"If there's anything before you, any bit of work from which you shrink, go straight up to it and do it at once. The only way to get rid of it is to do it."

The next national Republican convention will be composed of 992 delegates, of which 332 will come from the South. The number required to nominate is 497.

Six New England colleges are to unite in building a clubhouse in New York city, viz: Amherst, Brown, Dartmouth, Institute of Technology, Wesleyan and Williams. Each will have apartments in this house and they will share the assembly room.

Touring Maine by auto seems to be growing in popularity. The favorite trip seems to be through Portland to Poland Spring, thence to Rockland or Bar Harbor. Many are to the Bangor region or to the Belgrade lakes, while some go clear to northern Arctostook.

An unprecedented honor will be bestowed on Secretary of State Root and Mrs. Root upon their coming visit to Mexico as guests of the government.
While in the capital, Chapultepec castle, the summer home of President
Diaz, will be thrown open to them.
There they will make their residence,
and the castle will also be the headquarters of Secretary Root.

"When you leave for the summer
your cat follows you" is not a popular saying with Washington society women, so they have banded together to buy a place which will be fitted up as a gentle cat boarding house. Here Cap-city fashionables may leave their pets with a caretaker in full confidence that they will be well protected until the return in the fall. As $1000 is not estimated too high a price to pay for a cat which moves in good society, the house may be expected to shelter an expensive collection.

"My rubber," said Nat Goodwin, describing a Turkish bath that he once had in Mexico, "was a very strong man. He laid me on a slab and kneaded me and punched me and banged me in a most emphatic way. When it was over and I had gotten up, he came up behind me before my sheet was adjusted, and gave me three resounding slaps on the bare back with the palm of his enormous hand. "What in blazes are you doing?" I gasped, staggering. "No offense, sir," said the man. "It was only to let the office
know that I was ready for the next day's work. Now, sir, the bell's out of order."

A ton of dead flies was the strange cargo a vessel from Brazil recently unloaded at the London docks. Dead flies are admirable food for chickens, birds in captivity and captive fish. But there being no flies to speak of in England, those in search of this delicacy
for such a use have to send to Brazil,
where there are flies on everything.
The river Amazon swarms with them and Brazilians float down the stream in boats and scoop in millions of the flies,
which circle in dense clouds just above
the water's edge. When the haul is big enough the flies are shipped abroad.
Two years ago the Brazilian government stopped this exportation, being afraid that the flies in the rivers would suffer by being deprived of this fly food. But the prohibition has now been removed. Formerly dead flies sold at 10 cents a pound, but the demand has become so great and the supply so lessened that 30 cents a pound is now charged.

FOR THE BUSY MAN

Constant Reader Tells What He Missed
In Last Week's Papers.

"What is this about battleships being more dangerous in peace than in war?"
asked the Busy Man, as he approached his friend Constant Reader.

"It does seem," was the reply, "as if peace had her disasters no less severe than those of war. It appears to be one of the penalties we pay for having a great navy that serious accidents occur in the practice with big guns. What naval experts term 'backback' took place in one of the 8-inch guns of the battleship Georgia in Cape Cod Bay when the men were practising firing at targets, and as a result ten lives were lost. One of them was that of the son of Rear Admiral Goodrich,
who was following in his father's footsteps in his professional career. The disaster was almost exactly similar to that which befell the Missouri three years ago, when there were thirty-seven victims, but it was supposed to have been guarded against by the installation of a device for blowing the gases out of a gun during its firing. So there could be no danger of flame being communicated to the powder in the turret for use. Evidently the device did not serve its purpose. While this is the third accident of like character to American battleships, there have been no similar ones abroad, for the reason that the smokeless powder used in our navy differs from that used by foreign navies. In theirs the principal ingredient is nitroglycerine, and the suddenness of its explosion drives all the resulting gas out of the gun with the projectile. But the wear and tear of the ordnance is much greater and the life of the gun is much less than in the case
when the smokeless powder adapted by our navy is used."

"Is the peace of the world still being promoted?"

"Yes, unless the action of Japan in causing the Emperor of Korea to retire from his throne can be taken as the opposite of promoting peace. It can be traced directly to the peace conference at The Hague, where Korean delegates sought to secure the presentation of their case against the efforts of Japan
to reduce the Hermit Nation to a condition of vassalage. The Korean Emperor, after more than forty years on the throne, has abdicated in favor of the Crown Prince, and the government will be continued more directly under the control of Japan than heretofore. One calamity has followed another in the reign of Yi-Hyeung, who now retires,
and the condition of the people has deteriorated. Up to 1895 Korea acknowledged the suzerainty of China, but in that year China turned over her interests in the peninsula to Japan, and the latter has steadily increased her power,
especially in financial matters, in order to prevent the ascendancy of Russian influence there, which was regarded as threatening to the Mikado's empire. By the terms of the Russo-Japanese treaty of peace the control of Japan in Korea was assured, and Marquis Ito was sent there to represent Japanese interests,
but discontent grew until it culminated in the sending of a secret delegation to The Hague. The Hague conference is supposed to be a step toward a peace
without having effected any direct action along the lines on which it was expected to accomplish good results."

"Has the hot weather been general
throughout the country?"

"Yes; at least in the eastern part of the Union. The places which have suffered especially have been Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Washington. The effects were most severely felt in Philadelphia, where thousands of thousands of cases of prostration among the throngs which assembled to witness the great parade of the Order of Elks. The suffering from the heat was augmented
by the sale of a deleterious concoction
under the name of lemonade, which,
while it quenched the thirst, produced harmful results in the high temperature and caused many persons to succumb, although the fatalities were few.
In this city it was more humidity than heat which caused excessive discomfort, and when the percentage of humidity declined the heat was endur-able."

"The Haywood trial has reached the stage of summing up by counsel, and it is expected that it will reach the jury
the coming week. Another trial exciting much interest is that of Professor Karl Hau, in Germany, on the charge of murdering his mother-in-law. With Mayor Schmitz out of the way the Board of Supervisors in San Francisco has chosen as the chief executive of the city Dr. Edward R. Taylor, who is expected to be exceptionally well qualified for the duties of the post. The perils of travel are illustrated by the fact that a crowd of roisters on an elevated train in New York city prevented the motorman from using his controller and shutting off the power in time to prevent running into a train ahead. Out in the country an engineer was prostrated by the heat and was helpless at the throttle of his engine,
which fortunately stopped before a serious accident. But if there was danger to a man who had just made a difficult ascent and died of heart disease."

"General Altkhanoff, who had had an adventurous and turbulent career in various parts of Russia, fell victim to the bomb which his enemies had repeatedly threatened him with at Alai andropol. An aeronaut who had made many perilous descents with a parachute, after being apparently shot from a mortar in the course of a balloon fight, found the reality of death in his clothing set on fire and narrowly escaped death. President Fallieres of the French Republic had a narrow escape from being shot by an assassin
on the occasion of the celebration of the Bastille anniversary in Paris."

"The record of deaths for the week
includes the names of Admiral John Pearse Maclear, of the British navy;
Professor Angelo Helprin, who made his name in the world as the discoverer of the French artist; Sir William Henry Perkin, the discoverer of aniline dyes;
Hector Henri Malot, the French novelist; Andrew John, whose Indian name was Gue Ta Note, head of the Seneca tribe of Indians. The report of the death of Tolstoy was happily not confirmed."

TELEPHONE AFFAIRS.

As Developed by Massachusetts Inquiry—
Knox Telephone Co. One of Best Paying Small Concerns.

The inquiry into affairs of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company before the Massachusetts highway commission last Friday was devoted to the examination of Auditor Longley.

Mr. Longley said there were 17 general officers of the company paid $32-800, only one of whom received over $10,000 a year. Regarding the $4,500,000 paid the Bell Telephone Company it was stated the company received in return several patents, including the pupin coil. Mr. Longley said improvements had not been introduced into New England because the New England Company had been bottled up by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

It was shown the Franklin County
Telephone Company of St. Albans, Vt., and the Knox Telephone and Telegraph Company of Rockland, Maine, paid the largest dividends of the smaller companies, bringing five or six per cent.

The territory covered by the company's wires, testified Auditor Longley, is about 400 square miles, containing 1,900,000 people, while in that area
there are about 92,000 telephones.

EATING AT THE PRISON.

How It Is Done Under Warden Norton's
New Method—Many Points in Favor of The System.

In May, it was announced that on Memorial Day a new departure would be inaugurated at the state prison. At that time and for years past the prisoners had eaten in the solitude of their cells. The warden after a careful study of the matter, decided that better order could be maintained and that the health of the prisoners, and the sanitary condition of the prison be benefited by a change. With this in view, he had a long table constructed in each wing of the prison, stools built for the use of the men at the table and prepared to serve the meals to the men, together.

This plan has been in use for over a month and the results are all that had been expected. The danger of waste food falling into cell corners to decay, thereby endangering the health of the inmates, has been done away with,
while eating with their fellow prisoners is more cheerful for the men. More than that it is more economical than the old plan, for the waste is reduced.
The men have all they want to eat and are better satisfied than under the old system.

It may seem hard to be obliged to sit at that table with a crowd of men and never say a word to one of them. Just the same it's a thousand times preferable to eating alone up in the solitude
of a dark gloomy cell.

In the serving of these meals is one of the best exemplifications of what system can do that is to be found. Not a word is spoken by any one. Every move, except the actual eating, is done by rule and regulation. The men know these rules and obey them. It is interesting to see this new system of serving meals in operation.

Shortly before the noon hour Deputy Warden Pierce steps to the guard's window in the guard room of the prison. From this window a view of the prison yard is had. From it, every exit of the workshops can be seen. He takes hold of the whistle cord and pulls it three times, sounding as many blasts of the steam whistle. It is the signal that work will be suspended for the noon hour. As the clock marks the hour of twelve there is another blast of the whistle and the men from the hardness shop march forth.

They come out in single file, a guard at the head, another at the rear of the line. When they have passed within the wing to which they belong, there is another toot of the whistle and the men in the broom shop march out and so it goes until the men of each department are within their respective wings.

As the men enter the wings, they march directly to their cells and enter them closing the door behind. As soon as a row of cells is full the guard pulls the lever, which securely fastens them.
Then there is a form of roll call for the purpose of seeing that every man is within the prison. This roll call is in reality a look into every cell.

When all the prisoners are in the cell
and the long table on the lower floor is ready with food for their meal a signal is given. The lever is moved in the opposite direction, doors open and the men march to their places at the table.
At the word they seat themselves, but do not begin eating. When all are in place the man in charge of the wing sounds a gong and the men eat.

On the table before them is the food.
It is served just as in a mill, quarry or any other boarding house. Each man helps himself and eats all he wants.

It is right here that the saving in cost of subsistence is made. Under the old plan each man was given a certain quantity of food. What he did not want was dumped into the swill buckets and wasted. The big eaters ate what was served and got no more. Now they get what they want, for they've a chance to consume what the small feeders leave. Altogether the result is better.

At the close of the meal the men return to the cells, are locked up and remain there until time to resume work.

THE CONNECTICUT'S TRIAL.

Battleship Built In Government Yard to Go Over Rockland Course Soon.

Instructions have been given the naval board of inspection to be ready to conduct the trial trip of the battleship Connecticut early in August. The vessel is now in dock at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, and word has been received at the Navy Department that the repairs on the vessel, incident to the damage caused by grounding in Porto Rican waters, will be completed by the last of this week. It is expected that the ship will be taken out of the dock Saturday and be ready to leave the navy yard on the following Thursday or Friday.

The vessel will proceed to Rockland,
where the board of inspection, accompanied by naval engineers, including the junior line officers who are under special instruction for engineering
duty, will observe the test.

Interest attaches to this test for the reason that the Connecticut is a sister ship of the Louisiana, the former having been built at the Brooklyn Navy Yard and the latter under contract at Newport News, Va. Some comment has been caused by the fact that the Connecticut was not tried when she went into commission, but such a trial would have been unfair to this ship, as compared with the Louisiana, for in the case of contract built ships the trial
crews are composed of expert firemen and engineers.

It will also be an advantage which has never happened in the case of another ship under trial that all the weights are on board and the vessel is in service trim.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

To Celia.

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I'll pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sip,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
Not so much honoring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not wither'd be;
But thou thereon did'st only breathe
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of dead but of thee!

TWICE-A-WEEK.

The shameful manner in which the Democratic aldermen turned down their own candidate is described in our news columns, in the report of the attempted election of a city liquor agent. The Democratic majority refused to confirm the Republican candidate Mr. Clark, and then, rather than have the agency reopened, voted against their own caucus nominee, Sidney L. Hall. We had some curiosity to see how the Democratic organ would square itself with Mr. Hall and we came across the following statement:

 Then the Mayor tried the Democratic majority with an attractive but not effective bait, by nominating Mr. Sidney L. Hall, who was the agent last year under the Democratic administration.

The fact of the case is, and the city clerk's records will substantiate it, that Alderman Littlehale placed Mr. Hall's name in nomination. The Democrats have always had more fear than love for him and they saw a beautiful chance of killing two birds with one stone. They could send Mr. Hall back to private life and keep the agency closed at the same time. Now what is their real reason for wishing the agency closed? Surely not because there are no sick or thirsty Democrats. The liquor agency records prove the contrary to anybody's satisfaction who cares to examine them. The real reason is because the Democratic aldermen are playing politics. They made several thousand dollars out of the agency last year, and kept the party from making the worst financial showing in years, and they wish to prevent the Republican administration from having these receipts. "You can't make the town too dry to suit us," says the Opinion. Well, that being the case why didn't the Democrats close the agency under their own administration. We fancy the tax-payers will have something to say about this matter next spring. We fancy they will have something to say about the slipshod sewer methods of Mayor Thompson's administration, whereby no proper record of assessments was kept. We fancy they will have something to say about the child's play which led three of the Democratic aldermen to resign from committees and throw the burden of extra work upon the shoulders of the Republicans. It has never yet been charged against a Republican that he held back the state pension bills until threatened with delay in the payment of a load of hay. The Opinion talks about the people passing judgment next spring. That's just what we want them to do, with a full knowledge of actual conditions in Rockland.

"A month or two ago," says the Kennebec Journal, "a man named Frank Putnam wrote an article on Maine for the New England magazine in which he probably made more ludicrous blunders and glaring mistakes than ever before made in a magazine article of similar length. The article was not worth replying to and Maine people who have read it have simply laughed at it and pitied the magazine which allowed itself to be imposed upon by such tommyrotic trash." In a later issue of the same magazine this same Putnam gets after New Hampshire and was even more bitter than he was against Maine, winding up with the recommendation that New Hampshire abolish its representative government and put its state affairs into the hands of a commission. Our Democratic friends who applauded Putnam's whacks at Maine's government, and who profess such a holy horror of government by commission are now due to express an opinion regarding Putnam's New Hampshire finding.

We are not surprised to see Brother Otis publishing a little valedictory anent the mandamus, for the Opinion had to let its readers down as gracefully as possible, but oh! the astonishing nerve of this correspondent "Caustic" who emerges from hiding long enough to worry out two more columns of the gross and senseless rot which he alone fancies is humorous. Every newspaper has its afflictions; we would give a penny to read the Opinion editor's thought when he has to pay for setting up several galleys of the trash that "Caustic" writes. Mr. Otis in his own conscience knows when he's licked. Caustic's skull is of different composition.

To the New York reporters who pounced upon Mark Twain on his arrival from England, the great humorist said that he brought home some brand new jokes, but was going to keep them as he could get 25 cents a word for them. If Mr. Clemens was serious, or as serious as he ever will be on earth, there is even more reason to suspect that his alleged witticisms in England were the concoction of some newspaper men who are not quite so fortunate as to realize 25 cents a word.

Two Japanese cruisers and two United States cruisers met in a French harbor Wednesday and exchanged salutes, while the officers and their French entertainers fraternized most happily. If the fingerings had had their way cannon balls would have been used in the exchange of salutes and the public would have been footing up for an expensive war tax. Good nature and good judgment have prevailed, thank goodness.

A Memorable Day. One of the days we remember with pleasure, as well as with profit to our health is the one on which we became acquainted with Dr. King's New Life Pills, the painless purifiers that cure headache and biliousness, and keep the bowels right, 25 c at W. H. Kittredge and G. L. Robinson, Thomaston drug stores.

When there is the slightest indication of indigestion, heart burn, flatulence or any form of stomach trouble take a little Kodol occasionally and you will get prompt relief. Said by Wm. H. Kittredge.

The Courier-Gazette goes into a larger number of families in Knox county than any other paper published.

Abbott, Republican, had 15, Capt. Luke A. Spear, Democrat, had 13. Next came the election of city treasurer, one Republican, for reasons not known to his associates, saw fit to break away from the caucus choice and stand with the party which threw the Republicans out, neck and crop, a year ago. The vote was 14 for Leroy F. Clough, Republican, and 14 for Herbert C. Clark, Democrat. Mayor Jones threw the deciding vote in favor of Mr. Clough.

There was a similar defection when it came to the election of street commissioner, Elkannah Spear, Republican, having 14 votes and Timothy E. McNamara, Democrat, had 13.

The election of a chief engineer of the fire department was on strict party lines. John A. Karl had 15 votes and George A. Flint had 13.

Isaac B. Simmons, T. S. McIntosh and Lafayette W. Benner were elected assistant engineers of the fire department by acclamation.

In board of aldermen the following appointments were made by acclamation: Measures of Wood and Bark-B. C. Perry, B. F. Colanore, William Sanson, A. J. Bird, George H. Hart, C. M. Thomas, F. R. Spear, John I. Snow, Augustus S. Rankin.

Measures of Coal—E. B. Spear, F. R. Spear, A. J. Bird, C. M. Thomas, John I. Snow, William Sanson, J. Fred Knight, Clifford O. Perry.

Measures of Corn, Salt and Grain—E. B. Spear, James Donohue, L. N. Littlehale, Fred A. Thorndike, B. C. Perry, C. O. Perry.

Sealer of Unlawful Coal Baskets—William O. Abbott.

Inspector of Buildings—John A. Karl, Dr. F. E. Freeman was elected milk inspector, receiving four votes against three for Dr. J. W. Wilde. The Democrat who joined the Republicans was Alderman Smith of Ward 4.

The attempt to elect a city liquor agent resulted in one of the coldest deals that ever came from a Democratic desk. Mayor Jones appointed E. Howard Clark, but the nomination failed of confirmation by a party vote. Alderman Littlehale then nominated as Joseph Abbott & Son. Upon the death of his father 10 years ago, the son continued the business until the Rockland-Rockport Lime Co. came into existence. He then went to Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, where he had charge of a lime plant, burning lime for an acetylene gas concern, 14 months. Mr. Abbott is a member of Knox Lodge I. O. O. F., Gen. Berry Lodge, K. of P., Aurora Lodge, F. A. M., Rockland Eastern Star, L. O. E. F., and the New England Order of Protection. He has been through the chairs of Knox Lodge, Gen. Berry Lodge and the N. E. O. P., and is a past captain of Key Co. U. R. K. of a major in the 3d regiment of last named organization.

He served two years in each branch of the city government and was chairman of the late Board of Aldermen during his last term in the city government. He served 15 years as a member of the Republican committee in Ward 3, where he was associated in political work with the late City Marshal A. J. Crockett, and has been a valued worker there ever since he became a voter.

Mr. Abbott is married.

Leroy F. Clough, city treasurer, has the distinction of being the youngest man who has ever held that office in this city. He was born in this city Nov. 22, 1876, being a son of Leander Clough. He obtained his schooling in Rockland for a short time was employed in the Northend markets of Charles H. Achorn and Willis I. Ayer. He then went to Boston, where he was employed nearly a year by White & Donnell, grocers.

As a member of the Republican city committee in Ward 3, he has been associated in political work with the late City Marshal A. J. Crockett, and has been a valued worker there ever since he became a voter.

Clifton which still exists.

Mr. Karl's active connection with the fire department began in 1870, the year that the Point Klinsheide were all burned. In September of that year the Digo Engine Co., No. 3, was organized with L. D. Carver as foreman, and Mr. Karl was one of the members. He served in various companies and capacities until 1889, when he became first assistant under the present mayor. Sidney L. Hall, the late Democratic incumbent, and a show of hands appeared to have him elected. Alderman Blackington moved that the matter be laid upon the table, to which Alderman McLean objected on the ground that the candidate had already been elected. A yeas and nays vote was called and to the astonishment of everybody present the Republicans all voted for Mr. Hall while the Democrats, to a man, voted against their own nominee. Mr. Hall thus failed of confirmation and the agency remains closed.

William O. Abbott, city marshal, is a son of the late Joseph Abbott, who was one of the city's extensive lime manufacturers previous to the organization of the syndicate. William Abbott was born in this city Dec. 29, 1859. After receiving a common school education in Rockland he attended Kent's Hill Seminary and Eastman's Business College in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. CHAPTER XIII.

A TALL, strongly built man, aged about forty-five, but looking older by reason of his grizzled hair and a face seamed with hardship, a man whose prominent eyes imparted an air of alert intelligence to an otherwise heavy and brutal countenance disfigured by a broken nose, stood on the north side of the Mile End road and looked fixedly across the street at a fine building which dwarfed the mean houses on either hand.

He had no need to ask what it was. Carved in stone over the handsome arch which led to an interior covered court was its title, "The Mary Anson Home For Destitute Boys." A date followed, a date ten years old.

The observer was puzzled. He gazed up and down the wide thoroughfare with the manner of one who asked himself:

"Now, why was that built there?" A policeman strolled leisurely along the pavement, but to him the man addressed no question. Apparently unconscious of the constable's observant glance, he still continued to scrutinize the great pile of brick and stone which thrust its splendid campanile into the warm sunshine of an April day.

Beneath the name was an inscription: "These are they which passed through great tribulation." A queer smile did not improve the man's expression as he read the text. "Tribulation! That's it," he continued. "I've had ten years of it. And it started somewhere about the end of that fine entrance too. I wonder where the fellow is, and that boy. He's a man now, maybe twenty-six or so, if he's alive. Oh, I hope he's alive! I hope he's rich and healthy and engaged or married to a nice young woman! If I've managed to live in purgatory for ten long years, a youngster like him should be able to pull through with youth and strength and a bagful of diamonds."

Without turning his head he became aware that the policeman had halted at some little distance.

"Of course I've got the mark on me," said the man sagely to himself. "He's spotted me all right. Well, I'll let him see I don't care for him or any of his breed. I never did care, and it's too late to begin now."

He crossed the road, passed between two fine iron gates standing hospitably open and paused at the door of the porter's lodge, where a stalwart commissionaire met him.

"Have you called to see one of the boys?" said the official cheerfully.

"No, I'm a stranger. It's a good many years since I was in these parts before. In those days there used to be a mews here and some warehouses at the back, with a few old shops."

"Oh, I expect so, but that is long before my time. The Mary Anson home was founded ten years ago, and it took two years to build. It's one of the finest charities in London. Would you like to look round?"

"Is that allowed?"

"Certainly. Everybody is welcome. If you go in by that side door there, you'll find an old man who has nothing to do but take visitors to the chief departments. Bless your heart, we lose half our boarders that way. People come here, see the excellencies of the training we give and offer situations to boys who are old enough."

The man appeared to be surprised by the commissionaire's affability. He did not know that civility and kindness were essential there if any employee would retain an excellent post.

He passed on, measuring the tessellated court with a backward sweep of the eye. In the sunlit street beyond the arch stood the policeman. The visitor grinned again, an unamiable and sulky grin, and vanished.

The policeman crossed over.

"What is that chap after?" he inquired.

"Nothing special," was the answer. "Last time he was here the place was a mews, he said."

"Unless I am greatly mistaken, he has a ticket in his pocket."

"You don't say! Do you know him?"

"No. I'll look him up in the album in the station when I go off duty."

"Well, he can't do any harm here. O'Brien takes visitors over a regular round, and, in any case, the man seemed to be honest enough in his curiosity."

"You never can tell. They're up to all sorts of dodges."

"Thanks very much. I'll ring for"

"What is that chap after?" he inquired.

"Nothing special," was the answer. "Last time he was here the place was a mews, he said."

"Unless I am greatly mistaken, he has a ticket in his pocket."

"You don't say! Do you know him?"

"No. I'll look him up in the album in the station when I go off duty."

"Well, he can't do any harm here. O'Brien takes visitors over a regular round, and, in any case, the man seemed to be honest enough in his curiosity."

"You never can tell. They're up to all sorts of dodges."

"Thanks very much. I'll ring for"

an effort. "I've been to Africa, and I get such a spasm now and then in my liver that I can hardly stand."

"That's no way to cure yourself—profoundly the name of the Almighty," cried O'Brien.

"No, I'm sorry, I tell you. But about this boy?"

"There's no more to see now, if ye please. That's the way out."

O'Brien was deeply offended by the language used beneath a roof hallowed by the name of Mary Anson. The sightseer had to go, and quickly. Another commissionaire, who was observing them from a distance, came up and asked O'Brien what the stranger was talking about.

"Ye never heard such a blaggard," said the old man indignantly. "I was in the middle of telling him about Mr. Philip, when he began to curse like an old Nick himself."

In the Mile End road the rawboned person who betrayed such excitement found the policeman awaiting him. He sprang on to a bus and purposefully glared at the officer in a way to attract his attention. When at a safe distance he put his fingers to his nose. The constable smiled.

"I knew I was right," he said. "I don't need to look twice at that sort of customer."

And he entered the Mary Anson home again to ask the porter what had taken place.

It was an easy matter for Jocky Mason, released from Portland prison on ticket of leave, after serving the major portion of a sentence of four years' penal servitude—the man he assaulted had died, and the ex-convict narrowly escaped being hanged to ascertain the salient facts of Philip Anson's later career.

It was known to most men. He was biographed briefly in "Who's Who" and had often supplied material for a column of gossip in the newspapers. Every free library held books containing references to him.

It was a little impossible that the source of his great wealth should remain hidden for all time. In one way and another it leaked out, and he became identified with the ragged youth who created a sensation in the dock of the Clerkenwell police station.

But this was years later, and the clever manipulation of Mr. Abingdon as his estate agent, and of Mr. Isaacstein, as his representative in the diamond trade, completely frustrated all attempts to measure the true extent of the meteor's value.

For now Philip owned a real diamond mine in South Africa, he had a fine estate in Sussex, a house in Park Lane, a superb scowling yacht, a colliery in Yorkshire and vast sums invested in land and railways. The latent value of his gems had been converted into money earning capital.

Mr. Abingdon proved himself to be a very able business man. When the administration of Philip's revenue became too heavy a task for his emerald-shedded fingers, he called in a capital estate office, with well trained lawyers, engineers and accountants to conduct his various departments, while he kept up an active supervision of the whole until Philip quitted his university and was old enough to begin to bear some portion of the burden.

They agreed to differ on this important question. Philip was fond of travel and adventure. With great difficulty his "guardian" kept him out of the army, but compromised the matter by allowing the young millionaire to roam about the odd corners of the world in his yacht for eight months of the year, provided he spent four months of the season in London and Sussex attending to affairs.

In this month of April he was living in his town house. In July he would go to Fairfax Hall, in August to Scotland and a month later would joyfully fly to the Forth, where the Sea Maiden awaited him.

This lady, whose waist measured eighteen feet, whose legs measured seventy feet, and whose length of canvas and auxiliary steam, was the only siren able to charm him.

He was tall now and strongly built, with something of the naval officer in his handsome, resolute face and well set up figure. As a hobby he had taken on to master masonry's certificate, and he could navigate his own ship in the teeth of an Atlantic gale. He loved to surround himself with friends, mostly Oxford men of his year, but he seldom entertained ladies, either on board the Sea Maiden or in either of his two fine mansions.

He avoided society in its general acceptance, refused to appear at mixers in politics, took a keen delight in using his great wealth to alleviate distress anonymously and earned a deserved reputation as a "bear" among the few match making mammas who managed to make his acquaintance.

In other respects as the boy was so was the man—the same downright character, the same steadfast devotion to his mother's memory, the same relentless adherence to a code of honor decided on and the same wholehearted reciprocity of friendship.

As he stood in his drawing room before dinner on the evening of the day Jocky Mason revisited the locality, if not the surroundings, of his capture Philip's strong face wore an unwonted expression of annoyance. He walked to and fro from end to end of the beautiful room, pausing each time he reached the window to gaze out over the park.

A servant, who entered for the purpose of turning on the electric lights and lowering the blinds, was bidden alight impatiently to wait until Philip and his guests were at dinner.

A telegram came. Anson opened it and read:

"Was dressing to come to your place when Grainger telegraphed for me to act as substitute Lincoln quarter sessions. Must go down to-morrow. F.O.K."

"No answer," he said, adding to himself:

"That's better. Fox's caustic humor would have worried me tonight. I wish Abingdon would come. I am eager to tell him what has happened."

Now, punctuality was one of Mr. Abingdon's many virtues. At his past 7 to the tick his brougham deposited him at the door.

The two met with a cordial greeting that showed the close ties of mutual good fellowship and respect which bound them together.

"Fox won't be here," said Philip. "Grainger has broken down—ill health. I suppose and wired for him to go to Lincoln."

"Ah, that's a lift for Fox. He is a clever fellow, and if he manages to tell the jury a joke or two he will in duence a verdict as unfairly as any man I know."

"Does it not seem to you to be rather an anomaly that justice, which in the abstract is impeccable, too often depends on other issues which have no possible bearing on the merits of the dispute itself?"

"My dear boy, that defect will continue until the crack of doom. Pascal laid it bare in an epigram. 'It all depends on which side the Pyrenees Fox happens to be.'"

"Unfortunately I am straddling the water shed at this moment. I have made a very important discovery. Abingdon, and I am glad we are alone to-night; we can speak freely. Some people named Sharpe & Smith wrote to me yesterday."

"I know them—an old established firm of solicitors."

"Well, they urged me to give them an appointment on a private matter."

"And what did you say?"

"I told them I would think over the situation and communicate with them further."

"Were they satisfied?"

"By no means. They are exceedingly anxious to placate the old man. They probably control a good deal of his money."

"Um!"

"Of course! You see the delicacy of their position. After playing into the hands of Lady Louisa for nearly a quarter of a century they suddenly find the whole situation changed by the baronet's belated discovery that he once had a sister."

"You have not told me all this without a purpose. Do you want my advice?"

"Philip's face was clouded, his eyes downcast."

"You understand," he said after a long pause, "that some one, either the man or the woman—the woman, I think—is morally responsible for my mother's death. She was poor—wretchedly, horribly poor—the poverty of thin clothing and insufficient food. She was ill, confined to a miserable hovel for weary months and was so utterly unprovided with the bare necessities that the parish doctor was on the point of compelling her to go to the workhouse infirmary when death came."

And to the instrument of God's vengeance on this woman?"

Mr. Abingdon, who had risen to light a cigar, placed a kindly hand on the young man's shoulder.

"Philip," he said, with some emotion, "I have never yet heard you utter a hasty judgment. You have prudence far beyond your years. It seems to me, speaking with all the reverence of a man in face of the decrees of Providence, that God has already provided a terrible punishment for Lady Louisa Morland. What is the name of her son?"

"I do not know. I forgot to ask."

"I have a wide experience of the jeunesse doree of London. Hardly a week passed during many years of my life that one of his type did not appear before me in the dock. What is he—a roe, a gambler, probably a drunkard?"

"All these, I gathered from the solicitors."

"And if your mother were living, what would she say to Lady Morland?"

"She would pity her from the depths of her heart. Yes, Abingdon, you are right. My uncle's wife has chosen her own path. She must follow it, let it lead where it will. I will write to Messrs. Sharpe & Smith now. But step into my dressing room with me for a moment, will you?"

In a corner of the spacious apartment to which he led his guest stood a large safe. Philip opened it. Within were a number of books and documents, but in a large compartment at the bottom stood a peculiar object for such a repository—an ordinary leather portmanteau. He lifted it on to a couch and took a key from a drawer in the safe.

"This is one of my treasures which you have never seen," he said, with a sorrowful smile. "It has not been in the light for many years."

He revealed to his friend's wondering eyes the tattered suit, the slipshod boots, the ragged shirt and cap, the rusty doorknob, associated with that wonderful month of March of a decade earlier. He reverently unfolded some of his mother's garments, and his eyes were misty as he surveyed them.

"When poverty overtook my dear one she so far obliterated a cruel memory as to appeal, not once, but many times, to the human coelepterus of Exmoor, but she was invariably frozen off either by Lady Louisa Morland or by Messrs. Sharpe & Smith."

"Did they admit this?"

"By no means. I am telling you the facts. I am still on top of the Pyrenees."

"Then how did you ascertain the facts?"

"I have in my possession ever since my mother's death the letters they wrote to her. They were fresh in my memory when you and I first met in the Clerkenwell police court. That is why the name of Philip Morland was glib on my tongue."

"So I have only heard historical events—events prior to the last ten years?"

"Exactly. My uncle is now sixty years of age. Lady Louisa Morland's son is twenty-four. Her ladyship's whole aim in life has been to secure him as the baronet's heir. The title, of course, he cannot obtain. But, most unfortunately, he has no penchant for beetles. Indeed, Lady Louisa's researches have long since diminished in ardor. Her son's interests are divided between the Sports club and the corymboes of the latest musical comedy. My uncle, who is preparing a monograph on the fleas which patronize Exmoor wild ponies, came to town last week to visit the British museum. Unhappily he heard something about his stepson which disturbed his researches. There was a row."

"Why do you say 'unhappily'?"

"Because I am dragged into the wretched business on account of it. After a lapse of more than twenty-five years he remembered his sister, went to his solicitors, made a fearful hubbub when he heard of letters received from her and answered without his knowledge and ascertained that she was dead and had a son living. At any cost, they must find that son. They have guessed at his identity for some time. Now they want to make sure of it."

"And what did you say?"

"I told them I would think over the situation and communicate with them further."

"Were they satisfied?"

"By no means. They are exceedingly anxious to placate the old man. They probably control a good deal of his money."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

[From Our Regular Correspondent.]

Washington, July 26.—If Uncle Sam does contemplate the sending of his powerful Atlantic fleet around to the Pacific, he is not going to take chances by leaving the Atlantic coast unprotected. General Almsworth, acting Secretary of War, has just issued an order directing the organization of twenty-seven additional companies of coast artillery. These companies were provided for in the army appropriation bill passed at the last session of Congress, and each company is to have the strength of 108 enlisted men. Those posts on the North Atlantic coast that will benefit by this reorganization are Fort Adams, R. I., Fort Hancock, N. Y., Fort Mott, N. J., Fort Dupont, Del., Forts Revere, Banks and Andrews, Mass., Forts McKinley and Williams, Me., and Fort Constitution, N. H. With the addition of these twenty-seven companies and the new policy of the federal and state governments in drilling militiamen at the big coast defense guns and in conjunction with the regulars, it is believed that the problem of adequate coast defense will have been solved.

Submarine signaling finally has been reduced to a science, and the Light-house Board is completing arrangements to place bells in all lightships not already equipped. For some time experiments have been under way at stations at Point Allerton, Mass., and in Halifax Harbor. The bell is hung from a tripod at the bottom of the sea and on the edge of the shoal or reef it is destined to warn ships against. It is operated by electricity conveyed through a cable from the signal station on shore. Ships equipped with the submarine signal apparatus can be warned when from five to ten miles distant. A regular telegraphic code can be used in signaling, and minute directions thus obtained by any ship fog-bound when approaching a dangerous coast.

If President Roosevelt sticks to his determination not to accept a third term, and is not dragged, an unwilling victim, into the thick of the political fray next year, his friends already are suggesting a place which he can fill with honor to himself and advantage to the country at large. This plan was outlined by the National Educational Association, which had its convention last week in California. It is simply to place Mr. Roosevelt at the head of a national university here in Washington—an institution that the government long has hoped to see established, and which was the dream and ambition of the first President. President Roosevelt himself is heartily in favor of the establishment of a university. In a letter to President Charles W. Stedham, head of the George Washington University, which is seeking to establish itself as such an institution, after a life of eighty-six years, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"Pray accept the assurance of my hearty sympathy in your work. I am delighted to learn that the chances are now so good for obtaining the necessary funds to put the George Washington University firmly on its feet. I congratulate you upon the work the University has already done, and, in common with all good citizens, I wish you all possible prosperity in the future."

Sour Stomach

No appetite, loss of strength, nervousness, headache, constipation, bad breath, general debility, sour risings, and catarrh of the stomach are all due to indigestion. Kodol relieves indigestion. This new discovery represents the natural juices of digestion as they exist in a healthy stomach, combined with the greatest known tonic and reconstructive properties. Kodol for dyspepsia does not only relieve indigestion and dyspepsia, but this famous remedy helps all stomach troubles by cleansing, purifying, sweetening and strengthening the mucous membranes lining the stomach.

Mr. S. S. Bell, of Ravenwood, W. Va., says: "I was troubled with sour stomach for twenty years. Kodol cured me and we are now using it in milk for baby."

The phase of the matter that probably will not meet with Rooseveltian approval is found in the National Educational Association's suggestion that such a university be established and maintained by the government. Politics and education never have mixed, and it is scarcely likely that Mr. Roosevelt either would endorse or assist in effecting such an unhappy amalgamation.

"More men" is the cry of the Navy Department. Uncle Sam's big fighting ships are in sorry condition by reason of the light enlistments. This week, under orders issued by the Department, almost the entire force of the battleship Iowa was transferred to the battleship Vermont. The Iowa, which is at Norfolk navy yard, has been placed in reserve, in company with the Indiana and a number of cruisers. The situation is really becoming acute, and although the Department is using every means in its power to awaken interest in the navy as a profession, the young men needed to man the guns on the floating fortresses fall to take the bait which is offered in the way of moving picture shows and large, gaudy and alluring paintings of war vessels and their natty crews. Times are too good on shore and work too plentiful, it would appear, to induce the young men of the nation to take to the sea.

Reports reaching Washington from the Mississippi, Missouri, and Ohio valleys indicate that a remarkable boom is setting in in the matter of shipbuilding, and that saw mills and ship yards that have been idle for a quarter century are beginning to feel the effect of the new order of things. This activity is due entirely to the avowed determination of the American people, through Congress and the government, to develop the waterways of the country. This sentiment was spurred by the disastrous freight congestion of last fall, when numbers of western states suffered cold and hunger by reason of the inability of the railroads to transport coal and food, and farmers of other states, with the wealth of the fields in their granaries, were actually without money because the means of getting their products to market was lacking. The National Rivers & Harbors Congress has been working for a number of years to crystallize this sentiment and to bring forcibly before Congress the urgent necessity for undertaking such improvement work. There is no question whatever in the minds of Administration officials that an era of unprecedented prosperity, which will pale into insignificance the present piping times, will be inaugurated as soon as the different sections of the country are brought into closer and cheaper communication. John A. Fox, special director of the National Rivers & Harbors Congress, is at present visiting the larger cities in the upper Mississippi Valley. He has been in Washington after a trip through New England in which he reports that he found the "Yankees" fully awake to the necessity of improving their rivers and harbors to care for the increasing commerce. He is in the upper Mississippi Valley to enlist the financial and moral support of the different communities which are so vitally interested in the development of the Father of Waters.

"Tom" Johnson, mayor of Cleveland and Democrat of national renown, can issue his own money without let or hindrance from Uncle Sam. The register came up this week before Commissioner of Internal Revenue Capers, and was so decided. The case is unique, in that Mayor Johnson, as head of the Depositors' Savings & Trust Company of Cleveland, issues scrip which bears a vignette likeness of himself, and is popularly known as "Tom Johnson money." As a matter of fact, the scrip is really only certificates of deposits, but they are negotiable and are entering into local transactions in competition with the money of Uncle Sam. Some time ago Commissioner Capers directed that a levy of the ten percent tax imposed upon State bank circulation be made. Through his lawyers, Mr. Johnson made objection, with the result that the order was rescinded, or, rather, suspended. If circulation of the scrip does not become too heavy, it is probable that it will go untaxed entirely.

President Roosevelt's rumored new policy for the control of railroads has raised a storm of protest from Republican members of both houses of Congress. As reported by the President, in favor of having the government invest in railroad bonds to an extent sufficient to give it a representative on the directorates. In this way Mr. Roosevelt thinks the government would be advised of any action the railroads might seek to take, and be prepared to combat any move that might be inimical to public interest. However, this is looked upon as letting down the bars to government ownership and is repugnant to a large number of leaders in Congress. Few of the party leaders have come out openly in stating their views in opposition to this reported policy, but Senator Burrows of Michigan is one of them. He is reported to have declared himself, in Detroit a few days ago, as not being in favor of the plan at all, and, in fact, disapproving of it. The Senator questions the constitutionality of such a move and declares that aside from that phase of the matter it would be nothing short of a national calamity. Any attempt to force reform along the line suggested, he is reported as saying, would be most unfortunate, and that the proper way to curb corporations which persist in violating legislation designed to benefit the general public is to enlist the power of the courts by means of injunction proceedings and make the penalties most severe. There is no official confirmation of the report that Mr. Roosevelt is seriously considering the policy of having the government invest in railroad securities. It is believed that he is not contemplating such a radical step.

If you are running short of money these days, don't worry. While the supply never has been equal to the demand, it is being turned out in lesser proportion than usual. Uncle Sam's money-makers who turn out fortunes in greenbacks every day in the week are taking a rest, a large number of the employees of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the Treasury Department being on their annual vacations. Because of this the work has been cut down considerably and the output of bills is correspondingly lessened. However, this could not fall on better times, for in its last report on the financial standing of the country, the Treasury figures show that the per capita holdings of the United States never was greater in the history of the nation.

Beckman's Useful Publication.

An unusually elaborate publication devoted to travel in the 120-page book of the Beckman Tourist Company. The cover is a work of art in itself, and depicts not only the modern everyday tourist, but as a contrast, in the background appears John Smith and Pocahontas in aboriginal costume, and is a fitting reminder of the Jamestown Tercentennial Exposition. The contents of the book cannot but prove of special interest to anyone who has in mind a vacation or trip anywhere. The details are most complete and give one all the information required, whether the contemplated trip is a "personally conducted all expense" tour, or merely the rare to some nearby resort. It also has necessary information concerning all coastwise steamer lines and those on the Great Lakes. Copies may be obtained free at the Boston office, 233 Washington street, or they will be mailed on request.

A CONDITION THAT CALLS FOR A TONIC

When Run-Down and Debilitated Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, a Tonic That is Also a Specific for Many Disorders of the Blood and Nerves.

When the health is run-down from overwork, overstudy, or from whatever cause, a good tonic is needed.

But sometimes what is mistaken for simple debility is a symptom of a more serious disorder, anaemia, perhaps, or a breaking down of the nervous system.

By taking a tonic that is also a specific for many disorders of the blood and nerves the threatening disease may be prevented. That is what was done in the case of Mrs. Ora Ford of 1008 Washington Boulevard, Chicago.

She was undoubtedly in the early stages of anaemia before Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured her. She says:

"I was completely run down in health for about a year. My blood was thin and poor and I had a great deal of trouble with my stomach and kidneys. My appetite was poor and I had no desire for food. What I ate distressed me. I had always been troubled with sick headaches which came on as often as three or four times a week. I also had dizzy spells, my breath was short and I frequently had pains in my side. I had no ambition or desire to do anything. I became so pale and thin that I looked terrible. My friends thought I was going into consumption."

"After I had tried several kinds of medicine that did me no good whatever I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in a newspaper and decided to give them a trial. I began picking up a little after taking about two boxes of the pills and noticed that I was getting an appetite. I gradually got stronger, the dizzy spells left and my color came back. The headaches ceased to be so frequent or so severe. I can recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for troubles of the blood and nerves."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have corrected serious disorders of the stomach, have revitalized the nervous system and restored to health sufferers from severe disorders of the blood and nerves. For rheumatism, indigestion, nervous headaches and many forms of weakness and debility Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are recommended even if ordinary remedies have been tried without relief.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, by Dr. Williams Medical Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

GILCHRIST-DUNTON.

A pleasant home wedding was held Wednesday afternoon at the home of Representative and Mrs. Robert F. Dunton, No. 54 Cedar street, Belfast.

The bride, Miss Helen M. Dunton, was united with E. B. Gilchrist. Only the members of the two families were present. The parlors were handsomely decorated. The bride was attired in white satin mulle. The ceremony was performed at 11 o'clock by Rev. George S. Mills of Bennington, Vt., a former pastor and intimate friend of the bride's family. Two little nieces of the groom, Misses Margaret and Alice Snow of Rockland, served as flower girls. The bride and groom were recipients of many valuable presents from their host of friends.

They are among the most respected and popular young people of the entire community. IN SPORTING CIRCLES

Jack Welch of San Francisco has been selected as referee for the contest between Jimmy Britton and Battling Nelson which will take place at the auditorium rink Wednesday evening, July 31.

Black Fitzsimmons meets Jack Twin Sullivan again in Bar Harbor Saturday night. According to his own version he was rather too much for the Twin in the recent contest.

A good card is offered for the sporting exhibition in the Arcade next Wednesday night. The star bout will be between Dave Sawyer of Rockland and Belfield Walcott of Boston, the latter being champion waterweight of New England. Those who saw Walcott in his recent bout with Tom Sawyer, know that he is extremely clever and that he can stand a great deal of the kind of grief that an ordinary boxer deals out. The semi-final will be between Young Neary of Boston, 115 pound champion of Boston vs. Kid Ryan of Chelsea, Mass., the "Star of the East." Two local boys, spilling for sport, will appear in the preliminary bout. All of the advertised artists will surely be present.

"Gramp" Morse, who has been pitching for the Pine Tree Club in the Maine State League, has just been released, and this will probably mark his permanent retirement from the baseball world. "Poor Old Gramp," he has been a good man in his day, almost as good as the best.

Dave Sawyer fought a fast six-round bout with Jack ("Twin") Sullivan in Bar Harbor Wednesday evening and the honors were about even. It was a hard fight from first to finish, each man trying for a knockout, judging from the earnestness with which they fought. Sullivan had the advantage over Sawyer in weight, but this fact did not deter the Rocky Rocking chap from landing many hard body blows on the Twin. Nearly all the leading was done by Sawyer, and in the fourth he forced Sullivan to the ropes. If any decision could be given under the Maine law, all conceded it would be a good draw. Sullivan was attended by James Furry, while Frank Repetto and young Jack Sullivan acted for Sawyer.

THROWN FROM TRESTLE.

Brakeman John Kirkpatrick Figured in a "Thriller" on the Limerock Railroad.

That John Kirkpatrick, brakeman for the Limerock Railroad, was not fatally injured Tuesday noon is a marvel to all who have visited the scene of the accident in which he figured.

A trainload of 10 cars had dumped their contents into the "Pit" below near the store of A. J. Bird & Co. and were set onto the main track. Coming down from the "Skylark" as the Pit kid branch is called, the train accumulated a high rate of speed. The brakeman, Mr. Kirkpatrick, was standing on the footboard of the second car and Jimmy Doherty, the well known young pugilist, was tending switch.

Doherty's story as told to The Courier-Gazette reports a few minutes after the accident was that the trucks of the head car began riding the rail a few feet before the switch was reached. Realizing the danger of the cars being derailed he shouted for Kirkpatrick to jump. The brakeman had no time to obey, and it is even doubted if he understood the import of Doherty's warning. As the train passed the switch it left the rails and about a hundred feet beyond the switch the first two cars piled up together on the very brink of the trestle work. Kirkpatrick shot upward as if from a catapult, and was thrown headlong over the trestle, landing on his right shoulder in the roadway which runs beneath the track.

He was picked up for dead and carried to the Perry Bros. store, where Dr. Wasgatt found that the only fractures were to the right shoulder and right elbow, although the brakeman's hip and back were badly lamed. The injured man was taken to his home on South Main street.

Young Doherty had meantime leaped from the trestlework fearing he would be crushed by the derailed cars. He was shaken up, but not injured.

THE BELFAST WAY.

How a Professional Man Stopped An Automobile "Road Hog."

A professional man of Belfast furnishes the latest sensation in the automobile world by adopting methods likely to be successful in bringing the so-called "road hog" to time.

The man in question was driving along a country road near the city one day recently holding the reins over a young and heavy steed of good pedigree. Several automobiles had been met and passed safely but the animal was getting pretty nervous and when a big touring car came along a rather narrow stretch of road at high rate of speed Mr. Black took to his appearance under existing conditions might be disastrous to himself and his team. He gave the regular signal to the automobile driver by raising his hand twice and no heed being made to his warnings he called out to the chauffeur to stop.

No attention was paid to this even and the Belfast man, then worked up to a high pitch of anger, leaped from his wagon and pulled a revolver, brought the automobile to a full stop in short order. A few emphatic words were exchanged, the horse quieted down, and the incident, it is presumed, was closed then and there.

THE ROK COMPANY.

A very busy spot in New York these days is the headquarters of the Rok Company, the concern which owns the two big musical attractions, "Coming Thro' the Rye" and "The Land of Nod." Both of these shows are being entirely reorganized for the coming season. All new scenery and costumes are being prepared for "Coming Thro' the Rye," and the cast, which will be headed by Frank Lator. The popular comedian is known to be a past grand master in the art of stage management, and a talented and expert is anticipated by the owners of the production. Mr. Lator has planned many new musical numbers, and has arranged several new situations which are calculated to materially increase the already strong comedy element of the piece. "The Land of Nod," with the best cast that has ever appeared in the big extravaganza, will be presented with all the magnificent scenery and costumes which were specially gotten up for the New York Theatre run of the piece last spring. Knox Wilson has been re-engaged for the part of "April Fool," in which he scored such a hit last season. These two attractions will be among next season's most important amusement offerings in this country.

MONDAY THE FIFTEENTH.

Waterville Sentinel Pays Its Respects to Dr. Crockett's Plunderer.

The 15th of July, 1907, will be a day long to be remembered in Maine. It was the fatal day when Dr. Crockett's book was gotten out. Early in the morning seismic disturbances began to be noticeable, likewise atmospheric difficulties. The sun became eclipsed at 10 a. m., and the face of the moon was seen at 5 p. m., when it was tilted toward the horizon behind the shadow of the Doctor's wrath and staggered below the horizon. The moon rose in eclipse and stayed that way. The cold, dense orb of night has no desire to pass upon the wreck of man with which the Doctor's vengeance had strewn the earth.

The thermometer rose and fell and rose again, seeming as little able to stay in one place as was the famous author of the "Plunderer" during the 1906 campaign. The barometer made rapid jumps back and forth, running from "set fair" to hurricanes and cyclones until it resembled nothing as much as a resubmission Republican looking for a party. The compass pointed first north and then south, then east, then west, finally settling down with the needle gazing steadfastly toward Thomaston, excepting in certain localities where the magnetic current was disturbed by the presence of the book in local book stores.

Thunder crashed, lightning tore vivid rents in the black sky. Rain fell in torrents at times and at times an awful drouth, as though the hot breath of the lower world had been loosed, encompassed the earth.

Politicians died by scores. Republicans and Democrats alike succumbed to the fatal scourge. It was noticed that Democrats suffered the most. Many died to the high hills. Some, like the devil of old, refused a habitation in the breast of man, took to the sea. The waters of the Kennebec and Androscoggin ceased to flow and the Penobscot, gorged by the contributions of the rum trust, flowed beer and overran its banks. The great men of Belmont and Ryan for help, but none was forthcoming. Hearst was called upon. He looked the other way. Loeb refused to allow the President to be interviewed in regard to the situation unless the record was put in writing and the hand of all Maine was palsied and could not write.

In the midst of it all, when flashes of fiercest lightning made the heavens visible, the figure of a man was seen in the zenith. His face was white and inscrutable. He held, in his right hand a pen and in his left the fate of all his fellows.

It was George Langtry viewing the remains. And through it all, in accordance with the publisher's prospectus, there ran a "pretty love story."

It was an awful day.—Waterville Sentinel.

Beneath the clouds of darkness That veil the spirit's view, Beneath the stars that sparkle In midnight's darkest hue; Beneath the crystal gleam of summer's noontide glow, Among the blossomed meadows, Where glittering streamlets flow, We walk along life's pathway In gladness and repose, Both playing upon spirits As we journey to the tomb.

We journey through the gladness To silence in the tomb, We journey through life's sorrows To where the weary lay, Their tired feet in life's fountain Of everlasting rest. We wait, we wait, we wait again, We know not which is best, We love the dear ones with us And those in Heaven above, And oh! those valleys of wild flowers, The blossoms in spring we love.

While here below we wander The hills and vales of care, With rocks and thorny places Upstarting here and there, But heavenward way is breaking Across the burning sky, Where gleams the flash of morning In holy glad surprise.

While here below we wander, Led by our Father's hand, We follow as His children To Heaven's glory land. While here below we sing, The anthem of the skies, The melody of praise, That countless tongues may raise, Beneath His stars of glory, His sunbeams of glory, His noontide skies of rapture, That tint the clouds above, And earth and heaven learn to know That life is passing in, and over, While we tarry here below.

JOHN C. MAER.

The Cause of Many

Sudden Deaths.

There is a disease prevailing in this State, and it is dangerous because it is so common. Many sudden deaths are caused by it—heart disease, pneumonia, kidney failure, apoplexy are often the result of kidney disease. If kidney trouble is allowed to advance, the kidney-poisoned blood will attack the vital organs, causing catarrh of the bladder, or the kidneys themselves break down and waste away cell by cell. Bladder troubles almost always result from a derangement of the kidneys and a cure is obtained quickest by a proper treatment of the kidneys. If you are feeling badly you can make no mistake by taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy. It corrects inability to hold urine and scalding pain in passing it, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often through the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is sold by all druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful new discovery and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address, Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

WORKINGMEN EVERYWHERE USE PE-RU-NA.

Mr. Victor Patneade, 223 Madison street, Topeka, Kas., a well-known carpenter and member of Knights and Ladies of Security, writes:

"Twelve years ago I had a severe attack of la grippe and never really recovered my health and strength, but grew weaker every year, until I was unable to work."

"Two years ago I began using Peruna and it built up my strength so that in a couple of months I was able to go to work again."

A workingman's home is usually one with a large family. Child, all ages and both sexes are being reared. They are subject to slight ailments, winter and summer. A doctor is sent for every time a petty sickness occurs. The expense will keep the family poor.

In such a household Peruna becomes a real blessing. It promptly meets the most common ailments due to the cold of winter or the heat of summer. A stitch in time saves nine. A dose of two Peruna prevents serious and extended illness many a time.

The workingmen everywhere have come to realize that Peruna is the workingman's friend and saves him not only sickness, but a great many dollars every year.

Rev. J. G. Dukes, Pastor of the United Church of Pinetown, N. C., writes:

"My wife has been in a very bad state of health for several years, and nothing seemed to do her any good until she began to use Peruna. Since then the color has returned to her face, and she is gaining in flesh every day, and I believe she is a well woman today. We always keep a bottle in the house, and Mr. Dukes thinks it has done her more good than anything she has ever taken."

"My little boy ten years old, was pale and had but little life. He began to use Peruna the day his mother began. To-day his face is rosy, and he is out in the yard running and jumping with the rest of the children."

APPLETON

Saturday evening there was a very full attendance of members of Golden Rod Rebekah lodge at their hall, called together by the promised visit of Mystic lodge Rebekahs of Warren. In addition to a supper such as is usually furnished by this lodge a strawberry festival had been prepared for our Warren brothers and sisters, but at a late hour Brother Mathews of Mystic lodge telephoned that owing to unfortunate circumstances the Warren brothers and sisters could not come. Of course this was a disappointment to the Golden Rods, but the program under the management of the various committees appointed for the occasion carried out to the letter and the meeting was enjoyed by all, including members of Boston and Vermont lodges who were present. Select readings by sister Adella Gushue and George Ames and vocal solos by Sisters Clara Fuller and Iva Taylor and songs and choruses by a double quartet. Speeches by the visitors and members of Golden Rod lodge served to make the time pass very pleasantly until supper was announced, when all repaired to the banquet hall which had been very prettily decorated for the occasion and the time was passed very agreeably by all until the time to leave had arrived.

Some of our young people attended the dance at Searsmont Saturday evening.

I will mail you free, to prove merit, samples of my Dr. Shoop's Restorative, and my Book on either Dyspepsia, The Heart or the Kidneys. Troubles of the Stomach, Heart or Kidneys, are merely symptoms of a deeper ailment. Don't make the common error of treating symptoms only. Symptom treatment is treating the result of your ailment, and not the cause. Weak Stomach nerves—the inside nerves—mean Stomach weakness, always. And the Heart, and Kidneys as well, have their controlling or inside nerves. Weaken these nerves, and you inevitably have weak vital organs. Here is where Dr. Shoop's Restorative has made its fame. No other remedy even claims to treat the "inside nerves." Also for bloating, biliousness, bad breath or complexion, use Dr. Shoop's Restorative. Write me today for sample and free Book. Dr. Shoop, Racine, Wis. The Restorative is sold by Titus & Hills, Rockland; G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston; Chandler's Pharmacy, Camden.
