

In editorial commenting on street car matters—or the absence of them—an exchange says that "The ordinary laws of prior rights and place aux dames do not apply to the street car, where the brute force of the original cavan man has sway." Yet in the same column there is a play on the "end seat hog," whose offense it is that he holds to the law of prior rights.

In spite of the evidence, it is hard to believe that the Nebraska was deliberately torpedoed by a German submarine for the simple reason that it was such a fool performance. Only one possible explanation could be made—that it was done for the purpose of making trouble between Germany and us.

Some of the largest newspapers use the wood from 10,000 acres of spruce every year for their paper, therefore complete destruction of the spruce must result unless some substitute is put to use, says a current paragraph. No doubt the enormous consumption of spruce for paper is an argument for forest conservation, but the paragraph quoted is a plain instance of jumping at a conclusion. It leaves out of account entirely the fact that spruce grows. Whether it grows fast enough is another question.

The Boston and Maine Railroad has gone on the water wagon, and no more liquors will be served in its dining cars. This action is distinctly in accord with the trend of the times.

And now it is said that there is a possibility of the republic of San Marino joining in the European war. In spite of all the study the state has put on its geography in the past ten months, we shall have to get it out again.

Maine News Notes.

A Lewiston man who owns a piece of land in upper Main street was asked the other day why he allowed the boys to play on it. "By gosh, the care," he answered, "and much work I could make that produce me about eight dollars' worth of grass a year. I give it to the boys to play on and get fifty times that amount of pleasure out of it, because it is keeping the boys out of the street and giving them some good healthy amusement."

Walter, aged 9, and Nelson, aged 11, children of Nelson Freese, lost their lives when their father's set of farm buildings was burned Wednesday at Guilford. Mr. Freese managed to reach the roof, through a dormer window, dragging his wife and another son after him, and they dropped 30 feet to the ground. All three were severely, but not critically, burned. The fire was thought to have been started by a mosquito smudge, placed near the woodshed door.

State Librarian Henry E. Dunnack is considering a plan for extending the library service to foreign born citizens. He would send out books written in the native languages of the people, represented in different localities, for the benefit of those who have not yet acquired a knowledge of the English tongue. The Librarian of the Lewiston Public Library, who has been established in large numbers in Lewiston and Biddeford, will be among the first to receive the attention of the Librarian. War Will Be War.
(Chicago Tribune).
The most dangerous and damaging fallacy that possibly could be devised is the theory that if the tragic extremity of war with Germany should be resorted to or forced upon us we should or could fight it by proxy.

If, war being declared, we restrict ourselves to making war munitions for French and British and Russian soldiers to use should be held in the most just and lasting contempt.

War, let us be perfectly certain, means no such shameful immensity as this. It means immediate mobilization of our citizen soldiery. It means an immediate beginning of training of hundreds of thousands of green volunteers, and it means the dispatch to the war at the earliest moment of as large a force as we could whip into shape for active service.

This would take months, but the time for battle would not come unless for some reason not now discernible the war should end before it arrived. The American nation will not fight, if it must, with its money bags or its mouth. We are pacific, but not pitiable. If the war is just, it is not less than the last full measure of devotion."

The American public has a profound moral repulsion from the killing of non-combatants. There will be individuals and newspapers capable of seeking advantage from this emotion by flag waving and rhetoric. It is the duty of conscientious and clear thinking men and newspapers to steady public feeling and to help public opinion formulate without self-deception or confusion of issues and with a full comprehension of consequences.

A Filling Market.
When Judge Landis of Chicago tried to sell the eighty-nine licenses of the To-teti Brewing company, bankrupt, he found that such commodities were as drug on the market. One purchaser offered $1200 but this, the only offer made, was refused. A year ago Heuser brought $2,500 to $2,500. The reason for this decrease in value is said to be the fear of successful local prohibition legislation. The entire liquor force seem to be looking forward with just reason to future stringent restrictions to their saloons owned by this brewing company from Saturday night at midnight until 5 o'clock Monday morning, observing and giving force to the Sunday closing law of Illinois.
