THE CURRENCY BILL

INTEREST IN CONGRESS CENTERED UPON THE FINANCIAL QUESTION.

Interview With an Incarnated Cyclopedia of Financial Facts.—A Lightning Speaker Feeling That Our Financial Craft Must Look Out For Breakers.

[Special Correspondence.]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 27.—Sixteen good working days did congress put in for the short session before the holidays and really made commendable speed. In the senate the Nicaragua canal bill was discussed with marked ability on both sides and the friends of a national university presented their arguments in detail. Senators Vest and Hill did their prettiest for a closure resolution, with some aid from others, and a good deal of unfinished business was disposed of. The house several appropriations bills went through with a whirl. Messrs. Pickens and Henderson got off the speaker to the effect that the pension bill is a roll of honor and did it better than usual, while the regular indorsements thereof were delivered by the usual members.

A Piece of Resistance.

All interest, however, centered an still centers in the currency bill, which it is to be for this session the only resistance, as we call it in Paris. The committee on banking and currency made a very successful limitation of the Duties justice of the peace in the old story, which said, "I will take two days to consider this case, but I will finally decide against the plaintiff." It was known in advance that the committee would report in favor of the Carlisle bill. Nevertheless they deliberated two weeks and heard testimony which makes a printed volume of 370 pages, then reported without even considering the bill in fact. It was said at the start there were 17 opinions in the committee and there would be more opinions if there were more members, but the minority got together much quicker than the majority and not only voted solidly against reporting the bill at all, but carried Democrate with them. So the vote stood 9 to 8, and two of the nine only voting to report in order to get the matter discussed, and thus it appears that the measure was carried.

The wild guesses and sudden changes of opinion on the prospects of this bill have been remarkable, even with our previous experience of this congress. At first laugh at the very idea of this congress adopting the Baltimore plan or anything like it. But no sooner had president and secretary indorsed it than we gained friends among the people, and the prospect that it would go through the house before the holidays.

Contemporary with this advance in the house was a retrogression on the part of the bankers, many of whom, if not the majority, disapproved of the measure. In the Baltimore plan, with a little amendments, and of all those who testified not more than two were strenuous for the Capital plan, even with modifications. Writing two days later to the representative to the house, it was evident that every Republican and many Democrats would vote against it. As to the Populists, of course they are opposed to all banks of issue. In the very opening of the fight, therefore, the Populists were in the van, and went into action with the left flank first. Chairman Springer led, and Mr. Walker followed for the minority, and then the Hon. Uriel S. Suber, of the House. Mr. Springer, Chairman of the Senate, "refused his line," as we used to say 30 years ago, and began to talk about the substitute bill, which made the previous speech on that side appear quite malapropos.

It soon appeared, however, that the minority, though unanimous against the Carlisle bill, was far from being in favor of the Walker bill. It is hard for the president to stand up for a purely speculative currency bill—and for my part I would rather take a decent whipping than study one to—Mr. Walker with three questions:

1. How can we prevent the burden of maintaining specie payment on the banks?

"My bill throws no burden on any body which they are not willing to assume. It invites the banks to do so."

2. How can we prevent the banks from the duty of maintaining coin payments and makes it their interest to do so?

Under my bill there will be more gold and silver in use and at less expense than under the present system, which the banks not to aid in keeping the coinage in use. The whole weight falls on the treasury. Under my bill it would not and yet both gold and silver would be more abundant.

How does the treasury now maintain the gold standard with so little gold against so much paper?"

"It is by surfeance only. But first let me fix in your mind the facts that it is not the treasury that creates the money. It is the general knowledge of the people that there is very much more gold in the country. Let that gold go out in use overseas to be the highest premium, and this little jag in the treasury wouldn't amount to anything for your finger. It should be noted also that the amount of gold in the country is considerably exaggerated. There is certainly not more than $500,000,000 and maybe no more than $150,000,000."

DIXFIELD.

The fair held by the Ladies' Church Aid Society Thursday, the 26th, was well patronized by everybody, and was a success in every sense of the word.

The tennis field was very fine, and all who had a part in it, and the one who did not, deserve much praise for the labor and pains expended upon it.

Our lodge of Good Templars is in a flourishing condition, as is also the Y. P. S. C. E. M. G.

A court of the Independent Order of Foresters was instituted here Dec. 15th, with twenty charter members.

Monday evening, Dec. 24, a large number of Grangers and their friends assembled at Grange Hall to listen to a short program, consisting of recitations, tableaux and dialogues by the young people of the Grange, after which, in the absence of Santa Claus, Manly W. Taylor and P. W. Torrey distributed the numerous presents which filled two large Christmas trees. Everything passed off smoothly and everybody was well pleased.

Prince E. Colcord was confined to his home the 25th to the 27th of December with sore eyes.

The Universalist Sunday School celebrated Christmas by giving a Christmas concert and having two large Christmas trees at the church, Tuesday evening, Dec. 24.

The church was crowded, and the trees looked beautiful. The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Taylor. T. B. Payne, the first number on the finely-executed program was a most appropriate reading by Miss C. Tina Marsh.

Miss Hattie Kilgore's class, Mrs. Wilbur's class gave us something new to the people here, in the line of recitations, and the songs were very good.

After the singing of the stanzas, other recitations were by Misses L. A. McNeill and L. A. Edmunds. At the close of the concert, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Taylor, gave some very appropriate remarks, after which Messrs. Merrill, Payne and Robinson distributed the presents which had been placed upon the trees. We feel sure that every one was well pleased, both with the concert and their presents.

The Ladies' Church Aid Society presented the superintendent of the school, Mr. Geo. L. Merrill, a very nice quilt.
