Buy an automobile as you would buy a house. An automobile is a major investment and a similar utility;
be sure to choose one in which you can spend long hours without nerve strain; be sure that it is built of good material, strong and safe; that it is equipped with every convenience and that its appearance will long be a credit to your practical good taste. The cars we sell have all these qualifications and in addition are very economical to operate.

Write, telephone or call personally; we are ready and glad to demonstrate these cars any time, anywhere.

COMPROMISE FAVORED

Unqualified Ratification of Peace Treaty Gets Only a Small Vote.

Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, called the Senate's attention Thursday to results of the intercollegiate vote on treaty questions. The final returns as received by Mr. Hitchcock were said by him to be more complete than those previously published, including results from eight additional colleges. The returns as placed by him in the Congressional Record follow:

For unqualified ratification, 48,232.
Against ratification, 13,333.
For Lodge reservations, 27,970.
For compromise reservations, 61,494.
For Knox plan, 4,440.
Total, 158,078.

TAFT OR WILSON

"Mr. Wilson should not charge Mr.
Lodge with responsibility for the treaty situation, for it is of his own making," says former President Wilson in a letter just made public. He continues:

"We may differ widely from Mr.
Lodge as to the necessity or wisdom of the reservations he insisted upon and of those he voted for; but the colossal blunder was Mr. Wilson's in supposing that by a frontal attack he could reduce a plain majority against the treaty of a dozen or more into a minority of one-third of the Senate.
He persisted in hamstringing his supporters in the Senate. He required them to keep up the force of announcing each day that the treaty must pass without the crossing of a J or the dotting of an i, when everyone knew that this was impossible. Meanwhile the Democrats sat twirling their thumbs and declaring that all opposition to the treaty as it was would fade away.
The President's statement that the Lodge reservations nullify the treaty is entirely unwarranted. It is a statement unfortunate both in its lack of foundation and in the obstacle it forms to future compromise."

WANTON WASTE

The Billion Dollar Increase In America's Sugar Bill Is Attributed To President Wilson.

In fooling up the total of wanton war waste, that little item, amounting to something between $800,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 of wholly unnecessary increase in the American people's sugar bill, should not be overlooked. Neither should the fact be overlooked that for this addition to the already staggering burden of their cost of living, the American people have to thank Woodrow Wilson and him alone.

In August last, the Cuban sugar crop could have been bought at from five and a half to six cents a pound. The Sugar Equalization Board, for whose guiding advice American taxpayers were paying liberally, urgently recommended to the President that the purchase be made. Mr. Woodrow Wilson, internationally recognized as the foremost expert in food distribution and economics, was particularly insistent in pressing the President to accept the Sugar Board's advice. This advice was given unanimously, save for one dissenting voice. Had that advice been taken, the sugar for which, as we are now threatened, we shall have to pay a price of from 20 to 25 cents per pound, would have been retained to us at from 10 to 11 cents. Within a few days, Federal experts have figured that the President's stubborn refusal to take the advice urged upon him will cost the American people, in round figures, close to a billion dollars.

But if there is one thing above another on which Mr. Wilson prides himself it is his own omniscience. To accept advice on any subject whatever, no matter how far removed that subject may have been from his own orbit of experience and information, is probably, for him, a sheer impossibility.

Needless to say, the President refused the advice of the Sugar Equalization Board. Needless to say, he spurned the urgent advice of Mr.
Hoover. He turned these gentlemen, men who had the advantage of knowing something about the subject, to the "opinion" of somebody who demonstrably knew nothing whatever about it.

There was one dissenting voice in the otherwise unanimous advice of the Sugar Equalization Board, and that voice was the voice of a professional economist, the Chairman of the Federal Tariff Commission. It is going to cost us only a billion dollars or so to enjoy the blessings of the Wisconsin-Tassig brand of economic wisdom. That is all.

And the American people submit to it—well, why? Probably because they have to.—Harvey's Weekly.

HANSCOM'S NEW JOB

Former Purser on the Boston Boats Now Heads Naviga- tion Company.

A. H. Hanscom, formerly of Winter-port, and for many years identified with the Boston boats as purser and freight clerk, has been elected president of the Hudson Navigation Company of New York, a position of great responsibility, with salary accordingly. Mr. Hanscom after leaving the Eastern steamship lines was for a number of years with the Edison Light Company of Boston and some years ago went to New York where he has since been the able assistant of Charles W. Morse, in fact the "right hand man" of the steamship magistrate.

"Al" Hanscom, as he is known to friends everywhere, was one of the most popular, obliging and efficient officials ever on the Boston boats. He not only knew all about the business end but acquired a knowledge of navigation and all that goes with operating steamship lines. He had the brains and judgment to make good in the far broader field offered by the Morse activities.

He married Miss Caroline Haven of Winterport, and they have one daughter, Mrs. Jack Fuller, of Tampa, Fla., and one grandson. Mr. and Mrs. Hanscom make their home in New York having an apartment at Hotel Chelsea.

CHAMPION SKATER

Roller skating, which has taken such a hold on the local public, is to be given another big boost this week.
Manager Tarr has secured for Thursday, Friday and Saturday Billy Carpenter, the world's greatest skater. The feats, figures and dances which Mr.
Carpenter demonstrates are too numerous to mention. To get the meaning of them one must see them.

For years Carpenter has devoted his time to a study of the art of graceful evolution and rapid movement on the little wheels, and to the invention of new tricks that surprise and amuse the public. But time is such that he is welcomed in all of the great rinks, and only a short time ago he created a sensation in the St. Nicholas rink in New York and at Luna Park, Paris, France, where nothing common-place could possibly "get by"—adv.

ONLY FORTY MEMBERS NOW

And There Are But Three Surviving Charter Members of the Local Grand Army Post.

One frequently reads of the "thinning ranks of the Grand Army veterans," and one's sympathy goes out instinctively to those gray haired warriors who fought so gallantly for the preservation of the Union.

J. W. Crocker, First Commander of Edwin Libby Post.

How many know the present status of the local Post? How many know that there are today but 40 members still on the active list—less than one-tenth of all who have been enrolled in Edwin Libby Post since it was organized in May, 1875. Of the charter members only three are now living—J. W. Crocker, who was first commander of the Post; R. N. Marsh and A. I.

Mather. The other charter members were:

Jonathan Crockett, T. S. Pillsbury,
J. W. Crocker, O. J. Conant, V. E.
Wall, W. W. Ulmer, C. D. Jones, G. H.
Tighe, W. S. Farwell, R. N. Marsh, B.
P. Brackley, S. A. Fish, A. I. Mather,
Arthur Libby, Daniel Pierce, E. H.
Clark, R. Anderson, Jr., and F. H.
Ulmer.

Following are the names of the 40 members who are now in good standing:

Aylward, Frank E.	Frost, Oscar S.

Farrington, Jacob U.	Wade, Samuel E.

The present commander of the Post is Capt. Frank E. Aylward. In spite of the greatly reduced membership, the regular meetings, which are held on Saturday afternoon, have an attendance ranging from 10 to 19.

The Courier-Gazette is indebted for the above information to G. C. Cross, adjutant of the Post, and in many respects the best posted man in the city on Grand Army affairs.

A BORN LEADER

Mrs. J. Frank Rich, of the Woman's Advisory Com- mittee, Has Had a Very Active Life.

Mrs. J. Frank Rich, the Knox county appointee on the woman's advisory committee of the State Republican committee is a woman who has done things. She has been vice president of the Maine Federation of Women's clubs which speaks for her prominence in club work. For two years she was chairman of the educational department of the federation and she represented the Maine Federation committee of the National Education association and the National Federation of Women's clubs in her home town.

Mrs. Rich was born in Lincolnville, the daughter of Oscar Wyman and Angela (Perry) French of Revolutionary and Mayflower descent. She graduated from the Belfast high school and Gorham Normal school and before her marriage, taught school in Belfast and in Gorham and Deering high schools. Mr.
and Mrs. Rich have one son Perry Frank Rich.

She founded for five years and was president of the Genevieve Study Club;
and has been president of the Methuenesse Club.

Later Mrs. Rich became the founder and president of the Genevieve Social Center, conducted as an Open Forum for discussion of current affairs meetings being held in a country schoolhouse. These meetings were attended by over 5000 people during the four years and over 100 of Maine's most talented speakers were heard on its platform, including the discoverer of the North Pole, the daughter of Julia Ward Howe, three college presidents, many college professors, three congressmen, three governors of Maine, three U. S. Senators, club women, judges, State senators and representatives, thinkers of every political and religious faith. Since September, owing to the serious teacher shortage in Maine, Mrs. Rich has been teaching as principal of Jefferson high school.
She is a leading member of the D. A.
R. having been treasurer of Lady Knox Chapter. Mrs. Rich is an ardent advocate of woman suffrage. She belongs to the Methodist church.

CURLEW HELPLESS

The Steam Trawler Sea Bird Towed Sister Ship To Bos- ton Light.

In the gale which swept the Atlantic last Sunday the steam trawler Curlew, one of the fleet owned by the East Coast Fisheries Company, was helpless and unmanageable for hours, following an accident to the steering gear. The Curlew had been fishing on Georges, about 200 miles from Boston, and was about to start for home with her catch of 100,000 pounds of fresh ground-fish, when the quadrant on the rudderhead broke and the vessel lurched off into the trough of the heavy sea. A makeshift was rigged but before a start could be made the tiller broke and the vessel was again at the mercy of wind and sea.

A canvas sea anchor was thrown out astern, which steadied the vessel somewhat.

A wireless message summoned the steam trawler Sea Bird, owned by the same company, which was fishing near the latter stood by the helpless craft all Sunday night and until Monday afternoon, when the tempest moderated and a steel towing hawser soon connected the two vessels.

The Sea Bird towed the Curlew as far as Boston Light, where she was towed over to a harbor tug which brought her up to T wharf.

The Curlew had 61,000 pounds of fish and the Sea Bird has 35,000 pounds.

RECORD PRICES

Reached By 22 Food Articles, Cabbages, Onions and Sugar Leading.

Twenty-two articles of food reached record prices in December, according to a report issued by the bureau of labor statistics. The prices were 25 per cent higher than in November, five per cent higher than in the preceding December and 89 percent higher than in December, 1913.

Of the 44 articles of food for which prices were obtained during the month, Nov. 15 to Dec. 15, 22 increased in price, 12 decreased and 10 remained stationary. Increases were as follows:

Cabbage, 36 per cent; onions, 17 per cent; granulated sugar, 16 per cent; strictly fresh eggs, 14 per cent; potatoes, 10 per cent; raisins, 5 per cent;
flour, 4 per cent; butter and storage eggs, 3 per cent each; fresh milk and canned salmon, 2 per cent each; lamb, evaporated milk, oleomargarine, cheese, macaroni, rice, canned peas and bananas, one per cent each.

A CANADIAN BOAT SONG

Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep time, and our ears keep time.
Soon as the woods on shore look dim,
We'll sing at St. Ann's our parting hymn.
Row, brothers, row! the stream runs fast,
The rapids are near, and the daylight's past,
Why should we yet our sail unfurl?
There is not a breath the blue sea to curl,
But when the wind blows off the shore,
Oh, swiftly we'll rest our weary oar!
The rapids are near, and the daylight's past,
Blow, breezes, blow! the stream runs fast,
Uwawa! tide! this trembling moon
Shall see us float over thy surges soon.
Sing of this green isle, hear our prayers—
Oh, grant us cool heavens and favoring airs!
Row, breezes, blow! the stream runs fast,
The rapids are near, and the daylight's past.

—Thomas Moore.

The Shattuck shipyard at Newington, H., where during the war 16 Ferris steamers were built for the United States Shipping Board, has been added to a chemical dyestuff company. It has purchased part of the land and most of the buildings and will commence operations in April. Two completed Ferris type steamers in the yard are being converted into tugs. 150 men being employed where they were at work a year ago.

Toastmaster Green asked all ex-service men to rise and 12 responded. They were given rousing cheers. The banquet closed with brief remarks by the local newspaper representatives.

The people's Methodist Episcopal church has completed plans for the evangelistic campaign which begins Wednesday evening, Jan. 28, continuing through Sunday, Feb. 8. The pastor, Mr. Charles F. Smith, will have the assistance of Evangelist Lewis E. Smith, from the Evangelistic Association of New England, who is not stranger to the people of this community. He conducted a similar campaign about seven years ago under the pastorate of Rev. B. W. Brown and has been called to conduct services in many of the largest city churches. He is a singer as well as preacher and this rare combination makes him a much sought for man. He has been busy in Rhode Island since early fall and goes back to Providence after his meetings in Union to hold a series of meetings with one of the largest Baptist churches in Providence. These services will be held every evening except Saturday at 7:30 and Sunday at the usual hours.

SOUTH THOMASTON

A movement has been started, or at least, a few of our energetic citizens have been sounding up the townspeople as to the advisability of trying to get a monument or memorial of some kind appropriate to our martyred townsboy, Oscar Hix, who was killed in Service and also as a commemoration for our boys in Service who were permitted to return to us unharmed. The memorial to be something after the style of the Knox Memorial in Thomaston. A large boulder with a bronze plate bearing the names of our soldiers and sailors, or an inscription suitable to their gallantry and patriotism which will be an ornament to our town, wherever the site to place some may be procured. This should appeal to the patriotism of every citizen of our town and we feel sure will receive a hearty and generous support. South Thomaston never has been at the foot of the class in any thing that has been its duty to perform and we hope in this they may still find themselves standing at the head. Other towns and cities are doing splendid things in memory of their soldier and sailor dead, as well as living so let us not forget that we have just as much to commemorate as they and by doing something of this kind show that we are zealous when duty calls as well as appreciative and patriotic.

Eugene Harrington and Newton Morgan are staying in Rockland while the roads are unfit for travel. A variant has been reported in town recently. Let us hope that no more may appear in our little hamlet. Such element is decidedly unbecoming and we trust that they may be taken care of where there are conveniences for caring for such before they reach our little village.

George Green has returned home from Rockland where he has been for four weeks receiving medical and surgical treatment. His many friends hope for his speedy recovery.

TOO WEAK TO DO ANYTHING

A Serious Feminine Illness Remedied By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Casco, Wis.—"After the birth of each of my children I had displacement and was so weak I couldn't do anything."

I found a book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and so I thought I would try it, and after taking it I soon felt better. That was fifteen years ago and I have felt well ever since except that I had a slight attack of the trouble some time ago and took some more of your Compound and was soon all right again. I always recommend your medicine and you may publish my testimonial for the benefit of other women. —Mrs. JULES BERO, Jr., R. 1, Box 99, Casco, Wis.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills in this country, and thousands of voluntary testimonials prove this fact.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (Confidential), Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Lynn, Mass., are guests of Mrs. Hodson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Green for few weeks. Mr. Hodson is rapidly recovering from a very serious illness and nervous breakdown.

A very helpful and pleasant meeting of the Sunday School board and teachers was held at the home of Rev. A. E. Whitten Tuesday evening.

Mrs. C. L. Sleeper is visiting her daughter Mrs. Raymond Till in Swampscott, Mass., for a few weeks.

Three candidates took the third and fourth degrees in Wessawakeag Grange last Wednesday evening. There was also installation of officers as follows: Master, Scott Rockliff; overseer, Charles Watts; lecturer, Bertha Holbrook; chaplain, Louise Butler; secretary, Lillian Rowell; treasurer, Clifford Butler; steward, Ralph Rowell; gate keeper, Ethan Rowell; lady assistant, Susie Sleeper; Ceres, Pomona and Flora, Jennie Putnam, Blanche Ames and Grace Maloney; assistant, Edward and Grace Maloney; assistant, Jeanne Morgan acted as installing officer.

Charles Bradbury was home from Bath for the weekend.

Mr. McClure made a business trip to Rockland last week.

William Smith made his usual trip from Rockland last Friday after H. J. McClure's lobsters. We hope another trip he will be able to tell us of a little advance in price, the present weather conditions merely should have a tendency in that line.

Mrs. H. J. McClure and little daughters Rebecca and Louise are visiting relatives and friends in Rockland.

Capt. Wilbur Dorr and son and son-in-law Perry have gone to Massachusetts, where they have employment for the winter.

Charles Anderson, who is working in Rockland this winter spent last week in Cribhaven, guest of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson.

Wilbur Dorr and daughter Mrs. Otis Perry and family have gone to Rockland.

The fiercest storm of the winter occurred Saturday and Sunday during the heavily easterly gale Mr. Tupper had the misfortune to have his boat go ashore, but as soon as the tide left many willing hands to describe the racing gale helped him to put her in a place beyond the reach of the waves. Quite a little damage was done the craft, and the little hearted Cribhaven fellows, who got a big wet helping Mr. Tupper.

Fred S. Wilson and J. B. Freeman made a trip to Port Clyde last week. With all the attractions Cribhaven has to offer, Freeman still makes those regular trips to the main.

Our new mail service is certainly worth mention. Mr. Wallace, though having only a small boat, has certainly done well not having missed a trip to date. This is something unusual for Matineus and Cribhaven mail service.

Mrs. John Crie is ill at present writing.

It seems good to have our old freight boat, the Ira L., making frequent trips to and from Rockland this winter weather.

CASH PAID

Any woman who has spare time ought to turn it into cash. Every woman has an opportunity to do so right in her own home by taking up a work which pays cash for such time as she can spare from her household duties.

Pinkham Associates, Inc., an organization of Hand Braided Rug Makers furnishes the necessary materials, giving instructions telling how to make Pinkham Braided Rugs from the materials furnished and pays cash for the finished rugs.

Many Associate Rug Makers have been in this organization since the business was started seven years ago. There are several hundred women today who are finding this form of employment both pleasant and profitable. Some are able to devote several hours a day to the work, others, only a few hours a week but in all cases, they find that Braiding Rugs pays well for the amount of time they give to it.

Numberless communities have from one to five Pinkham Associate Rug Makers who will recommend this work as ideal home employment for any woman who thinks she would like to try it. Of course, most of the Associate Rug Makers had braided rugs for themselves and from their family rag bags before becoming Pinkham Associates but several of the best makers on the pay roll today, had never made a rug until the first one they braided for Pinkham Associates.

Further particulars will gladly be mailed to any woman who wants to know more about the work. All that is necessary is to send your name and address to Pinkham Associates, Inc., 217 Washington Ave., Portland, Maine.

Fred Priest has sold a lot of logs and is hauling them to the Washington pond.

S. T. Overlock has made 18 dozen axe handles by hand and finds a ready sale for them.

A. Overlock is hauling wood to Washington.

W. E. Overlock was in town Sunday. Edward Light is visiting his sister, Mrs. F. E. Cheney in Augusta.

Roswell Pinkham and Will Palmer of Augusta visited at James Overlock's Sunday.

S. T. Overlock received a letter recently from an old schoolmate, Anson L. Moody, who is now in Exeter, Minn. Mr. Moody and Mr. Overlock are the same age and were in the same class. Mr. Moody was the son of William and Carmen Moody and is the only one living of a family of five children. He married a Lynn woman and they have five children. He was a barber by trade, but has retired from business on account of poor health.

SPRUCE HEAD

Mrs. F. A. Snow returned home Tuesday after visiting her husband, who is very ill at the Marine Hospital in Portland.

Mrs. Charles Burke is away on a visit in Warren and Gloucester, Mass.

Mrs. Ernest Moservey and Master Billy Murphy have returned home after a month's visit with Master Billy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Murphy in Boston.

Congratulations and best wishes are extended our mail driver J. T. Baum and bride.

By the looks of the snow drifts and ice around the shores, guess we'll get our winter all right.

Mrs. Leland Mann and son Dorrell and their company spent a few days at Two Bush Light with Mr. Mann.

WHITE HEAD

Millard Robinson is substituting at the Coast Guard Station at present.

Capt. and Mrs. L. R. Dunn of the Coast Guard were guests at the home of Keeper A. B. Mitchell Wednesday evening. Piano music was enjoyed and refreshments of ice cream and cake were served. Capt. Dunn is on a five-day leave.

Mrs. David Mann was a visitor at Mrs. L. R. Dunn's recently.

Mrs. Charles Robinson is recovering from a bad fall. Her friends hope to see her out soon.

Snowdrifts are plentiful at present. School has not begun yet as no teacher can be found to fill the vacancy.

MEDUNCOOK

Carrie Simmons cooked at Mrs. Chadwick's Tuesday.

Cornelius Morse and son Willie are cutting wood for the schoolhouse.

Harvey Cushman spent Sunday at Friendship.

Capt. Cleve Burns and Thelma Simmons called at the lobster pound here Wednesday.

Dr. Coombs was called here Tuesday by the illness of James Simmons.

Mr. Putnam of Boston is at H. W. Chadwick's for a few days.

Harvey Cushman went to Rockland Tuesday on a business trip.

Roscoe Simmons called at Hiram Chadwick's Wednesday.

William Putnam of Boston, of the firm of the Consolidated Lobster Co., is in town on business.

C. Warren Wotton's buildings at East Friendship were destroyed by fire Tuesday while Mr. Wotton was away assessing his cousin Miss Emma Davis with her chores. We understand only a bureau and a few rugs were saved and that it was insured for $1000, which will not half cover loss as the barn was well filled with hay.

Miss Ann Wotton of East Friendship is visiting Mrs. Laura Poland.

R. B. Thompson was in Cushing Tuesday on business.

Dr. and Mrs. William Hahn are visiting in Baltimore. His father, Myron Hahn, of Rockland, is looking after things while they are away.

Dr. Coombs of Walldoboro made a professional call on James Simmons recently.

Teams are busy hauling wood while there is sledging.

There is a large area of ice in this vicinity and people can be seen walking from Moses' and L. L. to the mainland every day.

Dalton Wotton is enjoying a vacation. Virgil Morton is now taking orders in Mr. Wotton's absence for Jameson & Wotton.

Mrs. Percy Winepaw visited her father William Winepaw Thursday.

Miss Nellie Davis entertained several of the young people last week in honor of her nephew and niece Mr. and Mrs. Foster Jameson.

COLD ON CHEST AND SORE THROAT ENDED OVERNIGHT

You Get Action with Mustarine—It Drives Out Pain in Half the Time It Takes other Remedies—It's the Quickest Pain Killer on Earth.

Stops coughing almost instantly; ends sore throat and chest colds over night. Nothing like it for neuralgia, lumbago, neuralgia, and so on. It drives away rheumatic pains and reduces swollen joints.

Mustarine is the original non-blistering prescription that takes the place but is 10 times as efficient as grandmother's old-fashioned mustard plaster. Use it for sore throat, strains, bruises, swollen joints, stiff neck, swellings, sore, painful or tired feet and chilblains. Be sure it's Begg's Mustarine in the yellow box.

The MAN NOBODY KNEW By HOLWORTHY HALL.

CHAPTER I.

In the beginning of things, he was merely a number; but even that was creditable, because his number was low enough to signify that he had responded pretty promptly to the rallying call. After that, and with the catalytic suddenness which marked all changes of military status on the western front, he became, one frosty morning, a Case, and got himself roughly classified (and tenderly handled) as a Stretcher Case, a Grand Blessé, and, in consequence, a proper temporary inmate of a field hospital on the Belgian plains.

There, he was unofficially known as Joyeux, or Joyous One; not because he displayed a very buoyant disposition—far from it—but because he belonged to the Foreign Legion; and in the course of another day or two he was routine-ticked as an Evacué, and provided with a lukewarm hot-water bottle and a couple of cigarettes on the smiling face of a nurse at Neuilly.

At Neuilly he became, for the first time since his enlistment, an Individual, and at the very outset he was distinguished by certain qualities which had passed unnoticed in the frying pan and fire of the trenches. For one thing, he was obviously immune to kindness; and for another, he was apparently immune to hope. He was a man of inveterate silence; not the grim silence of fortitude in suffering (which is altogether too common a virtue in base hospitals), but rather the dogged reticence of black moods and chronic bitterness. To be sure, speech was physically difficult to him, but other men with similar misfortunes spoke blessings with their eyes, and gave back gratitude in voiceless murmurs. Not so the Joyous One. From the day of his arrival he demanded nothing, desired nothing, but to brood sullenly aloof; and so, when he became an Individual, he also became a mystery to the nursing staff. It was rumored that he was an implacable woman hater, and there seemed to be something in it.

Regardless of the care of the American nurses (all covertly attentive to one of their own nation who had fought for France), his spirit remained abysmal and clouded in gloom. Only twice, in the initial month of his confinement, did he betray the weakness of an ordinary emotion; on each occasion a gold-laced general had come to salute, in the name of the republic, one of the Individual's neighbors, and deliver a bit of bronze which dangled from a ribbon striped red and green. It was said (and doubted by those who hadn't seen it) that at these ceremonies the Individual had grown feverish, and let tears come to his eyes, but subsequently he had relapsed into still greater depths of stoicism than before; his own bed-jacket was impregnated with cross or medal, and his depression was apparent, and acute. The nurses, arguing that perhaps his pride was wounded as seriously as his flesh, offered quick condolences and got themselves rebuffed with shrugs of the Individual's shoulders, and inarticulate sounds which had all the earmarks of suppressed profanity. He didn't even soften when Pierre Dutout, a hard-bitten territorial in the next bed, squandered a day's supply of energy to lean across and whisper sympathetically to him: "Old man . . . vieux espèce de choucroute . . . I know how it is . . . and I haven't got any friends either. I want you to take my Croix de Guerre. . . . When I go nowhere. . . ."

Even when speech returned to the Individual he was a man of curt responses and stinging monosyllables—a problem to the surgeons, a problem to the nurses and (if the expression in his eyes meant anything), an overwhelming problem to himself. It appeared that, after all, it wasn't simply women that he hated—it was the universe.

His military book implied that he had no parents, no close relations, no friends to notify, no fixed abode. He received no visitors, no letters, no packages freighted with magical delight. But to those who pried him to all his loneliness he was utterly contemptuous; he even went so far as to fling sidelong to the floor a devout post card tendered him by a religious and sentimental passer-by, and he did it in her presence, unashamed. Later, when a smiling orderly picked up that post card and tucked it under his pillow he was no less contemptuous in permitting it to remain. But the one stupendous fact which, more than all else combined, made him an object of bewildered curiosity was this—that of the scores and scores of men with head-wounds who were reborn at Neuilly that spring and summer, he was the only one who had never asked for a mirror.

This, of itself, wouldn't have been astonishing as long as he delayed in the preliminary stages of recovery, for now and then a man with head-wounds proves to be super-sensitive; but in the second stage it was remarkable, and in the third stage it was unique. The staff held it to be extraordinary from a social as well as from a pathological viewpoint, that a man so terribly disfigured should have no interest—not even a morbid interest—in his own appearance. And it wasn't that the Individual was simply indifferent to the mirror; on the contrary, his aversion to it was active and energetic; he flinched, and motioned it frantically away as though the mere conception of seeing himself as others saw him was too repellent, and too unthinkable to endure.

There came a day in April when a photograph was requested of him. Surely he knew where there was a likeness of himself, didn't he? His old passport photograph, which had mysteriously disappeared, or—

The Individual glanced up from his present task; the wound in his arm was still annoying and he was absorbed in learning to write with his left hand.

"What for?" he muttered.

"Why," said the nurse, cheerfully, "for a model. To help the surgeons. They'll take your picture for a guide and make you look almost exactly the way you did before."

The Individual from America sat up straight, so that the nurse was startled by his animation, which was without a parallel in his local history.

"What!" he said.

"Certainly!" The nurse spoke in the tone one uses to an ailing child. "You've known that, haven't you?"

The Individual's voice was queerly unmanageable and strained. "You mean to say they're going to make me look the way . . . Could they do that? Could they? Even now?"

"Why, of course," she assured him. "You never told me that!" he said, passionately. "Why didn't you? Why couldn't they have told me! And here I've been . . ."

"He put his hands to his bandaged face and seemed to shrink within himself. Then all at once he burst out: 'Well, there's nothing to prevent . . . Then they could make me not look like it, if they wanted to! Isn't that so?'"

She regarded him in vast perplexity, and thought of summoning a surgeon, for the man had begun to quiver as though from shell shock—which he hadn't undergone.

"Why, I don't understand what you mean," she said soothingly. "But if you'll just be calm and—"

The Individual gestured with fierce impatience.

"If they can do what you say, and make me look like any old thing they choose to, then what in the devil are they asking for a photograph for?"

"Why, to go by," she said helplessly. "You want to look like your old self, don't you?"

"No, I don't!"

The nurse gasped. His tone had been churlish, but the echo of it vaguely suggested triumph and relief. His

"Let Them Make Me Look Like That."

Symptoms had subsided. . . . could it be that he actually was relieved? Dumfounded, she made another effort to convince him.

"But you want to look just as nearly like—"

"Don't you suppose I know what I want?" he interrupted rudely.

"But haven't you a photograph, anyway, that I can—"

"No, I haven't!" he snapped. "I haven't! It was a lie; the passport photograph was in the lining of a certain wallet, and he had hid it there for reasons of his own. But now that one great danger was definitely past, and a still further network of protection offered, if the nurse spoke truth, the Individual could afford to come out from ambush. "And I don't want to look the way I did before, and what's more I never did! But if your doctors are half as smart as they think they are let 'em make me look like that! Or anything else either—I don't give a d—n!"

Shocked and horrified, she was gazing at a picture postcard he had thrust upon her. Under his pillow and in the lining of a religious painting by Rembrandt. It was the radiant face of the Christ.

CHAPTER II.

Nine o'clock on a night in June—not a June evening, heavy-starred on velvet, but a furious June night, with Stygian blackness battering overhead and Stygian water lapping and boiling against the hull plates. The ship was dark as the night itself; blind dark, without a single ray to play the traitor. On deck a solitary venture bragger, the rail, and apathetically watched the waves tear past.

Out of the warmth and cheer and the vitiated atmosphere of the smothering room came Martin Harmon, big, florid, exuberant. A heaving lift of the deck sent him lurching sidewise; he saved his balance by struggling toward the rail, when suddenly the slope was reversed, and he slipped and slid to the barrier of safety, clutched it, and found himself at arm's length from the lonely watcher, who hadn't stirred, or even turned his head.

"Hello!" said Harmon, his surprise tinged with easy familiarity. "Some night!"

"Yes, it is," the tone of the response was curt, so curt that Harmon instinctively leaned forward to discover what expression of countenance went with it. The night was so black that he might as well have tried to penetrate a curtain of solid fabric.

"Seen any U-boats yet?" he asked humorously.

"Not yet." The factuism one moved a trifle away; a man less thin-skinned and less dined and wine-d than Harmon would probably have taken the hint and removed himself, but Harmon's was an inquisitive disposition, and he never attempted to curb it—he was the sort of traveling companion who makes Christians reflect upon the definition of justifiable homicide.

"What is your line?" he inquired after a pause.

The other man laughed queerly. "The first . . . if it makes so much difference to you."

"Beg pardon? I don't quite get you. You said . . ."

"I said the first line. I meant the first-line trenches. I've been in it."

Harmon jerked his head upward in comprehension.

"Oh, I see!" He meant the war! And you've been right on the spot where the fighting is? Pretty lively up there, isn't it? Something stirring most all the time?"

"I imagine so." The other man's accent was amazingly diffident, and Harmon peered at him, incredulous.

"Good Lord, don't you know?"

"Not a great deal. I happened to get hit the first day I was in the trenches."

"But you got it in again afterward, I suppose? I'll bet you did!"

"No."

"What! You never got back at all? Just one day, and you're through?"

"Yes. After I was discharged from hospital I was discharged from the army too. Permanently unfit."

"English army?"

"No—French."

"Well, that's some record!" said Harmon appreciatively. "That certainly is some record! Not to say tough luck—the toughest kind. Going back home, I take it?"

"Looks that way, doesn't it?" Harmon ignored the sarcasm.

"Back to work, eh? What did you say your line is?"

"I didn't say. I haven't any just now."

Harmon pondered a second.

"Oh! Gentleman of leisure? Soldier of fortune, eh? Well, I wouldn't worry if I were you. You're disappointed; that's natural. . . . but the world hasn't come to an end yet. Of course it is something of a come-down to leave the army and get into harness again, but after all there's plenty of excitement right in the United States. Big work to be done, son! Big money to make. And it helps the war along, too. I tell you there never was a bigger opportunity to make money than there is right this minute. The hard job isn't to find the scheme; it's to find the men to run it. Don't you worry . . . you'll land something right off that!"

"Thanks for the compliment!"

"Oh, it's no compliment! Anybody can make money these days. It's a plain statement of fact. . . . Say, let's go in and have something. Come in and be sociable. What you want is a drink. Am I right or am I wrong?"

"Well—"

It was a slightly thin face, scarred by a heavy line or two, and indelibly stamped with the evidence of intense thought and inward struggling; but it lacked the hollows which, at the first glance, should have supported the evidence. It was a thin and oval face, with a mouth of large and sympathetic sweetness, a forehead white and high, a prominent, delicate nose, and irises of clear, luminous gray. It wasn't altogether an Anglo-Saxon type of countenance, nor was it definitely European; it seemed rather to have taken all the better qualities from several races. It was despite his lack of practice in all three of these reactions, was evidently attracted by it.

"Vichy-Celestins for me," said the old-young man indifferently.

"Till . . . I guess I'll have vichy too," said Harmon, relaxing. "If it wasn't for something I can't just describe I'd say . . . well, never mind. Er . . . what business have you been in, by the way?"

The younger man's reply was tardy and not particularly gracious.

"Why, the longest time I ever put in at any one business was selling insurance. The last thing I did was to sell bonds. Why?"

Harmon stiffened. "A salesman! Good Lord! That's the last thing in the world I'd have . . . but, say! You must have been a whirlwind! Why, a man with a presence like yours would hardly have to open his mouth! You've got a sort of . . . I'll be hanged if I know what to call it . . . but a kind of feeling, if you know what I mean. Salesman! Why, all you need is an introduction and a dotted line!"

The young man laughed rather forlornly and slipped his vichy.

"Just at present I haven't either." Harmon's gaze was unflinching, and his interest and admiration bounded higher. Mechanically, in accordance with his habits, he was striving to discover how this new acquaintance might be put to practical use. "Was I right, or was I wrong? Playing in hard luck don't strengthen a man's courage much, even if he tries to bluff himself into thinking it does. Cut out the regret stuff; that's my advice, and you can take it or leave it. Forget all that tough luck you had over here, and get busy figuring out how you're going to cash in on all your experience. America's full of chances—you'll land something big in no time. Can't help it if you try. Salesman! Son, you're carrying your best recommendation right on top of your own shoulders!"

The young man gave him back a wry smile and finished his vichy.

"I only hope it comes true," he said. Harmon looked at him steadily, and falling under the spell of those radiant features stared and stared until he came to himself and all at once brought his fist down on the table, so that the glasses rang again.

"Well, why shouldn't it? As a matter of fact, why shouldn't it?"

The younger man's expression hadn't changed. "Meaning what?"

"Meaning," said Harmon deliberately, "that the first thing I've got to do is to get home to hunt up a couple of good salesmen myself. Are you hunting for a good job, or aren't you?"

"Aren't you a little hasty?" The young man's intonation was sardonic. "I've cleaned up most of my money."

Harmon very slowly to the ceiling, "by making quick decisions. I make up my mind pretty fast. If you can interest me on short notice you can interest other people. Mind you, we're just discussing this—sort of thinking out loud. No obligation on either side. Doesn't do any harm to talk about it, does it?"

"Then suppose," said the young man placidly, "you define your idea of a good job. I'm rather particular."

"But you admit you're out of luck, and—"

"But you admit I'm a whirlwind." The young man smiled with faint amusement.

"I said you ought to be—with training."

The young man's mouth turned upward at the corners.

"Go ahead and describe the job."

"Well, my idea of a pretty sweet job for a man of your age is—to start, of course—about twenty a week, or commissions."

"Yes? What per cent commission?"

"Oh, eight to ten per cent."

The young man glanced at Harmon and laughed quietly.

"You're a broker, of course, but that doesn't sound much like conservative investment securities to me. What is it—industrial?"

Harmon grimaced.

"Yes, I'm a broker." He set down his glass and fumbled for a card.

"There! But I was thinking more about stocks than bonds. Some new Montana properties—copper and zinc. Metals are the big noise these days. I guess you realize that, don't you? Munition work?"

"You're a broker, of course, but that doesn't sound much like conservative investment securities to me. What is it—industrial?"

Harmon grimaced.

"Yes, I'm a broker." He set down his glass and fumbled for a card.

"There! But I was thinking more about stocks than bonds. Some new Montana properties—copper and zinc. Metals are the big noise these days. I guess you realize that, don't you? Munition work?"

The younger man glanced at the card. "My name is Hilliard. Well—is competition so keen you are off to pay that high for business, or is the stuff just hard to sell?"

Harmon, who had begun to nod rather blankly at the second, but rallied quickly.

"Competition. But there's money in it, and you'll get your share of it too—believe me! I've got a sneaking suspicion that you and I can do business together. Want to consider it?"

"All this on such short acquaintance? Aren't you taking a fearful chance?"

Harmon saw that the young man's irises were extremely luminous and clear; he leaned forward seriously.

"I'm simply backing my lunch, son. In the long run it pays me—pays me well. I've sort of taken a fancy to you. As far as I know you may be the rottenest salesman in the whole United States; I wouldn't hire your experience without some references, and maybe a surety company back of you; but I'd hire that face of yours, and your manner, and your voice off-hand. I'd hire you from—not your past. And let me tell you right now, son, I never made a trade as fast as this before in my life. But there's the young man was thoughtful and unblinking."

"You're actually making me a proposition, are you?"

"Absolutely!"—Harmon's fist on the table provided the exclamation point.

"Here—I don't know you, and you don't know me, but if you're hunting for a job you've found it. . . . It's your next move."

The young man's lips parted in grave good humor; Harmon was spell-bound at the effect.

"I'll try not to keep you waiting. This speed of yours rather entices me. Besides, if my face is my fortune, I'd better find it out as soon as possible. This organization of yours is in New York city, isn't it?"

"My headquarters are, but I'd want you to work outside. I've got one special town in mind—in the state. That's where this list is. It's always been one of our hardest markets, and it's got money to burn. Can't swing it, somehow—they don't respond to any ordinary selling talk; they're too hide-bound conservative. You know the kind. Government-bond crowd. And for a year or so they've been making war profits till you can't see 'em for dust. Manufacturing town. And I'll like mighty well to ship you up there for a month or two; give you time enough to get your bearings, and turn you loose. You ought to do great work in a place like that. They need a chap like you—confound it!"

Harmon abruptly and shook his head in great bewilderment. "I can't make it out at all. You've got the appearance of a . . . well, a sort of a strait-laced youngster, if you know what I mean, and yet the way you can't see 'em for dust. Manufacturing town. And I'll like mighty well to ship you up there for a month or two; give you time enough to get your bearings, and turn you loose. You ought to do great work in a place like that. They need a chap like you—confound it!"

"And the town you have in mind?"

"It's Syracuse, New York."

"Syracuse?" The young man's chin was squared by a ruler, and he noticeably frowned.

"Yes; know anybody there?"

Hilliard laughed unpleasantly and resumed his former attitude.

"Why, it so happens," he said, biting the words off sharply, "that I was born and brought up in Syracuse, and if there's any one place in the world I care less about than any other place that's the one . . . I'm sorry, but I'm afraid we're at cross purposes from here on."

Harmon showed his vexation. "What's the matter? Haven't you kept on good terms with your old friends?"

"No."

Harmon frowned.

"Well, is it so bad you couldn't do any business there? How do they remember you?"

The young man regarded him stonily for an instant, then gradually a faraway expression crept into his eyes; he started and caught his breath.

"I'll let you judge for yourself." He brought out a flat leather wallet, from which he extracted a tiny photograph, torn from an old passport. "What do you think of that?"

Harmon scanned it superficially.

"Nice-looking boy. Who is he?"

"It was taken two years ago," said Hilliard, resting his elbow on the table. "You wanted to know how they remember me, so I'm showing you. That's a photograph of me, taken two years ago."

"Impossible!" Harmon snorted it. "That doesn't look any more like you than . . . than I do! L.O.'s omit the comedy; I'm talking business!"

The young man's mouth curled. "Don't be mistaken, Mr. Harmon—there's very little joking in me when I ever mention Syracuse." Harmon shivered at the tone, but waved the photograph in scoffing recitation.

"You're not trying to sit there and tell me—"

"I told you I was in hospital for nearly a year, I believe," said Hilliard. "It was shrapnel—across the face. As a matter of fact I didn't have much of any face left. But the surgeons—they're pretty clever. Yes—they're clever!" Hilliard's eyes were needle points. "They make a man over from his own photograph. In my own case I preferred it differently. So when they asked me for something to use as a pattern in remodeling me I gave 'em this!" He tossed out a faded, postcard, soiled and plicated. "Well, that's where the trouble began. They cursed me up and down for a . . . still that part of it won't interest you. His eyes were with passion, and his voice shook with blessing. "Naturally I hadn't meant it as a d—d literal as all that . . . but they had me under either before I could help myself . . . and they went through with it . . . and cursed me some more afterward . . . They couldn't copy it exactly, of course, but they did the best they could. . . . Gloated over it! Took infinite pains to make it perfect . . . and sneered at me while they did it! Sneered and laughed. . . . Well, you've got the results in front of you. That's what I was—and that's what I am! What's your opinion now? The last sentence came snarling through set teeth.

The broker's pupils had dilated grossly; his eyes wandered vacantly from the photograph to the postcard and back to Hilliard's face. His whole imagination was pinned down and crushed; he swore softly under his breath and wet his lips.

"It's a . . . a miracle!" he stammered. "A miracle! . . ."

"The photograph," said Hilliard harshly, "is the way they remember me up in Syracuse. Do you think they'd ever recognize me now?"

"It's a miracle . . . it's paralyzing! . . ."

"It's a miracle . . . it's paralyzing! . . ."

"Do they know you went to France?"

"They don't know anything. I left between two days. I've never written anybody so much as a line to tell where I was, or what I was doing. I went over on a tramp. A French lieutenant got me into the army, and I didn't give a d—n whether I got killed or not—and then I got this. His hand was on his cheek, where a long scar crossed it. And for over a year I've been hoping that somehow, sometime, I could get back at a few of those men . . . principally Cullen and Durant and McEachern. Got back hard—understand! Perhaps this suggestion of yours will give me the opening. Perhaps it will. That's what I'm wondering. I'm thinking it over. That's all."

Harmon controlled himself; his voice, when it came, was low and seductive.

THOMASTON

Belfast Journal: Miss Emma L. Frost of this city is spending the winter in Thomaston where she will have the management of the clothing manufactory, owned by Pearson & Co. of Boston. Miss Frost has had about eleven years' experience in this work and has also been employed by this company.

Henry McDonald, who has been attending the Rural convention in Boston this week returned home Thursday.

There will be a special meeting of the Beta Alpha society at the home of Miss Elizabeth Washburn next Monday evening.

J. B. Pearson, of J. B. Pearson & Co. Boston, has been at the Knox Hotel this week. Although the concern of which Mr. Pearson is the head, has factories in Boston, Belfast, Gorham and Thomaston, its business has increased to such an extent that it has been necessary to enlarge its scope of activity. To that end Mr. Pearson has made negotiations for the purchase of the so-called paint factory lot on Park street, Rockland. We are glad to learn, however, that for the present, at least, the Thomaston factory will be operated the same as usual. We also hope that this factory may be enlarged in the near future, for as it is one of the important assets of our town, we should like to watch its expansion.

Mrs. Wilford entertained the Baptist Sewing Circle at her home last Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. George Dillingham is learning to operate the switchboard at our local office.

Henry Curran left Friday for Boston where he will spend the winter with his brother, Edward Curran.

Mrs. H. N. Brazier and daughter Miss Corleen Brazier of Rockport called on friends in town last Thursday.

Mrs. Ernest Montgomery has returned from Waldoboro, where she was called by the death of her brother Capt. John Stahl.

Mrs. Donald George and mother Mrs. Jennie W. Bird of Rockland are visiting in Boston this week.

The Gleaner staff met at the home of Miss Jessie Stewart Monday evening for the transaction of business.

The T. H. S. Alumni Association will hold its annual business meeting at the High School next Monday evening at 7.30. All members who have not paid their dues for 1919 should send same to the secretary, Miss Lella Clark.

W. B. Morse of Friendship called upon friends in town last Thursday. He reported that Friendship harbor was frozen solidly as far as the lower end of Long Island.

Schooner No. 6 belonging to the Atlantic Coast Company has been named Elizabeth Freeman. This schooner is all in frame and partly sealed. Schooner No. 7 has the keel laid and stern post up. Framing will begin at once.

Mrs. Theron Payson has gone to Portland to spend several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gilchrist have taken a flat in Camden where Mr. Gilchrist has employment.

Mrs. Hodgkins of Jefferson is the guest of her son Dr. E. W. Hodgkins Dr. W. J. James and Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins attended the Baptist Men's League at Rockland Wednesday evening, when Dr. L. D. Bristol, State Health Commissioner addressed the meeting.

The many friends of Mrs. Sarah Robinson were sorry to learn of her death which occurred last Saturday at her home. She was a very lovely and estimable woman with a great many friends. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from her home. She is survived by one sister, Mrs. Abbie Carleton of Rockport.

Mrs. John Brown entertained the Baptist Mission Circle at her home. Dainty refreshments were served. The meeting was both profitable and enjoyable.

Evangelistic services at the Methodist church tomorrow morning and evening. Special music under the direction of the leader, Mrs. L. E. Luce. The chorus choir of twenty-five voices will sing in the evening. Last Sunday evening an audience of one hundred and twenty-five greatly enjoyed the orchestra music and the illustrated lecture on "The Barbers of North Africa."

At the Baptist church Sunday Roger L. Ravall will occupy the pulpit at both services. The forenoon he will speak on "The Power of the Boy and Girl in the Community."

The Thomaston delegates to the Boys' Conference at Lewiston went on the Friday morning train. The Baptist Sunday school, under the leadership of Alfred M. Strout, Dr. L. H. Hill, Ralph O. Oxtord, Edward Ludwig and Edward N. Hall. The pastor, Rev. Herbert B. Hutchins, went with the boys as leader. The Methodist Sunday school sent Howard Beattie, Lewislyn Oliver, Arthur Risteen, Robert Libby and Edward Elliot, with Hollis Turner as leader.

The many friends of Wendall R. Robinson of New York will be shocked to learn of his sudden death from influenza.

The Baptist Social Circle will meet Wednesday forenoon and afternoon. The ladies will bring lunch; hot coffee will be furnished.

Mrs. Sarah E. Robinson In the death of this lady last week of Sarah E. Robinson, daughter of the late Job and Sarah (Gough) Washburn, there comes to an end an era in the life of Thomaston and of the Baptist church in the town. Mrs. Robinson was born in Thomaston, Sept. 27, 1829, while her father was in the opening years of his long pastorate of the Baptist church. The date of her funeral, Jan. 20, was the 64th anniversary of the organization of the church, which was formed from members of the old church on the 18th of May, 1856.

Mrs. Robinson was pastor when the new church was organized. Mrs. Robinson at the time of her death was the oldest member of the church and had she lived but a few weeks longer would have been a church member for 81 years. It is said that on the occasion of her baptism at the age of 16 her father remarked: "It is the greatest joy of my life to lead my children to Christ."

She was almost the last of a large family of 14 children, being survived by one sister, Mrs. Abbie Carleton of Rockport, now in advanced years and feeble in health.

Mrs. Robinson never moved her home from the town of her nativity. Early in life she married Benjamin F. Robinson, who was to her for all the years of their married life, a fond and affectionate husband. Her interests were not wide, but they were deep and intense. Of a nature at once social and religious, she was devoted to her church, which she served faithfully so long as her strength permitted and for which she never ceased to pray while life endured. In this passing there is for her great gain. The friends of youth

STUDENTS TO COMPETE In An Essay Writing Contest Under Auspices of Army Recruiting Office.

A great nation-wide essay writing contest for pupils of all schools will commence on Feb. 2, under the auspices of the recruiting department of the United States army, and the subject of this essay will be "What are the benefits of an enlistment in the U. S. army?" Particulars regarding the contest are now available at the local army recruiting station and it is announced that all school children, regardless of age and color, are eligible to compete throughout the country, and out of the thousands of essays the best three will be chosen in Washington by Secretary of War Baker and Gen. John J. Pershing and Peyton C. March. This committee of three will make awards of gold, silver and bronze medals to the three winning children on May 20, and the winners will make the trip to and from Washington, together with their parents, at the expense of the government, both railroad fares and expenses of all sorts. Three silver cups will also be presented to the children for the schools from which they came.

The rules of the contest are, in brief, that the essays shall be written in class rooms on Feb. 30 not more than 400 words in length, from notes if desired, and will be judged on the basis of originality, expression and sincerity. Each school principal will appoint a committee to pass the verdict on the compositions of his school and thus will be the judge of his own products. The principal will forward the names and efforts of the winners as entries in the contest to the nearest army recruiting station not later than Feb. 27. The district recruiting officer shall appoint a committee of three judges and their decision as to the best essay in the district will be forwarded to Washington as recommendations. From these entries from the 56 different districts the judges in Washington will select the national winners, and thus will three boys or girls win country wide fame and honor.

In addition to these awards each district recruiting officer is instructed to present on May 2 a suitably engraved cup to the winner of his district contest, so that the contest will thus have a two-fold appeal. Any further details will be gladly given at the local army recruiting station and more particulars in regard to this interesting contest will be presented to the public later.

A BELFAST GIRL

Performed Act of Heroism— Deed Recognized By the Carnegie Commission.

Thirty-five acts of heroism were recognized by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission today, two silver medals and 53 bronze medals being awarded. Thirteen persons lost their lives while trying to save others, and pensions aggregating $3890 a year were granted to the dependents of seven, while to the dependents of three others $4000 were awarded to be spent as the commission may sanction. In seven cases $11,200 was given for educational purposes, and in 13 cases $6000 for other worthy causes.

Two of those who lost their lives were little girls, Lottie C. Steen, killed while trying to drag a 9-year-old boy from a railroad track in front of a train, at Dale, Minn., and Marjorie A. Brown, age 14, drowned while trying to save a girl companion in the Goose River at Belfast, Me.

ARMOUR'S BIG YEAR

Beef Company's Gross Sales Went Well Above Billion Dollar Mark.

Gross sales of Armour & Company for the fiscal year ending Nov. 1, 1919, were $1,038,000,000 and the net income was $14,898,506, according to the annual financial report to the stockholders made public Thursday. This was the first year in the history of the company when the gross sales passed the billion dollar mark the report said, the figure compared with gross sales of $861,000,000 in 1918.

The net income represented a return of 135 cents one dollar of sales and 6.74 per cent on the net capital investment, the company's statement said. Seven per cent dividends were paid on the preferred stock and the usual two per cent dividend on the common stock, the remainder of the profits being invested in the business.

GERMAN DAYS AGAIN

Unless American Industries Can Bring Down Prices.

Early return to the use of German dyes in America unless Congress finds some way to strengthen the American industry and bring prices down, was predicted by George Weiss of New York, in an address before the National Association of Dyers and Cleaners in convention at Cincinnati.

The labor situation in the dyeing and cleaning industry also occupied the attention of the convention. Arthur Berg, chairman of the war service committee, urged that members of the industry seek to interest more Americans in the business and eliminate "foreigners" who "go back to the old country when they have amassed a snug fortune."

BIG THEATRE ORGAN

The largest theatre organ in the world, built by the Esley Organ company of Brattleboro, Vt., has been installed in the new Capitol theatre in New York city. Over 15,000 square feet of lumber were used in making the wood pipes; the smallest pipe is about the size of a lead pencil, while the largest easily would contain $150,000 of these smaller pipes. Many stops of a novel character are contained in this organ, which is more than ordinarily rich in fundamental tone.

As a special precaution against the spreading of influenza, hotel and restaurant proprietors in Portland were requested by the Board of Health Tuesday, to sterilize dishes by immersion in boiling water or the use of compounds.

WAS DOWN AND OUT FOR A WHOLE YEAR

Comes Back Strong Though After Taking Tanlac—Is On Job Every Day, Now.

"I had been in wretched health for six years before I began taking Tanlac," said Will M. Upton, living at 144 Francis street, Portland, Me., recently. "I suffered something awful from indigestion," he continued, "and had scarcely any appetite at all, and when I did manage to force down a little something I would be in intense misery for hours. Gas would form and I would bloat terribly and I would have such pains in my stomach they would nearly drive me wild, and they were so bad it was impossible for me to stand up straight. I also had sharp pains in my back that were so bad when they struck me they would nearly take my breath, and it seemed as if my back was breaking in two. I felt tired and worn out all the time, and finally got in such bad shape I had to quit work and for a whole year I was unable to do anything. I had tried all kinds of treatments and medicines, but none of them did me any good and I was very much discouraged."

"I had heard so much about the good Tanlac was doing others I decided to try it, and from the very start I began to improve, and as I kept taking it I kept getting better, until I finally recovered entirely. I am in good health now and feel so strong and well I am able to work every day. My appetite is good and I never suffer any bad after effects from what I eat. The pains in my stomach and back never trouble me now, and, in fact, I feel just like a new person."

"My wife also suffered from indigestion very badly, and finally got so she could hardly retain a thing, not even a glass of water, and as she had seen how Tanlac benefited me, she began taking it, and now she can eat anything she wants and everything agrees with her perfectly. We both praise Tanlac whenever we get an opportunity, as it certainly has been of great benefit to us both."

Tanlac is sold in Rockland by Corner Drug Store, and in Thomaston by Whittney & Brackett, adv.

THE NEWS OF MAINE

Winterport people have had to resort recently to brooks and wells for their water, as the break in the main caused a torrent of water to rush through the streets, nearly emptying the standpipes.

According to the annual report of E. C. Patten of Topsham, treasurer, Seaside finances are in excellent condition. All bills have been paid and there is a balance in the treasury of $12,943.26 or $600 more than one year ago.

A movement for the reinstatement of William E. Walz, former dean of the College of Law of the University of Maine, has been started by the alumni. Dean Walz was removed soon after the United States declared war on Germany. He is a native of the United States, of German parentage, and his sympathy with the United States was questioned. The alumni ask that his case be reviewed.

Alma Lodge, F. & A. M., of Danville, has a total membership of about 175. Of this number 17 are past masters, of the 17 six are of the Stetson family. Charles W., the eldest, served as master of Alma Lodge four years. Isaac and William each served two years, Edwin F. three years and Gerald one year. They are also members of Ezra B. French, Royal Arch Chapter, except Isaac, Charles was high priest of that body 12 years, Edwin F. three years, William A. two years, Gerald A. one year.

The first college YD Club has been organized in Colby College. Officers were chosen: President, J. Foster Choate, 20 of Cambridge; vice president, Harold Osgood of Medford, Mass.; Secretary, Sewall Flagg, 20 of Portland; treasurer, Russell Pedersen, 20 of Portland; historian, Roger Morse of Woburn, Mass. All the men in this organization enlisted at the very outbreak of the war in Co. H, and served 18 months in France. J. Foster Choate, the president, who enlisted as a private, rose to a captain in the artillery.

The committee appointed to consider the matter of locating the proposed new concrete bridge across the harbor at Belfast reported Thursday that it deemed it advisable to build it on the site of the present old wooden structure. Although it would be very desirable to move the bridge to the east to bring the city approach at the foot of Main street, the committee found that it would bring the bridge across a much deeper and wider part of the channel that at present which would add so much to the cost as to be prohibitive. The estimated cost of $275,000 is figured on 26-foot piers.

A BIT SARCASTIC

"If teachers want to earn money, they must lay down a useful profession and take up a profession which amuses Mary Pickford, Jack Dempsey, Babe Ruth, Bud Fisher, and their class make the real workers of the world look sick." So wrote State Superintendent of Schools Augustus O. Thomas in connection with the matter of better pay for teachers connected with the South Portland and Cape Elizabeth Teachers' Association.

ABOUT RHEUMATISM

What Thousands Have Found Gives Relief From This Painful Trouble. Rheumatism is a constitutional disease, manifesting itself in local aches and pains, inflamed joints and stiff muscles. It cannot be cured by local or external applications. It must have constitutional treatment.

Take a course of the great blood-purifying and tonic medicine, Hood's Sarsaparilla, which corrects the acid condition of the blood on which rheumatism depends, and gives permanent relief. This medicine combines, with excellent alteratives and tonics, what is generally conceded to be the most effective agent in the treatment of this disease. If a cathartic or laxative is needed take Hood's Pills. Purely vegetable.
