Clyde Martin Drowned in River.

ATTEMPTED TO WADE ACROSS WHERE THE STREAM WAS TOO DEEP.

Joseph Clyde Martin, 12 years of age, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, was drowned in the Little Androscoggin River at South Paris Wednesday afternoon.

Between 4 and 5 o'clock Clyde, together with Carlton Gray, Percy Barrett and Ronald Simpson, was in swimming in the river, called the upper pond, a favorite swimming hole, some distance above the Park Street bridge. Clyde, who could not swim, started to wade across the river. The other boys told him to stop, but he kept on and got beyond his depth. Carlton Gray pushed a stick to him, which he grasped, but in doing so he pulled Carlton out where the water was over his head. Carlton, however, managed to get back to shore.

As the boys were not able to rescue him, two of them ran to the village for help. At the store of F. N. Wright, Harold T. Briggs and Harry A. Pitcomb were waiting to send a freight car to Ford truck. They at once started with the truck as fast as they could drive, stopping near the house of A. C. Withers, and coming from there up over the bank. The stick which was pushed out to the boy was in sight about fifty feet down the river from the bank. Mr. Briggs went into the water and found the boy still clinging to the stick, in about six feet of water. So firmly had he grasped the stick that his hold had to be released.

In the hope that he might still be in the river, he was placed in the truck and taken to the village. At the moment Mr. Wright had notified Dr. Stewart, who had started in his car, and met the others near the Baptist church. Here the boy was taken out of the truck and placed in the arms of Dr. Stewart and others worked over it for a long time, but without securing any sign of life, and the attempt was abandoned.

Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, the parents of the drowned boy, live on Gary Street, South Paris, and Mr. Martin has been working in the village, and the place was gay with flags, bunting and banners. The funeral will be held in the village square, Dearborn Grove, in which a portion of the exonerates were buried in the cemetery, had their display of bright colors.

At nine o'clock in the morning came the first feature of the day, the parade, to which many of the village men came early to start home; and while it was not an immense affair, it was well worth taking some trouble to see.

As marshals, the parade was led by a white horse led the parade, followed by a platoon of officers, and next came Dixfield Band, twenty-four pieces and drum major, mounted on a white horse. Next came the parade, followed by a platoon of officers, and next came Dixfield Band, twenty-four pieces and drum major, mounted on a white horse.
