"One of the simplest things to represent on the stage, one would think, is daylight," says an Italian named Fortuny in the "Theatre Zeitung," and still its accomplishment has always baffled stage managers. Our daylight does not come from one point, but from all directions, and this light, as from the sky, is what has not yet been produced. The difficulties, however, have been overcome, and on the stage of the new Royal Opera House at Berlin the stage daylight of the invention will be seen when that house is completed. The effect is produced by electric light, mirrors, prisms and silk cloths of various colors, through which the light is made to stream.

The Tallahassee's Cruise

A War-time Incident Well Remembered On the Maine Coast—Matinicus Rock Light Had Narrow Escape.

Matinicus Rock light, which sets well out to sea about midway between Seguin and Mount Desert, one of the most important lights on the Maine coast, probably had a narrow escape from destruction during the Civil war, says the Portland Argus. The question of whether or not the guns of the Rebel privateer Tallahassee would be turned on it or whether the boat crew would be sent ashore to destroy it was discussed by the rebel officers while she lay off the rock destroying Yankee fishermen. That they decided to leave the light was probably due to the advice given to them by Captain George Dobbins of the little Jonesport schooner, Sarah Louise, which had just been captured and was then burning. Captain Dobbins suggested that the English government was interested in the lights on the New England coast and that that government would not consider the destruction of the light necessary to British shipping, a friendly act. The rebel captain agreed with the Yankee skipper and the light was not touched.

Captain Isaac H. Grant, keeper of the lighthouse engineer's storehouse at Custom House wharf, Portland, was the assistant keeper of the light in August, 1864, when this conversation took place on the Tallahassee. He was watching the privateer and her burning prizes through a glass, but it was not until several weeks later when Captain Dobbins came to the rock to recover some of the wreckage from his vessel that Captain Grant heard of the danger the lighthouse had been in.

Captain Grant, in telling the story recently, said:

"I was standing in the light tower looking at the Tallahassee while the rebels were gravely discussing the destruction of our beacon, but of course, knowing nothing about it for some time afterwards. There were several people in the light house at that time, and as nothing has ever been published about the contemplated destruction of the light, I will tell you what I know about it.

"Matinicus Rock, on which the light stands, is five miles out to sea from Matinicus Island and the island is about 10 miles off the coast. We didn't get ashore very often and were naturally several days or weeks and sometimes months behind in the daily news. We knew that Rebel privateers were operating in the Atlantic but there had been none seen off the coast of Maine up to that time.

"It was about noon on the 16th of August, I think, when in looking out to sea from the tower I saw a steamer apparently drifting about. It occurred to me that she might be a Rebel privateer and I called the keeper and we both looked at her through the glass. She was about five miles off and it was impossible to be certain at that distance but from her build—she was low and long, schooner rigged with two funnels and rather an unusual type of vessel for these waters—we made up our minds that she was a privateer. This conclusion was strengthened when we saw several small schooners drive near her. The steamer remained by until late in the afternoon when she sailed to the eastward.

"Early in the afternoon, one of the burning schooners drifted in close to the rock. We put off in a boat and just before we pulled up alongside, the masts fell over. The hull was burning briskly but we managed to get a line to her and tow her into a cove to the back side of the rock, where she burned to the water's edge. We saved some of the rigging and a considerable quantity of metal. She was copper fastened and copper was selling for 50 cents a pound. We also saved a few casks for the old iron in her and altogether realized $1400 from the materials saved.

"She was the schooner Sarah Louise and shortly after advertising the wreckage, Captain Dobbins came off to the island. The captain divided with us the proceeds of the material. He also informed me of the capture of the Tallahassee in relation to the advisability of destroying the light tower. Five schooners had been taken by the privateer that day within sight of the light and all were destroyed.

"The fact that the Tallahassee was on the coast destroying shipping was known to the war department and in every city on the coast. Whatever shipping was in the harbors did not sail but there were numbers of vessels and fishermen from foreign ports who did not know of her presence and were captured. A dozen or more Yankee gunboats were looking for her but she got away from them all. She shifted her position constantly, striking on one part of the coast for a day and then running off to sea, to come back to another part of the coast a day or two later. One of the gunboats looking for her was the Pontoosuc, which had been sent out from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, when the Tallahassee was first reported. The Pontoosuc put into Portland harbor and sailed from there before daylight on the morning of the 16th. During the forenoon she passed by Matinicus bound east. If she had delayed her sailing from Portland four hours, she would have appeared off the light at the same time with the rebel. But she didn't and she missed her chance."

The records of the war department contain much interesting information in relation to the Tallahassee and her week of destructive cruising on the New England coast. These records have been published by the government under the title, Official Records of the Union and Confederate Navies.

The cruise of the Tallahassee which began on August 6th and ended the 26th of the same month occupies many pages in the published record. Consternation reigned on the coast and the war department was deluged with telegrams from shippers and boards of trade demanding that war vessels be sent in pursuit. Within two days of the first reports of her appearance off Sandy Hook, a dozen gunboats were scouring the ocean for her but she continued to burn shipping until depleted coal bunkers forced her to put into Halifax and she got away from there before any of the Federal gunboats arrived off the Nova Scotia harbor.

At 5 o'clock on the afternoon of August 12, a telegram was received at the war department from the keeper of the light at Fire Island informing him that the Tallahassee had captured and burned several vessels off Sandy Hook, including a ship and two pilot boats. The crews of several of the captured vessels had been landed at the island. At 6.50 there was received at the war department the following telegram from the commander of the Brooklyn Navy Yard:

"Pirate off Sandy Hook, capturing and burning. Have sent Susquehanna, Pontoosuc and Eolus in pursuit and hope to get the Grand Gulf tomorrow. Have seized ice and am loading. Hope to get the Amphitrite off tomorrow."

Two other telegrams were received before 9 o'clock giving descriptions of the privateer, one of which was from the New York Herald with more detailed information.

The commanders of the ships sent from the Brooklyn Navy Yard were instructed to cruise to the eastward. Early that same night the secretary of war ordered the commander of the fleet at Hampton Roads to send vessels north along the coast and others to Bermuda. The commander of the League Island Navy Yard at Philadelphia was instructed to send every available vessel in the search to cruise as far as Nantucket. The Dacotah was ordered from the Boston Navy Yard to cruise over the shoals and through Vineyard Sound.

Back came a telegram from Boston with the information that the spar and stores of the Dacotah were ashore and most of the crew on leave. The only officers by the ship were the captain, engineer, paymaster and gunner. "Let them take the ship to sea at once," ordered Secretary Wells. She got away on the 14th. Several armed tugs were sent from Philadelphia with gunboats and the practice ship was sent from Newport. The Tristram Shandy sailed at about the same time from Boston and the San Jacinto from New York with orders to cruise as far as Halifax.

In August the secretary of war received a report from Commander George A. Stevens of the Pontoosuc, dated off Portland Harbor, in which the commander said he had sailed along the south shore of Long Island and Nantucket, speaking every vessel he saw, but had heard nothing of the rebel. He would sail at daybreak for Eastport. He did, and was seen passing Matinicus, by Captain Grant, about four hours before the Tallahassee appeared off the light and burned five schooners.

The commander of the Dacotah reported on the 19th that he was in the same territory with the Tallahassee on the 17th and 18th but did not see the privateer though he passed through burned wreckage which he presumed was from vessels destroyed by her.

Meanwhile the United States consul

TENANT'S HARBOR DAYS.

Uncle Sam Lawson the Well-Known Village Character Thirty-Five Years Ago.

I. I.

Uncle Sam Lawson appeared to me the other night and said:

"What do you suppose happened up our way today?"

I said, "I don't know, what was it?"

"Why, Aunt Chloe Burton came out in the road and looked up in the sky and the draught from that eye of hers carried her right up and the last I saw of her she was floating away among the clouds." Then I woke up—it was but a dream.

Uncle Sam was no dream. He was the real thing and a very original character. As long ago as I can remember, when I used to be around the railway where dad was working, I can remember him. He promised me a jackass if I would gather clam shells for his hens. It is a safe wager that I collected more than a vessel load of them. I never got the donkey, but I have always remembered that promise.

"Did you ever go into his dining room? It was a sight—peas and bean vines, hens, and over by the window the table was set; potato parings that were mouldy, a plate, one cup and saucer and some mouldy things were things visible. Not much for a person to sit down to, but it did Uncle Sam for a great many years. He used to say, 'It spoils a shirt to wash it. I wear it two weeks on one side, and then turn it over on the other side for two weeks and wear it clean.' He was somewhat of a mystery. Dad says that when he blew into town, he was a looking man, wore a high shirt and a tall hat and good clothes, but never in my remembrance of him did I see him with anything but that checked flannel shirt, pants inside of his boot-tops and a soft hat.

He was one man whom I never saw smile. I have heard him tell some of the funniest stories and with a face as immovable as a Sphinx.

He and Uncle Ad. Keen were at Pike's Peak during the cruise when the cry was "Pike's Peak or bust." He used to tell some wonderful stories about how fast vegetation grew out there—potatoes and corn grew so fast that you could do nothing with them, and the air was so clear that you could see a fly on Pike's Peak twenty-five miles away. I remember hearing him tell of how one time he wanted to jump across a brook, so he started back for a good running jump, cleared the brook and went right over a hill more than a mile away. And he told that as soberly as though he was telling you the simplest story imaginable.

His great feat was telling stories before a new minister. Once he was in Whitehouse's store when a new minister was present, who didn't know Uncle Sam, who told about going out that forenoon and shooting ninety grey squirrels. The minister said:

"What did you do with so many squirrels my friend?"

"Eat 'em." When the devil did you suppose I did with them?" was Uncle Sam's reply.

One of my schoolmates bears his name to this day—Oliver Hazard Perry Sam Lawson (once) Peuples Rogers. My impression is that Capt. H. Davis was godfather at that christening. As Whittier describes his uncle, so was Uncle Sam—"A simple, guileless, childlike man." His stories were never told to disparage, or to hurt any person, but were just fairy tales or fables and the village folk used to delight to get him started before some stranger, when he certainly would tell some weird tales. I have always felt sorry to think of all those clam shells I gathered, and then not to get that donkey.

Somewhere in the dim past Uncle Sam had a history. He was not of our village people originally, but I think his secret, whatever it was, died with him.

TWICE-A-WEEK.

CIRCULATION AFFIDAVIT

Rockland, July 23, 1909.
Personally appeared Harold G. Cole, who on oath declares: That he is president in the office of the Rockland Publishing Co., and that of one issue of the Courier-Gazette of July 23, 1909, there was printed a total of 4,295 copies before me.
J. W. CROCKETT
Notary Public.

A correspondent suggests that if Rockland is to have public reform that the pastors first direct their efforts toward the evils of street walking. This city was never so sorely afflicted in this respect as it is at the present time, and it is the subject of a great deal of unfavorable comment upon the part of strangers as well as our own citizens. That girls who have not yet reached their teens should be permitted to roam the streets at all hours of the night and infest store doorways and public places is considered more disgraceful than some matters which have been much discussed of late.

The Public Welfare League of Massachusetts has been circulating petitions asking ex-President Charles W. Eliot of Harvard to allow his name to be placed on the ballot for governor of Massachusetts. The distinguished educator couldn't see wherein his Personal Welfare would be advanced and has very promptly discouraged the petitions.

Letters from Col. Roosevelt indicate that our ex-President is having a good time in Africa but is getting rather homesick. It is possible that the extermination of rhinoceros and hippopotami may not be so much to his liking as whacking public malefactors.

President Taft had the opportunity one day this week of seeing himself as others see him. He attended a special performance of a moving picture theatre where they were exhibiting pictures made of him during his trip to Petersburg, Va.

Now that the Sturgis deputies are proceeding against the owners of buildings where liquor is kept for illegal purposes, the situation at Bangor has been taken out of the funny column.

From the West comes an appeal for 50,000 able-bodied men who are wanted to help harvest her abundant crops. It has a welcome sound.

IMPORTANT NOMINATIONS.

Gov. Fernald made the following nominations Tuesday:

Alden M. Flagg of Auburn and Samuel R. Haines of Pittsfield, members of state board of arbitration and conciliation in accordance with an act of the last Legislature; trustee of Maine Insane Hospital, George E. Macomber, Augusta; commissioner of Inland Fisheries and Game, Edgar E. Ring, Orono; member State Board of Legal Examiners, Clarence W. Peabody, Portland; member Dental Examining Board in place of Dr. E. I. Hall of Augusta, deceased, Dr. William R. Bibber, Eastport.

OUT IN IDAHO.

With a cast entirely adequate to the requirements of the play, headed by Miss Dorothy Kurtis, who assumes the role of "Bess Carson," Fredrick S. Brush's big success "Out in Idaho" will be seen at the Farwell opera house next Thursday, July 29. Miss Kurtis' work in character studies for several seasons past has given her a unique position in the theatrical world, having appeared in such pieces as "Pretty Peggy," "The Girl from the Emerald Isle," "Way Down East," etc., but as "Bess Carson" in "Out in Idaho" she has a part which gives her remarkable opportunity for the display of her splendid talents. The scenes of this typical western drama are laid in Idaho in the year 1849, when thousands of people, dazzled by the glitter of possible wealth, rushed to California in search of hidden riches. But the older generation of today knows that all the dramatic incidents in connection with this gold hunt were not enacted in California. Many of the treasure seekers never got as far west as the state by the Pacific, and it was with a few of these who paused in Idaho that this play deals in a thrilling manner, no one who has ever been fascinated by tales of gold hunting will go away from seeing "Out in Idaho" disappointed. It is a play of plays and a play one always remembers pleasantly.

DEFENCE OF BLUEJACKETS.

Lineal Descendant of Naval Heroes Replies to Recent Pulpit Attack.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette:—
Under the heading, "A Carnival of Lawlessness," I read in the issue of your paper of July 20th part of a sermon preached in the Baptist church Sunday by Rev. Mr. Day, relating to our Fourth of July celebration, which if read by a stranger would give the impression that Rockland was a bad city, and a good one to keep away from.

As a naval veteran of the Civil War, with love and pride in my heart for that uniform and the men who wear it, I wish to say a few words in defense of those whom he stigmatizes as drunken sailors staggering through our streets. It is only natural that I should, for I am a lineal descendant of Jeremiah O'Brien, who commanded the party that captured the British armed vessel, the Marguerite, at Machias early in the war of the Revolution, and afterward did good service for his country as commander of armed vessels throughout that war. My uncle served in the navy during the war with Mexico, and was present at the bombardment of Vera Cruz. Therefore I wish to rally in defense of those men in the last two decades have aroused the admiration of the whole world, the bluejackets of the U. S. Navy. I watched with much interest the movements of that grand fleet of warships that ever started on any errand of war or peace—the cruise of the white squadron around the world. And from every port that they touched at there came nothing but praise for their fine appearance, for their civility and utter lack of rioting or debauchery while on shore leave throughout the whole cruise. The men, many of them, at least, who were on shore in Rockland July 3, 4 and 5, had performed that cruise around the world. And yet it remained for us to read in our local paper that a minister had from his pulpit designated them as "drunken sailors staggering through our streets." And in their defence I wish to say this to Mr. Day, that if on any of those days there had happened any great accident, which is as likely to happen here as anywhere else, wherein many had been killed or injured, at the sound of a bugle, or the blowing of a whistle, or the booming of a cannon, the whole medical corps, with attendants, stretcher bearers, and all the appliances necessary for the relief of suffering, headed by those officers who he mentions as having gone on an automobile ride to Crescent Beach Sunday afternoon, would have been on shore as fast as their steam launches could bring them. Had a great fire taken place those same bluejackets, led by their officers, would have fought it with as much bravery and heroism as would our own firemen. Yes, they would have fought to save your church, your home, your life, or the lives of those who are near and dear to you. I know it by experience, and in the name of humanity give them credit for it, for they would have died doing their duty. And greater love hath no man than he give his life for his neighbor.

And, Mr. Editor, if at any time in the future the good people of Rockland should at any celebration ask a special favor for the visit of a warship to their city I am afraid that the answer would contain only two letters of the alphabet, for the Navy Department is proud of its ships, their officers, and the men behind the guns; and so are most of the citizens of our glorious country which they are ready to defend with the last drop of their blood, for the grand old flag was never hauled down on one of its ships in token of surrender. And they will always celebrate the birthday of its independence no matter what day of the week it may fall on.

A Naval Veteran of the Civil War.

Steam lighter Atlas arrived from Portland Thursday. The retaining wall for the lime company's wharf on Crockett's Point is to be completed.

ADMIRAL THE NORTHLAND

Rockland Built Schooner Makes First Visit to Bangor—Was Minus Her Topmasts.

The four-masted schooner Northland, the only large freight gasoline motor vessel in eastern waters except in the Great Lakes, arrived in the port Sunday from New York with a cargo of cement for the A. R. Hopkins Co., and a general cargo for the Great Northern Paper Co. The Northland is the first auxiliary vessel of four masts to come up the river and although in appearance is not different from other four-masted vessels, attracted considerable attention when it was learned that it was equipped with a gasoline engine that would send it along at the rate of five knots an hour.

A Commercial reporter took a trip down to High Head where she is tied up and was shown over the vessel. With all the modern conveniences that any could possibly have the Northland is probably one of the best vessels afloat. She is equipped with electric lights on deck and in the hold and the cabins and bunk rooms are heated by steam. A powerful search light is also on board, and the vessel is fitted with a great help in the navigation of the big vessel.

The captain's quarters aft are as commodious and luxurious as could be wished. Several large rooms connected with each other, give them the appearance of a city home and with a sitting room, dining room, bath room with hot and cold water, and commodious sleeping apartments they are ideal. The vessel was built in 1906 by the Cobb-Butler Co., of Rockland, and is 245 feet long, 45 feet wide, 22 feet deep and has a gross tonnage of 2,947 tons. The engine which is run by gasoline, is rated at 500 h. p. which will send the vessel along at the rate of five knots an hour and with aid of sails it can easily make 12 knots, which is going some for a four-masted vessel of this size. The Northland was built with elevators in her hatchways for hoisting cargoes but it was found less speedy and more expensive than the old way and they were taken out. The vessel is owned by the Northern Maine Power and Packet Co., and carries a crew of 13 men.

The Northland came down from New York minus her topmasts. Last week she attempted to go under the Brooklyn bridge which according to the registered measurements would ordinarily have allowed the vessel to pass beneath, but it is thought that the high weather made the bridge sag several feet and when the boat started under her topmasts brought up against the bridge and the four of them gave away and fell to the deck doing but little damage.

After unloading the cement cargo at High Head, the vessel will proceed out of the river under her own power for Stockton Springs where she will take on a cargo of paper for the Great Northern Paper Co.

The Northland is captained by C. H. Sanders of Orono—Bangor Commercial.

DIED FROM ALCOHOLISM.

Francis Sayles, a sailor who has been on the schooner J. R. Bodwell, died at John S. Ranlett's boarding house on Sea street Wednesday morning from acute alcoholism. Rumors were afloat that he had been a victim of foul play, but Coroner Judkins was not long in discovering that they were without foundation. A scar on the man's head was the result of a scrap on a shipboard which took place at New York a week ago. Sayles arrived on the Boston boat Tuesday morning, in bad shape after a four days' spree. He asked to be taken in, and Mr. Ranlett who had been shipping him 10 years gave him a place to sleep. Sayles was 64 years old. On the occasion of a previous spree a local physician had warned him that he might not survive another.

CAMDEN GETS IT

Knox county's new fish hatchery will be located at Camden. Such is the decision rendered by Messrs. Carleton, Brackett and Ring, commissioners of inland fisheries and game, to whom the matter was entrusted.

Crawford's Pond in Union offered many inducements, but when all had been considered the commissioners felt that the interests of the state and county would be better served by the selection of the Camden site. The commissioners now invite bids for the erection of a fish hatchery, stable and ice house, the specifications for which may be obtained by addressing them at Augusta. All bids must be submitted before Aug. 15, and the commissioners reserve the right to reject any or all of them.

The location of the proposed hatchery is at the mouth of Megunticook lake. Leases have been received from the land owners free of charge to the state so long as the land shall be occupied by a fish hatchery. The 74th Legislature appropriated for the construction of a fish hatchery in Knox county $5000, $3000 available in 1909 and $2000 in 1910. All of the latest modern improvements in fish culture will be adopted at the Megunticook hatchery.

Mrs. Lydia A. Brown's house, corner of Grace and High streets, has been painted and otherwise repaired.

The Y. M. C. A. rooms will be reopened Aug. 8.

Rockland Encampment meets this Friday evening.

Harry Sleeper is having his vacation from the office of the Rockland-Rockport Lime Co.

Swordfish of exceptionally good quality are in the local market at prices ranging around 30 cents a pound.

The Elks' baseball excursion to Vinalhaven leaves Tillson wharf at 1 o'clock this afternoon on steamer W. G. Butman.

Campmeeting at Northport begins Aug. 9. The Spiritualist campmeeting at Temple Heights will be in session from Aug. 14 to 22, inclusive.

Knox Lodge of Odd Fellows will have work on the initiatory degree next Monday night. The candidate failed to show up at the last meeting.

M. R. Pillsbury's Cadillac auto arrived Wednesday. Mr. Pillsbury met it at Portland and had a very pleasant ride home in the new machine.

The Eagles initiated six candidates Tuesday night, bringing their total membership close to the 200-mark. The event was celebrated with a social.

Increasing popularity of the moving picture theatre at Oakland is shown by the large attendance every pleasant afternoon and evening. Miss Daggett's illustrated songs add to the value of the program.

The trap-shoot at Oakland Tuesday afternoon furnished good sport for some of the local enthusiasts. Jellerson was high line, but Mayor McLean did a good stunt after he borrowed Uncle Job's felt hat.

The government lot east of the post-office never looked better than at the present time. If Postmaster Fuller were gifted with the vision to see across the Atlantic it would probably make him homeless.

The Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, are talking some of holding a battalion field day later in the summer to be participated in by the four companies of the 3d battalion, 3d regiment—namely, Stonington, Camden, Rockland and Thomaston.

The Eastern Star Sewing Circle will meet with Mrs. Freda Hahn, at Gilbert Hall's cottage, Ginn's Point, Crescent Beach, Tuesday, July 27. All are requested to carry to the sewing circle something nice to eat. Fish chowder will be the first course. There will be a clam-bake in the evening.

Frank A. Robbins' circus, which exhibited in this city last month, has just got around to the large cities, where it does not appear to be having such good luck as it did here. In Portland the big bear chewed a boy's arm nearly off, and a personal injury suit in the sum of $2000 has been brought.

Ex-Alderman Alvah B. Clark, late foreman of the Opinion office, is now located in Houlton, where he has a similar position on the Aroostook Times. There is even hope that he may experience a change of political faith under the influence of his new surroundings. The family will not leave Rockland, for the present, at least.

Enforcement Deputy Walter J. Fernald arrived Wednesday from Lewiston. During his stay in the Spindle City 10 raids were made and the respondents were held in eight cases. Mr. Fernald discovered a "hide" which had previously escaped the attention of all other liquor sleuths. He will join the staff now working at Bangor, in which city the commission evidently means business.

A man who has several times been arraigned in Judge Campbell's court, was there again on Wednesday, charged with the same old complaint, intoxication. He claimed he obtained his liquor at the city agency, and Capt. Asward was summoned into court. The agent declared that he had made no sale to the prisoner recently, and that when the latter did buy whiskey there it was with the avowed purpose of giving it up to his horses. A jail sentence awaits the offender next time he faces Judge Campbell.

The Knox County Board of Underwriters held its annual meeting and banquet Wednesday afternoon on the summit of Mt. Battie. An excellent dinner was served at the Mt. Battie House after which the insurance men held their annual meeting and admired the glorious scenery. The following officers were re-elected: J. R. Baker, president, E. A. Butler vice president, H. O. Gurdy secretary, H. N. McDougall treasurer. The 11 members present declared it to be the best outing the Board has ever held.

The Rockland young men who have been dancing attendance upon the Boston art students at Crescent Beach were at Tillson wharf Tuesday evening to witness their departure. Tyler and Ralph were so overcome with emotion that they did not see through their tears that the lines had been cast off, and that they were being carried to Boston. It was a great hardship being thus marooned with a party of nine pretty girls, but both young men survived and are now back home telling their other girls how it happened.

The Music Teachers' Association will meet with Mrs. Shaw Monday, July 26. Members are requested to be present if possible as there are important matters to be discussed.

The midsummer session of probate court was held Tuesday with the small amount of business characteristic of haying time. The session was unmarked by any event of unusual importance.

Capt. Chandler E. Peck, who died several weeks ago, was insured for $1000 in the Odd Fellows Graded Mutual Relief Association of Maine. The proofs have been forwarded and approved by the proper officers of the institution, and the money will be paid to Capt. Peck's family in the regular course of business.

The trials of the battleship Michigan, which were interrupted after she left Rockland, by the vessel going aground off Cape Cod, are being completed. It was thought the Michigan might come again to the Rockland course, but a new standardization trial was evidently not deemed necessary, for two 24-hour runs are being made off the Delaware Capes.

A very delightful party was given for Miss Merle Doe Thursday afternoon by Mrs. L. E. Cobb at the home of Mrs. Edward Berry on Grove street. The party took the form of a ribbon and pin shower. The guests were the Misses Ruth, Martha, Marion and Emma Cobb, Annah Butler, Thordike, Elizabeth Fuller, Charlotte Buffum, Mary Hall, Martha Hall, Merle Doe, Josephine Fuller of Gorham, N. H. and Katrina Graverson of Waltham, Mass.

Oakland Park has been the scene of several large picnics this week. One was the annual picnic of the Congregational Sunday school at Thomaston, which would have been even larger but for the lowery weather which marked the early part of the week. Rev. E. M. Cousins and Supt. Gardiner were both with their flock, and both were among the spectators who watched the Y. M. C. A. street railway game. The ranks of Knox county baseball fans will suffer a notable loss when Mr. Cousins goes away.

A. H. Blackington of the firm of Crockett & Blackington has been home from Northport the past week or so, getting in his hay between showers. The firm gets out all kinds of lumber, its cut the past season amounting to about $60,000 feet. On his return to Northport two cargoes will be shipped, one to Herculane for the Booth Bros. & Herculane Island Granite Co. and one to Vinalhaven for the Bodwell Granite Co. This lumber will be used for boxing purposes. It is expected that the firm will wind up its operations at Northport in October, after which it will go into the same business extensively at South Warren, where it owns 70 acres of old growth. Last winter the concern gave employment to 15 men and five teams. It now has at the mill 19 men and two teams.

Knox Lodge of Odd Fellows is preparing to observe the 34th anniversary of its institution Aug. 5. John Colson, Charles Sylvester and Leland Pratt are the committee in charge.

A spark from a passing locomotive set fire to the building owned by Chas. H. Berry and occupied as an ice house by Thordike & Hix Wednesday afternoon. The damage was small.

Phil Johnson of Vinalhaven was on the street Thursday driving a calico pony, which he had just purchased from James Brennan of Fort Clyde. The boys all removed their hats when he passed.

Rev. D. B. Phelan, superintendent of the Rockland B. E. district, was in Waterville Tuesday, attending a meeting of the sub-committee of the Interdenominational Commission of Maine. Routine business was transacted.

The battleship Georgia which visited Rockland harbor Fourth of July week is one of three warships at Provincetown which has typhoid fever cases aboard. The disease is attributed to bad potatoes received from the supply ship Celtic.

This Friday evening the members of Golden Rod Chapter O. E. S. will tender a reception to Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Moulton, who are to leave the first of August for their new home in Auburn. There will be an entertainment and refreshments will be served.

A cat which had climbed to the top of a Grace street telegraph pole and remained there three days rather than chance the downward journey, was rescued from her uncomfortable position Wednesday night by human volunteers. The cat was nearly famished.

Supreme Warden Frank A. Rice of the New England Order of Protection made an official visit to Limerock Lodge Tuesday night, accompanied by David F. Sherwood Supreme Vice-Warden. The N. E. O. P. during the past ten years has paid out in death claims $8,000,000 and all claims have been paid on an average in two days after the proof of death has been filed. There are 496 lodges in New England. Limerock Lodge has about 40 members, many of whom are among the city's most representative men. Mr. Rice made a careful inquiry into the local conditions and after getting at the gist of the situation suggests that the local lodge begin a systematic campaign which shall bring the membership up to 100. To this end meetings will be held as often as once a month. As the N. E. O. P. is conceded to be one of the best fraternal insurance societies in New England Limerock Lodge will probably be able to reach the desired goal.

Capt. R. A. Eldridge of New York's 68th Infantry is one of the Courier-Gazette's oldest non-resident subscribers, having taken this paper 35 years. He pays Rockland a visit every summer.

Miss Dorothy Leach is visiting for several weeks with relatives in Boston and Providence.

The concert given Wednesday evening at the First Baptist church was one of the finest musical treats of the season. A large and enthusiastic audience in attendance, brought together, in part, to the church to the artists, in whom Rockland always takes pride. The vacation season favored the bringing together of this fine aggregation of talent—to the great delight of our people. With one exception, the artists are all well known in this community. The exception, Mr. Shufelt, of Boston, charmed all his hearers with his rich and sympathetic voice. Mrs. Herrick and Mrs. Gulpin, whom all delight to honor, made the audience their debtors anew, by the excellence and brilliancy of their work. Their duet, "Passage-bird's Farewell" was one of the features of the evening. This was Mr. Herrick's first appearance here in the role of a reader. His humorous rendering of Will Carleton's "Donkey Party" was greatly enjoyed. Miss Hall, who has not been heard here for several years, delighted her old friends by the style and finish she exhibited. A warm greeting awaited Miss Bartlett in her debut before 74 people. She showed marked talent, and it is safe to predict great success for her in her chosen vocation. Mr. Shaw, who has acquired much prominence in musical circles within and without New England, accompanied the artists with his usual skill and good taste.

MEADOW MATTERS

Mrs. Eva Rose was a guest at A. W. Lovejoy's Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Oandler were guests at C. S. Gardner's Tuesday and at W. N. Benner's Friday.

Mrs. Edith Trim of Camden was at Warren and Charles Gardner's Sunday.

Miss Gladys Bowley is spending the summer in Boston.

Again the "Grange Family" has been called together at Sherman's Point, Camden. This time it was by invitation of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Nash, while from past experience was sufficient proof that it would be a day of pleasure. Finding a sheltered nook on the beach the brothers made a stove of rocks, where the sisters soon had a large boiler of most delicious coffee, into which Mr. Nash poured the rich cream brought from his farm. Everything in readiness the "family" sat down and were served to the following menu: Baked beans, cold meat, lobster and chicken salad, pickles, bread, doughnuts, cheese and ice cream. After dinner this little party assembled in one group where they spent a pleasant hour with songs, many of which were learned in childhood. As the strains of music were carried across the water those who were in the boats simply rested on their oars while the concert lasted. At 4 p. m. the family departed for home and looking forward with pleasure to the next gathering which will be with Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Clifford at Glencove.

WITH THE CHURCHES

St. Peter's church: Holy Communion at 7.30. Matins and sermon at 10.30 a. m., evensong and short address at 7.30.

At the Adventist church Sunday Rev. Wm. Brewster will preach morning and evening. Tuesday evening the Loyal Workers meeting at 7.30 o'clock.

Morning worship with sermon by the pastor at the Congregational church, Sunday. Service at 10.30. Music: "The Deum, Millard, by the choir and "The Gloria." Poem, by Mrs. Armstrong, sung by request. No evening service.

Church of Immanuel, Universalist, the Rev. James D. Tillinghast, minister. Morning service at 10.30, subject, "Are Sunday Rest Laws Beneficial to Man?" Sunday school at 12. Y. P. C. U. at 6 p. m. The church will be closed during August.

Preaching at First Baptist church at 10.30 and 7.15 by the Rev. Wm. C. Barrows of Tenants' Harbor in exchange with the pastor. Mr. Barrows was pastor of the Rockland church from Nov. 1878 to Nov. 1882. It will be a pleasure to many to hear him again. Bible school at 12 o'clock.

Rev. J. B. Coy of Lewiston will assist Mr. Welch in the morning services of the Littlefield Memorial church, Sunday school at 12 m. and special services in the evening. Meetings through the week at 7.30. Friday evening there will be a missionary meeting led by Howard A. Welch.

E. W. Palmer was the only representative who attended the quarterly meeting of the Maine Association of Optometrists at Bangor Wednesday night. Some fine speakers addressed the meeting and the banquet at one of the Bangor clubs was a delightful affair. The next quarterly meeting will be held in Farmington.

A. S. Littlefield, C. M. Walker, J. E. Moore and O. H. Tripp attended the dedication of the Penakid memorial tower Thursday, making the trip in Mr. Littlefield's new auto, which behaved splendidly on all kinds of roads.

Patrolmen Fields, Heckbert and Philbrook made seizures at John Freeman's and Chas. Combs Thursday. The liquor squad is on the alert.

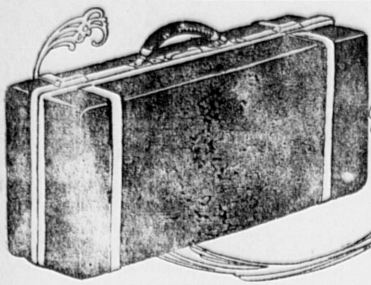

Mrs. William Hills and daughter of New York are stopping at Boyd S. Condon's, 170 Camden street, for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Merrill and daughter Elizabeth of Bangor are guests of Mrs. Samuel Bryant.

The regular meeting of the Elks will be held at the Home Monday evening.

BRING your orders for printing of all kinds to THE COURIER-GAZETTE Office. Everything up-to-date in paper, stock and type.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

By now a few of the guests, theater-bound for the most part, were leaving. Here and there a table stood vacant that had been filled, cloth tarnished, chairs disarranged, in another moment to be transformed into its pristine brilliancy under the deft attentions of the servants.

Down an aisle, past the table at which the girl was sitting, came two men making toward the lobby the man, a slight and meager young person, in the lead. Their party had attracted Kirkwood's notice as they entered, why, he did not remember, but it was in his mind that then they had been three. Instinctively he looked at the table they had left, one placed at some distance from the girl and hidden from her by an angle in the wall. It appeared that the third member had chosen to dally a few moments over his tobacco and a liquor-brandy. Kirkwood could see him plainly leaning in his chair and fumbling the stem of a glass, a heavy man of somber habit, his black and sullen brows lowering and thoughtful above a face boldly handsome.

The woman of the trio was worthy of closer attention. Some paces in the wake of her inch-thin esquire she was making a leisurely progress, trailing the skirts of a gown magnificent beyond dispute, half concealed though it was by the opera cloak whose soft folds draped her shoulders. Slowly carrying her head high, she approached, ed, insolent eyes revealing the room from beneath their heavy lids, a metallic and mature type of dark beauty supremely self-confident and self-possessed.

Men turned involuntarily to look after her, not altogether in undiluted admiration.

In the act of passing behind the putative Calendar she paused momentarily, bending as if to gather up her train. Presumably the action disturbed her balance. She swayed a little and in the effort to recover rested the tips of her gloved fingers upon the edge of the table. Simultaneously (Kirkwood could have sworn a single word left her lips, a word evidently pitched for the ear of the hypothetical Calendar alone. Then she swept on, imperturbable, assured.

To the perplexed observer it was indubitably evident that some communication had passed from the woman to the man. Kirkwood saw the fat shoulders of the girl's companion stiffen suddenly as the woman's hand rested at his elbow. As she moved away a little rippling shiver was plainly visible in the muscles of his back beneath his coat, mute token of relaxing tension. An instant later one plump and mottled hand was carelessly placed where the woman's had been and was at once removed with fingers closed.

To the girl, watching her face covertly, Kirkwood turned for a clue to the incident. He made no doubt that she had observed the passage. "Proof of that one found in her sudden starting pallor of indignation? and in her eyes, briefly alight with some inscrutable emotion, though quickly veiled by lowered lashes. Slowly enough she regained color and composure, while her vis-a-vis sat motionless, head inclined, as if in thought.

Abruptly the man turned in his chair to summon a waiter and exposed his profile. Kirkwood was in nowise amazed to recognize Calendar—a badly frightened Calendar now, however, and hardly to be identified with the sleek, glib fellow who had interviewed Kirkwood in the afternoon. His flabby cheeks were ashen and trembling, and upon the back of his chair the fat white fingers were drumming incessantly an inaudible tattoo of shattered nerves.

"Scared silly!" commented Kirkwood. "Why?"

Having spoken to his waiter, Calendar for some seconds raked the room with quick glances, as if seeking an acquaintance. Presumably disappointed, he swung back to face the girl, bending forward to reach her ears with accents low pitched and confidential. She on her part fell at once attentively, grave and responsive. Perhaps a dozen sentences passed between them. At the outset her brows contracted, and she shook her head in gentle dissent, whereupon Calendar's manner became more imperative. Gradually, unwillingly, she seemed to yield consent. Once she caught her breath sharply and, infected by her companion's agitation, sat back, color fading again in the round young cheeks.

Kirkwood's waiter put in an inopportune appearance with the bill. The young man paid it. When he looked up again Calendar had swung squarely about in his chair. His eye encountered Kirkwood's. He nodded pleasantly. Temporarily confused, Kirkwood returned the nod.

In a twinkling he had repented. Calendar had left his chair and was wending his way through the tables toward Kirkwood's. Reaching it, he paused, offering the hand of genial fellowship. Kirkwood accepted it dolefully (what else was he to do?), remarking at the same time that Calendar had recovered much of his composure. There was now a normal coloring in the heavily jawed countenance, with less glint of fear in the quick, dark eyes, and Calendar's hand, even if moist and cold, no longer trembled. Furthermore, it was immediately demonstrated that his impudence had not deserted him.

"Why, Kirkwood, my dear fellow!" he cried, not so loudly as to attract attention, but in a tone assumed to divert suspicion, should he be overheard. "This is great luck, you know, to find you here."

"Is it?" returned Kirkwood coolly. He disengaged his fingers.

The plump face was contorted in a furtive glimpse of deprecation. Without waiting for permission Calendar dropped into the vacant chair.

"My dear sir," he proceeded, unabashed, "I throw myself upon your mercy."

"The devil you do!"

"I must. I'm in the deuce of a hole, and there's no one I know here besides yourself. I—"

Kirkwood saw fit to lead him on, partly because out of the corner of his eye he was aware of the girl's unconcealed suspense. "Go on, please, Mr. Calendar. You throw yourself on a total stranger's mercy because you're in the deuce of a hole, and?"

"It's this way. I'm called away on urgent business—imperative business. I must go at once. My daughter is with me—my daughter! Think of my embarrassment. I cannot leave her here alone, nor can I permit her to go home unprotected."

Calendar paused in anxiety. "That's easily remedied then," suggested Kirkwood.

"How?"

"Put her in a cab at the door."

"No. The devil! I couldn't think of it. You won't understand. I—"

"I do not understand," amended the younger man politely.

Calendar compressed his lips nervously. It was plain that the man was quivering with impatience and half mad with excitement. He held quiet only long enough to regain his self-control and take counsel with his prudence.

"It is impossible, Mr. Kirkwood. I must ask you to be generous and believe me."

"Very well. For the sake of the argument I do believe you, Mr. Calendar."

Swiftly, stammering in his haste, "I can't let Dorothy accompany me to the door," declared Calendar. "She—I—I throw myself upon your mercy!"

"What, again?"

"The truth—the truth is, if you will have it, that I am in danger of arrest the moment I leave her. If my daughter is with me she will have to endure the shame and humiliation."

"Then why place her in such a position?" Kirkwood demanded sharply.

Calendar's eyes burned, inexpressive with resentment. Offended, he offered to rise and go, but changed his mind and sat tight in hope.

"I beg of you, sir."

"At this moment, Mr. Calendar."

Abruptly Kirkwood's weathercock humor shifted, amusement yielding to intrigued interest. After all, why not oblige the fellow? What did anything matter now? What harm could visit him if he yielded to this compunctious adventurer's insistence? Besides, there was the girl to be considered.

Kirkwood considered her forthwith in the process thereof his eyes sought her, perturbed. Their glances clashed. She looked away hastily, crimson to her temples.

Instantly the conflict between curiosity and caution, inclination and distrust was at an end. With sudden complacency the young man rose.

"I shall be most happy to be of service to your daughter, Mr. Calendar," he said, placing the emphasis with becoming gravity. And then, the fat adventurer leading the way, Kirkwood strode across the room, wondering somewhat at himself, if the whole truth is to be disclosed.

"Since it is to be confidences" (this she questioned with an all but imperceptible lifting of the eyebrows), "I don't mind telling you my own name is really Philip Kirkwood."

"And you are an old friend of my father's?"

He opened his lips, but only to close them without speaking. The girl moved her shoulders with a shiver of disdain.

"I knew it wasn't so."

"You know it is," she said, hard for a young man like myself to be a very old friend," he countered lamely.

"How long, then, have you known each other?"

"Must I answer?"

"Please."

"Between three and four hours."

"I thought as much," she stared past him, troubled. Abruptly she said, "Please smoke."

"Shall I if you wish it, of course?"

"Repeatedly, please."

"We were to wait ten minutes or so," she continued.

He produced his cigarette case.

"If you care to smoke it will seem an excuse," He lighted his cigarette. "And then you may talk to me," she concluded calmly.

"I would gladly if I could guess what would interest you."

"Yourself. Tell me about yourself," she commanded.

"It would bore you," he responded tritely, confused.

"No. You interest me very much," she made the statement quietly, contemptuous of coquetry.

"Very well, then, I am Philip Kirkwood, an American."

"Nothing more?"

"Little worth retelling."

"I'm sorry."

"Why?" he demanded, plighted.

"Because you have merely indicated that you are a wealthy American."

"Why wealthy?"

"If not you would have some aim in life, a calling or profession."

"And you think I have none?"

"Unless you consider the vocation of a wealthy American."

"I don't. Besides, I'm not wealthy. In point of fact, I'm a painter."

Her eyes lightened with interest.

"Her eyes lightened with interest."

"I know so. I don't paint signs—or houses," he remarked.

Amused, she laughed softly. "I suspected it," she declared.

"Not really?"

"It was your way of looking at things that made me guess it—the painter's way. I have often noticed it."

"As if mentally blending colors all the time?"

"Yes; that and—seeing flaws."

"I have discovered none," he told her brazenly.

But again her secret cares were claiming her thoughts, and the gay, inconsequential banter died upon her scarlet lips as a second time her glance ranged away, sounding mysterious depths of anxiety.

AFTER FOUR YEARS OF MISERY

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Baltimore, Md.—"For four years my life was a misery to me. I suffered from irregularities, terrible dragging sensations, extreme nervousness, and that all gone feeling in my stomach. I had given up hope of ever being well when I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then I felt as though new life had been given me, and I am recommending it to all my friends."

"Mrs. W. S. Ford, 1938 Lansdowne St., Baltimore, Md."

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has stood the test of years and to-day is more widely and successfully used than any other female remedy. It has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backaches, that bearing down feeling, flatulency, leucorrhea, and nervous prostration, after all other means had failed.

If you are suffering from any of these ailments, don't give up hope until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial.

If you would like special advice write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. She has guided thousands to health, free of charge.

matter, its true nature was known to her at all. Calendar, he believed, was capable of prevention, polite and impolite. Had he lied to his daughter or to Kirkwood? To both possibly, to the former alone not improbably.

That the adventurer had told him the desperate truth Kirkwood was quite convinced, but he now began to believe that the girl had been put off by some flimsy explanation. Her tranquillity and self-control were remarkable otherwise. She seemed very young to possess those qualities in such eminent degree.

She was looking wearily past him, her gaze probing some unguessed abyss of thought. Kirkwood felt himself privileged to stare in wonder. Her naïveté, aloofness of pose gripped his imagination powerfully—the more so perhaps since it seemed eloquent of her intention to remain enigmatically but by no means more powerfully than the unaided appeal of her loveliness.

Presently the girl herself relieved the tension of the situation, fairly startling the young man by going straight to the heart of things. Without preface or warning, lifting her gaze to his, "My name is really Dorothy Calendar," she observed. And then, noting his astonishment, "You would be privileged to doubt under the circumstances," she added. "Please let us be frank."

"Since it is to be confidences" (this she questioned with an all but imperceptible lifting of the eyebrows), "I don't mind telling you my own name is really Philip Kirkwood."

"And you are an old friend of my father's?"

"I have discovered none," he told her brazenly.

But again her secret cares were claiming her thoughts, and the gay, inconsequential banter died upon her scarlet lips as a second time her glance ranged away, sounding mysterious depths of anxiety.

Provoked, he would have continued the chatter. "I have confessed," he persisted. "You know everything of material interest about me. And yourself?"

"I am merely Dorothy Calendar," she answered.

"Nothing more?" He laughed.

"That is all, if you please, for the present."

"I am to content myself with the promise of the future?"

"The future," she told him seriously, "is tomorrow, and tomorrow—"

She moved restlessly in her chair, eyes and lips pathetic in their distress. "Please, we will go now, if you are ready."

"I am quite ready, Miss Calendar."

He rose. A waiter brought the girl's cloak and put it in Kirkwood's hands. He held it until, smoothing the wrists of her long white gloves, she stood up, then placed the garment upon her white young shoulders, troubled by the indefinable sense of intimacy imparted by the privilege. She permitted him this personal service. He felt that she trusted him; that out of her gratitude had grown a simple and almost childish faith in his generosity and consideration.

As she turned to go her eyes thanked him with an unfathomable glance. He was again conscious of that esoteric disturbance in his temples. Puzzled, hazily analyzing the sensation, he followed her to the lobby.

A page brought him his topcoat, hat and stick. Tipping the child from sheer force of habit, he desired a gigantic porter, impressively ornate in hotel livery, to call a hansom. Together they passed out into the night, he and the girl.

Beneath a permanent awning of steel and glass she waited patiently, slender, erect, heedless of the attention she attracted from wayfarers.

A cab drew in at the block. The porter clapped an arc of wickerwork over its wheel to protect the girl's skirts. She ascended to the seat.

Kirkwood, dropping sixpence in the porter's palm, prepared to follow. But a hand fell upon his arm, peremptory. Inexorable. He faced about, frowning, to confront a slight, hawkeyed man, somewhat under medium height, dressed in a sack suit and wearing a derby well forward over his eyes, that were hard and bright.

"Mr. Calendar?" said the man tensely. "I presume I needn't name my business. I'm from the Yard."

"My name is not Calendar."

The detective smiled wearily. "Don't be a fool, Calendar," he began. But the porter's hand fell upon his shoulder, and the giant bent low to bring his mouth close to the other's ear. Kirkwood heard indistinctly his own name, followed by Calendar's, and the words: "Never fear. I'll point him out."

"But the woman?" argued the detective, unconvinced, staring into the cab.

"I am not at liberty to have a dine with me in a public restaurant," interposed Kirkwood without raising his voice.

The hard eyes looked him up and down without favor. Then: "Be patient, sir. I see my mistake," said the detective brusquely.

"I am glad you do," returned Kirkwood calmly. "I fancy it will bear investigation."

He mounted the step. "Imperial theater," he told the driver, giving the first address that occurred to him. It could be changed. For the moment the main issue was to get the girl out of the range of the detective's interest.

He slipped into his place as the hansom wheeled into the turgid tide of westbound traffic.

So Calendar had escaped, after all! Moreover, he had told the truth to Kirkwood.

By his side the girl moved uneasily. "Who was that man?" she inquired.

Kirkwood sought her eyes and found them wholly ingenuous. It seemed that Calendar had not taken her into his confidence, after all. She was therefore in no way implicated in her father's affairs. Inexplicably the young man's heart felt lighter. "A mistake. The fellow took me for some one he knew," he told her carelessly.

The assurance satisfied her. She rested quietly, wrapped up in personal concerns. Suddenly Kirkwood was recalled to a sense of duty by a glimpse of Hyde Park Corner. He turned to the girl. "I didn't know where you wished to go."

The Rubinstein Club, together with visiting friends and ex-members to the number of 45 enjoyed a delightful day Wednesday at Rockliffe, the beautiful cottage of Mrs. H. L. Shepherd, of Rockport, who is an honorary member of the club. The ladies and their guests found ample entertainment in roaming over the grounds and enjoying the beautiful scenery from the broad piazza. Not the least interesting was the tempting repast set before them at 1 o'clock by the committee in charge, of which Mrs. Dora P. Bird was chairman. A pleasing innovation from the routine of this annual occasion was a program which was arranged by the committee, and the readings by Miss Flint were a surprise even to them, having been furnished through the thoughtfulness of the club's president, Mrs. Hitchcock. Following was the program:

A Dream, sung by Shuman Heink
Listen to the Gentle Lark, sung by Melba
Violin—Barcarolle, Miss Jordan
Chorus—Moon Rise, Rubinstein Club
Matrigal, Mrs. Strout

IN SPORTING CIRCLES

Wednesday Night's Sparring Bout Ticked the Fans Immensely—Baseball At Oakland, and Other Matters.

The Arcade Athletic Association made a hit with its patrons Wednesday night when it staged three of the fastest bouts that were ever put on here at one show. Previous fights that were thought to be pretty energetic faded into insignificance beside the Clark-Bergin bout, while the match between Kelley and McCormick will go down into local history as the best semi-final that ever took place in the Arcade.

Four bouts have been advertised but one looked too gauzy to Referee Sawyer, and he called a halt before half a dozen blows had been exchanged. This was the only marring feature of the whole entertainment, and could be cheerfully forgiven in view of what else took place.

The exhibition brought to the ringside a coterie of men who are widely known in New England sporting circles. First and foremost Tom Sawyer, who is only waiting for a broken finger to mend before he goes back into the ring hunting after new laurels. Meantime he is the third man in the ring, and a good referee as ever stepped into the squared circle here. Then there was Allie Brown, once middleweight champion of Maine, now hog-fat but cutting asic as ever over the great game of fistuffs. He played in Tommy Bergin's corner, and doubtless gave that unlikely youngster some valuable advice. Mike Cunningham, also, was there, and here of two of the best well-fought battles, was behind Shadow McCormick, and later stepped into the ring to deny Bergin's claim to being Maine's lightweight champion. "I am light weight in the state, or I will meet the winner of this bout," said Cunningham, amid applause. The bout was taken up by a pair of men who were main event. In Clark's corner were Joseph Mealey and Arthur Sullivan ready with sage advice which the Bay State blonde apparently did not need or heed.

While the crowd was gathering the managers started a rattling preliminary between Young Lannigan and Young Kinney, two spunky youths who had rather fight than eat, and both have good appetites. They buckled right down to business, and while their four rounds were of the slam-bang calibre, there was also exhibited no small degree of science. Young Kinney is rather the sturdier of the two, but Lannigan is one of the "speed" boys. Whether or no either had got a licking when he got home history does not unfold.

The second bout introduced Young Skinner and Farmer Wilson who were soon rejected by Referee Sawyer as being of the "gold brick" and "dollar razor" type. Farmer Wilson is said to have the goods, but he quit the ring with suspicious haste Wednesday night.

Now comes the semi-final between Young Hugo Kelley of Portland and Shadow McCormick of Lewiston. For four rounds it looked all Kelley, but McCormick, though outpointed, never turned a hair. In the fifth there was a marked change in the situation and Young Hugo appeared a bit groggy, evincing that desire to hug his opponent which is not altogether due to brotherly love for the latter. He was still facing his opponent when the bell rang, and was the latter's equal in the sixth. Both young men are finely trained and make as good a match as one would care to see. Kelley has a left delivery that will alter somebody's features one of these fine days. The crowd yelled its approval at the conclusion of each of these six lusty rounds.

The fans were keyed up to the highest pitch of excitement when the principals came on for the main bout. Tommy Bergin of Lewiston, they had all seen before, and they all knew his bulldog tenacity. Clark, taller and rangier, looked mild and inoffensive, but the man who whipped Mike Cunningham in three rounds is neither. He has a punch like the kick of a Mississippi mule. A description of the six rounds would not convey an accurate impression of what this battle brought to the next blow would be his left it caught Bergin on his much abused nose, and the Lewiston boy's head flew back as though fixed on springs. A score of times it occurred that the next blow would be the last, but Tommy Bergin is a lively corpse, and he came back strong every time. A decision on points would unquestionably belong to Clark, but the Maine law does not permit a decision, so the fans will have to make their own. Clark remained as cool as a cucumber throughout the contest, and with one exception was never in danger. Between whacks he kept assuring Allie Brown over Bergin's shoulder that the latter was easy. Not too easy it must be conceded.

Except that there were no knockouts to satisfy the bloodthirsty, it was a great show.

New York's chances for the National League pennant received a serious setback Tuesday when in the 7th inning of the game with St. Louis, "Christy" Mathewson, the team's star pitcher, had the second finger of his left hand broken in stopping a liner from Delahanty's bat. Mathewson has been New York's one consistent winner this season, and has not been defeated since May 24. The big pitcher had to leave the game at once, and a surgeon, who attended to his injuries, reported that it would be at least two weeks before he could twirl again. Manager McGraw was bawling heavily on Mathewson in the series with Chicago, which started Thursday.

An unprecedented local interest is shown in the American and National league contests this season, as daily evinced by the crowds which surround the bulletin boards at the Premier billiard rooms and McIntosh's candy store. Naturally enough the sympathies lie with the Boston Red Sox in the American League, although Cleveland and Philadelphia both have supporters who wish to have a fall taken out of Detroit. In the National League it looks rather chancy for Pittsburg yet the Cubs continue to snap at the Pirates' heels and may yet wrest the pennant from the Snaky City team.

Sam Langford has decided to neglect the terms of the Nevada promoters for a match with the middleweight champion, Stanley Ketchel, at Elly on Labor Day.

"Say for me to the entire world, I'll never fight a Negro," Langford has no chance with me; that's final. My game is Ketchel," was the declaration of Billy Papke when the question of a match with Langford was discussed.

A rattling good game at Oakland Park Wednesday afternoon was won by the Rockport Y. M. C. A. team, which defeated the Street Railway team 20 to 19 in a game that went 11 innings. In spite of many defeats the car men have a fine amateur team, and the nine men who beat it must play ball all the time.

The Rockland Y. M. C. A. team defeated the Street Railway team 19 to 4 in the sixth game of their series at Oakland Park Tuesday afternoon. The city team was strengthened by Weymouth at backstop and Linnakin at third, while the car men were minus two of their best players. Smith and Winslow were the pitchers. Both were hit hard at times, but the Street Railway failed to bunch hits and the Y. M. C. A. men gave their twirler the best of support save in two innings. In the 6th inning Seavey was in collision with Gregory at second base, the former having his cheek cut, while Gregory lost some blood through a cut on the nose, which required several stitches. It was the first accident to mar the sport at Oakland this season. Both men were able to resume playing and to joke over their misfortune. Weymouth's throwing to bases and the fielding of Carver and Campbell were among the features.

W.B. Reduso CORSETS

The Perfect Corset for Large Women

It places over-developed women on the same basis as their slender sisters. It tapers off the bust, flattens the abdomen, and absolutely reduces the hips from 1 to 5 inches. Not a harness—not a cumbersome affair, no torturing straps, but the most scientific example of corsetry, boned in such a manner as to give the wearer absolute freedom of movement.

New W. B. Reduso No. 770. For large tall women. Made of white coutil. Hose supporters front and sides. Sizes 20 to 36. Price $3.00.

THE TALLAHASSEE'S CRUISE

at Halifax reported that the privateer had put in there for coal.

The captain of the Junata reported from Fortress Monroe that he had not seen the Tallahassee.

"Proceed at once to Halifax. I had hoped that you were on your way there," telegraphed Secretary Wells in reply.

On the same day he sent the following telegram to the commander of the Brooklyn Navy Yard: "I received your telegram informing me that the San Jacinto would sail in the morning. Four days ago you informed me that she was ready to sail. See that she leaves at once for Halifax."

The Pontoon reported from Eastport that she had seen nothing of the privateer and would return to New York. She was ordered to Halifax but arrived there a day too late. The Tallahassee had sailed and on the 26th arrived back at Wilmington, North Carolina, having demoralized the shipping and navy of the North Atlantic and captured and destroyed 33 Yankee merchantmen all within 20 days, part of which time was spent in the harbor of Halifax.

The following report of the cruise was made by Captain J. Taylor Wood of the Tallahassee and is printed in the records published by the government: After telling of the manner in which the run through the blockading fleet at Wilmington on the night of August 6, and of the cruise along the coast, Captain Wood devotes the main portion of his report to telling of his reception in Halifax harbor by Admiral Sir James Hope and Lieutenant Governor, Sir Richard McDonnell. The reception by the Admiral was cold and uncivil and by the Lieutenant Governor just a little less so. He was given permission to coal, having but 40 tons left when he arrived in the harbor. Captain Wood continues: "The governor asked me to call the next day and to know how I was progressing and when I would leave. I did so and then was told that he was surprised that I was still in port; that we must leave at once; that we could leave the harbor with only 100 tons of coal on board. I protested against this as being utterly insufficient. He replied that the admiral had reported that quantity sufficient (and in such matters he must be governed by his statement) to run the ship to Wilmington."

EAST UNION

There will be a dance at Farmers' hall Saturday evening, July 24.

Miss Jessie Tilden, brother Fred and Master Ralph Torrey of Camden are spending a few weeks with their grandmother, Mrs. Martha Beveridge.

Miss Nina Titus is home from Boston for her annual vacation.

Miss Addie Lathrop has returned to Waltham, Mass., after a few weeks at home.

During the heavy thunder shower of last Saturday lightning struck the stable of Mrs. Lucy Dornan, penetrating the roof and made a jagged path down one side, damaging the building quite badly.

Miss Madeline Daggett of Waltham is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Ellen Daggett.

There was a pleasant family gathering at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Wentworth in Hope last Sunday. A party of about 25 were present and enjoyed the kind hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth. Among the guests were E. C. Payson and family and Miss Mabel Spear of Rockland. At the usual hour the tables were spread beneath the trees on the lawn, and a bountiful repast was partaken of to which all did ample justice. The day was fine and everything contributed to make it one long to be remembered by the happy gathering.

Life 100,000 Years Ago
Scientists have found in a cave in Switzerland bones of men, who lived 100,000 years ago, when life was in constant danger from wild beasts. Today the danger, as shown by A. W. Brown of Alexander, Me., is largely from deadly disease. "If it had not been for Dr. King's New Discovery, which cured me, I could not have lived," he writes, "suffering as I did from a severe lung trouble and stubborn cough." To cure Sore Throats, Colds, Obstructed Lungs, and prevent Pneumonia, its the best medicine on earth. 50c and $1.00. Guaranteed by Wm. H. Kirtledge, Rockland; G. I. Robinson Drug Co., Thomaston; R. ## A CURE AT BATH

More Proof, Near at Hand, of the Value of the Tonic Treatment for Stomach Trouble.

There are plenty of remedies by which you can relieve for the time heartburn, pain and gas on the stomach and can smother nervous sensations and induce artificial sleep. But when you take your next meal all your troubles begin afresh.

Experience shows that these troubles vanish just as soon as the stomach is made strong enough to digest the food. In other words, it needs a tonic that will cause it to do the work of changing the food into nourishment. The tonic used ought to be one that will agree with the most delicate stomach.

Mrs. James N. Gillis, of No. 9 Tarbox street, Bath, Maine, found quick relief in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills after seven years of indignation. Upon their results alone Dr. Williams' Pink Pills deserve a thorough trial by every victim of stomach trouble. Mrs. Gillis related her case as follows:

"For seven years I was in poor health owing to stomach trouble. It was caused by overwork and grew worse each year. I had but little appetite and everything I ate distressed me. I was troubled with gas on the stomach. My limbs became numb and I would think they were going to give out any minute. I had such dizzy spells that I would fall to the floor. I was also afflicted with terrible sick headaches and would be so deathly sick and dizzy that I would be confined to bed for two or three days. I was greatly run down and lost considerably in weight."

"I took the doctor's medicine for over a year. He would help me for a time, but I would always get worse again. Through a friend I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The first few boxes helped me so that I was encouraged to keep up the treatment. When I had taken the pills a while I became strong and healthy. My stomach trouble has been cured and I can eat a hearty meal without distress."

Every dyspeptic should have a copy of our diet book which is mailed free to any address. Send postal card request for a copy today. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.
