Poetry. The "Wonderful One-Hoss Shay."

Dr. Holmes tells a "logical story" of a Puritan eacon's -"Wonderful one-hoss-shay, That was built in such a logical way It ran a hundred years to a day, And then of a sudden, it—ah, but stay."

This wonderful vehicle was built in 1755, in coordance with the following mode of chaise building :-"Now in building of chaises, I tell you what,

There is always somewhere a weakes! spot,— In hub, tire, felloe, in spring or thill, In panel, or crossbar, or floor, or sill, In screw, bolt, thoroughbraco- -lurking still Find it somewhere you must and will, Above or below, within or without, And that's the reason beyond a doubt, A chaise breaks down, but doesn't wear out.'

But the Deacon resolved to make each part of his chaise equally strong, so that no part should break but all parts wear out together: "That was the way he "put her through,"-

"There," said the Deacon "naow she'll dew!" And so in truth she did. "Colts grew horses, beards turned gray, Deacon and Deacon's dropped away, Children and grand children where were they! But there stood the stout old one-boss-shay." The morning of the last day of the hundredth ar, since the chaize was made, has come :

"There are traces of age in the one hoss shay, A general flavor of mild decay. But nothing local as one may say, There couldn't be, for the Deacon's art Hat made it so like in every part That there wasn't chance for one to start. For the wheels were just as strong as the thills, and the floor may int as strong as the sills. And the floor was just as strong as the sills, And the panels just as strong as the floor, And the whippletree neither less nor more. And the back cross-bar as strong as the fore, Aud spring and axle and hub encore. And yct, as a whole, it is past a doubt, In another hour it will be worn out."

Upon the morning of the last day of the hundre

"All at ence the horse stood still, "All at once the horse stood still, Close by the meet'n' house on the hill. — First a shiver, and then a thrill, Then something decidedly like a spill,— And the Parson was sitting upon a rock, At half past nine by the meet'n' house cloc What do you think the Parson found, When he got up and stated around? The poor old chaise in a heap or mound, As if it had been to the mill and ground. You see, of course, if you're not a dance, How it went to pieces all at once, All at once, and nothing first, All at once, and nothing first, Just as bubbles do when they burst."

Hens.

There is a great deal of human nature in hens. They have the same qualities that people have, but unmodified. A human mother loves her children, but she is restrained by a sense of propriety from tenring other mother's children in pieces. A hen has no such checks; her motherbood exists without any qualification .-Her intense love for her own brood is softened by no social requirements. If a poor lost waif from another crop strays into her realm, no pity, no sympathy springing from the memory of her own spring, moves her to kindness; but she goes at it with a demoniac fury, and would peck its little life out if fear did not lend it wings. She has a self-abnegation great as that of human mothers .--Her voracity and timidity disappear. She goes almost without food herself that her chicks may eat. She scatters the dough about with her own bill that it may be accessible to the little bills. or. be said to occupy a feather bed ?

perhaps, to teach them how to work. The wire-worms, the bugs, the flies, all love. the choice little tidbits that her soul loves. she divides for her chicks, reserving not a morsel for herself. All their gambols and pranks and wild ways she bears with the most untiring patience. They hop by twos and threes on her back. They peck at her bill. One saucy little imp actually jbmped up and caught hold of the little red lappet above her beak, and, hanging to it, swung back and forth half a dozen times ; and she was evidently only amused, and reckoned it a mark of pre-cocity. Yet, with all her intense, absorbing parental love, she has very serious deficiencies-deficiencies occasioned by the same lack of modification which I have before mentioned. Devoted to her little ones, she will scratch vigorously and un-tirinoly to provide them food, yet fails to tiringly to provide them food, yet fails to remember that they do not stand before but are hovering around her on all sides in a dangerous proximity. CLEAR OUT THE CELLARS.—Impure air is a fruitful source of disease. Malig-nant fevers of the worst character often result from impure odors arising from decaying vegetables that are allowed to remain in collars at this converted to decaying vegetables that are allowed to remain in cellars at this season of the year. Farn.ers sometimes in the hurry of work neglect to look over potatoe-bins and other parts of the cellar where vege-tables are stored. This part of the dom-ieil should receive prompt attention, and all decaying matter swept up and removed, and the walls whitewashed. Let ved, and the walls whitewashed.
