WASHINGTON LETTER.

Swiss Watchmakers and Their Deceptions. Bailey in Summer Rags. Petrus and the Seat of Pugh.

[Special Correspondence.]

"You can put $4,000 worth of watch crystals in an ounce vial."

This was one of the interesting facts which Senator Lodge brought out in a debate on the tariff of watches.

Mr. Lodge had on his desk a little box containing a watch movement which he utilized as a text for his entertaining talk.

"Years ago," said he, "the American inventor revolutionized watchmaking by introducing machinery, so that now the machine made watch is finer than the handmade watch."

The Swiss makers, driven out of their own field, have bought American machinery and with cheap labor are turning out watches which are sent to this country.

In microscopic letters they print the name of some well known American manufacturer. Across the face of the watch is the trademark monogram of the American firm, but the cross of the "A" is omitted, so that the imitation cannot be proved in the case.

These watches are sold," said Senator Lodge, "to the injury of the American maker."

The senate voted the highest duty on watch movements ever known.

Bailey in Summer Rags.

Bailey grows more like Reed every day. Now he has come out in a linen crash suit. It is the first time in history that the Texas statesman has appeared in anything but black, according to the Texas watchmen.

It gives him a boyish and a rakish air. The trunks left around his colonel's legs, and the coat hangs upon his expansive shoulders with all the nonchalance of a bean bag lying on a wharf.

He wears no vest, neither has he yet emulated the Reelike sash. He sports, however, a beautifully rolled silk shirt, which is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

And, above all, he has cut his hair.

No longer the raven locks tumbling in negligent profusion over his classic brow or cluster around his heroic neck. His new straw hat, with its broad brim, sits firmly down upon a crown, all barbed and shorn. Truly, Bailey in his summer rig is altogether to be admired.

Wholesale.

Complaint has been made of outsiders making purchases in the stationery rooms at the capitol. It is said that senators and ex-members remaining in Washington still continue to purchase their stationery, etc., at the capitol, where it is supplied at wholesale rates.

This is a great injustice to the tradesmen of the city, and it is probable that the clerk of the house will issue an order to the House which will be entitled to this privilege from purchasing there.

It is said that only recently the teacher of a stenographic school was found to be purchasing supplies for herself and pupils on the unfounded statement that she was a congressman's clerk.

The harsh criticisms of the metropolitan press upon the inconsistency of Mr. Simpson in having a tooth filled with gold, and Representative Lewis of Washington, "are wholly undeserved. It is true that my guide, counselor and friend has had one of his incisors tipped with gold, but far from being inconsistent, he has been a very model of consistency. I am reliably informed that this is the only gold filled tooth he has, while he has 10 other teeth each filled with silver."

Pettus and the Seat of Pugh.

This is a story that an Albanian tell about Senator Pettus and Senator Pugh. "During Mr. Cleveland's first administration Mr. Pettus was anxious to fill the place on the supreme court bench to which Senator Lamar was afterward appointed. He applied to his friend, Senator Pugh, and the latter made an earnest and sincere appeal for the appointment of Mr. Pettus.

The president inquired as to the age of Pettus, and when informed and he was told, Senator Pugh communicated this fact to Pettus, and also suggested to another eminent but younger lawyer in his state to apply for the place, as it was a settled fact that a southern man would surely succeed to the vacancy.

"Senator Pettus heard of Senator Pugh's letter to the other friend, and he made him mad. He called on Pugh and asked why he did not stand up for him. Pugh explained that Mr. Cleveland would not alter his determination about not appointing a man of Pettus' age, but this did not satisfy Pettus. Before leaving Pugh Pettus said, 'Well, I may be too old to sit on the supreme bench, but I am not too old to sit in the senate, and your seat will just about fit me.'"

And it does.

The Five Pointed Star.

"I have been much amused," remarked a professor of the normal academy, "at the stories recently put about the genius of Betsey Ross, who, according to tradition, made the first American flag and who interested General Washington at her success in cutting out a five pointed star with one fold of the cloth. She may have done this, but she is very mistaken. It is easy enough to cut out a six, eight or ten pointed star, but the rule by which this is done does not apply to odd numbered pointed stars. Some years ago I offered a prize to the cadets at Annapolis for any one who could fold a paper so that a five pointed star could be cut out. Hundreds of the young men tried it, but so far none of them has ever claimed the prize. Sailor folks have always been at work on this five pointed star puzzle, and they are willing to admit that it is a pretty tradition, but the facts are all against it. If any one has any doubt on the subject, let him try it. The 15 puzzle is as nothing compared with it."

AN ANCIENT MEXICAN CITY.

A Curious Legend. Some Relics of Emperor Maximilian.

Queretaro was a town before the Spanish conquest and was made a city in 1655. A legend of Queretaro is that an Otomí chief, Fernando de Tapia by name, undertook to convert the city to Christianity in a way that seems novel to us, but was common enough to his day.

He came from Tula with a challenge to the people of Queretaro to a fair stand up fight. If he won, the people surviving were to be baptized. The challenge was accepted, but while the fight was in progress a dark cloud came up and the blessed Santiago was seen in the heavens with a fiery cross, whereupon the people of Queretaro gave up and were baptized. They set up a stone cross to commemorate the event on the site of the present church of Santa Cruz. There is scarcely a church in Mexico which has not a legend of this kind attached to it. The town is identified with the history of Mexico.

Here the treaty of peace between the United States and Mexico was ratified in 1848, and here Maximilian made his last stand in 1867, was obliged to surrender and was shot. Everybody is interested in Maximilian mainly on account of poor Carlotta. Maximilian was executed on the Cerro de las Campanas and with him Generals Miramón and Mejía. The place is marked by three little crosses of stone. The two generals were killed at the first volley, but Maximilian, who had requested that he be shot through the body that his mother might look upon his face, was only wounded, and a second firing was required to kill him.

The emperor had been led to believe that Carlotta was dead. She became insane from grief and was kept in an asylum for many years, but she still lives and still mourns for her dead husband and the loss of her throne. The United States government protested against the execution of Maximilian, but in vain. Juárez refusing to spare him.

There are all kinds of relics of Maximilian in Mexico—the Tyruride then, a torso he was tried and condemned, the table on which the death warrant was signed, the wooden stools on which the prisoners sat during the trial and the coffin of Maximilian, whose remains were subsequently sent to Austria and buried at Miramar. I confess I do not share in any sentiment of pity for Maximilian, who was an adventurer without a shadow of right in Mexico and took the chance of war. He was, it is true, a victim of Napoleon and of his own ambition and was very severely treated by those who had induced him to set up his throne in Mexico, but he has released him would have been to establish a claimant for the Mexican throne. It was better that this man should die than that thousands should be sacrificed in the wars he would surely have fomented if he had been allowed to live.—Philadelphia Ledger

WAGES IN CHINA.

In Spite of Their Lowness the Celestials Wax Fat.

How a Chinese workman manages to support his family and remain sleek and fat on the wages he receives in an everlasting mystery to the European and American. The Chinese are a people of marvelous economy. They will support a family, furnishing food, clothes, shelter, from a small garden which they call a farm, but which in America would not more than furnish an American family with early vegetables.

In cities the laboring men receive the most meagre wages. In addition to this, they are better paid than in other parts of China, skilled workmen live on these wages: Shoemaker, $4 per month; blacksmith, $5 per month; iron ivory carver, $12 per month; tailor, $6 per month; designer, $8 per month; silversmith, $8 per month.

The Chinese are superstitious, and the workmen support in addition to their temples and pagodas and priests, which receive more in proportion than the churches of Europe and America, idol makers, geomancers, fortune tellers, physiognomists, soothsayers, astrologers and interpreters of dreams, who exist by thousands and coin all the money they want. Another thing which makes money for a certain class is the cooking of the burning great quantities of "spirit" money, imitation coins, which are supposed to be legal tender for dead relatives. One city alone employs 100,000 people in making this cash for ghosts.

Peculiar superstitions embarrass the workman. For instance, carpenters and builders have to exercise great care in selecting a ridgepole for a house. It must have neither cracks nor knots, and in it a small hole must be made and filled with gold leaf and the whole beam painted red. This insures good luck for the owner of the house.

The tea trade employs thousands of persons. The laborers receive from $2 to $10 per month, according to their grade of work.—Chicago News.

Fishy.

A man who resides on the east side relates an incident which may be true, but it sounds fishy.

His boy caught a large sucker a couple of years ago, and since that time he has been experimenting with his funny pet somewhat. The fish has been kept out of the water so much that it gradually became accustomed to it, and frequently flapped out of the water itself and followed the boy around. Finally the boy placed it in a pen and gradually reduced its bathing periods until it became acclimated, abandoning entirely its native element. It would follow the boy around like a dog, and one day he started over to town across the swimming bridge with the pet fish flapping along upon its back. It was for boy's hope. The fish made a slight mistake and flapped overboard into the creek and drowned before the boy could rescue him.—Pittsburgh Courier.
