suicide Thursday by swallowing carbolic acid. He had resigned the management of the Boston Americans only two days before.

Kennebec Journal: Manager Wreath of Augusta believes that a first in young Striner of Rockland, Ed Keniston says he has a fine arm, good control, speed to burn and brains to back him up.

The many friends of Nick McGilvery, the old polo player, will be interested to hear that he is going to manage the Peaks Island rink the coming season. He is at present playing on the Waterville polo team. His idea is to have a series of games during the summer and Bath will probably be represented in the series.

IN THEATRICAL CIRCLES

The Lyceum Comedy Company is making good at Farwell Opera House.

LYCEUM COMEDY CO.
The Lyceum Comedy Company will close their engagement at the Farwell opera house this Saturday afternoon and evening, and as this is pronounced as one of the best repertory companies seen at the Farwell this season, no doubt will play to packed houses at both performances.

ISLE OF SPICE.
The local manager wishes to announce that arrangements have been made with B. C. Whitney, wherein Rockland theatregoers will once more have the pleasure of seeing the greatest of all musical comedies, the "Isle of Spice," at Farwell opera house, on Tuesday evening, April 30, with the same great cast which was seen here last season. All who attended can call to mind the "Goo-Goo Man," "You and I," and "Peggy Brady," songs that are still being sung and whistled on the street today, so let every one put April 30 down on their engagement cards.

CLAIR STOCK CO.
The Clair Stock Co. which will open a three days' engagement at the Farwell opera house, beginning April 15, will present a line of plays never before seen here at popular prices, together with a fine list of specialties and other things that goes to make a first-class company.

PECK'S BAD BOY.
Are you keeping in mind April 18, on which occasion "Peck's Bad Boy" will make his appearance at the Farwell opera house. This season a fine list of specialties are introduced during the play which causes laughs from start to the fall of the curtain.

AS TOLD IN THE HILLS.
"As Told in the Hills," which will be seen at the Farwell opera house on Tuesday, April 2, is something entirely new in the field of melodrama and stands as an example of the best American melodrama. The plot is original, both in its conception and development and the characters are clearly drawn and extremely interesting in their naturalness. There is also included in the company a number of specialties that for general excellence are far above the average, which will be introduced during the action of the play.

MESSAGE FROM MARS.
Without doubt one of the finest plays to be seen at the Farwell opera house this season will be "Message From Mars" on Friday, April 19. The same great cast which had such a long run in Boston, will be seen here, together with a car load of all special scenery. To all who have never seen this attraction we would advise them to be sure and attend this performance on April 19.

DEVIL'S AUCTION.
In Chas. H. Yale's everlasting "Devil's Auction," which comes to the Farwell opera house, on April 10, there is said to be more real fun and laughter than in any other attraction of this kind on the American stage today, and no doubt the company will be greeted with a large house on its appearance here on the above date.

Letter to A. B. Butler
Rockland, Maine.

Dear Sir: You've got 200 cows; how much will you take for calves and milk of 100 of 'em next year—you pick out the 100?

How much for the other 100?
The point is: cows are not all alike, and you know which is which. It is so with paint. You've got one best cow in that herd. There are 200 different points in the United States; and one best. You know your best cow; we know the best paint. The best cow is the one that gives the best calves and milk. The best paint is the one that covers most surface and stays there longest—neither paint nor cow goes by color—nobody asks whether Holstein or Jersey is better to look at. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It's nice, even for the youngest child. Sold by G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston.

NORTH APPLETON.
The next regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be at the home of the president, Mrs. M. F. Hanley, at Appleton, April 12. In the meantime those of the union who choose will assemble March 29 at the G. A. R. hall in Appleton and at the home of Mrs. A. I. Perry, North Appleton, April 5, to see for those who are in need of such help.

DEVOTE & CO.
P. S. Farrand, Spear & Co. sell our paint.

Mary-Lark circles under the eyes indicate a sluggish circulation, torpid liver and kidneys. Exercise and Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea will make you well and beautiful. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets. W. H. Kittredge.

Harry Seiders and Otis Ellis of Union were in this place Friday.

Miss Ida Robbins of Union was in this place recently.

Miss Fannie Boggs, who has been visiting her brother, Levi Boggs, at the village, has returned to her home in this place.

Mrs. Webster Merry and daughters, Gladys and Lina, were at Mrs. T. V. Matthews' Tuesday.

Worked Like a Charm.
Mr. D. N. Walker, editor of that spunky Journal, the Enterprise, Louisa, Va., says: "I ran a nail in my foot last week and at once applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve. No inflammation followed; the salve simply healed the wound." Heals every sore, burn and skin disease. Guaranteed at Wm. H. Kittredge's, Druggist, Rockland; G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston. 25c.

For Catarrh, let me send you free, just to prove merit, a Trial size of Dr. Shoop's Catarrh Remedy. It is a snow white, creamy, healing antiseptic balm that gives instant relief to Catarrh of the nose and throat. Make the free test and see. Address Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. Large jars 50 cents. Sold by Titus & Hills, Rockland; G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston; Chandler's Pharmacy, Camden.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Russell spent a day recently with Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bull at St. George.

Samuel Hart returned home from Portland last Friday, where she underwent an operation at Dr. Cousins' hospital.

How to Remain Young.
To continue young in health and strength, do as Mrs. N. F. Rowan, McDonough, Ga. did. She says: "Three bottles of Electric Bitters cured me of chronic liver and stomach trouble, complicated with such an unhealthy condition of the blood that my skin turned red as flannel. I am now practically 20 years younger than before I took Electric Bitters. I can now do all my work with ease and assist in my husband's store." Guaranteed at Wm. H. Kittredge's Drug Store, Rockland; G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston. Price 50c.

Be very careful of your bowels when you have a cold. Nearly all other cough syrups are constipating, especially those containing opiates. Kennedy's Laxative Cough Syrup moves the bowels—contains NO opiates. Sold by Wm. H. Kittredge.

WILEY'S CORNER.

All schools in town commence April 8.

The St. George Grange conferred the first and second degrees on four candidates last Friday night.

Bonjamin Fuller is sick with the grip.

Mrs. Julia Fuller is on the sick list.

STOP DRINKING!

Orrine Will Destroy All Desire for Whiskey or Beer.

A Michigan druggist, H. G. Coleman has made a thorough study of various cures for the liquor habit, and gives this as a result of his investigation: "Before taking the agency of Orrine, I went to a considerable trouble to learn about it and became confident that it was a thoroughly honest preparation and put out by a reliable firm."

Write for free book on the cure of alcoholism to the Orrine Co., Washington, D. C. Mailed sealed. Orrine costs but 10c per box.

Orrine is sold by Titus & Hills at the Green and White Pharmacy, Main St., Rockland, Me.

Does Coffee disagree with you? Probably it does! Then try Dr. Shoop's Health Coffee. "Health Coffee" is a clever combination of parched cereals and nuts. Not a grain of real coffee, but it has the flavor and taste matches closely old Java and Mocha Coffee. If your stomach, heart or kidneys can't stand Coffee drinking, try Health Coffee. It is wholesome, nourishing, and satisfying. It's nice, even for the youngest child. Sold by G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston.

FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR
for children; safe, sure. No opiates.

TO PREVENT A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills When the First Warning Symptoms Are Noticed and Save Yourself Much Suffering.

Are you troubled with pallor, loss of spirits, waves of heat passing over the body, shortness of breath after slight exertion, a peculiar skipping of the heart beat, poor digestion, cold extremities or a feeling of weight and fullness? Do not make the mistake of thinking that these are diseases in themselves and be satisfied with relief for the time being.

This is the way the nerves give warning that they are breaking down. It simply means that for some reason or other the blood has become impure and thin and cannot carry enough nourishment to the nerves to keep them healthy and able to do their work.

Rest, alone, will sometimes give the needed relief. The tonic treatment by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, however, prevents the final breakdown of the nerves and the more serious diseases which follow, because the pills act directly upon the impure blood, making it rich, red and pure.

Mrs. E. C. Bradley, of 103 Parsells avenue, Rochester, N. Y., was cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after suffering from nervous breakdown for several months. She says:

"I was never very healthy and some years ago, when in a run down condition, I suffered a nervous shock, caused by a misfortune to a friend. It was so great that I was unfitted for work."

"I was just weak, low-spirited and nervous. I could hardly walk and could not bear the least noise. My appetite was gone and I did not care for food. I couldn't sleep well and once for two weeks got scarcely an hour's sleep. I had severe headaches most of the time and pains in my back and spine."

"I was treated by two doctors, being under the care of one of them for six months. I got no relief and then decided to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I soon began to feel better and the improvement was general. My appetite came back and my sleep better. The headaches all left and also the pains in my back. A few more boxes entirely cured me and I was able to go back to work. I felt plump and as though I had never been sick. I would recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to any nervous sufferer."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain the elements necessary to make new blood and, as the nerves get their nourishment from the blood, they have been found invaluable in a wide range of diseases of the blood and nervous, such as rheumatism, neuralgia, St. Vitus' dance and even partial paralysis and locomotor ataxia.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box. Six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

A Great Outside Remedy.
Out of all the external remedies on the market we doubt if there is one that has the record of that world-renowned porous plaster—Alloek's. It has now been in use for sixty years, and still continues to be as popular as ever in curing the great work of relieving our pains and aches. It is the remedy we all need when suffering from any form of ache or pain resulting from taking cold or over-exertion.

Alloek's Plaster is sold by Druggists in every part of the civilized world.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury
as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Get the Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Price 75c per bottle. Take Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

WALDO COUNTY NOTES.

Belfast, March 25.
In the municipal court before Judge Rogers on Saturday afternoon, Walter H. Jurans was fined ten dollars and cost on the charge of assault and battery, to which charge he pleaded "not guilty," and was bound over to the April term of Supreme Court with Dr. John B. Darling and John Ward of this city as securities. The assault took place in the Maine County Jail in this city just previous to the departure of the noon train and created a great deal of excitement. Mrs. George Wentworth of Jamaica Plains, Mass., was the complainant and the person assaulted. She is an old lady some 75 years old and her clothes were torn and she was roughly used by the defendant. The Jurans came here some months ago from Massachusetts and of the fact he was married before had a little girl of some nine years. After the trouble of last week, according to her story, she decided to place her little girl with her mother, Mrs. Wentworth, in Boston, and wired her to come here, which she did. Mrs. Wentworth arranged to take the little girl back and to have left on the noon train. Jurans learned of the intention and having formed an attachment for the child decided to keep her here and went to the train with that intention. The grandmother refused to give her up and in the struggle which ensued, he heavily assaulted the little girl. Judge Rogers decided that Jurans had no control over the child and she left for Massachusetts after the hearing accompanied by the grandmother.
