HOMEMAKEYER'S COLUMN.

Correspondence on topics of interest to the ladies is solicited. Address: Editor HOMEMAKEYER'S COLUMN, Oxford Democrat, South Paris, Me.

Thanksgiving in the Cook's Domain.

The provident housewife, especially if she must rely upon her own efforts, or, at best, supplement them with those of an inefficient servant, prepares, in so far as practicable, her Thanksgiving dinner in advance of the momentous day itself, thereby giving herself time and inclination to enjoy her guests and join in the being truly thankful for the bounteous feast.

To the majority of housewives the work of planning a properly-balanced meal—that is, one in which each course is well rounded out, both as to the kind and number of dishes served, each dish having its complement—is second only to the actual preparation of the food. Especially is this responsibility a heavy one, for a holiday or other red-letter day menu must be evolved.

In the case of the Thanksgiving feast, however, tradition and custom have combined to a certain degree, what shall comprise it, at the same time, granting a restricted license to the woman who delights in modern innovations. A pleasing change along this line with the usual bowl of soup, which, unless it be unusually light in character, would be omitted in view of the heavy course to follow. On the other hand, a cocktail serves to whet the appetite for the good things to come. Very often housewives are deterred from introducing these relishing dainties into their menu because they may have an idea that the concocting of them is beyond ken and the work of the cook.

This is erroneous the following recipe for cocktail oyster soup: Mix together until well blended one table-spoonful each of grated horseradish, vinegar, tomato catsup and Worcester's sauce, shake two table-spoonfuls of lemon juice and one-half teaspoonful each of tabasco sauce and salt. Stand on ice an hour or longer before using. Thoroughly chill the dressing mixture, and serve for individual serving in six cocktail glasses, or, in lieu of these accessories, in lemon cups made by cutting a slice from one end of medium-sized lemons and scooping out the pulp. Over each helping pour a table-spoonful of the sauce mixture. Stand the glasses on ice in the center of small soup dishes, surround with crushed ice and garnish with crescents of lemon and sprigs of parsley.

That the piece de resistance of every Thanksgiving dinner worthy of the name is the turkey, young and tender, plump and juicy, within its armor of golden-brown, goes without saying. That it does not always possess these palatable attributes is a fact, and it is everything but the savory dish of the imagination pictures, is either the fault of the buyer or the cook. Proper dressing, trussing and roasting will work wonders, and every housekeeper has her true and tried cook-book, that fairly teems with practical advice and recipes galore.

To serve turkey without its complement, cranberry jelly, is to rob it of a part of its value from a palatable standpoint. To add the further virtue of attractiveness to the eye, the up-to-date housewife serves her cranberry jelly in tiny individual shapes in lettuce cups or with a garnish of fringed celery or other green.

Although the housewife has an embarrassment of riches in the way of seasonal vegetables from which to make her Thanksgiving selections, she should not err on the side of providing too great a variety, which always carries with it the suggestion that one's guests have fasted before coming to the feast. The more simply the vegetables are cooked, the better, too, in order that the appetite, which should be centered upon the turkey, will not be fatigued before the full justice has been done the dish of honor. A very acceptable and suitable trio of vegetables for such an occasion would comprise a dish of Irish potatoes, which have been cooked tender and neatly, then whipped light and white, nicely seasoned and heaped high like snow; white onions and sliced carrots, cooked in their original shape—in boiling salted water, drained and dressed with cream, and a dish of stewed tomatoes, corn or lima beans.

In view of the heavy course which precedes and the equally rich one which follows it, the Thanksgiving meal should be light in character and as attractive as possible.

Nothing more fully meets both these requirements than a celery salad arranged for individual serving in a ring of tomato aspic. To make the aspic, cover one-half pint of water with a thin layer of butter and let stand an hour. Strain the liquor from a pound of can tomatoes and add enough water to make a quart. Put over the fire and bring to a boil, season to taste with salt, sugar and cayenne. Pour over the gelatine and stir until thoroughly dissolved. Invert small cups in salad saucers, pour the mixture around each cup to the depth of one-half inch and stand in a cold place until the aspic has congealed. Remove the cups and fill the space with a nicely seasoned celery salad.

As to the sweets for the Thanksgiving feast, custom has decided this question, and, courageous, indeed, is the hostess who ignores the dictum. For novelty's sake, however, the time-honored pumpkin pie may be served in the form of attractive plects or tarts and topped with delicately browned meringue. When one is not content with the old cream, which now forms one of the standard sweets on such an occasion, might be molded in individual pumpkin molds with spun sugar stems and leaves.

Or, when the cream must be of home manufacture, freeze it in the usual manner and serve the pumpkin shells which have been neatly lined with several thicknesses of paraffined paper.

Although, from a dietetic standpoint, some variety of less pronounced in flavor and richness should be served with ice cream, custom, scoring such a weakness as to regard pumpkin pie as a weakness at the result that fruit cakes, pound cake and crisp, toothsome crackers walk hand in hand, so to speak, with pie and ice cream, forming a delicious combination that should satisfy the palate of the variety epicure, and leave in the mouth a delicious commingling of flavor that even the small cup of black coffee, which puts the period to the feast, does not wash away.—Ex.

A Few Household Items.

Mix ginger cookies with cold coffee instead of water, and it improves them.

Turnips and beets are improved by adding one or two table-spoonfuls of sugar when cooking.

Crabapples can be made very palatable with much less sugar by mixing them with about half their bulk of apple. Rub both crabapples and apples through a colander.

A round piece of tin about three inches in diameter, half of it turned upright, makes a good nest for new hatched chickens.

Good loops for hanging garments can be made by cutting strips from an old kid glove, rolling up a strip of the glove string, then sewing the edges of the kid nearly together.

Whalebone that has become bent can be straightened by soaking it in tepid water for about twenty minutes or longer.

To insure straight edges on lines and cords, draw a thread before cutting. Tablecloths cut this way will fold even and straight after being washed. Then, when cutting the tablecloth, before hemming it, save the pieces, as these ravelings are the best threads with which to darn napery.

The Sensible Snail

An Animal Story For Little Folks

Master Snail was an ambitious chap who wanted to make a name and fortune for himself. So one day he went to a merchant bug who owned a big building and said:

"I would like you, sir, to give me a position here."

"Well," said the merchant bug, "you seem to be a pretty smart little chap, and I will give you a position to run the elevator."

"I will take the job," said the snail. All he had to do was to stand in the elevator car, and when any one got in and said, "Let me off at the fourth floor," he would turn a wheel and up the elevator would go to the fourth floor. And if it was the second or the third or the fifth floor it was just the same, and if any one wanted to come down in the elevator it was just as easy.

Master Snail certainly had a good position, for he got $3 a week, and think what you can buy for three dollars!

whole dollars! But one day he grew dissatisfied, and he went to the merchant bug and said he thought he should be paid $4 a week.

The merchant bug stuck his feet up on his desk and looked at Master Snail from top to toe. Then he said, "My boy, I am sorry, but I cannot pay you more than $3 a week."

And what do you suppose Master Snail did then? He gave up his position? No, indeed! Like a sensible fellow, he went back to the elevator car and kept at work.

"I will hold on to this job until I get the $4 a week," he said to himself. "For I had better be getting $3 a week than be out of work and getting nothing."—Detroit Journal.

Tobacco the "National Flower."

If the great republic must have a flower, why not adopt the tobacco plant (Nicotiana glauca)? It is a native of this country and was first found in Virginia. There is nothing sectional or un-American in it. It is not commonly known that the tobacco plant bears a very pretty pink blossom, which might come into the flower gardens but for its rank and disagreeable odor. The Indian, corn, or maize, is another plant indigenous to the United States and was found in use as food by the Indians from Virginia to Massachusetts. But if we must have a flower that is esteemed as such without regard to any economic considerations or utilitarian qualities, why not adopt the laurel (Laurus latifolia), mountain laurel or broad leaf laurel—New Orleans Picayune.

Vegetables and Fruits.

The term vegetable has reference to the whole or any part of a plant cultivated especially with reference to use at the table. But the use of the word vegetable doesn't always depend upon cooking, for celery is a vegetable and apples are fruit whether eaten raw or cooked. One would suppose that the tomato, to be entitled to the term fruit, by the method of its raising resembles that of fruit. But it is usually called vegetable, whether eaten raw or cooked, in spite of its appearance. The quince is so fruitlike in appearance, so resembling apples, pears, etc., that it persists in being called fruit though eaten only when cooked. Sometimes the vegetable is a bud, as with cabbage, peas and green beans, etc., as spinach; stems enlarged (tubers) underground, as common potatoes, or roots, as sweet potatoes, turnips, beets and carrots.—St. Nicholas.

The Women of Tehuantepec.

The climate of the Tehuantepec isthmus compares most favorably with that of Panama. The inhabitants, writes Rene Bache in Technical World Magazine, coffee, cacao, tobacco, vanilla and sugar cane are grown in the region, which has a population of about 50,000. The inhabitants are hardy and industrious, those of the plains on the Pacific side being descended from the ancient race of the Zapotecs and boasting that they were never conquered by the Spaniards. It is said that the women of Tehuantepec have from time immemorial been able to maintain supremacy over the weaker male sex, leaving the men at home to take care of the house and children while they carry heavy burdens to market on their heads. They are very handsome, these women, and their native costume is most attractive, including a picturesque headdress.

Why Cut Glass Breaks.

Cut glass makers explain why it is that there are frequent reports of cut glass suddenly breaking or crumbling on a table, shelf or sideboard in houses and elsewhere, although the glass was not in any way abused. They assert that the tone of any cut glass article comes into contact with its responsive chord the life of the glass will go with the tone, by which it is affected, and the glass collapses or crumbles. It is on record, and we read that in the medieval ghetto districts, among other recreations, was common on that day. There is nothing contrary to the spirit of Judaism in the playing of games or indulgence in any form of light recreation on Saturday so long as it is combined with a due regard for the sacred claims of divine worship.—Jewish World.
